In prosecution for first-degree murder under this section, eyewitness testimony describing shooting together with notes written by defendant prior to shooting indicating he contemplated murder and suicide were sufficient to establish elements of premeditation and deliberation. United States v. A. Sutton (1969, 426 F. 2d 1202, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 208).

Evidence, including testimony of girl friend of one defendant as to incriminating statements which both defendants made to her, sustained convictions for felony murder and for attempted robbery. A. Calloway and T. L. S. McCowey v. United States (1968, 399 F. 2d 1006, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 273).

Proof in homicide prosecution was legally sufficient to support a verdict predicated on thesis that shotgun was discharged killing victim while a robbery was then being attempted. E. M. Harrison and O. G. White v. United States (1967, 387 F. 2d 203, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 245).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction of one defendant of felony murder. Id.

Accused who put on defense to first-degree murder case did not thereby waive earlier motion for acquittal or expose himself to death penalty which government was not entitled to pursue in view of fact that at close of prosecution's case defendant was entitled to acquittal of first-degree murder charge because evidence adduced by prosecution was not sufficient to permit a reasonable man to find that elements of first-degree murder existed beyond reasonable doubt. B. Austin v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 129, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Evidence of eyewitness, corroborated by physical details otherwise in evidence, supported verdicts finding defendants guilty of first-degree murder and housebreaking. R. T. Brown, J. D. Irby and R. L. Jones v. United States (1967, 375 F. 2d 310, 126 U.S. App. D.C. 134).

Evidence sustained conviction for second degree murder. E. E. Turberville, B. T. Williams and J. H. Simpson v. United States (1962, 303 F. 2d 411, 112 U.S. App. D.C. 400, cert. denied 82 S. Ct. 1596).

Evidence sustained conviction for robbery and felony-murder. W. C. Coleman v. United States (1961, 295 F. 2d 555, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 210).

In prosecution under District of Columbia murder-during-robbery statute, for death of policeman whom defendant shot and killed while policeman, who began pursuit some minutes after robbery, was pursuing defendant, evidence whether asportation was continuing was sufficient to sustain conviction. Carter v. United States (1955, 223 F. 2d 332, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 40, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 324, 350 U. S. 949, 100 L. Ed. 827).

In arson and murder prosecution, evidence was sufficient to establish that victim's death had been caused by the fire in house in which her body was found. Green v. United States (1955, 218 F. 2d 856, 95 U. S. App. D. C. 45).

In prosecution for murder in first degree committed in perpetration of offense of housebreaking while armed with a deadly weapon, without considering defendant's written confession, evidence was sufficient to justify submission of case to jury and to support verdict of guilty. Tyler v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 24, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 2, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 639, 343 U. S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for murder in first degree. Pritchett v. United States (1951, 185 F. 2d 438, 87 U.S. App. D. C. 374, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 608, 341 U.S. 905, 95 L. Ed. 1344).

Evidence supported conviction of codefendant who participated in robbery but who did not do the shooting or killing of another in perpetrating a robbery. Wheeler v. United States (1948, 165 F. 2d 225, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 448, 333 U.S. 830, 92 L. Ed. 1115).

Evidence that defendant found deceased with a woman with whom defendant was friendly, that some discussion ensued, and that later all went outside, where an altercation occurred and defendant cut deceased with a knife resulting in death, was sufficient evidence of deliberation and premeditation to go to jury upon charge of first-degree murder. Thomas v. United States (1947, 158 F. 2d 97, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 314, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 1303, 331 U. S. 822, 91 L. Ed. 1838).

Under an indictment in the common-law form for murder in the first degree, the prosecution may prove facts to bring the case within any of the provisions of this section defining murder in the first degree. Burton v. United States (1945, 151 F. 2d 17, 80 U. S. App. D. C. 208, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 473, 326 U. S. 789, 90 L. Ed. 479).

Evidence of premeditation and deliberation was sufficient to sustain conviction for first degree murder. Mergner v. United States (1945, 147 F. 2d 572, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 373, certiorari denied 65 S. Ct. 1085, 325 U.S. 850, 89 L. Ed. 1971).

Evidence sustained conviction for murder committed while attempting to perpetrate robbery. Mumforde v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 411, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 107, certiorari denied 63 S Ct. 53, 317 U.S. 656, 87 L. Ed. 527).

First degree murder defined

First-degree murder requires premeditation and deliberation and covers calculated and planned killings while homicides that are unplanned or impulsive, even though they are intentional and with malice aforethought, are murder in the second degree. B. Austin v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 129, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Intentional murder is in the first degree if committed in cold blood and is murder in the second degree if committed on impulse or in the sudden heat of passion. Id.

Grounds for impeachment

Though the statute allows an exception to the general rule that one cannot impeach his own witness by use of previously made contradictory statements, to come within the exception, actual surprise must be found.

Belton v. United States (1958, 259 F. 2d 811, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 81).

Housebreaking

Killing of deceased by defendant as he was securing loot and preparing to leave premises into which he had broken was a homicide committed in perpetration of housebreaking. United States v. J. A. Naples (1961, 192 F. Supp. 23; rev'd 307 F. 2d 618).

Where this section defined murder in the first degree as purposely killing a human being either with deliberate or premeditated malice, or by poison, or in perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate any offense punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, and since housebreaking is so punishable, one who commits a homicide while engaged in that offense may be charged with first degree murder. Monroe v. United States (1926, 10 F. 2d 645, 56 App. D.C. 80).

Identification

One defendant was not prejudiced by testimony concerning his pretrial identification by witness to killing from group of eight police photographs, on theory that testimony allowed jury to speculate that defendant had been in trouble with police previously, where jury was given no indication that photographs used by police were "mug shots." United States v. R. L. Mack (1972, 466 F. 2d 333, 151 U.S. App. D.C. 162; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 297, 409 U.S. 952).

Where defendants were represented at lineup by counsel, lineup itself met requirements of Sixth Amendment, photograph of that lineup was completely neutral and wholly exact reproduction, witness requested, at time she was leaving lineup, to see photograph of lineup, Government complied with her request seven months after lineup and two weeks immediately prior to trial and witness initiated discussion of lineup photograph from which she identified defendants as the two robbers, photograph of lineup was not subject to suppression because counsel for defendants were not present when witness viewed photograph. United States v. R. Brown et al. (1972, 461 F. 2d 134, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 43).

Where photograph depicted lineup which was fairly conducted, during which defendants were represented by counsel, witness and officer who conducted interview with witness were vigorously cross-examined regarding the interview at which witness identified defendants as robbers from the lineup photograph and there was nothing improper in manner in which photograph was presented to witness, defendants' right to due process was not violated by the witness' pretrial photographic identification. Id.

Witness' pretrial identification of defendants in photograph of lineup at which she had not made identification because of lighting conditions was not tainted by other showings of photographs of the defendants to the witness. Id.

Where witness to robbery and murder was in close proximity to the robbers and had ample opportunity to observe them at time of robbery and murder, witness had independent source from which she might attempt in-court identification of accused at trial, regardless of whether witness' identification of defendants from photograph of lineup was improper. Id.

Impartial jury

Presence on the jury, in prosecution of defendant for murder of his wife and assault of another man in connection with a love triangle situation, of a juror who, some 6 months before defendant's trial, apparently had had an affair with a woman who had been killed by her husband had such a strong tendency to deny defendant his constitutional right to a trial by 12 impartial jurors as to require new trial. J. R. Jackson v. United States (1968, 395 F. 2d 615, 129 U.S. App. D.C. 392).

Impeachment

It was error to rule, in homicide case, that defendant's statement could be used for impeachment purposes even if it had been improperly obtained. J. Inge v. United States (1966, 356 F. 2d 345, 123 U.S. App. D.C. 6).

Indictment

Defendant could be convicted of second degree murder under felony-murder indictment even though indictment failed to allege "malice aforethought", where indictment contained the fully equivalent language that defendant "unlawfully and feloniously did murder" named person "by means of shooting him with a pistol". L. Jackson v. United States (1962, 313 F. 2d 572, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 181).

Second degree murder is an included offense under an indictment for felony-murder. Id.

An indictment charging a defendant with felony-murder, charged first degree murder, even though indictment omitted an allegation to the effect that accused was of sound memory and discretion. W. C. Coleman v. United States (1961, 295 F. 2d 555, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 210).

An indictment charging first degree murder was not defective, even though it did not contain the phrase "being of sound memory and discretion." W. Jones v. United States (1961, 296 F. 2d 398, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 276).

An allegation of sanity is not required in an indictment. Id.

Statute of 1 Hen. V, ch. 5 (1413) requiring indictment to set forth "estate, or degree, or mystery of defendant and the town or country, etc., of which he was conversant," is not in force in the District. Lanckton v. United States (1901, 18 App. D.C. 348).

An indictment charging the commission of murder in a house situated in the District is not defective because it does not particularly describe the location of the house. Id.

It is not necessary to charge in the indictment that accused was of sound mind and discretion. Hill v. United States (1903, 22 App. D.C. 395).

Indictment for murder is not defective for want of an express allegation of an intent to kill. Hamilton v. United States (1905, 26 App. D.C. 382). See, also, Hill v. United States (1903, 22 App. D.C. 395).

An indictment for murder which alleges that defendant did "choke, suffocate and strangle" of which the person died is sufficient even though there is no allegation that the choking was "mortal." Hamilton v. United States (1905, 26 App. D.C. 382).

Requirement of copy of indictment and list of jurors and witnesses is mandatory. Aldridge v. United States (1931, 47 F. 2d 407, 60 App. D.C. 45, reversed on other grounds 51 S.Ct. 470, 283 U.S. 308, 75 L. Ed. 1054, 73 A.L.R. 1203).

Where indictment informed defendant in the plainest sort of language that he was charged with killing while attempting robbery, i. e., accused of murder in the first degree, indictment must stand. Goodall v. United States (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied, 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 924).

Insanity defense

Expert testimony supported trial judge's determination that government met its burden of proving that defendant was not suffering from a mental disease or defect on dates of the offenses, or that if he were the offenses were not products of the illness. United States v. L. W. Green (1972, 463 F. 2d 1313, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 222).

Instructions

In prosecution for felony-murder, wherein jurors were instructed that, to return guilty verdict, they had to find that killing took place while defendant, or an aider or abettor, was perpetrating or attempting to perpetrate the offense of robbery and instruction was high-lighted by closing statements of one codefendant's trial counsel that jurors should acquit on felony-murder count if they found that robbery was an "after-thought," defendants were not prejudiced by trial court's refusal to charge specifically that, if intent to rob victim was formed after the shooting, there could be no conviction of felony-murder. United States v. R. L. Mack (1972, 466 F. 2d 333, 151 U.S. App. D.C. 162; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 297, 409 U.S. 952).

Where nowhere in the instructions was there to be found one setting forth essential elements constituting crime of attempted robbery, the underlying felony upon which defendant's conviction of felony-murder was predicated, omission was plain error. United States v. L. L. Williams (1972, 463 F. 2d 958, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 122).

If the defendant presses no objection, judge may instruct jury to render verdicts on both first-degree felony murder count and second-degree murder count, assuming judge concludes the instruction will not confuse jury; however, if defendant insists that charge of second-degree murder be submitted to jury solely as lesser offense included within first-degree murder charge, and if he makes a timely motion or objection, he is entitled to an instruction directing jury (a) to first consider issue of guilt as to first-degree murder; (b) in the event of acquittal, to consider guilt of second-degree murder as lesser included offense; and (c) in the event of verdict of guilty of first-degree murder, to enter no verdict concerning second-degree murder. United States v. G. L. Butler (1972, 455 F. 2d 1338, 147 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

Where the defendant is not entitled to call witness to the stand because of intention of witness to claim privilege against self-incrimination, the defendant is entitled to request an instruction that the jury should draw no inference from the absence of the witness because he is not available to either side, this being appropriate as calculated to reduce danger that jury would, in fact, draw an inference from absence of witness who would corroborate defendant's testimony. D. J. Bowles v. United States (1970, 439 F. 2d 536, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 26; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1240, 401 U.S. 995).

Since the trial judge's charge contained two erroneous instructions equating intent with malice as essential ingredient of murder and stating that law infers or presumes malice from use of deadly weapon in commission of homicide and both instructions were later reread to jury and jury returned verdict, not of first-degree murder, but of murder in second degree and the jury did not accept whole of government's evidence bearing on degree of defendant's culpability, instructional errors will be noticed by Court of Appeals despite defendant's failure to object at trial and require reversal of conviction of murder in second degree. United States v. A. Wharton (1970, 433 F. 2d 451, 139 U.S. App. D.C. 293).

Jury may be instructed on second-degree murder as lesser included offense though indictment is solely for felony-murder. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 264; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Where an indictment charged in separate counts both first-degree felony-murder and first-degree premeditated murder and the trial judge charged with respect to both felony-murder and second-degree murder, in the absence of any request, motion or objection by the defendant, failure to further charge that jury, which returned verdicts of guilty both as to felony-murder and as to manslaughter as lesser included offense, should consider question of second-degree murder only if it determined that government had not met its burden as to some element of first-degree murder charged, was not plain error and was not reversible error. Id.

Charge to a jury that in absence of explanatory circumstances the law infers or presumes malice from use of deadly weapon was error. K. Green v. United States (1968, 405 F. 2d 1368, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 98; see also 424 F. 2d 912, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 424; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 473, 400 U.S. 997).

In homicide prosecution, charge to jury which submitted first-degree murder, second-degree murder, and manslaughter and which contained statement that wrongful act intentionally done was done with malice was prejudicial error. Id.

Charge in homicide prosecution should focus primarily on defendant's actual thought processes in terms of meditation and conscious weighing of alternatives and the appreciable time element is subordinate, necessary for but not sufficient to establish deliberation. B. Austin v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 129, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Analysis of jury would be illuminated if it is first advised that a typical case of first-degree murder is the murder in cold blood while murder committed on impulse or in sudden passion is murder in the second degree, and then instructed that a homicide conceived in passion constitutes murder in the first degree only if jury is convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that there was an appreciable time after design was conceived and that in this interval there was further thought and a turning over in the mind and not mere persistence of an initial impulse of passion. Id.

Jury was erroneously instructed that excessive blows require manslaughter verdict even when struck in sudden heat of passion; and such instructions constituted plain error, which reviewing court could redress even though such instructions had not been challenged at trial, where jury, if properly instructed, could have found that defendant was not guilty because any unnecessary blows had been delivered in heat of passion while he actually and reasonably believed he was fighting with deceased woman to save his life or to avert serious bodily injury. J. Inge v. United States (1966, 356 F. 2d 345, 123 U.S. App. D.C. 6).

Court erred in refusing to instruct that jury could not find defendant guilty of both first-degree and second-degree murder. J. A. Naples v. United States (1964, 344 F. 2d 508, 120 U.S. App. D.C. 123).

Single offense cannot be both first- and second-degree murder. Id.

Trial judge in instructing jury as to difference between first degree murder and second degree murder, should endeavor to make it absolutely clear to jury that intentional killing may be second degree murder if premeditation and deliberation do not exist. D. Tucker v. United States (1963, 318 F. 2d 221, 115 U.S. App. D.C. 250).

Giving of instruction that second degree murder differs from first degree murder in that it may be committed either without purpose or intent to kill, or without premeditation and deliberation was not prejudicial error, in view of instructions in their entirety, in view of fact that court was careful to distinguish two degrees of murder in important respect that premeditation and deliberation are essential elements of first degree murder, in view of absence of objection or request for additional instruction, and in view of evidence and sentence of life imprisonment. Id.

Any error in submitting lesser included offense of manslaughter in prosecution on charge of first degree murder was not prejudicial when a verdict of manslaughter was not returned. P. O. Hansborough v. United States (1962, 308 F. 2d 645, 113 U.S. App. D.C. 392).

Failing to instruct that jury might return a second degree murder verdict, was not error, in a felony-murder prosecution, where accused and his brother robbed a store proprietor, accused took some money and fled, and in immediate close and continuous pursuit, police officers followed accused up to instant of killing of one of the officers by accused. W. C. Coleman v. United States (1961, 295 F. 2d 555, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 210).

In prosecution under indictment charging murder and robbery of victim wherein principal defense was insanity, it was not error for trial court to decline to give requested instruction that evidence of diminished intellect would permit jury to return a verdict of a lesser degree of homicide than first degree murder. Stewart v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 617, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 159, rev'd on other grounds 81 S. Ct. 941, 366 U.S. 1, 6 L. Ed. 2d 84).

Where, in arson and murder prosecution, all testimony as to what occurred in burning house pointed to first degree murder only, giving of second degree murder instruction was error. Green v. United States (1955, 218 F. 2d 856, 95 U.S. App. D. C. 45).

In prosecution for first degree murder committed in robbing a grocery store, defended on ground of insanity, instruction attempting to distinguish between "mental disease" and "mental disorder", read in light of explanation offered by record, could have led jury to conclude defendant could be acquitted by reason of insanity only if defendant suffered from abnormality due to physical deterioration of or injury to brain, and was erroneous and prejudicial to defendant. Stewart v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 879, 94 U.S. App. D. C. 293).

Conviction for first degree murder committed in robbing a grocery store would be reversed by Court of Appeals for District of Columbia where given instruction prejudicial to defendant was fatally defective, regardless of whether errors in instruction were properly preserved. Id.

In prosecution for first degree murder committed in robbing a grocery store, defended on ground of insanity, instruction stating that a psychopath is not insane within meaning of law, and that a psychopath is person of low intelligence, although expert testimony was that a psychopath was usually of superior intelligence, was erroneous as court invasion of combined functions of expert witness and jury by assertions treating factual issues as already settled by testimony or law. Id.

In prosecution of Puerto Rican defendant, whose companion shot and killed guard in front of dwelling of President of the United States, for first degree murder, wherein defendant interposed defense that he and companion, though armed with pistols, had no intent to kill anyone but merely wished to create an incident in order to bring to the attention of American people conditions in Puerto Rico, court properly charged jury that defendant's testimony as to conditions in Puerto Rico had nothing to do with the case, over objection of defendant that such conditions were relevant and material to issue of his intent and materially responsive to prosecutor's claim of motive. Collazo v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 573, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 241, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 1065, 343 U. S. 968, 96 L. Ed. 1364).

Charge to jury was proper which stated that the defendant might be found guilty of murder or manslaughter, or acquitted altogether if he killed deceased in the reasonable apprehension of danger to his own life, and it was not error for the trial court to exclude testimony to show vicious and dangerous character of deceased. Travers v. United States (1895, 6 App. D.C. 450).

Instructions, that insanity was induced by operation of strong drink upon a mind rendered unsound by an injury, or that he was incapable of forming a specific intent to kill so as to reduce the crime to manslaughter, are not sufficient when the evidence does not support such instructions and where the jury is informed by other instructions that they must find that he had sufficient mental capacity to distinguish right from wrong at time of act, beyond a reasonable doubt. Snell v. United States (1900, 16 App. D.C. 501).

A requested instruction of self-defense is defective which fails to state what the defendant was in imminent danger of. Jackson v. United States (1919, 48 App. D.C. 272).

Where instruction regarding second-degree murder and manslaughter was given at request of defendant's counsel, if the instruction was subject to criticism on ground that it was confusing because it opened up a matter not properly for jury's consideration, it was favorable to defendant, and he could not complain. Mumforde v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 411, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 107, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 53, 317 U.S. 656, 87 L. Ed. 527).

Where defendant testified that he entered store with definite purpose of committing robbery, but that a moment later he changed his mind and drew pistol from pocket hoping to quiet woman in charge, and thus to escape detection and arrest, but in excitement pistol was unintentionally discharged, instruction that, if defendant voluntarily abandoned his plan to rob before fatal shot was fired, defendant would not be guilty of murder in first degree, fully protected defendant's legal rights. Id.

The perpetration of a robbery, during which act a homicide is committed, legally takes the place of that premeditation to kill which is necessary for murder in the first degree, and it was not error to give such instruction merely because the indictment for murder tendered no such issue as robbery. Burton v. United States (1945, 151 F. 2d 17, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 208, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 473, 326 U.S. 789, 90 L. Ed. 479).

Instruction that defendant had a vital interest in outcome of case, and in testing truth and weighing force of defendant's testimony jury might do so in light of that interest as well as in light which might be shed by all other evidence in case, was not objectionable. Fisher v. United States (1945, 149 F. 2d 28, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 96, affirmed 66 S. Ct. 1318, 328 U.S. 463, 90 L. Ed. 1382, 166 A.L.R. 1176, rehearing denied 67 S. Ct. 24, 329 U.S. 818, 91 L. Ed. 697).

Instruction that in considering questions of intent, premeditation and deliberation, jury should consider entire personality of defendant, his mental, nervous, emotional and physical characteristics as developed by evidence was properly refused because it confused issue of insanity with question whether psychopathic characteristics of defendant prevented him from forming deliberate intent necessary to constitute first degree murder. Id.

Failure to volunteer an instruction on question whether defendants were exhausted by hours of questioning when they confessed to murder charge was not error, where there was hardly sufficient evidence to warrant such an instruction and none was requested. Hawkins v. United States (1947, 158 F. 2d 652, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 376, certiorari denied, 67 S. Ct. 1347, 331 U.S. 830, 91 L. Ed. 1844, rehearing denied 67 S. Ct. 1728, 331 U.S. 869, 91 L. Ed. 1872).

In prosecution for murder resulting in conviction of second-degree murder, the court's charge covering premeditation, malice, and self-defense was not erroneous. Thomas v. United States (1947, 158 F. 2d 97, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 314, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 1303, 331 U.S. 832, 91 L. Ed. 1838).

Where robbery of fountain cash register at front of drug store by one of codefendants jointly indicted on charge of killing another in perpetrating robbery was a part of general holdup of store in perpetration of which other defendant killed proprietor while obtaining money in cash register in rear of store, defendant who did not do the shooting was not entitled to an instruction that two separate robberies had been committed, that such defendant could be convicted only of being accessory after the fact or that such defendant could be convicted only of offense of robbery. Wheeler v. United States (1948, 165 F. 2d 225, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 448, 333 U.S. 830, 92 L. Ed. 1115). See, also, Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Fact that there was evidence that one of the three defendants jointly indicted on charge of murder in perpetration of robbery threw away the gun and bullets after the murder did not require an instruction that jury could find such defendant guilty as accessory after the fact, where such defendant's testimony and other circumstances stamped him as an accessory before the fact and therefore guilty as a principal. Hall v. United States (1948, 168 F. 2d 161, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 166, 4 A.L.R. 2d 1193, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1509, 334 U.S. 853, 92 L. Ed. 1775, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 9, 335 U.S. 839, 93 L. Ed. 391).

Court's comments concerning alibi as a defense were proper and not prejudicial where it was said that such defense should be given such weight and consideration to which it is entitled to under all facts and circumstances. Goodall v. United States (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 924).

Appellant's claim that Court failed to charge that if jury believed him guilty of killing but if any reasonable doubt existed as to whether he committed murder first or murder second, it should be resolved in favor of the lesser crime, is without merit since such an instruction is necessary only when from the evidence as a whole the jury might reasonably find the dependent guilty in either degree and must decide which degree. Id.

Intent

Under District of Columbia statute, murder committed in course of robbing a grocery store is first degree murder although there is no premeditation or intent or desire to kill. Stewart v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 879, 94 U.S. App. D. C. 293).

Intent to kill must always be proved in first-degree murder prosecution under first clause of local statute in order to convict, but motive for the killing is not always a material element in defense. Collazo v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 573, 90 U. S. App. D. C. 241, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 1065, 343 U. S. 968, 96 L. Ed. 1364).

Defendant is guilty of murder if the deceased, in seeking to escape the violent assault of accused had a well-grounded belief that he would take her life or inflict serious injury, and so believing inadvertently fell into a canal and was drowned, and it is not necessary to show by the prosecution nor that the jury shall believe that the defendant had the malicious intent to do bodily harm. Norman v. United States (1902, 20 App D.C. 494).

"A deliberate intent to take life is declared to be an essential element of murder in the first degree, and this, of course, must be shown as a fact." Sabens v. United States (1913, 40 App. D.C. 440). See, also, Jordan v. United States (1937, 87 F. 2d 64, 66 App. D.C. 309, certiorari denied 58 S. Ct. 762, 303 U.S. 654, 82 L. Ed. 1114).

Under this section defining "murder in first degree" as the killing of another while armed with or using a dangerous weapon in the perpetration or attempted perpetration of a robbery, it is not necessary to show that the killing was done purposely to raise the offense to first degree murder. Mumfords v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 411, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 107, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 53, 317 U.S. 656, 87 L. Ed. 527).

In prosecution for homicide, the recurrence of other acts of the sort tends to negative inadvertence, defensive purpose, or any form of innocent intent. Copeland v. United States (1946, 152 F. 2d 769, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 308, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 1010, 328 U.S. 841, 90 L. Ed. 1615).

Intoxication

"Voluntary intoxication is neither an excuse nor a palliation for crime." Lanckton v. United States (1901, 18 App. D.C. 348).

Although defendant forms a deliberate and premeditated intent to kill while sober, and then voluntarily becomes drunk, he cannot be convicted of murder in the first degree, if at the time of the commission of the offense he was too drunk to deliberate and premeditate. Sabens v. United States (1913, 40 App. D.C. 440).

A charge given by the court of its own motion was proper to the effect that voluntary intoxication was generally not a justification for crime and that it is only considered when evidence tends to show condition of mind which rendered him incapable of forming an intent. Smith v. United States (1921, 269 F. 860, 50 App. D.C. 208).

Under this section, evidence of intoxication may be shown for purpose of proving lack of capacity to deliberate or premeditate; and under conflicting evidence, the question is for the jury. McAfee v. United States (1940, 111 F. 2d 199, 72 App. D.C. 60, certiorari denied 60 S. Ct. 1094, 310 U.S. 643, 84 L. Ed. 1410).

Jury

Evidence in homicide prosecution on issue of defendant's defense of insanity was for jury. E. E. Turberville, B. T. Williams and J. H. Simpson v. United States (1962, 303 F. 2d 411, 112 U.S. App. D.C. 400, cert. denied 82 S. Ct. 1596).

Evidence, in felony-murder prosecution, presented jury question as to whether there was such an "arrest" of accused prior to killing of an officer, as to break essential link between the robbery and the killing, and such issue was properly submitted to jury under instructions explaining the issue and what constituted arrest. W. C. Coleman v. United States (1961, 295 F. 2d 555, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 210).

What is reasonable adequate provocation is generally for the jury. Jackson v. United States (1919, 48 App. D.C. 272).

"It is in the discretion of the court to permit the jury to separate in a homicide case, and his action in that respect will not be reviewed unless it appear affirmatively that prejudice resulted to the defendant." McHenry v. United States (1922, 276 F. 761, 51 App. D.C. 119, 34 A.L.R. 1109).

In prosecution of three defendants jointly indicted on charge of murder in perpetration of robbery, where two of three defendants testified that written statements given by them to officers were extorted by physical mistreatment, and officers denied having mistreated defendants, question as to whether written statements were voluntary and admissible was for jury. Hall v. United States (1948, 168 F. 2d 161, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 166, 4 A.L.R. 2d 1193, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1509, 334 U.S. 853, 92 L. Ed. 1775, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 9, 335 U.S. 839, 93 L. Ed. 391).

Lesser included offense

Where an indictment charges felony-murder, a verdict of second-degree murder is appropriate if there is proof from which the jury might reasonably find that defendant did not commit one of the enumerated felonies but was guilty of an intentional killing on impulse, and on this state of proof a charge of second-degree murder as a lesser included offense may be requested by prosecution or defense. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 264; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Malice

A wrongful act intentionally done is not therefore done with malice. K. Green v. United States (1968, 405 F. 2d 1368, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 98).

However sudden the killing may be, if the means used, or the manner of doing it, or other external circumstances attending it, indicate a sedate and deliberate mind and formed design to kill, it will be upon express malice Travers v. United States (1895, 6 App. D. C. 450).

"Implied malice constitutes murder in the second degree." Sabens v. United States (1913, 40 App. D.C. 440).

A heavy palming, with sharp, protruding nails, is a deadly weapon, from the use of which malice must be presumed. Patten v. United States (1914, 42 App. D.C. 239). See, also, Hopkins v. United States (1894, 4 App. D.C. 430).

A homicide committed purposely and with deliberate and premeditated malice is murder in the first degree and "Malice aforethought" may be shown expressly, or may be "implied" from the commission of the act itself. Bishop v. United States (1940, 107 F. 2d 297, 71 App. D.C. 132).

Means of commission

"The proof of the means of commission of a homicide need not conform strictly to the averment of such means in the indictment. If the means of death proved agree in substance with that charged, it is sufficient." Hamilton v. United States (1905, 26 App. D.C. 382).

Mental capacity

The criteria for evaluation of mental condition of accused at time of commission of crime and as to his capacity to be tried are not the same. Stewart v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 617, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 159, rev'd on other grounds 81 S. Ct. 941, 366 U.S. 1, 6 L. Ed. 2d 84).

In prosecution under indictment charging defendant with first degree murder and robbery of his victim wherein principal defense was insanity of accused, who had been found competent to stand trial after appropriate proceeding and who took stand and exhibited bizarre symptoms and abnormal behavior which if truly reflecting his mental state would have made a trial legally impossible, accused by his demeanor put his mental condition as of time of trial in issue and testimony of government witnesses concerning defendant's mental condition at a time appreciably after commission of crime was properly admitted to rebut impression of madness. Id.

In prosecution for first degree murder committed in robbing a grocery store, defended on ground of insanity, it was jury's function to determine from all evidence, including expert testimony, whether defendant suffered from abnormal mental condition and whether nature and extent of condition from which defendant suffered relieved defendant of criminal responsibility under then prevailing standards. Stewart v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 879, 94 U.S. App. D. C. 293).

Mental dullness, weakness, or incapacity does not excuse from the consequences of crime, unless the evidence proves that defendant was at the time of the commission of the act so mentally impaired that he could not distinguish between right and wrong. Travers v. United States (1895, 6 App. D.C. 450).

Law does not recognize the doctrine of emotional insanity. Taylor v. United States (1895, 7 App. D.C. 27).

Refusal of the trial justice to admit in evidence an exemplification of the record of the Georgia State Sanitarium, showing the mental condition, treatment, and incarceration of certain relatives of the defendant, was proper. Snell v. United States (1900, 16 App. D.C. 501).

Where jury were fully informed that before they could find the accused guilty of the crime charged, insanity or unsoundness of mind being set up as a defense, they were required to find that the accused had sufficient capacity to distinguish between right and wrong, at the time of and with respect to the act which was the subject of inquiry, beyond a reasonable doubt. Id.

Motive

If fact of killing by an accused is in issue, prosecutor is permitted as part of his effort to prove that accused committed the act, to prove that accused had a motive for killing the deceased, and accused as part of his effort to prove that he did not commit the act, is permitted to prove that he had no motive for killing the deceased. Collazo v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 573, 90 U.S. App. D. C. 241, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 1065, 343 U.S. 968, 96 L. Ed. 1364).

If killing is intended by accused and none of the established legal excuses for the killing is pleaded, the motive of the killer is wholly immaterial. Id.

Government is not required to prove motive, but jury may consider absence of such proof as a circumstance in defendant's favor. Lanckton v. United States (1901, 18 App. D.C. 348).

Motive may be proved, because it "may be very important in determining whether or not the accused was actuated by deliberate, premeditated malice." McHenry v. United States (1922, 276 F. 761, 51 App. D.C. 119, 34 A.L.R. 1109). See, also, Lomax v. United States (1911, 37 App. D.C. 414); McUin v. United States (1900, 17 App. D.C. 323).

Multiple counts

If prosecutor files in two counts of first-degree murder, once a charge of premeditated murder is struck as unsupported by sufficient evidence and that count is reduced to second-degree murder, defendant is entitled, on motion, to have entire count struck and to have issue of guilt as to second-degree murder submitted only as lesser included offense and only in the event of reasonable doubt of guilt of greater offense. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 132 U.S. App. 264; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Prejudicial cross-examination

In murder prosecution wherein sole defense was insanity, and defendant's gibberish testimony was such as to raise issues as to whether defendant feigned such testimony and whether at time of the third trial his mental condition represented his condition at time of act charged, cross-examination disclosing defendant's failure to take stand at two previous trials which resulted in convictions was erroneous and was not harmless but was sufficiently prejudicial to warrant the granting of a mistrial even though defense made no request for cautionary instructions. W. L. Stewart v. United States (1961, 366 U.S. 1, 81 S. Ct. 941; reversing 275 F. 2d 617).

Prejudicial error

In prosecution of three defendants for homicide, request by counsel for one defendant that jury return lesser verdict than that charged in indictment was not prejudicial to another defendant who persistently denied any participation in offense, in view of subsequent instructions that evidence be considered separately as to each defendant and defendant's failure to object to such remarks. E. E. Turberville, B. T. Williams and J. H. Simpson v. United States (1962, 303 F. 2d 411, 112 U.S. App. D.C. 400, cert. denied 82 S. Ct. 1596).

In prosecution for murder, where a police officer testified that defendant had failed to make a report to the police because of his record and defendant's counsel brought out the fact that the record referred to was failure to settle hotel bills, the net effect was not prejudicial to defendant. Burton v. United States (1945, 151 F. 2d 17, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 208, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 473, 326 U.S. 789, 90 L. Ed. 479).

In murder prosecution, where a nurse who made a written statement to the police took the stand and her testimony was substantially the same as the written statement, any error in permitting statement to be introduced in evidence was not prejudicial. Id.

Accused in murder prosecution was required to plead and prove his own case and was responsible for the production in court of witnesses necessary to do so, and failure of the government to produce certain witnesses could not be regarded as prejudicial. Thomas v. United States (1947, 158 F. 2d 97, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 314, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 1303, 331 U.S. 822, 91 L. Ed. 1838).

Publicity

In view of fact that newspaper clippings were accurate accounts of developments during trial and were not sensational in tone, and in view of scrupulous concern on part of trial court for elimination of extrajudicial influences from jury's deliberations, defendant was not denied a fair trial because of alleged extensive and adverse newspaper publicity surrounding his case. United States v. W. L. Parman (1971, 461 F. 2d 1203, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 117).

Punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary

"The words 'punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary' do not mean an offense that can be punished only by such imprisonment, but include such as may be so punished. United States v. Evans (1906, 28 App. D.C. 264).

Purposely

Word "purposely" as used in statute dealing with first-degree murder, is synonymous with "intentionally", and does not refer to the purpose of, or the intention in, the killing. Collazo v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 573, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 241, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 1065, 343 U.S. 968, 96 L. Ed. 1364).

Quaere: Whether it is necessary to charge in indictment for first-degree murder that the killing was "purposely" done. As to this point the court did not decide but stated that, it is a safe rule, in criminal pleading, to follow the language of the statute, where there is any uncertainty in respect of its meaning. United States v. Evans (1906, 28 App. D.C. 269).

Proof of purpose in murder prosecution need not be direct: it may be inferred from the circumstances attending the killing. Jordon v. United States (1937, 87 F. 2d 64, 66 App. D.C. 309, certiorari denied 58 S. Ct. 762, 303 U.S. 654, 82 L. Ed. 1114).

Question for jury

In prosecution for felony-murder committed in apartment building, whether two defendants and another person seen by witnesses going into building shortly before the crime and running out just after had committed the crime was for jury. United States v. R. L. Mack (1972, 466 F. 2d 333, U.S. App. D.C. 162; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 297, 409 U.S. 952).

What effect failure of two persons, who had been inside victim's apartment when, shortly before shooting, he ordered three men from his apartment, to identify one defendant as one of the three men should have on weight of government's case against that defendant was jury question. Id.

Whether defendants, who had left victim's apartment upon victim's demand, emphasized by his brandishing kitchen knife and who had lingered in hall outside apartment before reentering apartment and shooting victim, had killed with premeditation was jury question. Id.

Significance on issue of premeditation of victim's being beaten after he was shot was properly left for interpretation by jury and not the court. Id.

Questions withheld from jury

Under all the facts and circumstances, the question whether there had been only second degree murder because of the killer's intoxication should not have been submitted to the jury. Goodall v. United States (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 924).

Remand

Conviction of juvenile of first-degree felony-murder armed robbery, assault with dangerous weapon, assault upon police officer with dangerous weapon and carrying dangerous weapon would be remanded to District Court to consider possibility of sentencing under the Youth Corrections Act. United States v. W. Howard (1971, 449 F. 2d 1086, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 10).

Review

It is the duty of an appellate court to correct any error prejudicial to the defendant, even though not properly raised in the trial court. Pattern v. United States (1914, 42 App. D.C. 239). See, also, Burge v. United States (1906, 26 App. D.C. 524).

Right to counsel

Government's introduction at third murder trial of crucial testimony given by defendant at his first trial at which he did not have the constitutionally guaranteed right to assistance of counsel, impinged on defendant's constitutional rights requiring a reversal of his conviction for felony murder. E. M. Harrison and O. G. White v. United States (1967, 387 F. 2d 203, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 245).

Robbery

Fact that a robbery is being perpetrated by one who killed another, without purpose to do so and without deliberate or premeditated malice, supplies the element necessary to constitute the crime of first degree murder under this section, and under this section the crime of robbery is still in progress so long as the essential ingredient of asportation continues. Carter v. United States (1955, 223 F. 2d 332, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 40, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 324, 350 U. S. 949, 100 L. Ed. 827).

One who kills as he robs is charged by this section with having that degree of malice which is indispensable to murder in the first degree. Wheeler v. United States (1948, 165 F. 2d 225, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 448, 333 U.S. 830, 92 L. Ed. 1115). See, also, Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Evidence supported conviction of murder while perpetrating robbery. Medley v. United States (1946, 155 F. 2d 857, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 85, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 1377, 328 U.S. 873, 90 L. Ed. 1642, rehearing denied 67 S. Ct. 35, 329 U.S. 822, 91 L. Ed. 99).

Homicide committed while attempting robbery is first degree murder. United States v. Evans (1906, 28 App. D.C. 264).

Search and seizure

Where police had acted lawfully when they arrested the defendant in apartment of another and police had adequate grounds to fear that the defendant was armed and dangerous, police acted lawfully when they searched the defendant in the stairwell outside of the apartment and seized weapon from his person. D. J. Bowles v. United States (1970, 439 F. 2d 536, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 26; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1240, 401 U.S. 995).

Self-defense

It is reasonable to use deadly weapon in defense against attack with deadly weapon though, in general, defender must use weapon in reasonable manner, i.e., only to extent he reasonably thinks is required to save his own life or to avert serious bodily harm. J. Inge v. United States (1966, 356 F. 2d 345, 123 U.S. App. D.C. 6).

To justify application of the law of self-defense, the defendant must show clearly that he was attacked, and that he had good reason to believe that he was in imminent peril of his life or of great bodily harm. Hopkins v. United States (1894, 4 App. D.C. 430).

Accidental homicide and homicide in self-defense are wholly irreconcilable. Fearson v. United States (1897, 10 App. D.C. 536).

Court properly charged the jury that they should consider the words and acts of the deceased and any threats against the accused at the time of the killing. Wallace v. United States (1901, 18 App. D.C. 152).

Stabbing of a woman is not justifiable as self-defense in absence of anything to show that defendant suffered pain, or was apprehensive of bodily harm, so serious as to suggest the use of a deadly weapon. Grant v. United States (1906, 28 App. D.C. 169).

Before one can be permitted to take life under the apprehension that he is in danger of life or serious bodily harm from the violence of another, it must appear that he had a reasonable right to believe, from all the facts and circumstances presented to his mind, that he was in such danger. Sacriani v. United States (1912, 38 App. D.C. 371).

In homicidal cases, where the defense is self-defense, the majority of the courts hold "that it is proper to give incidents or specific acts of violence within the knowledge of the witness or coming under his observation." Marshall v. United States (1916, 45 App. D.C. 373).

A charge to the jury that it must appear that there was no reasonable occasion for the defendant to escape from the conflict was error, as the true test is whether circumstances presented to the mind of the defendant were such that would have produced upon the mind of any reasonable, prudent person, the reasonable belief that the deceased was about to kill him or do him serious bodily harm. Id.

A charge is sufficient which states that "if a man reasonably believes that he is in immediate danger of death or grievous bodily harm from his assailant, he may stand his ground, and if he kills him he has not exceeded the bounds of lawful self-defense." Price v. United States (1922, 276 F. 628, 51 App. D.C. 106).

Sentence

There is no legal obstacle to either indicting, convicting, or imposing concurrent sentences for crimes of both felony-murder and premeditated murder, where crimes arise from single act. United States v. R. L. Mack (1972, 466 F. 2d 333, 151 U.S. App. D.C. 162; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 297, 409 U.S. 952).

Severance

Refusal to grant a severance for trial purposes as to defendant tried for several crimes including first-degree murder arising out of two separate robberies was prejudicial to defendant because there was not only the danger that evidence with respect to two robberies would cumulate in jurors' minds and tend to prove defendant guilty of each, but also because the evidence as to one of the robberies was so weak that its primary usefulness was to support government's case as to robbery which resulted in the murder. C. Gregory v. United States (1966, 369 F. 2d 185, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

Refusal of motion of one of two defendants jointly indicted on charge of killing another in perpetrating a robbery for a severance on ground that such defendant could not obtain a fair and impartial trial because codefendant had made admissions and confessions out of his presence and hearing was not an abuse of discretion, where codefendant's testimony from witness stand was substantially to same effect as his former extrajudicial statement implicating moving defendant. Wheeler v. United States (1948, 165 F. 2d 225, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 448, 333 U.S. 830, 92 L. Ed. 1115). See, also, Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Refusal to grant three defendants jointly indicted on charge of murder in perpetration of robbery separate trials was not an abuse of discretion, where trial court duly limited effect of evidence introduced which was competent against one defendant and incompetent as to others. Hall v. United States (1948, 168 F. 2d 161, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 166, 4 A.L.R. 2d 1193, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1509, 334 U.S. 853, 92 L. Ed. 1775, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 9, 335 U.S. 839, 93 L. Ed. 391).

Summation of evidence

Fact that trial court, when summarizing the evidence, took longer to summarize evidence of the prosecution did not establish that it had placed undue emphasis on evidence of prosecution and had minimized evidence of defendant, where more time was taken to summarize evidence of prosecution because it was more voluminous than that of defendant, and it was not claimed by defendant that certain facts were "singled out" without consideration of other modifying facts. Wheeler v. United States (1948, 165 F. 2d 225, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 448, 333 U.S. 830, 92 L. Ed. 1115). See, also, Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Time

Some appreciable time must elapse in order that reflection and consideration amounting to the deliberation and premeditation required for first-degree murder may occur. Bullock v. United States (1941, 122 F. 2d 213, 74 App. D.C. 220, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 39, 317 U.S. 627, 87 L. Ed. 507).

Trial proceedings

An examination of murder weapon by ballistics expert during trial was not part of the trial and the fact that such examination was made in the absence of the defendant does not render inadmissible the evidence concerning it. Goodall v. United States (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 924).

Unlawful killing

Unlawful killing in sudden heat of passion, whether produced by rage, resentment, anger, terror or fear is reduced from murder to manslaughter only if there was adequate provocation, such as might naturally induce a reasonable man in passion of the moment to lose some self-control and commit act on impulse and without reflection. B. Austin v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 129, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Verdict

It was within prerogative of jury to acquit, on a felony-murder charge, a codefendant who was not present at scene of the killing, and to return a verdict of guilty of felony-murder as to defendant, even though both defendants were found guilty of the same robbery and even though jury could have returned a felony-murder verdict of guilty as to both defendants. W. C. Coleman v. United States (1961, 295 F. 2d 555, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 210).

In District of Columbia a jury may not qualify a verdict of murder in the first degree by adding thereto "without capital punishment." Johnson v. United States (1912, 38 App. D.C. 347, affirmed 32 S. Ct. 748, 225 U.S. 405, 56 L. Ed. 1142).

Where the evidence was sufficient for jury on charge of first-degree murder and jury was properly instructed, court's refusal to direct a verdict on first-degree murder charge could not be held to have erroneously influenced jury in reaching its verdict of second-degree murder. Thomas v. United States (1947, 158 F. 2d 97, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 314, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 1303, 331 U.S. 822, 91 L. Ed. 1838).

Victim's conduct contributing to death

One who, in striking another, inflicts a blow which may not be mortal in and of itself but thereby starts a chain of causation which leads to death, is guilty of homicide even if victim contributes to his own death or hastens it by failing to take proper treatment. United States v. Hamilton (D.C.D.C. 1960, 182 F. Supp. 548).

Where, after defendant had jumped on and kicked victim's face, tubes were inserted into victim's nasal passages and trachea to maintain his breathing process, but victim later pulled out the tubes and died of asphyxiation due to aspiration or inhalation of blood caused by the severe injuries to his face, defendant was guilty of homicide, not merely of assault with a dangerous weapon, even if victim consciously and deliberately pulled out tubes and would have lived if he had not. Id.

Voluntary confession

Evidence established that defendant's confession made at jail to police officer was voluntary. United States v. J. A. Naples (D.C.D.C. 1961, 192 F. Supp. 23; rev'd 307 F. 2d 618).

§ 22-2402. Murder in first degree—Placing obstructions upon or displacement of railroad.

Whoever maliciously places an obstruction upon a railroad or street railroad, or displaces or injures anything appertaining thereto, or does any other act with intent to endanger the passage of any locomotive or car, and thereby occasions the death of another, is guilty of murder in the first degree. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1321, ch. 854, § 799.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Instructions

Jury may be instructed on second-degree murder as lesser included offense though indictment is solely for felony-murder. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 264; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Where an indictment charged in separate counts both first-degree felony-murder and first-degree premeditated murder and the trial judge charged with respect to both felony-murder and second-degree murder, in the absence of any request, motion or objection by the defendant, failure to further charge that jury, which returned verdicts of guilty both as to felony-murder and as to manslaughter as lesser included offense, should consider question of second-degree murder only if it determined that government had not met its burden as to some element of first-degree murder charged, was not plain error and was not reversible error. Id.

Multiple counts

If prosecutor files in two counts of first-degree murder, once a charge of premeditated murder is struck as unsupported by sufficient evidence and that count is reduced to second-degree murder, defendant is entitled, on motion, to have entire count struck and to have issue of guilt as to second-degree murder submitted only as lesser included offense and only in the event of reasonable doubt of guilt of greater offense. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 264; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

§ 22-2403. Murder in second degree.

Whoever with malice aforethought, except as provided in sections 22-2401, 22-2402, kills another, is guilty of murder in the second degree. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1321, ch. 854, § 800; June 12, 1940, 54 Stat. 347, ch. 339.)

Generally

With certain statutory exceptions, when there is unjustified intentional killing, not premeditated but with malice, the offense is murder in the second degree and the same is true when there is unintentional killing which results from a willful and malicious act other than those specified in the first degree murder statute. P. O. Hansborough v. United States (1962, 308 F. 2d 645, 113 U.S. App. D.C. 392).

Where it could not be determined from evidence whether defendant intended to kill or merely wound his victim and it could not be said from record with legal certainty that interval between fight and the killing which followed was or was not of sufficient duration to provide time for premeditation required for first degree murder, court properly submitted lesser included offense of second degree murder in prosecution under indictment on charge of first degree murder. Id.

"Murder in the second degree" is the unlawful killing of another, where there is not a premeditated design and plan to effect death, but where there is malice aforethought. Fryer v. United States (1953, 207 F. 2d 134, 93 U. S. App. D. C. 34, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 135, 346 U. S. 885, 98 L. Ed. 389, rehearing denied 74 S. Ct. 305, 346 U. S. 928, 98 L. Ed. 420).

Abuse of discretion

In a case where a juvenile had killed his father, and several witnesses had testified to juvenile's fear of his father, exclusion of testimony of juvenile's probation officer, that the juvenile had come to the officer several days before the shooting in order to seek his advice concerning the violent outbreaks of the father and that the officer had told juvenile to contact police whenever such outbreaks occurred, was not an abuse of discretion and was not prejudicial since proffered evidence was cumulative and more remote than the evidence already admitted which dealt with juvenile's state of mind on the day in question. In the Matter of M. Bumphus, Jr. (D.C. App. 1969, 254 A. 2d 400).

Accident

If defendant did not have purpose to kill or if pistol went off accidentally, he would be guilty of murder in the second degree. Marcus v. United States (1937, 86 F. 2d 854, 66 App. D.C. 298).

Instruction to jury was correct to the effect that if in perpetrating the crime the killing was not done purposely but by accident or otherwise, appellant was not guilty of murder in the first degree. Jordon v. United States

(1937, 87 F. 2d 64, 66 App. D.C. 309, certiorari denied 58 S. Ct. 762, 303 U.S. 654, 82 L. Ed. 1114).

Accidental and unintentional

Even an accidental or unintentional killing will constitute second-degree murder if accompanied by malice. R. L. Logan v. United States (1969, 411 F. 2d 679, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

The defendant correctly asserted that the commission of an act, the natural and probable consequences of which are less than death or great bodily harm does not imply malice. Id.

Acquittal

Where government was unable to show any motive for killing of victim nor was there any showing of prior threats or quarrels which might supply inference of premeditation and deliberation in defendant's killing of victim by multiple stab wounds inflicted with knife defendant had been carrying with him that night, government's evidence was insufficient to warrant submission of an issue of premeditation and deliberation to jury and defendant's motion for acquittal of first-degree murder should have been granted at conclusion of prosecution's case. B. Austin v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 129, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Allen charge

Allen charge that did not make any reference to proportion of jurors for or against was not prejudicially coercive. United States v. H. A. Smoot (1972, 463, F. 2d 1221, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 130).

Alternative charge of first- and second-degree murder

Statute defining crimes of first- and second-degree murder do not impel requirement that they be charged in the alternative, as their substantive elements do not conflict. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 264; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Appreciable time

"Appreciable time" charge in homicide prosecution is a meaningful way to convey to jury the core meaning of premeditation and deliberation and for that reason should be given at least where specifically requested by defense. B. Austin v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 129, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Court's refusal in homicide prosecution to state that the time one must have for deliberation be "some appreciable period of time" rather than "some period of time" as originally proposed by judge was compounded by charge of court that the time to deliberate may be in the nature of hours, minutes, or seconds. Id.

Arrest

Where it is only 20 minutes after fatal shooting that police presented themselves at door of apartment occupied by female present at shooting, another person present at scene identified female as having left scene with suspect and, even though female protested entry, there was no evidence that police entry into apartment was forcible, search for and arrest of defendant in apartment was legal. United States v. C. R. Honesty (1971, 459 F. 2d 1279, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 255).

Authority of jury

A jury may consider issue of second-degree murder on an indictment of first-degree felony-murder only if it finds some defect with proof as to felony-murder. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 264; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Confrontation

Defendant was not denied his Sixth Amendment right of confrontation when confessions of two codefendants implicating defendant were admitted and such defendants repudiated their confessions at trial inasmuch as defendants' counsel did not avail himself of opportunity to cross-examine codefendants and bring out all details of alleged coerced confession and any details confirmatory of noninvolvement of defendant at time of offense. J. Jackson v. United States (1970, 439 F. 2d 529, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 19).

Construction

Purpose and effect of the "except" clause in the provision which states that whoever with malice aforethought, except as provided in sections defining first-degree murder, kills another is guilty of second-degree murder is that all homicides with malice are murder and punishable by maximum of life imprisonment set forth for murder in second-degree, except that those particularly heinous murders listed in first-degree section are punishable capitally. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 264; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Second-degree murder statute does not define substantive offense of second-degree murder so as to exclude therefrom all crimes that also come within first-degree murder statutes. Id.

Conviction of lesser offense

Although the indictment charged murder in first degree, appellant could have been found guilty of second degree murder had the evidence warranted it, since a defendant may be found guilty of any offense necessarily included in the crime charged in the indictment. Goodall v. United States (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 1389).

Cross-examination

Refusal of the trial court to make any advance ruling that under no circumstances would it permit photograph of the defendant found in his wallet, that depicted defendant holding a knife in a menacing manner, to be used in cross-examining defendant if he took the stand in his own defense, was not error since the court asked for some indication of the nature of the defendant's proposed testimony but none was supplied, in prosecution for murder arising out of stabbing death of fellow employees of defendant. United States v. S. Cobb (1971, 449 F. 2d 1145, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 69).

Cumulative punishment

Although defendant may be found guilty under the first-degree murder and second-degree murder statute does not mean that he is subject to cumulative punishment. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 264; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Evidence—Admissibility

Where, following arrest of apartment dweller as an accessory after the fact to fatal shooting, dweller had been informed of her right to counsel and right to remain silent, the search of her purse prior to taking her downstairs to squad car was clearly within scope of protective search and, gun found in purse, was properly admitted in trial of defendant convicted of second-degree murder, assault with a dangerous weapon, and carrying a dangerous weapon; fact that officers subsequently determined it to be wiser to release apartment dweller because of potential explosive situation in neighborhood and to issue a summons neither vitiated initial arrest nor invalidated search incident thereto. United States v. C. R. Honesty (1971, 459 F. 2d 1279, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 255).

Where there was other evidence that there had been "bad blood" between the defendant and the deceased, his former common-law wife, continuing over a period of years, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in prosecution for second-degree murder by admitting evidence that defendant had threatened the decedent with a shotgun 12 years prior to the homicide. United States v. D. Bobbitt (1971, 450 F. 2d 685, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 224).

Admission, in prosecution under this section brought against defendant who allegedly pushed wife from porch thereby causing injuries resulting in her death, of testimony that defendant had struck wife with chair seven months prior to alleged homicide, without instruction that such evidence came in only on issue of malice, is plain error requiring reversal, though such instruction had not been requested, where there had been extensive colloquy at bench over admissibility of such evidence and no one disputed that it was admissible only to prove malice. United States v. E. McClain (1971, 440 F. 2d 241, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 213).

Testimony of circumstances surrounding defendant's arrest by officers pursuant to a warrant for his arrest, not for the robberies and murder for which he was being tried, but for armed assault on police officer, offered as indicating consciousness of guilt or resistance to arrest, was admissible in context in which case was tried. C.

To determine whether defendant was aggressor and whether he could establish claim of self-defense to charges of assault with a dangerous weapon and murder, jury was required to consider all of circumstances leading up to fatal affray at victim's home, and it was not error to admit evidence that defendant had shortly before entered house of a former girl friend and attacked her and homicide victim. W. T. Harris v. United States (1966, 364 F. 2d 701, 124 U.S. App. D.C. 308).

On plea of self-defense evidence of deceased's character and belligerency, though unknown to defendant, is admissible in corroboration of defendant's testimony that deceased was the aggressor. Evans v. United States (1960, 277 F. 2d 354, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 324).

In prosecution for homicide resulting in conviction of second degree murder where defendant claimed killing was necessary in order to repel sexual assault by deceased who was drunk at the time of killing, it was reversible error to refuse to admit testimony to the effect that deceased was aggressive when drunk. Id.

Error in exclusion of testimony is not harmless if the excluded testimony, while not sufficient to produce an acquittal, might have induced jury to convict of a lesser included offense. Id.

In prosecution of defendant for killing of his wife's paramour who had engaged in improper relations with defendant's wife, wherein defendant asserted that he was of unsound mind at time of commission of the homicide in that he had "blacked out" at time of shooting, and that his state of mind was due to destruction of sanctity of his home, questioning of defendant about his relations with another woman was not error even though it might incidentally indicate commission of other crimes, since the evidence was relevant and material to defendant's attitude towards his own wife and home. Bell v. United States (1954, 210 F. 2d 711, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 173, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 682, 347 U.S. 956, 98 L. Ed. 1101, certiorari denied 77 S. Ct. 684, 353 U.S. 924, 1 L. Ed. 2d 720, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 1002, 356 U.S. 963, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1070).

In murder prosecution, where preceding witnesses had testified that defendant stabbed deceased with a knife, testimony that immediately after the stabbing deceased exclaimed "I've been stuck" was admissible as part of the res gestae, although the witness so testifying did not also testify that the attack had taken place. United States v. Edmonds (D.C.D.C. 1946, 63 F. Supp. 968).

In prosecution for murder of husband, forged letter written by accused to a friend of husband and purporting to be a confession of murder by fictitious person was admissible, though letter was postmarked and delivered several months after crime was committed. Harris v. United States (1948, 169 F. 2d 887, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 348, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 161, 335 U.S. 873, 93 L. Ed. 417).

— Sufficiency

Evidence that the defendant was alone with his wife when fatal shot was fired, that he was somewhat inebriated at the time, that shells and bullet holes were found throughout the room, that lethal bullet had traveled in a downward trajectory and came to rest in mattress of bed on which wife was seated, and that it was unlikely that rifle could misfire in manner suggested by the defendant, i.e., in an upward trajectory, is sufficient to form a reasonable basis upon which to disbelieve defendant's defense and to infer that he shot his wife, thus satisfying causation and malice requirement for second-degree murder. United States v. W. Lucas (1971, 447 F. 2d 338, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 368).

There was ample evidence to support a conviction for second degree murder by willful and malicious actions. R. L. Logan v. United States (1969, 411 F. 2d 679, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

Accused who put on defense to first-degree murder case did not thereby waive earlier motion for acquittal or expose himself to death penalty which government was not entitled to pursue in view of fact that at close of prosecution's case defendant was entitled to acquittal of first-degree murder charge because evidence adduced by prosecution was not sufficient to permit a reasonable man to find that elements of first-degree murder existed beyond reasonable doubt. B. Austin v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 129, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

In homicide prosecution, evidence raised question for jury as to whether defendant was not guilty by reason of insanity. Rose v. United States (C.A.D.C. 1960, 283 F. 2d 376).

Evidence that defendant approached deceased and others with a knife in his hand and wantonly stabbed deceased during an altercation, resulting in death, warranted conviction of murder in the second degree. United States v. Edmonds (D.C.D.C. 1946, 63 F. Supp. 968).

Evidence that defendant found deceased with a woman with whom defendant was friendly, that some discussion ensued, followed by an altercation during which defendant cut deceased with a knife resulting in death, justified a finding that defendant acted with the malice aforethought essential to crime of second degree murder. Thomas v. United States (1947, 158 F. 2d 97, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 314, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 1303, 331 U.S. 822, 91 L. Ed. 1838).

Evidence sustained conviction of second degree murder as against contention that fatal wound was inflicted in self-defense. Parker v. United States (1947, 158 F. 2d 185, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 282, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 861, 330 U.S. 829, 91 L. Ed. 1278).

Examination of witnesses

In murder prosecution, where defense counsel had elicited from defendant on direct examination the fact that he had been in jail continuously from time of his arrest, court properly permitted government counsel on cross-examination to inquire of defendant whether it was not a fact that the court had set bail at $1,500 and that defendant therefore had an opportunity to obtain release while awaiting trial if he had been able to secure bond. United States v. Edmonds (D.C.D.C. 1946, 63 F. Supp. 968).

In murder prosecution, permitting government counsel on cross-examination to inquire of defendant whether it was not a fact that the court had set bail at $1,500 and that defendant could have obtained his release while awaiting trial if he had been able to secure bond, after defendant's counsel had brought out the fact that defendant had been in jail continuously from time of his arrest, did not affect the course of the trial so as to be ground for new trial. Id.

Defendant was not prejudiced by trial court's propounding questions to him when he was testifying as a witness, where defendant by the interchange was enabled to make a logical answer explaining his conduct, entirely consistent with his theory of self-defense. Griffin v. United States (1948, 164 F. 2d 903, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 20, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 727, 333 U.S. 857, 92 L. Ed. 1137).

First degree murder defined

First-degree murder requires premeditation and deliberation and covers calculated and planned killings while homicides that are unplanned or impulsive, even though they are intentional and with malice aforethought, are murder in the second degree. B. Austin v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 129, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Intentional murder is in the first degree if committed in cold blood and is murder in the second degree if committed on impulse or in the sudden heat of passion. Id.

Impeachment

When other crime is introduced, not as substantive evidence, but solely for impeachment purposes, it is plain error to fail to limit the jury's use of the other crimes to impeachment. United States v. D. Bobbitt (1971, 450 F. 2d 685, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 224).

When evidence of other crime is introduced solely for impeachment purposes, the trial court has duty to see that the jury does not cross boundary between credibility and substance and the trial judge must not only act sua sponte, whether or not request is made, but should give appropriate instruction immediately before or after the impeachment evidence is submitted, to confine its effect before evidence moves onto other matters. Id.

Failure of judge to exercise his discretion in admitting or refusing to admit as impeaching evidence three prior assaults of appellant, will not be a basis for reversing conviction. T. D. Lewis v. United States (1967, 381 F. 2d 894, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 115).

Inconsistent verdicts

Convictions for both robbery and second degree murder could stand even if they were inconsistent where the conviction of robbery was consistent with the evidence and the conviction of second degree murder was also consistent with the evidence. L. Jackson v. United States (1962, 313 F. 2d 572, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 181).

Indeterminate Sentence Act

Indeterminate Sentence Act is inapplicable to second degree murder and the existing statute providing a penalty of imprisonment for life or for not less than 20 years remains in effect, and definite term of 20 years is a valid sentence. Anderson v. Rives (1936, 85 F. 2d 673, 66 App. D.C. 174).

Indictment

Indictment charging defendant with second-degree murder is not defective because it merely mentions "malice aforethought" without specifying recklessness, notwithstanding claim that it left defendant without notice that case would be tried on a theory of recklessness, since, given long-standing precedent in this jurisdiction that malice can be inferred from excessive recklessness, it could not be said that defendant was unfairly foreclosed from any awareness that the government would assert that theory of criminality. United States v. W. Lucas (1971, 447 F. 2d 338, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 368).

Defendant could be convicted of second degree murder under felony-murder indictment even though indictment failed to allege "malice aforethought", where indictment contained the fully equivalent language that defendant "unlawfully and feloniously did murder" named person "by means of shooting him with a pistol". L. Jackson v. United States (1962, 313 F. 2d 572, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 181).

Second degree murder is an included offense under an indictment for felony-murder. Id.

Inferences

No inference adverse to defendant could properly be drawn from failure of alibi witness to contact police or failure to give statement to police when he learned that defendant had been charged in homicide case, and it was improper for prosecutor to examine witness concerning his failure to contact police and make statement and to comment thereon in argument; however, improper questioning and comment was not so prejudicial as to require reversal. United States v. J. J. Young (1972, 463 F. 2d 934, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 98).

No inference can be drawn from fact that witness does not go to police when he learns police have made arrest of defendant for crime committed at time for which he can provide alibi testimony. Id.

Instructions

Judge has duty to give instruction if he concludes that case is clear for missing witness inference against party, e.g., party had physical ability to locate and produce witness, and there was such relationship in legal status or on facts as claimed by party as to make it natural to expect party to have called witness; in the in-between case, where each side has the physical capacity to locate and produce the witness, and it is debatable which side might more naturally have been expected to call the witness, there may be latitude for the judge to leave the matter to debate without an instruction. United States v. J. J. Young (1972, 463 F. 2d 934, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 98).

The basis for omitting the instruction as to absent witnesses, though ordinarily provided, would be the conclusion of the judge, first, that even in the absence of instruction the situation is sufficiently clear cut that counsel's argument can be fairly understood and appraised by the jury, without prejudicial impact; and second, that the preparation of a careful instruction to state the ground rules for appraising counsel's argument would be unnecessary and time-consuming; and, possibly, third, that such instruction might even be distracting, conceivably counterproductive, leading a jury, respectful of the court's concerns, to focus unduly on the nonevidence rather than the evidence in the case. Id.

Failure in second-degree murder prosecution to give limiting instruction concerning evidence, which pertained to prior assaults on victim-child by defendant, which was relevant and material to issues of malice, intent and willfulness and which refuted defendant's contention that burning of child was accidental since defendant felt kindly toward him, was not plain error. United States v. E. Thomas (1972, 459 F. 2d 1172, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 148).

Testimony that defendant and a female had run from scene of fatal shooting after female had been released by decedent's brother, and that decedent's brother, who was armed with shotgun, had left scene, coupled with fact that when defendant was apprehended in female's apartment he was in process of shaving off his heavy beard, was sufficient to support an instruction on flight or concealment. United States v. C. R. Honesty (1971, 459 F. 2d 1279, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 255).

If the defendant presses no objection, judge may instruct jury to render verdicts on both first-degree felony murder count and second-degree murder count, assuming judge concludes the instruction will not confuse jury; however, if defendant insists that charge of second-degree murder be submitted to jury solely as lesser offense included within first-degree murder charge, and if he makes a timely motion or objection, he is entitled to an instruction directing jury (a) to first consider issue of guilt as to first-degree murder; (b) in the event of acquittal, to consider guilt of second-degree murder as lesser included offense; and (c) in the event of verdict of guilty of first-degree murder, to enter no verdict concerning second-degree murder. United States v. G. L. Butler (1972, 455 F. 2d 1338, 147 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

Defendant was not entitled to instruction in prosecution for second-degree murder to effect that jury could not consider threat that defendant made to decedent 12 years prior to homicide as evidence of the defendant's motive or absence of mistake unless it first determined that the defendant had done the shooting. United States v. D. Bobbitt (1971, 450 F. 2d 685, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 224).

When the defendant's prior act was introduced upon issue of motive and there was no contest as to the defendant's presence and opportunity to commit homicide, it was not plain error to fail to instruct on the materiality of the prior act on issue of whether the defendant committed the homicide. Id.

Even when prior crime has substantive significance, it may be relevant to particular issue that must be delimited in order to avoid prejudice and the jury should not be given an instruction that permits it to infer general predisposition to commit crime. Id.

When pertinent substantive issue is susceptible of delimitation, it is appropriate to instruct that the jury must not consider evidence of prior crimes other than for purpose offered in order to avoid improper transfer to determination of all the elements of offense charged. Id.

In absence of request, it was not plain error for trial judge in second-degree murder prosecution to fail to instruct jury that evidence of prior threat by defendant against deceased should not be given consideration on basis that it indicated defendant was generally culpable person. Id.

Where the trial court instructed in second-degree-murder prosecution that if person uses deadly weapon in killing another malice may be inferred from his use of such weapon in absence of explanatory or mitigating circumstances, the trial court was not required, sua sponte, to give a more detailed instruction as to possible explanatory or mitigating circumstances the jury might consider. United States v. S. W. Hardin (1970, 443 F. 2d 735, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 320).

"Mutual combat" was self-explanatory term and the trial court was not required to elaborate in its instruction that manslaughter occurs when homicide is committed at time of mutual combat or when it is committed in passion or hot blood caused by adequate provocation. Id.

Instruction that malice may also be defined as a condition of the mind that prompts a person to do a wrongful act willfully, that is, on purpose, to the injury of another, or to do intentionally a wrongful act toward another without justification or excuse does not warrant reversal of conviction of second-degree murder on the ground that instruction erroneously informed jury that an injurious wrongful act is done with malice if done only willfully, that is, on purpose. R. J. Carter v. United States (1970, 437 F. 2d 692, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 259; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1393, 402 U.S. 912).

Error in murder prosecution instruction stating that in determining whether act is done with malice aforethought the jury should bear in mind that every man is presumed to intend consequences of his act, without including elements of willfulness or want of justification, is not plain error in absence of other error in instructions. J. O. Mitchell v. United States (1970, 434 F. 2d 483, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 209).

Instruction that malice to support second degree murder conviction may be implied from wantonly reckless conduct is proper. Id.

Alleged error in murder prosecution instruction to effect that one engaged in unlawful conduct may not rely on defense of accidental death will not be reached on appeal since no objection was made at trial. Id.

Instruction that if the Government had proved beyond reasonable doubt that defendant had indeed committed acts disclosed by the evidence as a result of which the victim died but that the Government had failed to prove element of malice necessary to second-degree murder, jury may consider whether defendant was guilty of lesser included offense of manslaughter, did not improperly permit the jury to infer requisite malice if they accepted defendant's version that his assault was only of minor dimensions and not by itself sufficient to disclose intent to cause great or serious bodily harm. R. L. Logan v. United States (1969, 411 F. 2d 679, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

Jury may be instructed on second-degree murder as lesser included offense though indictment is solely for felony-murder. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 264; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Where an indictment charged in separate counts both first-degree felony-murder and first-degree premeditated murder and the trial judge charged with respect to both felony-murder and second-degree murder, in the absence of any request, motion or objection by the defendant, failure to further charge that jury, which returned verdicts of guilty both as to felony-murder and as to manslaughter as lesser included offense, should consider question of second-degree murder only if it determined that government had not met its burden as to some element of first-degree murder charged, was not plain error and was not reversible error. Id.

Charge to a jury that in absence of explanatory circumstances the law infers or presumes malice from use of deadly weapon was error. K. Green v. United States (1968, 405 F. 2d 1368, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 98; see also 424 F. 2d 912, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 424; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 473, 400 U.S. 997).

In homicide prosecution, charge to jury which submitted first-degree murder, second-degree murder, and manslaughter and which contained statement that wrongful act intentionally done was done with malice was prejudicial error. Id.

Charge in homicide prosecution should focus primarily on defendant's actual thought processes in terms of meditation and conscious weighing of alternatives and the appreciable time element is subordinate, necessary for but not sufficient to establish deliberation. B. Austin v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 129, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Analysis of jury would be illuminated if it is first advised that a typical case of first-degree murder is the murder in cold blood while murder committed on impulse or in sudden passion is murder in the second degree, and then instructed that a homicide conceived in passion constitutes murder in the first degree only if jury is convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that there was an appreciable time after design was conceived and that in this interval there was further thought and a turning over in the mind and not mere persistence of an initial impulse of passion. Id.

Court erred in refusing to instruct that jury could not find defendant guilty of both first-degree and second-degree murder. J. A. Naples v. United States (1964, 344 F. 2d 508, 120 U.S. App. D.C. 123).

Single offense cannot be both first- and second-degree murder. Id.

Jury should be instructed that "mental disease" or "mental defect" includes any abnormal condition of the mind substantially affecting mental or emotional processes and substantially impairing behavior controls. E. McDonald v. United States (1962, 312 F. 2d 847, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 120, see also, 284 F. 2d 232, 109 U.S. App. D.C. 98).

Jury may be instructed, if there is testimony on point, that mental capacity or lack of it to distinguish right from wrong and ability to refrain from doing wrong or unlawful act may be considered in determining whether there is relationship between mental disease and act charged. Id.

Defendant, who relies on defense of insanity, is entitled to instruction that if acquitted by reason of insanity he will be confined in mental hospital until it is determined that he is no longer dangerous to himself or others, unless it affirmatively appears that defendant does not wish such instruction. Id.

Charge, in prosecution for second-degree murder, considered as a whole, properly conveyed to jury correct rules on murder and manslaughter. B. L. Falls v. United States (1963, 321 F. 2d 762, 116 U.S. App. D.C. 149).

Trial judge in instructing jury as to difference between first degree murder and second degree murder, should endeavor to make it absolutely clear to jury that intentional killing may be second degree murder if premeditation and deliberation do not exist. D. Tucker v. United States (1963, 318 F. 2d 221, 115 U.S. App. D.C. 250).

Giving of instruction that second degree murder differs from first degree murder in that it may be committed either without purpose or intent to kill, or without premeditation and deliberation was not prejudicial error, in view of instructions in their entirety, in view of fact that court was careful to distinguish two degrees of murder in important respect that premeditation and deliberation are essential elements of first degree murder, in view of absence of objection or request for additional instruction, and in view of evidence and sentence of life imprisonment. Id.

In homicide prosecution, omission to define "malice aforethought" and omission to charge on involuntary manslaughter constituted plain error, and second-degree murder conviction would have to be reversed and case remanded for new trial even though trial counsel had not requested such charges. McDonald v. United States (C.A.D.C. 1960, 284 F. 2d 232).

In prosecution for first degree murder, instruction to jury that second degree murder is killing with malice aforethought, but without intent to kill, was erroneous as to such limitation. Kitchen v. United States (1953, 205 F. 2d 720, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 382).

In prosecution for murder, court properly instructed that, if defendant did flee from the scene, jury had right to consider that fact as a consciousness of guilt, if jury deemed it proper to do so. United States v. Edmonds (D.C.D.C. 1946, 63 F. Supp. 968).

In murder prosecution, where court called jury's attention to defendant's denial that he fled from the scene, and permitted jury to determine that question before they could consider flight as a consciousness of guilt, court did not err in refusing to elaborate by giving an additional charge to the effect that defendant claimed that he ran from the scene not for the purpose of avoiding arrest but because of fear of attack by decedent's companion. Id.

Appellant's claim that Court failed to charge that if jury believed him guilty of killing but if any reasonable doubt existed as to whether he committed murder first or murder second, it should be resolved in favor of the lesser crime, is without merit, since such an instruction is necessary only when from the evidence as a whole the jury might reasonably find guilty in either degree and must decide which degree. Goodall v. United States (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 1389).

Intervening cause of death

Evidence sustained conviction of manslaughter notwithstanding defense of an intervening cause of death. Ross v. United States (1959, 267 F. 2d 618, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 341, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1464, 360 U.S. 939, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1551).

Jury

Where jury foreman volunteered information to court that jury had reached some decision on the charge and lesser charge and that decision was between them, so that it was apparent that jury had already determined that the facts presented question as to whether defendant was guilty of second-degree murder or manslaughter, statement by judge that he would ask jurors to come back on following day to see if they could reach a verdict on the lesser charge, even if they could not agree on the greater charge, was not coercive. United States v. H. A. Smoot (1972, 463 F. 2d 1221, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 130).

When jurors report that they are unable to agree, court is faced with alternative of discharging them or directing them to continue their deliberations; one of factors that judge may consider in arriving at that decision is possibility that jury may be able to come to agreement on any of charges submitted to them for determination and, to determine likelihood of agreement, it is necessary in most instances, and proper, for judge to interrogate jury. Id.

When jurors report they are unable to agree and court seeks to determine likelihood of agreement, court's interrogation of jury must be circumspect and under no circumstances should court ask for numerical division within jury or in any way influence any particular result; leading inquiry should be avoided and instead of inquiry "is there some possibility of agreement on the lesser charge" a preferable inquiry would be "without attempting to influence your deliberations in any way, I merely wish to inquire whether you have explored the possibility of agreement on the lesser charge" and it would be proper to instruct again on jury's duty to determine guilt or innocence as to any offense necessarily included in crime charged. Id.

Lesser included offense

Instructing on elements of lesser included offense of manslaughter where judge defined only voluntary and not involuntary manslaughter, it was not prejudicial to defendant as improperly precluding jury from rendering a verdict of involuntary manslaughter when defendant did not request involuntary manslaughter instruction, and elements of voluntary manslaughter were properly defined, and trial judge properly emphasized essential distinction between murder and manslaughter and presence or absence of malice. R. L. Logan v. United States (1969, 411 F. 2d 679, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

Where an indictment charges felony-murder, a verdict of second-degree murder is appropriate if there is proof from which the jury might reasonably find that defendant did not commit one of the enumerated felonies but was guilty of an intentional killing on impulse, and on this state of proof a charge of second-degree murder as a lesser included offense may be requested by prosecution or defense. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 264; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Malice

Evidence demonstrating that an act was done so recklessly or wantonly as to manifest a depravity of mind and disregard of human life satisfies malice requirement for second-degree murder. United States v. W. Lucas (1971, 447 F. 2d 338, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 368).

Evidence in prosecution under this section established a sufficient degree of recklessness to merit an instruction to jury regarding inference of malice. Id.

Malice necessary in second-degree murder can be inferred from excessive recklessness. Id.

Malice to support a second degree murder conviction may be implied from conduct which is so reckless or wanton as to manifest depravity of mind and disregard of human life. J. O. Mitchell v. United States (1970, 434 F. 2d 483, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 209).

Evidence, including evidence that bullet entered the victim's head on trajectory horizontal to floor and that the defendant intentionally fired gun at floor in room where several persons were present is sufficient, in second degree murder prosecution, to support finding of express or implied malice. Id.

A wrongful act intentionally done is not therefore done with malice. K. Green v. United States (1968, 405 F. 2d 1368, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 98).

"Malice" is a state of mind showing a heart fatally bent on mischief and unmindful of social duties and may also be defined as a condition of mind that prompts a person to do an injurious act wilfully to the injury of another; and malice may be implied or inferred from the act committed, or it may be expressed. Fryer v. United States

Where a homicide directly resulted from excessive speed of the driver of an automobile carrying contraband liquor after being told to stop by arresting officers, the illegal transportation was an offense punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, and constitutes the malice essential to murder in the second degree. Lee v. United States (1940, 112 F. 2d 46, 72 App. D.C. 147).

A defendant's voluntary intoxication does not of itself negative the malice required to constitute second-degree murder and thereby reduce second-degree murder to voluntary manslaughter. Nestlerode v. United States (1941, 122 F. 2d 56, 74 App. D.C. 276).

Presence or absence of malice aforethought constitutes difference between second-degree murder and manslaughter. United States v. Hamilton (D.C.D.C. 1960, 182 F. Supp. 548).

Where there is malice aforethought in regard to a homicide, crime is second-degree murder, but, if malice aforethought is lacking, crime is manslaughter. Id.

"Malice aforethought" or "malice" is a word of art and, in law of homicide, denotes a vicious and wicked state of mind and may be described as a heart fatally bent on mischief and unmindful of social duty. Id.

Where, as result of exchange of banter, subsequent argument, and then acrimonious quarrel, defendant knocked victim to the ground and, in fit of ungovernable rage, jumped on and kicked victim's face, thereby inflicting wounds which contributed to victim's death, there was no malice in the legal sense, and, therefore, crime was that of manslaughter. Id.

"Legal malice" does not necessarily mean a malicious or malevolent purpose or personal hatred or hostility toward deceased, but a state of mind which shows a heart unmindful of social duty and fatally bent on mischief, or which prompts a person to do an injurious act wilfully to the injury of another. United States v. Edmonds (D.C.D.C. 1946, 63 F. Supp. 968).

A killing under the influence of passion, induced by insufficient provocation, may be "murder in the second degree," and an accidental or unintentional killing constitutes murder in the second degree if it is accompanied by malice. Id.

Manslaughter

Where defendant struck a person who fell to the sidewalk and whose head hit the concrete and where several days later such person died as a result of the head injuries, the defendant was guilty of manslaughter. Williams v. United States (1959, 267 F. 2d 625, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 348).

Merger of offenses

Charge of cruelty to child did not merge into manslaughter conviction, in that count charging cruelty had societal purposes as well as essential elements differing from those in count which charged second-degree murder and under which defendant was convicted of manslaughter. United States v. E. Thomas (1972, 459 F. 2d 1172, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 148).

Multiple counts

If prosecutor files in two counts of first-degree murder, once a charge of premeditated murder is struck as unsupported by sufficient evidence and that count is reduced to second-degree murder, defendant is entitled, on motion, to have entire count struck and to have issue of guilt as to second-degree murder submitted only as lesser included offense and only in the event of reasonable doubt of guilt of greater offense. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 264; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Plain error

Failure in second-degree murder prosecution to strike victim's mother's testimony that upon her becoming angry with defendant for beating victim "[defendant] strangled me and he slapped me and about that time I was pregnant with his child," or to declare a mistrial sua sponte because of such testimony was not plain error. United States v. E. Thomas (1972, 459 F. 2d 1172, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 148).

Premeditation

An intentional killing that is not premeditated and not connected with another crime is "murder in the second degree". Kitchen v. United States (1953, 205 F. 2d 720, 92 U.S. App. D. C. 382).

Prosecutor's comments

If prosecutor engages in prejudicial summation, it is not dispositive that defense counsel did not object, especially since objection cannot always procure realistic cure for damage; question is one of degree, and it counts against prosecutor that he made improper comment after having been admonished to abstain from line of questioning. United States v. J. J. Young (1972, 463 F. 2d 934, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 98).

Failure of prosecutor to follow prescribed procedure before commenting on absence of persons said to be in company of defendant and alibi witness on evening of shooting did not require reversal in view of failure to object, attempt of defense to make tactical use of prosecutor's reference, and lack of any motion supported by meaningful affidavit of defendant's inability to call or subpoena absent witnesses. Id.

Questions withheld from jury

Under all the facts and circumstances, the question whether there had been only second degree murder because of the killer's intoxication should not have been submitted to the jury. Goodall v. United States (1950, 180 F. 2d 397, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 148, 17 A.L.R. 2d 1070, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1009, 339 U.S. 987, 94 L. Ed. 1389).

Reckless conduct as manslaughter

The court held that reckless conduct resulting in death may constitute manslaughter; the difference between that recklessness which displays depravity and such extreme and wanton disregard for human life as to constitute "malice" and that recklessness which amounts only to manslaughter lies in the quality of awareness of the risk. United States v. W. M. Dixon (1969 419 F. 2d 288, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 401).

Reduction to manslaughter

If the killing is committed in a sudden heat of passion, caused by adequate provocation, the crime may be reduced from murder to manslaughter, but a trivial or slight assault is not sufficient provocation for that purpose. United States v. Edmonds (D.C.D.C. 1946, 63 F. Supp. 968).

Jury was warranted in concluding that conduct of deceased in kicking defendant was not adequate provocation for the fatal stabbing of deceased, so as to reduce the killing to manslaughter. Id.

Severance

Refusal to grant a severance for trial purposes as to defendant tried for several crimes including first-degree murder arising out of two separate robberies was prejudicial to defendant because there was not only the danger that evidence with respect to two robberies would cumulate in jurors' minds and tend to prove defendant guilty of each, but also because the evidence as to one of the robberies was so weak that its primary usefulness was to support government's case as to robbery which resulted in the murder. C. Gregory v. United States (1966, 369 F. 2d 185, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

Since the delay fairly attributable to defendant was substantially less than one year and was, in the circumstances, not unreasonable, the delay of 30 months between surrender of defendant to police and his trial without any claim of bad faith by prosecution did not constitute a denial of constitutional right of speedy trial to defendant who made demands for pretrial mental examination and a judicial determination of competency and who at first agreed to enter a plea of guilty and then changed his mind. United States v. B. Ransom (1972, 465 F. 2d 672, 151 U.S. App. D.C. 87).

The fact that defendant who agrees to plead to a lesser offense is not awaiting trial does not mean that he can be put away in jail and forgotten; but neither can he be heard to complain of deprivation of constitutional rights when prosecution gives temporary priority to other business, where a not unreasonable delay ensues and credit is given for time spent in pretrial confinement. Id.

Sufficiency of record on appeal

Record showed a preponderance of competent evidence to sustain conviction of the juvenile of manslaughter and assault with a deadly weapon, and decision of juvenile court that juvenile was within its jurisdiction and should be committed to custody of Department of Public Welfare for indeterminate period was proper. In the Matter of M. Bumphus, Jr. (D.C. App. 1969, 254 A. 2d 400).

Unlawful killing

Unlawful killing in sudden heat of passion, whether produced by rage, resentment, anger, terror or fear is reduced from murder to manslaughter only if there was adequate provocation, such as might naturally induce a reasonable man in passion of the moment to lose some self-control and commit act on impulse and without reflection. B. Austin v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 129, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Verdict

Where concurrent sentences were imposed for second-degree murder and for carrying a pistol without a license, murder conviction was affirmed and there were difficult factual and legal problems with respect to the weapons conviction, public interest and the interest of administration of justice required that the conviction on weapons count be vacated. United States v. D. Bobbitt (1971, 450 F. 2d 685, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 224).

Witnesses

Where witness in prosecution for murder and possession of prohibited weapon was long time drug addict who had used drugs on day of trial and who had been hospitalized for drug addiction, trial court abused its discretion by refusing defendant's request that trial judge subpoena and examine locally available hospital records pertaining to witness' competency. United States v. R. H. Crosby (1972, 462 F. 2d 1201, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 306).

— Missing

If party has it peculiarly within his power to produce witnesses whose testimony would elucidate transaction, fact that he does not do it permits inference that testimony if produced would have been unfavorable. United States v. J. J. Young (1972, 463 F. 2d 934, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 98).

Comment by counsel and instruction by judge as to absent witnesses is prohibited unless witness was peculiarly within power of party to produce, and testimony would elucidate transaction. Id.

§ 22-2404. Punishment for murder in first and second degrees.

The punishment of murder in the first degree shall be death by electrocution unless the jury by unanimous vote recommends life imprisonment; or if the jury, having determined by unanimous vote the guilt of the defendant as charged, is unable to agree as to punishment it shall inform the court and the court shall thereupon have jurisdiction to impose and shall impose either a sentence of death by electrocution or life imprisonment.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a person convicted of first degree murder and upon whom a sentence of life imprisonment is imposed shall be eligible for parole only after the expiration of twenty years from the date he commences to serve his sentence.

Whoever is guilty of murder in the second degree shall be imprisoned for life or not less than twenty years.

Cases tried prior to March 22, 1962, and which are before the court for the purpose of sentence or re-sentence shall be governed by the provisions of law in effect prior to March 22, 1962: Provided, That the judge may, in his sole discretion, consider circumstances in mitigation and in aggravation and make a determination as to whether the case in his opinion justifies a sentence of life imprisonment, in which event he shall sentence the defendant to life imprisonment. Such a sentence of life imprisonment shall be in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

In any case tried under this Act as amended where the penalty prescribed by law upon conviction of the defendant is death except in cases otherwise provided, the jury returning a verdict of guilty may by unanimous vote fix the punishment at life imprisonment; and thereupon the court shall sentence him accordingly; but if the jury shall not thus prescribe the punishment the court shall sentence the defendant to suffer death by electrocution unless the jury by its verdict indicates that it is unable to agree upon the punishment, in which case the court shall sentence the defendant to death or life imprisonment. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1321, ch. 854, § 801; Jan. 30, 1925, 43 Stat. 798, ch. 115, § 1; Mar. 22, 1962, 76 Stat. 46, Pub. L. 87-423, § 1.)

Accident

If defendant did not have purpose to kill or if pistol went off accidentally, he would then be guilty of murder in the second degree and punishable by imprisonment for life, or for not less than 20 years. Marcus v. United States (1937, 86 F. 2d 854, 66 App. D.C. 298).

Alternative charge of first- and second-degree murder

Statute defining crimes of first- and second-degree murder do not impel requirement that they be charged in the alternative, as their substantive elements do not conflict. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 407 U.S. App. D.C. 132; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Appreciable time

No particular length of time is necessary for deliberation, and it is not the lapse of time which constitutes deliberation necessary to convict for first-degree murder but the reflection and turning over in mind of accused concerning his design and purpose to kill. W. L. Parman v. United States (1968, 399 F. 2d 559, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 188).

Evidence that deceased was assaulted, bound with rope, tied to a chair and then killed by strangulation from behind while still tightly bound was sufficient to support finding of premeditation. Id.

"Appreciable time" charge in homicide prosecution is a meaningful way to convey to jury the core meaning of premeditation and deliberation and for that reason should be given at least where specifically requested by defense. B. Austin v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 129, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Court's refusal in homicide prosecution to state that the time one must have for deliberation be "some appreciable period of time" rather than "some period of time" as originally proposed by judge was compounded by charge of court that the time to deliberate may be in the nature of hours, minutes or seconds. Id.

Bifurcated trial

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in murder prosecution by denying motion for bifurcated trial with two juries on issues of insanity and defense to the merits. W. L. Parman v. United States (1968, 399 F. 2d 559, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 188).

Constitutionality

Statute providing that punishment for first-degree murder should be death unless jury by unanimous vote recommends otherwise did not needlessly penalize assertion of constitutional right and was not unconstitutional. A. Calloway and T. L. S. McCowey v. United States (1968, 399 F. 2d 1006, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 273).

Construction

Provision in this section that person sentenced for first-degree murder shall not be eligible for parole until 20 years after he begins serving his sentence applies only to a person convicted of first-degree murder upon whom sentence of life imprisonment is imposed. United States v. W. Howard (1971, 449 F. 2d 1086, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 10).

Purpose and effect of the "except" clause in the provision which states that whoever with malice aforethought, except as provided in sections defining first-degree murder, kills another is guilty of second-degree murder is that all homicides with malice are murder and punishable by maximum of life imprisonment set forth for murder in second-degree except that those particularly heinous murders listed in first-degree section are punishable capitally. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 407 U.S. App. D.C. 132; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Second-degree murder statute does not define substantive offense of second-degree murder so as to exclude therefrom all crimes that also come within first-degree murder statutes. Id.

Cumulative punishment

Although defendant may be found guilty under the first-degree murder and second-degree murder statute does not mean that he is subject to cumulative punishment. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 407 U.S. App. D.C. 132; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999).

Double jeopardy

Where jury was authorized at first trial to find defendant guilty of either first degree murder or second degree murder, and jury found defendant guilty of second degree murder, but on appeal that conviction was reversed and the case was remanded for a new trial, second trial of defendant for first degree murder placed him in jeopardy twice for same offense in violation of the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy, and defendant had not waived that defense by making successful appeal of erroneous conviction of second degree murder. Green v. United States (1957, 78 S. Ct. 221, 355 U.S. 184, 2 L. Ed. 2d 199, 61 A.L.R. 2d 1119).

Where jury was authorized to find defendant guilty of either first degree murder or alternatively of second degree murder and jury found him guilty of second degree murder, defendant, by appealing, did not prolong his original jeopardy, and when his conviction for second degree murder was reversed and case remanded he could not be tried again for first degree murder without placing him in new jeopardy. Id.

Elements of offense

Offenses of murder, housebreaking, and larceny each requires elements of proof which are not common to other two and each offense is historically an independent crime. United States v. G. D. Butler (1972, 462 F. 2d 1195, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 300).

Evidence—Sufficiency

On this motion to vacate sentence for first-degree murder, the only evidence that petitioner consumed large quantities of alcohol prior to his arrest was his own testimony, and the evidence including testimony by police officers which indicated petitioner was not intoxicated, established beyond a reasonable doubt that petitioner was not intoxicated when he made oral confessions to police. H. F. Jarmans, Jr. v. United States (1969, 303 F. Supp. 763).

On this motion to vacate sentence for first-degree murder, although expert testimony conflicted as to state of petitioner's mental health at time he made oral inculpatory statements, the evidence established beyond a reasonable doubt that petitioner was without mental illness and that his normal will to protect himself was not impaired when he made inculpatory statements. Id.

Proof in homicide prosecution was legally sufficient to support a verdict predicated on thesis that shotgun was discharged killing victim while a robbery was then being attempted. E. M. Harrison and O. G. White v. United States (1967, 387 F. 2d 303, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 245).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction of one defendant of felony murder. Id.

Hearing on mental condition

Where, following denial of certiorari by United States Supreme Court, defendant had moved both for reduction of death sentence and for a mental examination to determine unsoundness of mind based upon unrefuted affidavit of defendant's sister, district court should have caused to be developed adequate information as to the defendant's present mental condition before giving consideration to the motion in mitigation. W. Jones v. United States (1963, 327 F. 2d 867, 117 U.S. App. D.C. 169).

Investigation conducted by court through three court-appointed psychiatrists who had merely talked to defendant through cell bars for a brief time when defendant refused to cooperate with them formed no adequate basis for establishing truth or falsity of allegation of post-conviction unsoundness of mind contained in unrefuted affidavit of defendant's sister and required remand for further proceedings. Id.

Indeterminate Sentence Act

Indeterminate Sentence Act is inapplicable to second degree murder and the existing penalty of imprisonment for life or for not less than 20 years remains in effect. Anderson v. Rives (1936, 85 F. 2d 673, 66 App. D.C. 174).

Jurisdiction

The District of Columbia is not within the "special maritime and territorial jurisdiction of the United States" within meaning of federal homicide statute, and murder prosecution and sentence predicated upon acts assertedly committed within District of Columbia is properly under district statute and not federal statute. W. C. Coleman v. United States (1964, 334 F. 2d 558, 118 U.S. App. D.C. 168).

Challenge made for first time to Court of Appeals that judge who pronounced original sentence in homicide case was only judge competent to hear and act upon motions to reduce sentence or to vacate sentence came too late. Id.

Judge who deemed himself competent to act upon post trial motions to reduce sentence and vacate sentence, after judge who had pronounced sentence retired and undertook no new assignments, was not disqualified from passing upon motions predicated upon proviso permitting life sentences in murder cases before court for sentence or resentence by fact that he was not judge who had originally presided. Id.

Jury questions

Question of guilt of murder and question of punishment were properly submitted together, defendant being permitted to introduce character testimony, possibly relevant to choice of sentences, before submission. United States v. J. A. White (D.C.D.C. 1963, 225 Supp. 514).

Prejudicial cross-examination

In murder prosecution wherein sole defense was insanity, and defendant's gibberish testimony was such as to raise issues as to whether defendant feigned such testimony and whether at time of the third trial his mental condition represented his condition at time of act charged, cross-examination disclosing defendant's failure to take stand at two previous trials which resulted in convictions was erroneous and was not harmless but was sufficiently prejudicial to warrant the granting of a mistrial even though defense made no request for cautionary instructions. W. L. Stewart v. United States (1961, 386 U.S. 1, 81 S. Ct. 941; reversing 275 F. 2d 617).

Prosecution for second-degree murder

Prosecution in District of Columbia for second-degree murder was properly conducted in name of the United States rather than in name of District of Columbia. Morton v. Welch (C.C.A. Va. 1947, 162 F. 2d 840, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 44, 332 U.S. 779, 92 L. Ed. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1498, 334 U.S. 848, 92 L. Ed. 1771).

Right to counsel

Government's introduction at third murder trial of crucial testimony given by defendant at his first trial at which he did not have the constitutionally guaranteed right to assistance of counsel, impinged on defendant's constitutional rights requiring a reversal of his conviction for felony murder. E. M. Harrison and O. G. White v. United States (1967, 387 F. 2d 203, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 245).

Sentences

Defendant found guilty of second-degree murder, housebreaking, and larceny could be sentenced on each conviction with sentences running consecutively. United States v. G. D. Butler (1972, 462 F. 2d 1195, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 300).

Legislative intent with regard to crimes of murder, housebreaking, and larceny was not so ambiguous as to require invocation of rule of lenity precluding imposition of consecutive sentences on defendant convicted of all three charges. Id.

Juvenile's conviction of first-degree murder does not preclude sentencing under Youth Corrections Act even though penalty for first-degree murder is death or life imprisonment. United States v. W. Howard (1971, 449 F. 2d 1086, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 10).

In deciding between life imprisonment or electrocution of defendant convicted of first-degree murder in killing of policeman while perpetrating robbery, fact that defendant had been unarmed at time he met policeman, that he had panicked, that homicide committed with policeman's gun had been sudden and unplanned, that defendant was mentally retarded man whose mind was further clouded by drink, and that defendant's post-conviction record indicated prospect of rehabilitation should not be excluded from consideration. Coleman v. United States (1965, 357 F. 2d 563, 123 U.S. App. D.C. 103).

Where case was remanded to District Court to conduct evidentiary hearing to aid in consideration of circumstances in mitigation and in aggravation pursuant to statute authorizing judge in his discretion to sentence to life imprisonment a defendant previously sentenced to death, death sentence should have been considered as lifted, no weight should have been given to fact that under law at time of conviction a sentence of death was mandatory and court erred in considering matter as though burden was upon defendant to convince court that sentence should be reduced. Id.

Where death sentence could not be sustained and sentencing process necessary to support validly imposed death sentence could not be reconstructed so as to conform with means established by Congress; the other possible sentence authorized by Congress, life imprisonment, must be put into effect. Id.

Statute abolishing mandatory death penalty in District of Columbia leaves for jury's determination the question of whether sentence shall be death or life imprisonment or, if jury cannot agree on punishment, question is for the judge. Id.

Under statutory proviso that in homicide cases tried prior to March 22, 1962, and before court for sentence or resentence, judge, in sole discretion, may consider circumstances in mitigation and aggravation and make determination of whether case justifies life sentence while facts of crime are not without bearing, purpose is directed to possible existence of circumstances in mitigation, not of the crime, per se, but of punishment. W. C. Coleman v. United States (1964, 334 F. 2d 558, 118 U.S. App. D.C. 168).

Under statutory proviso that in homicide cases tried prior to March 22, 1962, and before court for sentence or resentence, judge, in sole discretion, may consider circumstances in mitigation and aggravation and make determination of whether case justifies life sentence, judge was not circumscribed in inquiry he was intended to make. Id.

Under statutory proviso that in homicide cases tried prior to March 22, 1962, and before court for sentence or resentence, judge, in sole discretion, may consider circumstances in mitigation and aggravation and make determination of whether case justifies life sentence, Congress intended and due process considerations required appropriate hearing as to all factors bearing upon choice of sentences, and failure to accord hearing required reversal. Id.

Sentence under prior statute

Statute prospectively allowing for a sentence of life imprisonment for first degree murder on the unanimous recommendation of the jury, and authorizing the judge to decide between life imprisonment and electrocution if the jury should be unable to agree on a punishment did not impliedly vacate unexecuted death sentences imposed under prior mandatory death statute. W. Jones v. United States (1963, 327 F. 2d 867, 117 U.S. App. D.C. 169).

Where defendant had been convicted and given mandatory death sentence in 1959 under the then applicable statute and where, prior to execution thereof, court had become authorized by statute to exercise its discretion to consider circumstances in mitigation and to reduce to life imprisonment death sentences imposed under the prior mandatory statute, court had power to take into account whatever considerations it felt should be allowed weight in deciding the question of whether the accused should or should not be capitally punished. Id.

Setting aside of sentence by Appellate Court

Court of Appeals, sitting en banc, set aside death sentences, with directions that each defendant be resentenced to life imprisonment on verdicts of guilty of first-degree murder; four judges being of view that there was error in instruction as to penalty and that poll of jurors did not show unanimity as to punishment, and three judges being of view that guilt and punishment should have been tried in separate stages. J. C. Frady and R. A. Gordon v. United States (1965, 348 F. 2d 84, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 78).

Supersedece

Provisions of the Criminal Code as to murder and manslaughter do not supersede or repeal the Code of the District of Columbia. Johnson v. United States (1912, 32 S. Ct. 748, 225 U.S. 405, 56 L. Ed. 1142).

§ 22-2405. Punishment for manslaughter.

Whoever commits manslaughter shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding fifteen years, or by both such fine and imprisonment. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1321, ch. 854, § 802.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 11-502, 40-609a.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Allen charge

Allen charge that did not make any reference to proportion of jurors for or against was not prejudicially coercive. United States v. H. A. Smoot (1972, 463 F. 2d 1221, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 130).

Confession

Oral, post-preliminary hearing confession which was obtained from defendant while he was held in jail and before he had secured counsel and which reaffirmed day old confession which was inadmissible because it was procured in violation of rule requiring defendant to be taken before committing magistrate without unnecessary delay was inadmissible. J. W. Killough v. United States (1962, 315 F. 2d 241, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 305).

Even though admission of oral post-arraignment confession was reversible error because it was fruit of illegal prearraignment confession, Court of Appeals would not set defendant free but reverse and remand for new trial. Id.

Oral confession following closely after earlier confession which is inadmissible for violation of rule requiring defendant to be brought before committing magistrate without unnecessary delay gives rise to rebuttable presumption that second is "fruit" of the first. Id.

Confession secured from defendant during thirty-four-hour period between his arrest and his appearance before commissioner would be suppressed because of such delay. United States v. J. W. Killough (D.C.D.C. 1961, 193 F. Supp. 905).

Any confessions which result from illegal detention, no matter how voluntary or trustworthy, are excluded from evidence. Id.

A defendant's second confession, after appearance before a commissioner, following illegal detention, could not be excluded on theory it was product of a deliberate police attempt to subvert Rules of Criminal Procedure, where the confession was made to a police officer who did not approach defendant with purpose of securing a reaffirmation of invalid confessions defendant made prior to appearance before a committing magistrate. Id.

Definition of manslaughter

"Manslaughter" is the unlawful killing of a human being without malice aforethought. United States v. Edmonds (D.C.D.C. 1946, 63 F. Supp. 968). See, also, Fryer v. United States (1953, 207 F. 2d 134, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 34, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 135, 346 U.S. 885, 98 L. Ed. 389, rehearing denied 74 S. Ct. 305, 346 U.S. 928, 98 L. Ed. 420).

Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution for murder of defendant's wife, testimony to effect that the defendant had threatened to kill his wife and "do five years standing on his head" by pleading insanity was not inadmissible as being non-probative and prejudicial, since the statements were relevant on issue of mens rea, and trial judge ruled that their probative value outweighed their prejudicial effect which he felt was dissipated by large volume of psychiatric testimony, especially where trial judge limited scope of government's inquiry as to them. United States v. P. W. Marcey (1971, 440 F. 2d 281, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 253).

In prosecution for murder of defendant's wife, wherein one of the conflicts in testimony was in relation to defendant's feelings toward and treatment of his wife, wherein on cross-examination defendant was shown five photographs purporting to depict wife's appearance after alleged assault some six months prior to the offense but defendant denied that her appearance was as bad as the photographs indicated, admission on rebuttal of photograph of wife taken after defendant had allegedly beaten her some six months prior to the offense was not an abuse of discretion since the photograph was relevant to intent as well as to defendant's credibility. Id.

— Sufficiency

In prosecution for killing of defendant's wife with a bottle, evidence including testimony as to blood on the defendant's hands and under his fingernails sustained conviction for manslaughter, notwithstanding considerable evidence favoring defendant's contention that his wife died as the result of an accident. United States v. L. S. Lumpkins (1971, 439 F. 2d 494, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 387).

The court held that in this case the inebriant atmosphere, the heated arguments and the bantering back and forth clearly established sufficient evidence for jury to be able to find defendant, who fired fatal shot in attempting to break up argument between two others, guilty of manslaughter. United States v. W. M. Dixon (1969, 419 F. 2d 288, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 401).

Evidence supported finding that defendant accused of manslaughter and assault with deadly weapon had not acted in self-defense. L. A. Rowe v. United States (1966, 370 F. 2d 240, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 218).

Indictment—Generally

Crime must be charged with reasonable particularity of time, place, and circumstances. United States v. Geare (1924, 293 F. 997, 54 App. D.C. 30).

— Sufficiency

Where manslaughter indictment against landlord, its vice president, and tenant, who operated rooming house, charged acts of negligence which were not violations of common law duties jointly owed by defendants, and indictment was uncertain concerning statutory and regulatory requirements with which defendants allegedly failed to comply, the indictment was bad on demurrer. United States v. Interstate Properties (1946, 153 F. 2d 469, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 392).

If regulation is pleaded which requires notice from an official to person who owns or controls building that a specific condition must be remedied within a certain period of time, fact should be stated concerning the giving of such notice and allegations of manslaughter indictment that findings and directives were made known to defendants were insufficient, but nature of findings and directives and when and how they were made known to defendants should have been made to appear. Id.

Where manslaughter indictment charged landlord, its vice president, and tenant, who operated rooming house, with negligently failing to have a dumb-waiter shaft constructed of fire-resistive materials and negligently failing to provide a front fire escape, and that defendants were under duty to roomers to comply with all orders, rules, regulations, and ordinances relating to use, occupancy and safety of buildings, and particularly building code and elevator code of District of Columbia, and that regulations required dumb-waiter shaft to be of fire-resistive construction, the indictment did not sufficiently plead existence of applicable regulations requiring use of fire-resistive materials in dumb-waiter shafts and installation of front fire escape. Id.

Instructions

In murder prosecution, failure to instruct that the jury might, if so persuaded by evidence, find defendant guilty of assault with a dangerous weapon as a lesser offense included within murder charge was not error, where jury was instructed as to elements of first-degree murder, second-degree murder and manslaughter, and was authorized to convict of one or to acquit and there was no foundation in evidence for conviction of assault with a dangerous weapon. United States v. P. W. Marcey (1971 440 F. 2d 281, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 253).

Instruction as to consequences of an acquittal by reason of insanity was not insufficient on ground that jury should have been informed of possible length of resulting hospitalization, of fact that defendant need not have been psychotic to be committed, and that the defendant would have to carry burden of proving that he was not dangerous in order to secure his eventual release, where court gave instruction that set forth the legal standard for commitment, and a complete canvassing of release alternatives for jury's edification could have impermissibly led to conjecture as to what might actually occur in defendant's case. Id.

Refusal to instruct that a drug-induced stupor may negate specific intent was not error, since there was evidence that defendant took amphetamines, drank a quantity of liquor and had trouble driving to scene of the homicide, but there was no evidence that he was in a stupor at time of stabbing and, in any event, other instructions given on element of specific intent sufficed. Id.

Failure to instruct that mere probability of defendant's sanity would not be sufficient to authorize his conviction was not error, where judge gave several instructions on the subject and was not obliged to do more. Id.

Allen-type instruction was not inappropriate prior to jury's retirement to commence deliberations, and since the verdict was not forthcoming until four and one-half hours after rendition of the instructions, its timing could not in any event have affected defendant prejudicially. Id.

Denial of lesser included offense instruction is not reversible error in absence of a showing that the jury might rationally, at one and same time, acquit of greater charge and convict of lesser; this requirement of reversible error is stringent though trial court has broad discretion to entertain request for lesser offense instruction without insistence on strictest logic. United States v. L. S. Lumpkins (1971, 439 F. 2d 494, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 387).

Since the evidence in this case is insufficient to give rise to reasonable doubt that defendant intended to shoot one of the young men in group standing near corner, the trial court did not err in failing to instruct jury on involuntary manslaughter. T. W. Simon v. United States (1970, 424 F. 2d 796, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 308).

The question of whether a defendant is entitled to involuntary manslaughter instruction depends on existence of at least some evidence in the record fairly tending to bear on issue of that offense. Id.

Recklessness as to accuracy of defendant's aim in shooting toward group of men standing near corner is not type of recklessness that would justify an involuntary manslaughter instruction since defendant did intend to shoot one of the men. Id.

Evidence of reckless conduct unintentionally resulting in death may form the basis for an involuntary manslaughter instruction. Id.

Defendant may not complain on appeal of deficiencies in instructions given by trial judge in manslaughter prosecution where none of alleged shortcomings were brought to the attention of trial court by appropriate objection or request. United States v. E. Carter (1969, 420 F. 2d 150, 136 U.S. App. D.C. 308).

Charge, in prosecution for second degree murder, considered as a whole, properly conveyed to jury correct rules on murder and manslaughter. B. L. Falls v. United States (1963, 321 F. 2d 762, 116 U.S. App. D.C. 149).

Involuntary manslaughter

Conviction on charge of involuntary manslaughter affirmed upon evidence that defendant operated an automobile while drinking and in a criminally careless manner, and ran over and caused the death of a man whom he knew to be so intoxicated he could hardly stand. Story v. United States (1927, 16 F. 2d 342, 57 App. D.C. 3, 53 A.L.R. 246, certiorari denied 47 S. Ct. 576, 274 U.S. 739, 71 L. Ed. 1318).

Joinder of defendants

Where manslaughter indictment charged landlord, its vice president, and tenant, who operated rooming house, with violation of alleged joint duty to use reasonable care to maintain premises in a reasonably safe condition, that defendants negligently failed to have a dumb-waiter shaft constructed of fire-resistive materials, that they negligently failed to forbid use of shaft as a receptacle for waste, and that they negligently failed to provide a front fire escape, the acts of negligence charged were not violations of common-law duties jointly owed by the defendants, and there was a misjoinder of defendants under common law principles. United States v. Interstate Properties (1946, 153 F. 2d 469, 80 App. D.C. 392).

Jury

Where jury foreman volunteered information to court that jury had reached some decision on the charge and lesser charge and that decision was between them, so that it was apparent that jury had already determined that the facts presented question as to whether defendant was guilty of second-degree murder or manslaughter, statement by judge that he would ask jurors to come back on following day to see if they could reach a verdict on the lesser charge, even if they could not agree on the greater charge, was not coercive. United States v. H. A. Smoot (1972, 463 F. 2d 1221, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 130).

When jurors report that they are unable to agree, court is faced with alternative of discharging them or directing them to continue their deliberations; one of factors that judge may consider in arriving at that decision is possibility that jury may be able to come to agreement on any of charges submitted to them for determination and, to determine likelihood of agreement, it is necessary in most instances, and proper, for judge to interrogate jury. Id.

When jurors report they are unable to agree and court seeks to determine likelihood of agreement, court's interrogation of jury must be circumspect and under no circumstances should court ask for numerical division within jury or in any way influence any particular result; leading inquiry should be avoided and instead of inquiry "Is there some possibility of agreement on the lesser charge" a preferable inquiry would be "Without attempting to influence your deliberations in any way, I merely wish to inquire whether you have explored the possibility of agreement on the lesser charge" and it would be proper to instruct again on jury's duty to determine guilt or innocence as to any offense necessarily included in crime charged. Id.

Deliberations of the jury should be confined to the charge in the indictment, and if defendant was not charged generally with negligence but with specific acts of negligence, namely, unlawful speeding and reckless driving, and if the death was not caused by those acts or one of them, he was entitled to a verdict of not guilty Sinclair v. United States (1920, 265 F. 991, 49 App. D.C. 351).

Merger of offenses

Charge of cruelty to child did not merge into manslaughter conviction, in that count charging cruelty had societal purposes as well as essential elements differing from those in count which charged second-degree murder and under which defendant was convicted of manslaughter. United States v. E. Thomas (1972, 459 F. 2d 1172, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 148).

Reckless conduct as manslaughter

The court held that reckless conduct resulting in death may constitute manslaughter; the difference between that recklessness which displays depravity and such extreme and wanton disregard for human life as to constitute "malice" and that recklessness which amounts only to manslaughter lies in the quality of awareness of the risk. United States v. W. M. Dixon (1969, 419 F. 2d 288, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 401).

Resentencing

Where prisoner's sentence for aggravated assault and for manslaughter growing out of same act was vacated and case remanded for resentencing on manslaughter only, district court on remand might, in its discretion, impose any sentence within statutory maximum of 15 years, to be computed from date when prisoner was first sentenced for assault with a dangerous weapon. Davenport v. United States (1965, 353 F. 2d 882, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 344).

A defendant who successfully attacks an invalid sentence can be validly resentenced even though resentencing increases the punishment. Id.

Right to counsel

Police can interrogate a suspect before giving him an opportunity to secure counsel. United States v. J. W. Killough (D.C.D.C. 1961, 193 F. Supp. 905).

Action of an official in allowing a police officer to see defendant during adjournment of a preliminary hearing, but before he had seen counsel was not a violation of the commitment order, the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, and the constitutional bar against self-incrimination and guarantee of right to counsel, and did not render admissions made by defendant during such conversation inadmissible. Id.

The Rules of Criminal Procedure give an accused who has funds to hire counsel the right to do so, and right to have a preliminary hearing, should he desire one with counsel's assistance, postponed until he secures that assistance. Id.

Constitutional privilege against self-incrimination did not give illegally detained defendant an absolute right to see counsel before a valid confession could be given by him, or to have counsel present with him at time he made a confession. Id.

Sentence—Legality

Prisoner's sentence for aggravated assault and for manslaughter growing out of same act was illegal, not principally because it exposed him to imprisonment for a longer term than maximum provided, but because it in effect punished him twice consecutively for an act that Congress did not intend should receive double punishment, and such illegality infected the sentence in its entirety. Davenport v. United States (1965, 353 F. 2d 882, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 344).

Congress did not intend to authorize consecutive punishments for aggravated assault and manslaughter growing out of same act, so that prisoner's motion for correction of illegal sentence for those crimes should be granted. Id.

Chapter 25.—PERJURY

Sec.

22-2501 Perjury—Subornation of perjury

§ 22-2501. Perjury—Subornation of perjury.

Every person who, having taken an oath or affirmation before a competent tribunal, officer, or person, in any case in which the law authorized such oath or affirmation to be administered, that he will testify, declare, depose, or certify truly, or that any written testimony, declaration, deposition, or certificate by him subscribed is true, wilfully and contrary to such oath or affirmation states or subscribes any material matter which he does not believe to be true, shall be guilty of perjury; and any person convicted of perjury or subornation of perjury shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for not less than two nor more than ten years. Any such false testimony, declaration, deposition, or certificate given in the District of Columbia, but intended to be used in a judicial proceeding elsewhere, shall also be perjury within the meaning of this section. (Mar. 3, 1901. 31 Stat. 1329, ch. 854. § 858.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 47-1203.

Administration of oaths

This section is broad enough to cover false testimony given under oath before any tribunal or any officer or person authorized to administer oaths. United States v. Meyers (D.C.D.C. 1948, 75 F. Supp. 486, affirmed 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.L.R. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U.S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

A United States senator as chairman of a subcommittee was an "officer or person authorized to administer oaths" within meaning of this section. Id.

Admissibility of evidence

In prosecution for perjury, teletype message sent by F. B. I. in Washington to Texas agent containing accusations that defendant had been guilty of fornication in District of Columbia was improperly received because of charge of another criminal offense. Pyle v. United States (1946, 156 F. 2d 852, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 209).

In perjury prosecution based on testimony of defendant in rape prosecution denying that signature on statement introduced in evidence was his, where no signatures were obtained from defendant during the perjury trial, signatures which were part of record from rape case were admissible and were not objectionable as requiring defendant to give testimony. Buckner v. United States (1946, 154 F. 2d 317, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 38).

Submission of illegally obtained evidence to a previous Grand Jury, which did not indict defendant, would not necessarily raise an inference that the same or similar unlawful evidence was presented to a Grand Jury which was impaneled two years later and returned an indictment charging defendant with perjury. United States v. Weinberg (D.C.D.C. 1953, 108 F. Supp. 567).

Attorneys oath

Falsely taking oath of admission pursuant to Municipal Court Civil Rule, which states what persons the bar of the Municipal Court should consist of and prescribes oath or affirmation to be taken by such person, violated statute proscribing perjury and subornation of perjury. Morgan v. United States (1962, 309 F. 2d 234, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 13).

Authorized by law

An oath to portion of application for duplicate certificate of title for a motor vehicle, requiring a statement of reason for the application, was not "authorized by law" within meaning of this section. Shelton v. United States (1948, 165 F. 2d 241, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

Information called for by regulations under Traffic Act § 40-601 et seq., in an application for certificate of title is not required to be under oath so as to constitute a false statement perjury, though lien statement which Motor Vehicle Lien Law, § 40-701 et seq., requires that application contain, must be under oath. Id.

Belief as to falsity of testimony

To return a verdict of guilty on a charge of perjury, jury must be convinced beyond reasonable doubt not only that accused testified falsely but that he did not, at the time, believe his testimony to be true. Young v. United States (1954, 212 F. 2d 236, 94 U.S. App. D. C. 54, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 870, 347 U. S. 1015, 98 L. Ed. 1137).

Generally, a belief as to falsity of testimony may be inferred by jury in perjury prosecution from proof of falsity itself, although in some cases this may not be so, as, for instance, where testimony concerns a triviality or an occurrence of long before. Id.

Circumstantial evidence

Falsity of sworn statement and that the accused actually remembered the facts which he had formerly sworn to may be proved by circumstantial evidence and the only issue in such a case is whether it meets the test of proof beyond a reasonable doubt. Behrle v. United States (1939, 100 F. 2d 714, 69 App. D.C. 304).

Civil service

Under civil-service regulations, false statements as to whether one had previously been employed by the Government, and whether he resigned or was discharged, was perjury within section R.S. § 5392 (18 U.S.C. § 1621). Johnson v. United States (1905, 26 App. D.C. 128).

Conspiracy

Crime of conspiracy to commit perjury under § 37 United States Penal Code of March 4, 1909 (35 Stat. 1088, ch. 321, U. S. Comp. Stat. Supp. 1911, p. 1588), relating to offenses against United States, and D. C. 1901, § 858 (this section) (31 Stat. 1329, ch. 854), denouncing perjury offenses, is charged by indictment alleging pending divorce suit in Supreme Court of District of Columbia, but such indictment does not come within meaning of the Code of 1901, § 910 (§ 22-107) which provides for punishment of offenses not covered by District Code or any law inapplicable to District of Columbia by United States Fletcher v. United States (1914, 42 App. D.C. 53, certiorari denied 35 S. Ct. 283, 235 U.S. 706, 59 L. Ed. 434).

Constitutionality

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, count of indictment charging that witness lied in denying that he had ever been a sympathizer or promoter of Communism or Communist interests, was fatally defective because it restricted freedom of belief and expression in violation of the First Amendment to the Federal Constitution providing that Congress shall make no law abridging freedom of speech, or of the press. United States v. Lattimore (D.C.D.C. 1953, 112 F. Supp. 507, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 215 F. 2d 847, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, count of indictment charging that witness was lying when he stated that neither he nor anyone in his party made any pre-arrangements with the Communist Party in order to get into Yen-an, China was invalid for failure to meet requirements of the Sixth Amendment to the federal Constitution which protects an accused in right to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him and Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure which requires that indictment shall be a plain, concise, and definite written statement of essential facts constituting offense charged. Id.

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, count of indictment charging that witness lied in denying that he had ever been a sympathizer or promoter of Communism or Communist interests, was fatally defective because in violation of the Sixth Amendment to the federal Constitution protecting accused in right to be informed of nature and cause of such accusation against him. Id.

Corroboration

Perjury cannot be proved by uncorroborated testimony of one witness, since falsity of one person's oath cannot be established by another person's oath alone. Doto v. United States (1955, 223 F. 2d 309, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 17, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 59, 350 U. S. 847, 100 L. Ed. 754).

In a perjury prosecution the rule is that the uncorroborated oath of one witness is not enough to establish, for purposes of conviction of perjury, the falsity of sworn testimony, and it is not the rule that no person may be convicted of perjury unless the falsity of the statement made under oath is established by the testimony of two independent witnesses or by one witness and the corroborating facts and circumstances. Maragon v. United States (1951, 187 F. 2d 79, 87 U.S. App. D. C. 349, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 804, 341 U. S. 932, 95 L. Ed. 1361).

Crime against United States

A crime against United States is committed by any person who violates either § 818 (§ 22-2304) or this section of the District Code. Arnstein v. United States (1924, 296 F. 946, 54 App. D.C. 199).

Defense

A defense to a charge of perjury may not be established by the device of lifting a statement of the accused out of its immediate context and thereby giving it a meaning wholly different from that which its context clearly shows. Meyers v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.R.L. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U.S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

Evidence—Admissibility

Where government agents' monitoring of telephone conversations between the defendant and consenting third party was neither unconstitutional nor beyond the bounds of what had been thought legally tolerable, federal supervisory power should not have been exercised to suppress evidence so obtained. United States v. C. A. Jones (1970, 433 F. 2d 1176, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 70; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1613, 402 U.S. 950).

Federal Penal Code

Had Congress intended that the perjury statute in the Federal Penal Code should have effect in the District of Columbia, it would have said so in clear language Carpenter v. United States (1939, 100 F. 2d 716, 69 App. D.C. 306).

Habeas Corpus

If it be assumed, arguendo, that the Court erred in its trial of a perjury committed before Congress in holding that three Senators (admittedly present) of a Congressional subcommittee were qualified, at most it was a mere error of law not subject to attack by habeas corpus as habeas corpus does not lie to correct mere errors in law but proper remedy is by appeal. Meyers v. United States (1950, 181 F. 2d 802, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 320, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 1030, 339 U.S. 983, 94 L. Ed. 923).

Indictment

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, count of indictment charging that witness lied in denying that he had ever been a sympathizer or promoter of Communism or Communist interests was void for vagueness. United States v. Lattimore (1954, 215 F. 2d 847, 94 U.S. App. D. C. 268).

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, count of indictment charging that witness lied when he testified that he did not "know" that certain contributor to magazine edited by witness was a Communist was not, because of the use of the word "know", invalid, on ground of vagueness. Id.

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, count of indictment charging that witness lied when he testified that, apart from Russian contributions, he never published, while editor of magazine, an article by a person whom he knew to be a Communist was sufficiently certain and involved a valid and proper inquiry. D. C. Id.

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, count of indictment charging that witness lied in denying that he knew that contributor to magazine, which was edited by witness, was a "Communist" was not invalid, on ground of vagueness, because of the use of the word "Communist." Id.

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, count of indictment charging that witness testified falsely when he gave a negative answer to question whether it was necessary, before he went beyond line of demarcation between Nationalist China and Communist China, to have permission of Communist authorities and when he testified that neither he nor any one in his party made any prearrangement with the Communist Party in order to get into Communist China was invalid because of a fatal variance in its terms. Id.

Failure to set forth person before whom oath was taken together with his authority to administer same was not fatal to perjury indictment, especially in view of rule requiring merely that indictment be plain, concise, and definite written statement of essential facts constituting offense charged and providing that it need not contain any other matter not necessary to such statement. United States v. Young (D.C.D.C. 1953, 113 F. Supp. 20, affirmed 212 F. 2d 236, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 54, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 870, 347 U.S. 1015, 98 L. Ed. 1137).

Instructions

Instruction that "perjury" is simply the giving of false testimony under oath, testimony that a party does not believe to be true, and that if he testifies before a competent tribunal as to a fact which is false, and he does not believe it to be true, then that is "perjury", was sufficient, though court did not in terms define the word "wilfully". Maragon v. United States (1951, 187 F. 2d 79, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 349, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 804, 341 U.S. 932, 95 L. Ed. 1361).

In perjury prosecution, instructions charging jury on matter of corroboration were proper. Buckner v. United States (1946, 154 F. 2d 317, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 38).

Issue

Question is not whether appellant made the statement voluntarily or involuntarily or whether the statement made was true or false, for it was not the truth or falsity of what he said which was involved, but simply the fact of his having said it. O'Brien v. United States (1938, 99 F. 2d 368, 69 App. D.C. 135).

Marriage license

Under the statute defining perjury, generally, or by requirements of the statute which defines it in terms of false swearing by an applicant for a marriage license, the ultimate test of materiality in either case is whether such statements have a natural tendency to influence the clerk in his investigation of the facts, in the exercise of his official discretion, and in the administration of the law. Robinson v. United States (1940, 114 F. 2d 475, 72 App. D.C. 254).

Materiality of evidence

Where perjury prosecution was based upon alleged perjurious statement, which was made by defendant while testifying before the Senate Special Committee to Investigate Organized Crime in Interstate Commerce, that defendant was a United States citizen, question as to defendant's citizenship was material to inquiry which committee was authorized to make. Doto v. United States (1955, 223 F. 2d 309, 96 U.S. App. D. C. 17, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 59, 350 U.S. 847, 100 L. Ed. 754).

In order to obtain a conviction for perjury of witness who allegedly testified falsely before a Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, the government was required to prove that question, which witness allegedly answered untruthfully, was material to the investigation being carried on by the Subcommittee. United States v. Lattimore (1954, 215 F. 2d 847, 94 U.S. App. D. C. 268).

Perjury is committed when one states, contrary to his oath, any material matter which he does not believe to be true. Pyle v. United States (1946, 156 F. 2d 852, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 209).

Although perjury must relate to a matter which was material to the issue, the materiality need not be immediate, but it is sufficient if the false testimony gives weight to or detracts from testimony as to material facts in issue. Id.

Where defendant's testimony in prosecution of another for unlawful transportation of a girl for immoral purposes did not vary on issue of transportation from defendant's prior written statement, variations between statement and testimony on question of whether statement was given voluntarily, as to who paid rent on her apartment and other details, related to immaterial matters and furnished no basis for perjury charge. Id.

In a perjury case arising out of a congressional investigation, which concededly may be broad in its scope as far as determining necessity for corrective legislation is concerned, element of materiality must be present or charges fall. United States v. Lattimore (D.C.D.C. 1953, 112 F. Supp. 507, affirmed in part, reversed in part on other grounds, 215 F. 2d 847, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

Nature of perjury

The word "wilfully" in a perjury statute means "knowingly" or "intentionally". Maragon v. United States (1951, 187 F. 2d 79, 87 U.S. App. D. C. 349, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 804, 341 U.S. 932, 95 L. Ed. 1361).

The criminal nature of perjury is not removed by the fact that the perjurer later in the proceedings states the truth. Meyers v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.R.L. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U.S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

Number of offenses

One making two false statements, one violating this section and the other violating Motor Vehicle Lien Law, § 40-714, commits two offenses, though both statements are under one oath. Shelton v. United States (1948, 165 F. 2d 241, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

Predication of indictment

A perjury indictment could not be grounded upon a knowingly false answer to a question placed by superintendent of insurance, in an application for a license to act as an insurance solicitor. C. S. Nelson v. United States (1961, 288 F. 2d 376, 109 U.S. App. D.C. 392).

Reversal

Where counts charging perjury were merged and it could not be determined upon which false statement in application for certificate of title the jury rested its general verdict, but verdict if upon statement as to liens would not support sentence, judgment of conviction was subject to reversal. Shelton v. United States (1948, 165 F. 2d 241, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

Sentence

Where appellant was convicted on three counts, each of which charged him with suborning one of another's perjuries, and received only one sentence, the judgment must be affirmed where appellant was properly convicted on any one of the three counts against him. Meyers v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.R.L. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U.S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

Sufficiency of evidence

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for perjury. Doto v. United States (1955, 223 F. 2d 309, 96 U.S. App. D. C. 17, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 59, 350 U.S. 847, 100 L. Ed. 754).

Evidence sustained conviction of defendant for perjury for testifying under oath before Investigating Subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments that he had only one bank account. Maragon v. United States (1951, 187 F. 2d 79, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 349, certiorari denied 71 S. Ct. 804, 341 U.S. 932, 95 L. Ed. 1361).

Corroborative evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for perjury. Buckner v. United States (1946, 154 F. 2d 317, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 38).

Sufficiency of indictment

Indictment charging defendant generally in statutory language, with three counts of perjury, would be deemed sufficient, especially where record indicated that defendant had not been misled or prejudiced in his defense, and had not moved for a bill of particulars. C. S. Nelson v. United States (1961, 288 F. 2d 376, 109 U.S. App. D.C. 392).

Tribunal

The word "tribunal", as used in this section, implies an officer or body having authority to adjudicate matters, United States v. Meyers (D.C.D.C. 1948, 75 F. Supp. 486, affirmed 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.R.L. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U.S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

— Congress

Where appellant was convicted of perjury before a Congressional Committee, such conviction must be reversed where the committee did not constitute a quorum, as all of the elements of the crime charged shall be proved beyond a reasonable doubt and an element of the crime of perjury is the presence of a competent tribunal, and a tribunal that is not competent is no tribunal. Christofel v. United States (1949, 69 S. Ct. 1447, 338 U.S. 84, 93 L. Ed. 1826).

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, count of indictment charging that witness lied in denying that he knew that contributor to magazine, which was edited by witness, was a Communist was not defective, as a matter of law, on ground that question was not material to study being made by Subcommittee with reference to subversive activities of Communist agents. United States v. Lattimore (1954, 215 F. 2d 847, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

In passing on motion to dismiss indictment charging that witness perjured himself before Subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee, it was proper to draw from Subcommittee's hearings explanatory material necessary to an understanding of the terms and parts of the indictment, but it was not permissible to refer to the hearings for facts which might become issues on the pleas and which might be subject to dispute. Id.

One may be indicted for perjury before Congress under this section. Meyers v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.R.L. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U.S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

Chapter 26.—PRISON BREACH—MISPRISIONS

Sec.

22-2601. Prison breach.

22-2602. Misprisions by officers or employees of jail

22-2603. Introducing contraband into penal institution.

§ 22-2601. Prison breach.

Any person committed to a penal institution of the District of Columbia who escapes or attempts to escape therefrom, or from the custody of any officer thereof or any other officer or employee of the District of Columbia, or any person who procures, advises, connives at, aids, or assists in such escape, or conceals any such prisoner after such escape, shall be guilty of an offense and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than five years, said sentence to begin, if the convicted person be an escaped prisoner, upon the expiration of the original sentence. (July 15, 1932, 47

Stat. 698, ch. 492, § 8; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 243, ch. 254, § 6(a); July 29, 1970, Pub L. 91-358, title I, § 157(b), 84 Stat. 574.)

AMENDMENTS

1940—Act June 6, 1940, substituted "committed to" for "confined in" and added the words "or from the custody of any officer thereof or any other officer or employee of the District of Columbia."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1970 AMENDMENT

See note preceding section 11-101.

CROSS REFERENCE

Possession of firearms, additional penalty, see §§ 22-3201, 22-3202.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 24-203, 24-207.

Attempts

Attempts at escape are forbidden to all inmates and if they consider their confinement improper, they are bound to take other means to test the question. Aderhold v. Soileau (C.C.A. 5, 1933, 67 F. 2d 259).

Proof

Question was whether defendant had passed in the saws, and it was not necessary for the government to show that there had been no sawing in the morning but only that appellant had given the saws to the prisoner. Hale v. United States (C.C.A. 6, 1934, 67 F. 2d 673).

Sentence

Person sentenced under this section is subject to authority of Attorney General, and can be confined in penitentiary outside of the District. Beard v. Sanford (C.C.A. 5, 1938, 99 F. 2d 750).

Escape sentence should be served after the termination of the original sentence. Gambill v. Aderhold (D.C. Ga. 1933, 4 F. Supp. 567).

§ 22-2602. Misprisions by officers or employees of jail.

Any officer of the District jail, or any guard thereof, or any attaché or employee connected therewith, who shall demand, or directly or indirectly receive, any compensation, fee, reward, or gratuity for any information given in respect to any prisoner confined therein, or awaiting trial upon bail, or for any service, assistance, or influence rendered, given, or exerted, with any view, intent, or purpose of having such person thus charged or held for trial, or held on bail to await trial, taken, offered, or used, either as a volunteer or as a substitute, for any other in the military or naval service, or who shall corruptly receive, for any act done by virtue of his office or employment, any fee, compensation, reward, or gratuity, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall on conviction be punished by a fine of not less than two hundred and fifty dollars, and not more than one thousand dollars, and by imprisonment in the District jail for a term not less than three months nor more than one year. (R. S., D. C., § 1180.)

§ 22-2603. Introducing contraband into penal institution.

Any person, not authorized by law, or by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, or by the general superintendent of penal institutions of the District of Columbia, who introduces or attempts to introduce into or upon the grounds of any penal institution of the District of Columbia, whether located within the District of Columbia or elsewhere, any narcotic drug, weapon, or any other contraband article or thing, or any contraband letter or message intended to be received by an inmate thereof, shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia or in any court of the United States, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than ten years. (Dec. 15, 1941, 55 Stat. 800, ch. 572, § 1; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127; July 29, 1970, Pub. It shall not be lawful for any person to invite, entice, persuade, or to address for the purpose of inviting, enticing, or persuading, any person or persons sixteen years of age or over in the District of Columbia, for the purpose of prostitution, or any other immoral or lewd purpose, under a penalty of not more than $250 or imprisonment for not more than ninety days, or both. (Aug. 15, 1935, 49 Stat. 651, ch. 546, § 1; June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 346, ch. 428, title I, § 102; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 93, ch. 159, § 202(b).)

AMENDMENTS

1953—Act June 29, 1953, increased the maximum fine from $100 to $250 and made it unlawful to commit the offense anywhere in the District of Columbia by eliminating the words "in or upon any avenue, street, road, highway, open space, alley, public square, enclosure, public building or other public place, store, shop, or reservation or at any public gathering or assembly" preceding "in the District of Columbia" and the words "to accompany, go with, or follow him or her to his or her residence, or to any other house or building, enclosure, or other place" following such phrase and the sentence "And it shall not be lawful for any person to invite, entice, or persuade, or address for the purpose of inviting, enticing, or persuading any such person or persons from any door, window, porch, or portico of any house or building to enter any house, or go with, accompany, or follow him or her to any place whatever, for the purpose of prostitution, or any other immoral or lewd purpose, under the like penalties herein provided for the same conduct in the streets, avenues, roads, highways, or alleys, public squares, open spaces, enclosures, public buildings or other public places, stores, shops, or reservations or at any public gatherings or assemblies."

1948—Act June 9, 1948, limited the solicitation to persons sixteen years of age or over and inserted in the first sentence the words "public building or other public place, store, shop, or reservation or at any public gathering or assembly" preceding "in the District of Columbia" and in the second sentence the words "public buildings or other public places, stores, shops, or reservations or at any public gatherings or assemblies" following "enclosures."

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 22-2703, 22-3203.

Constitutionality

This section declaring it a crime "to invite, entice, persuade * * * any person * * * for purpose of prostitution," is not unconstitutional as setting up no ascertainable standard of guilt or so vague, indefinite and general as to violate rights of one accused of such offense under Fifth Amendment, but is clear in language and purpose, free of ambiguity, and lays down definite and easily understandable standard of criminal liability. Hawkins v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 105 A. 2d 250).

Construction

Statute prohibiting solicitation for the purpose of prostitution applies to solicitation for homosexual acts. D. G. Harris v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 293 A. 2d 851).

Counsel for indigent defendant

When prosecution involves a matter of serious moral turpitude but there is no appeal as a matter of right to Municipal Court of Appeals because penalty imposed is less than $50, indigent defendant is entitled to aid of counsel in preparing application for leave to appeal. Wildblood v. United States (1959, 273 F. 2d 73, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 338).

Judgments were required to be vacated and nolle prosequere entered in cases which had been pending before Court of General Sessions where government's action in entering the nolle prosequere could not be characterized as an abuse of its power, and to allow government to file new informations at a subsequent date would to violate double jeopardy clause of Fifth Amendment. United States v. B. H. Foster (D.C. App. 1967, 226 A. 2d 164).

Entrapment

In prosecution for soliciting for purposes of prostitution, even if defense of entrapment was available, record was devoid of proof of entrapment. H. M. Wajer v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 222 A. 2d 68).

Enforcement

Enforcement of this section making it unlawful for any person to invite another to accompany him for lewd and immoral purpose must be with design to prevent offense, to prevent unwarranted irreparable destruction of reputations, and to prevent criminal offense of blackmail in connection with charge of verbal invitation, and it must not foster conditions or practices which make easy and encourage such offense. Kelly v. United States (1952, 194 F. 2d 150, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 125).

Evidence—In general

Evidence sustained convictions for soliciting for lewd and immoral purposes. Willis and Thompson v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1964, 198 A. 2d 751).

Defendants' testimony did not support claim of entrapment as a matter of law. Id.

Evidence sustained conviction of soliciting for purpose of prostitution. R. Golden v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 167 A. 2d 796).

Testimony asserting sodomy must be subjected to most careful scrutiny, and such principle is applicable to invitation to sodomy. Kelly v. United States (1952, 194 F. 2d 150, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 125).

That defendant "asked him if he wanted a date" did not necessarily include prostitution. Williams v. United States (1940, 110 F. 2d 554, 71 App. D.C. 377).

It is not necessary to prove any particular language or conduct to establish that a defendant solicited prostitution. Curran v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1947, 52 A. 2d 121).

— Admissibility

In prosecution for soliciting prostitution, where officer's opinion or assumption as to what consideration the $5 demanded by defendant would cover was elicited by defense counsel on cross-examination, defendant could not complain that such evidence was inadmissible. Hall v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 34 A. 2d 631).

— Arresting officer, testimony of Great caution should be applied in considering testimony of arresting officer in cases where alleged assault is nonviolent sexual touching which by its nature left no traces and to which there were no other witnesses. Guarro v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 578, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 97).

— Character evidence

In prosecution for statutory offense of unlawfully inviting another to accompany accused for lewd and immoral purpose, evidence of good character of accused is particularly applicable in that it is usually only defense, except word of accused, and should be considered by court. Kelly v. United States (1952, 194 F. 2d 150, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 125).

In prosecution for soliciting a person for immoral or lewd purposes an acquittal is not required to follow whenever evidence of good character of accused is presented. Bicksler v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 233).

Character evidence alone is not determinative of guilt or innocence of an accused and at most it can be basis for inference by trier of facts that a person possessing good character would, in all probability and based on experience of human relations, not be guilty of crime charged. King v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 229).

— Corroboration

In prosecution for soliciting for purposes of prostitution, arresting officer's testimony need not be corroborated. H. M. Wajer v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 222 A. 2d 68).

Trial court could properly find defendant guilty of soliciting for lewd and immoral purpose on testimony of officer, uncontradicted as to time and place, that he noticed defendant, dressed in female attire, motioning him to curb, that defendant offered to perform act of perversion for stated amount, corroborated by testimony of another officer who saw defendant conversing with arresting officer, where there was no evidence introduced of defendant's good character or denial that he was dressed in female attire. H. H. Berneau v. United States (D.C. App. 1963, 188 A. 2d 301).

Conviction for soliciting another male for a lewd and immoral purpose was based on sufficient corroboration as to time, place and circumstances. N. H. Alexander v. United States (D.C. App. 1963, 187 A. 2d 901).

In prosecution for soliciting for the purpose of prostitution, it was not necessary that testimony of the person solicited be corroborated. Parker v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1958, 143 A. 2d 98).

Corroboration of testimony of witness for prosecution is not required in a case of solicitation for prostitution. Price v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 135 A. 2d 854).

A conviction of soliciting for a lewd and immoral purpose may be based on uncorroborated testimony of one government witness. Brenke v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 78 A. 2d 677).

— Hearsay

In prosecution for soliciting for prostitution, even if evidence of conversation between sailor to whom arresting officer had been talking and one of sailors walking behind defendant were hearsay and improperly admitted, error, if any, was not prejudicial where finding of guilt was based upon solicitation which occurred subsequently. Price v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 135 A. 2d 854).

— Presumption of innocence

In prosecution for addressing a person for immoral purposes, brought to court without a jury, record did not establish that accused was not afforded presumption of innocence. King v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 229).

— Sufficiency

Evidence sustained conviction of soliciting for purposes of prostitution. H. M. Wajer v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 222 A. 2d 68).

Evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction for unlawful invitation by accused to another to accompany accused for lewd and immoral purpose. Kelly v. United States (1952, 194 F. 2d 150, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 125).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction of soliciting for purpose of prostitution. Parker v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1958, 143 A. 2d 98).

Evidence sustained conviction for soliciting for prostitution. Price v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 135 A. 2d 854).

Evidence justified conviction for soliciting a person for immoral or lewd purposes. Bicksler v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 233).

Evidence justified conviction for addressing a person for immoral purposes. King v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 229).

In prosecution for soliciting prostitution of any person sixteen years of age or older, lack of testimony as to age of police officers allegedly solicited by defendant did not entitle her to acquittal when officers were in court so that judge, sitting without jury, could use his senses and draw inferences as to their ages by his personal observation. Cunningham v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 86 A. 2d 918).

Evidence justified finding that witnesses were solicited directly and personally by defendant and sustained conviction for soliciting prostitution. Id.

Evidence as to the provocative position of defendant on a park bench, physical blandishment, challenging verbal invitation, prompt discussion of financial terms, and the ready arrangement for a room, sustained conviction of soliciting prostitution. Hall v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 34 A. 2d 631).

Evidence sustained conviction of soliciting prostitution. Curran v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1947, 52 A. 2d 121).

Impeachment

Prosecution was not entitled to attempt to impeach testimony of defendant indicted for second-degree murder by referring to thirteen prior convictions of petty offenses of vagrancy, disorderly conduct and soliciting prostitution, inasmuch as, although such offenses were District of Columbia Code offenses, as distinguished from municipal ordinances, none of them was triable by jury. Y. Pinkney v. United States (1966, 363 F. 2d 696, 124 U.S. App. D.C. 209).

Military service record

Defendant's honorable discharge from United States Army approximately five years before offense charged did not require defendant's acquittal of charge of soliciting for lewd and immoral purpose as a matter of law. Brenke v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 78 A. 2d 677).

Place of action

An information that does not charge that defendant acted in any such place as provided in the statute charges no crime. Williams v. United States (1940, 110 F. 2d 554, 71 App. D.C. 377).

Prior record of defendant

Fact that defendant during nine-year period had received six sentences for soliciting prostitution did not forfeit her right to equal protection of the law, but it did affect credibility of her testimony. Hamilton v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 31 A. 2d 887, reversed on other grounds 140 F. 2d 679, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 316).

Questions for Congress

Whether the District of Columbia was already adequately protected from the evils of prostitution without the added prohibition of transportation for that purpose was for Congress, not the courts, to decide. United States v. Beach (1945, 65 S. Ct. 602, 324 U.S. 193, 89 L. Ed. 865, opinion conformed to 149 F. 2d 837, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 160, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 47, 326 U.S. 745, 90 L. Ed. 445).

Questions for court

In prosecution for soliciting for purposes of prostitution, whether the defendant or the arresting officer made the solicitation was for trial court under conflicting testimony. H. M. Wajer v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 222 A. 2d 68).

Questions for jury

In prosecution for soliciting a person for immoral or lewd purposes, whether a solicitation occurred and whether solicitation was by defendant or by arresting officer, were for jury where testimony was conflicting and conflicting inferences could reasonably be drawn therefrom. Bicksler v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 233).

Reopening of prosecution

Reopening of prosecution for soliciting for prostitution, after both government and defense had rested and final argument had commenced, to receive corroborating testimony as to defendant's presence at time and place of alleged offense was within sound discretion of trial court. Price v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 135 A. 2d 854).

Review

Where prior to taking of testimony on information motion to dismiss on ground that information did not charge crime was denied, and evidence was taken and motion on ground that no crime was charged and that crime had not been established was granted because evidence was insufficient, and judgment of not guilty was then entered on record, judgment was that evidence failed to sustain offense charged and state had no right to appeal. Korol v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 82 A. 2d 129).

In prosecution for soliciting prostitution, conflicting evidence raised question for trial judge, whose decision was conclusive on appeal where supported by substantial evidence. Curran v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1947, 52 A. 2d 121).

Sentence

Review of vagrancy convictions was not necessary when sentences for vagrancy were ordered to run concurrently with proper sentences for soliciting for lewd and immoral purposes. Willis and Thompson v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1964, 198 A. 2d 751).

Defendant was not entitled to relief from sentence imposed upon failure to pay fine imposed in addition to maximum imprisonment authorized as punishment on any theory that if she were indigent, alternative sentence coupled with primary sentence would be tantamount to sentence in excess of that authorized and that court should have, as part of sentencing procedure, inquired into her ability to pay where record revealed nothing as to her financial resources, she did not claim inability to pay fine, and there was nothing to indicate that court used alternative sentence to accomplish imprisonment for term longer than permitted by statute. D. Henderson v. United States (D.C. App. 1963, 189 A. 2d 132).

Subpoena duces tecum

Where appellant was convicted for violation of this section, it was not error for the court to refuse to issue a compulsory process for obtaining witnesses as the rule is well established that a party is not entitled of right to a subpoena duces tecum in any form at any time and under any circumstances; and a subpoena duces tecum too indefinite in terms, too broad in scope or untimely requested may properly be denied. Kelly v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1950, 73 A. 2d 232).

Trial by court

In prosecution for addressing a person for immoral purposes, brought to court without jury, record did not establish that court failed to afford accused protection accused would have been afforded by properly instructed jury. King v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1952, 90 A. 2d 229).

Trial by jury

Refusal to grant motion for trial by jury, defendant being charged with soliciting prostitution, was error. Blackburn v. United States (1936, 84 F. 2d 269, 66 App. D.C. 15).

The act of prostitution was not an offense indictable at common law, so as to entitle a person accused thereof to a trial by jury under the Constitution of the United States. Bailey v. United States (1938, 98 F. 2d 306, 69 App. D.C. 25).

United States attorney, prosecution by

Prosecution for violation of statute rendering it unlawful to invite, entice or persuade any person fifteen years of age or over for purpose of prostitution or any other immoral or lewd purposes, should be conducted by United States attorney in name of and for benefit of United States, since offense is punishable by both fine and imprisonment. United States v. Paul Strothers (1956, 228 F. 2d 34, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 63).

Waiver of jury trial

A defendant, charged with solicitation for immoral and lewd purpose of committing oral sodomy, was not entitled to jury trial in view of fact that such offense was not indictable at common law and that penalty imposed was not more than $250 or imprisonment for not more than 90 days or both. H. Gaithor v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 251 A. 2d 644).

White Slave Act

The transportation of a woman wholly within the District of Columbia with the intent or purpose to induce or entice the woman transported to practice prostitution violates the Mann Act, 18 U.S.C. § 2421. United States v.

Beach (1945, 65 S. Ct. 602, 324 U.S. 193, 89 L. Ed. 865, opinion conformed to 149 F. 2d 837, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 160, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 47, 326 U.S. 745, 90 L. Ed. 445).

The Mann Act, 18 U.S.C. § 2421, penalizing the transportation in the District of Columbia of any woman with the intent or purpose to induce or entice the woman transported to practice prostitution does not conflict with any other legislation applicable to the District. Id.

Section, act Aug. 15, 1935, 49 Stat. 651, ch. 546, § 2, related to inmate or frequenter of house of ill fame.

§ 22-2703. Suspension of sentence of guilty person—Conditions—Enforcement.

The court may impose conditions upon any person found guilty under section 22-2701, and so long as such person shall comply therewith to the satisfaction of the court the imposition or execution of sentence may be suspended for such period as the court may direct; and the court may at or before the expiration of such period remand such sentence or cause it to be executed. Conditions thus imposed by the court may include submission to medical and mental examination, diagnosis and treatment by proper public health and welfare authorities, and such other terms and conditions as the court may deem best for the protection of the community and the punishment, control, and rehabilitation of the defendant. The Director of Public Health of the District of Columbia, the Women's Bureau of the Police Department, the Board of Public Welfare, and the probation officers of the court are authorized and directed to perform such duties as may be directed by the court in effectuating compliance with the conditions so imposed upon any defendant. (Aug. 15, 1935, 49 Stat. 651, ch. 546, § 3; Aug. 1, 1950, 64 Stat. 393, ch. 513, § 1).

CHANGE OF NAME

"Director of public health" substituted for "health officer" to conform to act Aug. 1, 1950. See note set out under section 6-101.

CROSS REFERENCE

Possession of firearm, additional penalty, see §§ 22-3201, 22-3202.

Cross examination

Appellant's contention that the trial court improperly restricted his cross examination of complaining witnesses is without foundation where the record shows that the court permitted extensive, and in fact, exhaustive cross examination, particularly on matters affecting the witnesses' credibility. Wright v. United States (1950, 183 F. 2d 821, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 67).

Indictment

It was proper to charge in first count of indictment that defendants compelled, induced, enticed and procured a certain female to engage in prostitution, and in second count to charge an attempt. Welch v. United States (1943, 135 F. 2d 465, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 317, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 1329, 319 U.S. 769, 87 L. Ed. 1718).

Evidence

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for attempting to compel, induce, entice, and procure a certain female to engage in prostitution. Welch v. United States (1943, 135 F. 2d 465, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 317, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 1329, 319 U.S. 769, 87 L. Ed. 1718).

Instructions

Where trial court had not reviewed or commented upon evidence in his charge to jury and elements essential to convict were explained without reference to any aspect of evidence and counsel prior to charge failed to formulate desired instruction, refusing oral request that the charge be enlarged to include a specific reference to defendant's theory of the evidence was not reversible error. C. O. Clarke v. United States (1962, 301 F. 2d 543, 112 U.S. App. D.C. 219).

Verdict

Where first count of indictment charged that defendants compelled, induced, enticed and procured a certain female to engage in prostitution, and second count charged an attempt, even if there had been inconsistency between directed verdict on first count and verdict finding defendants guilty on second count, that would constitute no reason for setting aside verdict of jury. Welch v. United States (1943, 135 F. 2d 465, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 317, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 1329, 319 U.S. 769, 87 L. Ed. 1718).

Where first count of indictment charged that defendants compelled, induced, enticed and procured a certain female to engage in prostitution, and second count charged an attempt, the fact that court directed a verdict on the first count and that jury convicted defendants on the second count resulted in no inconsistency. Id.

§ 22-2706. Compelling female to live life of prostitution against her will—Penalty.

Any person who, within the District of Columbia, by threats or duress, detains any female against her will, for the purpose of prostitution or sexual intercourse, or any person who shall compel any female against her will, to reside with him or with any other person for the purposes of prostitution or sexual intercourse, shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than five years and a fine of not more than $1,000. (June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 833, ch. 404, § 2; Jan. 3, 1941, 54 Stat. 1225, ch. 936, § 2.)

AMENDMENT

1941—Act Jan. 3, 1941, reworded the section throughout, broadened the scope of the offense, and provided that the offense should constitute a felony

CROSS REFERENCE

§ 22-2707. Procurer—Punishment for receiving money or other valuable thing for arranging assignation or debauchery—Penalty.

Any person who, within the District of Columbia, shall receive any money or other valuable thing for or on account of arranging for or causing any female to have sexual intercourse with any other person or to engage in prostitution, debauchery, or any other immoral act, shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than five years and a fine of not more than $1,000. (June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 833, ch. 404, § 3; Jan. 3, 1941, 54 Stat. 1226, ch. 936, § 3.)

AMENDMENT

1941—Act Jan. 3, 1941, reworded the section throughout, broadened the scope of the offense, and increased the penalty.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Amount of money received

Under this section, it is immaterial whether the procurer receives much or little and it is not important whether payment is made all at once in a lump sum or in scattered amounts at different times. Boykin v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

Attempt

In this case the evidence was sufficient to sustain convictions for attempted procuring. J. R. Langley v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 264 A. 2d 503).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for attempted procuring, which showed that defendant and complaining witness bargained until they had agreed upon exchange of money, although uncertain in amount, for services of prostitute, and that immediately thereafter defendant led complaining witness a considerable distance to hotel unknown to witness where prostitute was supposedly waiting. W. Walker, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 248 A. 2d 187).

Where defendant, upon obtaining affirmative reply to his question whether police officers were looking for girls, inquired what type they wanted, priced the girls at $10 each, and revealed, in answer to question put by one officer, that defendant's fee was $2, fact that defendant's actions never progressed beyond stage of conversation and that no money was received was not fatal to a conviction for an attempt to receive money for arranging for a female to have sexual intercourse, and, had the money passed, the principal crime itself would have been consummated. Sellers Jr. v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 131 A. 2d 300).

Mere preparation is not an attempt, but preparation may progress to the point of attempt, and question whether it has is one of degree which can be resolved only on basis of facts of each case. Id.

Brothel keepers

This section does not penalize brothel keeper as such or agents who procure patrons for brothels or for woman elsewhere so long as they do nothing toward bringing the woman there for that purpose and for money or value received. Boykin v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

Cohabit, definition of

The word "cohabit" as formerly used in this section, making it unlawful for person to receive money or valuable thing for procuring or placing in house of prostitution or elsewhere any female for purpose of causing her illegally to cohabit with any male person or persons, covers promiscuous and casual relations and is not used in strict sense of cohabiting with a single person in manner of husband and wife. Boykin v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

Constitutionality

This section, prohibiting receiving value for arranging for or causing female to engage in prostitution, debauchery, or any other immoral act, is not void for vagueness or so vague as to violate due process. J. R. Langley v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 264 A. 2d 503).

Construction

Where there had been contradictory rulings in district court in interpreting this section, neither interpretation could be taken to have settled the law or as showing intent of Congress. Boykin v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

Term "arranging" may include within its meaning the act of procuring as a part of the arrangement, but it certainly does not confine itself to only that activity and has much broader significance embracing many more activities than the one of procuring. Byas v. United States (1950, 182 F. 2d 94, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 309).

Conviction, grounds for

Under this section, the keeping and maintaining of a girl for prohibited purpose cannot be grounds for conviction. Boykin v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

Corroborating witness

Failure of prosecution to produce second officer who as a corroborating witness could only have testified to time and place of defendant's arrest for attempted procuring because he did not hear conversation between arresting officer and defendant was not error in view of prosecution's effort to secure a continuance because second officer was in another court and defendant's then counsel's willingness to proceed to trial in second officer's absence. R. Blakney v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 225 A. 2d 654).

Cross examination

Appellant's contention that the trial court improperly restricted his cross examination of complaining witnesses is without foundation where the record shows that the court permitted extensive, and in fact, exhaustive cross examination, particularly on matters affecting the witnesses' credibility. Wright v. United States (1950, 183 F. 2d 821, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 67).

Two principal elements of crime of procuring are the receipt of money and the arranging of an assignation. W. Walker, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 248 A. 2d 187).

Under this section the placing of woman in house of prostitution or elsewhere for purpose of causing her to cohabit illegally with male person or persons and prohibited intent must coincide but payment for the placing need not do so and it may occur before, at, or after the placing, but whenever it takes place it must be for or on account of that act. Boykin v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

Under this section, the gist of the offense is the placing of a female in a house of prostitution or elsewhere for purpose of causing her illegally to cohabit with any male person or persons and not the receiving of money. Id.

Principal elements of crime described in this section making it unlawful for any one to receive money or other valuable thing for arranging for or causing any female to have sexual intercourse with any other person or engage in prostitution, debauchery, or any other immoral act are the receipt of money and the arranging of an assignation. Sellers Jr. v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 131 A. 2d 300).

This section making it unlawful for any one to receive money or other valuable things for arranging for or causing any female to have sexual intercourse with any other person or to engage in prostitution, debauchery, or any other immoral act includes not only the actual act of procurement but also the agreement to procure. Id.

Evidence

Evidence clearly supported finding that appellant at least participated in arranging for a female to commit an act of prostitution with a police officer. Byas v. United States (1950, 182 F. 2d 94, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 309).

Evidence of conditions of the defendant's house at the time of her arrest for violating statute, which established presence of the two women referred to in the indictment, was competent and relevant in proof of one element of each offense, i. e., "engagement in prostitution." Smith v. United States (1950, 180 F. 2d 775, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 195).

Evidence sustained conviction for attempt to receive money for arranging for a female to have sexual intercourse. Sellers Jr. v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 131 A. 2d 300).

Fair trial

Defendants were not denied fair trial in prosecutions for violating Mann Act and for receiving money for arranging for acts of prostitution, because of actions of trial court and Assistant United States Attorney. J. A. Fabianich and M. E. Fabianich v. United States (1962, 302 F. 2d 904, 112 U.S. App. D.C. 319).

Sentences were valid, though trial court allegedly erred in denying motions for acquittal on certain counts, where there were concurrent sentences, and convictions under other courts were not challenged. Id.

Indictment

To sustain conviction under this section, the government must charge and prove an act of procuring a woman for or placing her in a house of prostitution or elsewhere, for the purpose of causing her to cohabit illegally with a male person or persons, and that the defendant received money or other valuable thing for or on account of the procuring or placing. Boykin v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

Where appellant was convicted on seven counts of an eight count indictment of receiving money for arranging for one to engage in prostitution, with four counts relating to one female and three to another, the crimes charged in the several counts were of the same character, permitting joinder of the counts. Smith v. United States (1950, 180 F. 2d 775, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 195).

Instructions

In a prosecution for attempted procuring involving contents of conversation that concededly took place between defendant and officer at street corner, instruction that if witness testified falsely concerning any material fact, about which the witness could not be reasonably mistaken, all testimony of such witness could be disregarded, except such parts as were corroborated by other testimony, was not plain error requiring reversal in absence of objection. W. E. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 269 A. 2d 446).

In this case, instruction by trial court, in prosecution for attempted procuring, that jury must decide whether defendant had intent to procure female for immoral purposes, was proper when placed in context with entire charge as obviously referring to illegal sexual immoralities. J. R. Langley v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 264 A. 2d 503).

In prosecution for violating this section, instruction informing jury to find defendant guilty if jury believed defendant kept, placed, or maintained girl at premises for prohibited purpose was reversibly erroneous, since it permitted jury to find defendant guilty without regard to placing or the intent with which it was done. Boykin v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

In prosecution for pandering, where defendant produced witnesses who testified to his general reputation, and court refused requested instruction on weight to be given to evidence of good character but expressed purpose to instruct on the subject, failure to give instruction on weight to be given to evidence of good character was error. Colbert v. United States (1946, 146 F. 2d 10, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 261).

An erroneous instruction may be withdrawn or corrected at any time, at least prior to the time the jury retires to deliberate. Byas v. United States (1950, 182 F. 2d 94, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 309).

Where judge told the jury that the essential elements of the crime would have to be proved by the government beyond a reasonable doubt before verdict of guilty could be found and immediately thereafter in a concise statement he set out the elements, no error was committed. Id.

Objection to court's use of the word "arrange" is without merit since it needs no judicial definition as is a common word and admits of no double entendre which casts an umbrage of legal nicety beyond its ordinary meaning. Id.

Procuring patrons

This section does not punish merely procuring patrons for a woman, or sharing her earnings, or keeping or maintaining her even with intent to cause her to cohabit illegally. Boykin v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

Review

In prosecution for violating this section, where arresting officer was permitted to testify that defendant and his daughter were registered at hotel as man and wife, whether testimony was properly allowed to remain in evidence for purpose of showing defendant's knowledge of his daughter's activities would not be determined where reversal was required on other grounds. Boykin v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

Defendant's contentions that this section outlaws only the act of placing, and that receiving money for or on account of some other act than placing, does not violate this section would be considered on merits notwithstanding claim that the contentions were too late because raised for the first time on appeal, in view of unusual circumstances in which appeal had been taken and perfected. Id.

Court will not entertain an appeal based on a complaint that because of inartful exercise of his right to challenge jurors peremptorily, a party has created such prejudice as to deny himself a fair trial. Byas v. United States (1950, 182 F. 2d 94, 86 U.S. App. D.C. 309).

Sentence

In prosecution for violating this section where defendant was convicted under separate counts which, in the light of evidence presented to sustain them, differed only in charging separate acts of receiving money for a single placing and where defendant was sentenced under each conviction, the sentence was invalid since it was a sentence for two crimes when only one had been charged. Boykin v. United States (1942, 130 F. 2d 416, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 147).

Whenever a nuisance is kept, maintained, or exists as defined in sections 22-2710 to 22-2718 the attorney of the United States for the District of Columbia, or the Attorney-General of the United States, or any citizen of the District of Columbia, may maintain an action in equity in the name of the United States of America, upon the relation of such attorney of the United States for the District of Columbia, the Attorney-General of the United States, or citizen, to perpetually enjoin said nuisance, the person or persons conducting or maintaining the same, and the owner or agent of the building or ground upon which said nuisance exists. In such action the court, or a judge in vacation, shall, upon the presentation of a petition therefor alleging that the nuisance complained of exists, allow a temporary writ of injunction, without bond, if it shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the court or judge by evidence in the form of affidavits, depositions, oral testimony, or otherwise, as the complainant may elect, unless the court or judge by previous order shall have directed the form and manner in which it shall be presented. Three days' notice, in writing, shall be given the defendant of the hearing of the application, and if then continued at his instance the writ as prayed shall be granted as a matter of course. When an injunction has been granted it shall be binding on the defendant throughout the District of Columbia, and any violation of the provisions of injunction herein provided shall be a contempt as hereinafter provided. The action when brought shall be triable at the first term of court, after due and timely service of the notice has been given, and in such action evidence of the general reputation of the place shall be admissible for the purpose of proving the existence of said nuisance. If the complaint is filed by a citizen, it shall not be dismissed, except upon a sworn statement made by the complainant and his attorney, setting forth the reasons why the action should be dismissed, and the dismissal approved by the attorney of the United States for the District of Columbia or the Attorney-General of the United States of America in writing or in open court. If the court is of the opinion that the action ought not to be dismissed, it may direct the attorney of the United States for the District of Columbia to prosecute said action to judgment; and if the action is continued more than one term of court, any citizen of the District of Columbia, or the attorney of the United States for the District of Columbia, may be substituted for the complaining party and prosecute said action to judgment. In case of the violation of any injunction granted under the provisions of section 22-2714, the court, or, in vacation, a judge thereof, may summarily try and punish the offender. The proceedings shall be commenced by filing with the clerk of the court an information, under oath, setting out the alleged facts constituting such violation, upon which the court or judge shall cause a warrant to issue, under which the defendant shall be arrested. The trial may be had upon affidavits, or either party may at any stage of the proceedings demand the production and oral examination of the witnesses. A party found guilty of contempt, under the provisions of this section, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $200 nor more than $1,000 or by imprisonment in the District jail not less than three nor more than six months or by both fine and imprisonment. If the existence of the nuisance be established in an action as provided in sections 22-2713 to 22-2720, or in a criminal proceeding, an order of abatement shall be entered as a part of the judgment in the case which order shall direct the removal from the building or place of all fixtures, furniture, musical instruments, or movable property used in conducting the nuisance, and shall direct the sale thereof in the manner provided for the sale of chattels under execution, and the effectual closing of the building or place against its use for any purpose, and so keeping it closed for a period of one year, unless sooner released. If any person shall break and enter or use a building, erection, or place so directed to be closed he shall be punished as for contempt, as provided in section 22-2716. (Feb. 7, 1914, 38 Stat. 281, ch. 16, § 5; Oct. 15, 1970, Pub. L. 91-452, title II, § 257, 84 Stat. 931.)

If the owner appears and pays all costs of the proceeding and files a bond, with sureties to be approved by the clerk, in the full value of the property, to be ascertained by the court or, in vacation, by the collector of taxes of the District of Columbia, conditioned that he will immediately abate said nuisance and prevent the same from being established or kept within a period of one year thereafter, the court, or, in vacation, the judge, may, if satisfied of his good faith, order the premises closed under the order of abatement to be delivered to said owner and said order of abatement canceled so far as the same may relate to said property; and if the proceeding be an action in equity and said bond be given and costs therein paid before judgment and order of abatement, the action shall be thereby abated as to said building only. The release of the property under the provisions of this section shall not release it from judgment, lien, penalty, or liability to which it may be subject by law. (Feb. 7, 1914, 38 Stat. 281, ch. 16, § 7.)

This section is referred to in sections 22-2717, 22-2720.

§ 22-2720. Tax for maintaining such nuisance.

Whenever a permanent injunction issues against any person for maintaining a nuisance as herein defined, or against any owner or agent of the building kept or used for the purpose prohibited by sections 22-2713 to 22-2720, there shall be assessed against said building and the ground upon which the same is located and against the person or persons maintaining said nuisance, and the owner or agent of said premises, a tax of $300. The assessment of said tax shall be made by the assessor of the District of Columbia and shall be made within three months from the date of the granting of the permanent injunction. In case the assessor fails or neglects to make said assessment the same shall be made by the chief of police, and a return of said assessment shall be made to the collector of taxes. Said tax shall be a perpetual lien upon all property, both personal and real used for the purpose of maintaining said nuisance, and the payment of said tax shall not relieve the person or building from any other penalties provided by law. The provisions of the law relating to the collection and distribution of taxes upon personal and real property shall govern in the collection and distribution of the tax herein prescribed in so far as the same are applicable and not in conflict with the provisions of said sections. #### NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appeal

On appeal from conviction of operating a disorderly house where defendant contended that hotel register was improperly admitted, being unlawfully seized property because warrant of arrest was void for insufficiency of supporting affidavit, Municipal Court of Appeals ordered warrant of arrest and supporting affidavit made part of record. Darnall v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A. 2d 734).

Arrest

Affidavits supporting application for warrant for arrest for operation of disorderly house alleged sufficient facts to establish probable cause for arrest. W. H. Wood and M. J. Blue v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 183 A. 2d 563).

Where apparent facts set out in affidavits supporting application for warrant for arrest are such that reasonably discreet and prudent man would be led to believe that offense charged was committed, there is probable cause justifying issuance of warrant; determination whether offense has been committed or evidence tendered is so strong as to justify ultimate conviction is not necessary. Id.

Parade of males into defendant's apartment and her past criminal record as convicted madam and vagrant provided adequate justification for issuance of warrant for arrest resulting in prosecution for keeping disorderly house. C. J. Bennett, etc. v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 171 A. 2d 252).

In prosecution for keeping a disorderly house, affidavit made by arresting officer in applying for warrant was sufficient to establish probable cause. Packard et al. v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1950, 77 A. 2d 19).

Affidavit for warrant of arrest, which merely recited police officer's legal conclusion that defendant was maintaining a disorderly house, and which was devoid of single recital of fact to support conclusion and referred to a name other than that of defendant, was insufficient to support warrant. Darnall v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A. 2d 734).

Bawdy house

Where evidence in prosecution for keeping "a bawdy or disorderly house * * *, a premises resorted to for homosexual activities," showed that defendant was the operator of a house used by males, after payment of an initial membership fee plus a fee for each visit, for a variety of homosexual activities including sodomy, conviction was one for keeping a bawdy house as distinguished from a disorderly house, and it was unnecessary to consider contention that court's definition of disorderly house was constitutionally overbroad. D. G. Harris v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 293 A. 2d 851).

Common law

What may not have been an infamous crime at common law, may, by statute, be made such and in determining whether a crime is infamous, we must look to the penalty the law imposes, and though the crime of keeping a disorderly house may not have been an infamous crime at common law, it is within the power of Congress to impose a penalty that will make it such in the District of Columbia. Palmer v. Lenovitz (1910, 35 App. D.C. 303).

Constitutionality

Application of bawdy house statute to situation revealing homosexual acts between consenting adults did not amount to overbroad encroachment upon constitutionally protected conduct. D. G. Harris v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 293 A. 2d 851).

Construction

Within statute proscribing the keeping of a bawdy or disorderly house, proscription against keeping a "bawdy house" includes the keeping of a house for homosexual prostitution among males, and in prosecution for keeping such a house it is not necessary to show that house meets definition of "disorderly house." D. G. Harris v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 293 A. 2d 851).

Disorderly house

"Disorderly house" is one where acts are performed which tend to corrupt morals of community or promote breaches of peace. M. A. Payne v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 171 A.2d 509).

Elements necessary to sustain conviction for maintaining disorderly house are that acts are contrary to law and subversive of public morals, that house is commonly resorted to for commission of such acts, and that proprietor knows, or should in reason, know facts and either procures it to be done, connives at it, or does not prevent it. Id.

Conduct sufficient to sustain conviction for maintaining disorderly house need not disrupt peace and quiet or be open to public observation so long as it would be offensive to public sensibilities if its presence in community were generally known. Id.

Evidence—Generally

Even if admission into evidence of reports by police officer who investigated alleged disorderly house was error, such error was harmless where officer had testified fully as to their contents and no prejudice was shown in fact that reports may have gone to jury. J. J. Killeen and W. H. Fentress v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 224 A.2d 302).

Registration cards seized in search of tourist home in connection with arrest for operating it as disorderly house were admissible as having direct bearing upon the operation. W. H. Wood and M. J. Blue v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 183 A.2d 563).

Use of chart, which was not admitted as exhibit or taken to jury room, in connection with testimony concerning registration cards taken from tourist home allegedly used as disorderly house, in order that jury could more conveniently view, during trial, information on cards, was not prejudicial. Id.

Evidence supported conviction for operating as a disorderly house a tourist home to which constant stream of couples came, especially late at night, on foot, in taxis, or by private automobile, without luggage and in many instances oddly dressed and at which they stayed for brief periods not exceeding two and one-half hours. Id.

Evidence sustained conviction for keeping disorderly house. C. J. Bennett, etc. v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 171 A.2d 252).

Evidence sustained conviction of maintaining disorderly house. M. A. Payne v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 171 A.2d 509).

Testimony on single act of prostitution in house and unlawful sales prior to period specified in information were admissible in prosecution for maintaining disorderly house. Id.

Where warrant of arrest for maintaining disorderly house was void, the arrest, which was for a misdemeanor not committed in presence or within view of arresting officers, was unlawful and hotel register seized at time of arrest was unlawfully seized and inadmissible in evidence. Darnall v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A.2d 734).

In prosecution for maintaining disorderly house, admission in evidence of hotel register which was seized at time of defendant's arrest under void warrant, notwithstanding defendant's subsequent motion to suppress register as evidence, and objection at time of trial to its admission, was reversible error. Id.

— Sufficiency

Evidence was sufficient to support finding or inference by jury that restaurant proprietors had requisite knowledge of activities occurring on their premises to be chargeable with keeping disorderly house and vagrancy. J. J. Killeen and W. H. Fentress v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 224 A.2d 302).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for operating a disorderly house. Collins v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A.2d 515).

Instructions

In prosecution for keeping "a bawdy or disorderly house . . . , a premises resorted to for homosexual activities" it was harmless error to instruct only on theory that what was charged was keeping a disorderly house, defined as one where acts are done which "are contrary to law and subversive to public morals," where the verdict under the disorderly house theory necessarily included a finding beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant operated, for profit or gain, a house for the purpose of homosexual activity and that such activity was a matter of course therein, and thus sustained bawdy house conviction. D. G. Harris v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 293 A.2d 851).

Jury instruction in prosecution for keeping disorderly house and vagrancy that, inter alia, presumption that every person is presumed to have knowledge of what goes on in his own premises is not conclusive and that it should find defendant restaurant keepers guilty if convinced beyond reasonable doubt that they knew or should have known of unlawful and immoral acts committed on premises was correct statement of law, and giving of instruction was not error. J. J. Killeen and W. H. Fentress v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 224 A.2d 302).

Instruction in prosecution for keeping disorderly house and vagrancy that evidence of good character can be considered in determining credibility of witnesses and that such evidence, by itself, may be enough to create a reasonable doubt was a proper statement of law, and giving of instruction was not error where defendants neither offered an instruction on that point nor objected to instruction as given. Id.

Defendants in prosecution for keeping disorderly house and vagrancy who at trial neither offered an instruction upon bearing of evidence of good character on credibility of witnesses nor objected to instruction as given were not allowed to raise objection to instruction for first time on appeal. Id.

Instructions given to jury in prosecution for operating a disorderly house were not tainted with prejudicial error. Collins v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A.2d 515).

Knowledge of acts done on premises

In prosecution for maintaining a disorderly house, it was not necessary to prove defendants' actual knowledge of acts done on premises if it could be shown that defendants should in reason have known what was happening. J. J. Killeen and W. H. Fentress v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 224 A.2d 302).

Knowledge of happenings in alleged disorderly house requisite to conviction for keeping disorderly house could be proved inferentially, since a proprietor is presumed to have knowledge of that which goes on in his premises. Id.

Probation officer recommending sentence

Where accused pleaded guilty to maintaining disorderly house and, on plea for probation, trial judge announced that probation officer had recommended maximum sentence and, on objection to consideration of recommendation, trial judge, without express ruling thereon, sentenced defendant to the near maximum penalty, sentence was set aside. Ishkanian v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 35 A.2d 176).

A recommendation by a probation officer to trial judge as to sentence to be imposed is not merely unauthorized by §§ 24-101 to 24-105 but is an infringement upon court's judicial function, which officer has no right to exercise and judge no right to permit. Id.

Questions for court

In prosecution for maintaining disorderly house, objection to introduction of hotel register as unlawfully seized evidence because of invalidity of warrant of arrest raised question for judge presiding at trial. Darnall v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A.2d 734).

Waiver

In prosecution for maintaining a disorderly house, defendant, by failing to move to quash warrant of arrest before he entered plea of not guilty, did not "waive" right to object to introduction of hotel register, seized at time of arrest, as unlawfully seized evidence. Darnall v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A.2d 734).

22-2801. Definition and penalty.

§ 22-2801. Definition and penalty.

Whoever has carnal knowledge of a female forcibly and against her will or whoever carnally knows and abuses a female child under sixteen years of age, shall be imprisoned for any term of years or for life. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1322, ch. 854, § 808; Apr. 19, 1920, 41 Stat. 567, ch. 153; Jan. 30, 1925, 43 Stat. 798, ch. 115, § 1; July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 204, title II, 84 Stat. 600.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 11-502, 22-3501, 24-203.

Appeal and error

Error, in not giving instruction on lesser offense of simple assault, in prosecution for rape, assault with intent to commit rape, unlawful entry, and second-degree burglary, does not require that conviction of second-degree burglary be set aside, in view of the fact that the jury returned verdict on burglary charge rather than on lesser-included offense of unlawful entry. United States v. E. L. Huff (1971, 442 F. 2d 885, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 163).

Composition of jury

A defendant, convicted of statutory rape, but who was not given death sentence, was not prejudiced by fact that his case was treated as a capital case and people opposed to capital punishment were systematically excluded from jury which found him guilty. T. M. Springfield v. United States (1968, 403 F. 2d 572, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 166).

Concurrent sentences

There was no resulting prejudice to a defendant in a case where concurrent sentences were imposed for crimes of carnal knowledge and housebreaking, as a result of error, if any, in failing to make out prima facie case of housebreaking. P. E. A. Duckett v. United States (1969, 410 F. 2d 1004, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 305).

Constitutionality

Statute which authorized jury to add words "with the death penalty" to verdict in rape case violates constitutional guarantee of right to jury trial but holding affects only those defendants whose trial began after April 8, 1968; overruling Lindsey v. United States, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 1, 133 F. 2d 368. J. Bailey and R. Humphries v. United States (1968, 405 F. 2d 1352, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 82).

The penalty provisions of rape statute which permits jury to inflict capital punishment are unconstitutional because they inhibit defendants from exercising Fifth Amendment right not to plead guilty and Sixth Amendment right to a jury trial. T. M. Springfield v. United States (1968, 403 F. 2d 572, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 166).

This section which empowers the jury to add the words "with the death penalty" to verdict in cases of rape does not violate U. S. Const. Art. 3, § 2, cl. 3 and U. S. Const. Amend. 6, guaranteeing right to "jury trial" on theory that at the time of the adoption of the Constitution common-law juries did not fix penalty. Lindsey v. United States (1943, 133 F. 2d 368, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

— Due process

In rape prosecution, where record left serious doubt as to whether defendant had enjoyed due process of law regarding his right to effective assistance of counsel and right to testify in his own behalf, defendant was entitled to have sentence vacated. Mason v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 23, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Construction

This section dispensing with element of "forcibly" in cases involving rape of child under 16 years of age would be read to apply in prosecution for assault with intent to rape where the victim although 27 years of age had mind of child about 7 years old. United States v. A. S. Medley (1971, 452 F. 2d 1325, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 396).

Continuance

A general indignation toward those who commit rape is not regarded as "bias or prejudice", and it cannot be assumed in support of a motion for an indefinite continuance, on ground that alleged confession of another man to ten or more similar offenses has inflamed the mind of the community so that a particular defendant cannot receive a fair trial, that all juries impaneled at any given time will not give any defendant a fair trial. Robinson v. United States (1942, 128 F. 2d 322, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 29).

In rape prosecution, trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for an indefinite continuance on ground that alleged confession of another man to ten or more similar offenses had inflamed the mind of the community so that defendant could not receive a fair trial where there was no specific showing of any kind in support of motion. Id.

Conviction for carnal knowledge and taking indecent liberties

A defendant may not properly be convicted of both carnal knowledge and taking indecent liberties with minor child as result of one incident. United States v. W. D. Heard (1969, 420 F. 2d 628, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Since the defendant was charged with both carnal knowledge and taking indecent liberties with minor child, jury should have been instructed to first consider carnal knowledge offense and, if they found defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, sole verdict should have been guilty of that offense, but if they acquitted defendant of carnal knowledge they should have proceeded to consider whether defendant was guilty or not guilty of the crime of indecent liberties. Id.

Death penalty

In prosecution for rape of nine-year-old girl, death sentence was within sound discretion of jury alone, and in considering imposition of death sentence, jury could give weight to any consideration such as age, sex, ignorance, illness or intoxication. Tatum v. United States (1951, 190 F. 2d 612, 88 U. S. App. D. C. 386).

Where evidence was sufficient to sustain verdict of guilty in prosecution for rape, jury had exclusive power to determine whether death penalty should be imposed. Williams v. United States (1942, 131 F. 2d 21, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 299).

Defense

Where defense announced that defenses would be, first, that no crime had been committed by defendant, and, secondly, that if he had committed crime, he was not guilty by reason of insanity, court, in stating that defense would have to take one position or other, as defenses were inconsistent, committed error which reviewing court, under rule, would notice on appeal and for which it would reverse judgment, as there was no inconsistency and as inconsistent defenses could be interposed. Whittaker v. United States (1960, 281 F. 2d 631, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

In prosecution for rape and robbery, the defendant did not have the obligation of making out a complete defense. McKenzie v. United States (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

Discretion of court

In rape prosecution, record sustained trial court's determination, on motion for new trial, that evidence did not sustain charges that defendant was not competently represented by trial counsel. Ewing v. United States (1943, 135 F. 2d 633, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 14, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 829, 318 U. S. 776, 87 L. Ed. 1145, rehearing denied 63 S. Ct. 991, 318 U. S. 803, 87 L. Ed. 1167).

In rape prosecution, where hearing on motion for new trial had been continued over and over to allow some supposed new lead to be followed out and when, after final continuance had been granted, with court's insistence that hearing be brought to an end, defendant filed affidavits and insisted on cross-examining those who had made counter affidavits, but court took matter under advisement and at next sitting brought hearing to close without taking further evidence, action of court in determining the matter on affidavits was not an abuse of discretion. Id.

Due process

The court held that the refusal of the government to comply with Juvenile Court's pre-trial orders granting extensive discovery motions of each of the three juveniles, charged separately with rape, did not then and there deprive the juveniles of due process, equal protection of the law, or the deprivation of the right to effective assistance of counsel at trial, nor did it then and there establish a denial of the juveniles' right to a "fair trial". District of Columbia v. H. J. Jackson, C. M. Simpson and F. M. Alston (D.C. App. 1970, 261 A. 2d 511).

Elements of offense

The elements of the crime of carnally knowing and abusing a female child under statute of the District of Columbia are penetration of a child under the age of 16. Wheeler v. United States (1954, 211 F. 2d 19, 93 U.S. App. D. C. 159, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 876, 347 U. S. 1019, 98 L. Ed. 1140, rehearing denied 75 S. Ct. 21, 348 U. S. 852, 99 L. Ed. 671).

Evidence—Admissibility

Since immediately after police officers entered defendant's apartment and informed him that female neighbor had charged him with rape, defendant volunteered that he had not been in victim's apartment but that he had been in tavern and no claim was made that defendant was subject to any custodial interrogation, statement is admissible, notwithstanding that defendant had not been previously warned of right to counsel and right to remain silent. D. E. Bosley v. United States (1970, 426 F. 2d 1257, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 263).

In prosecution for asserted taking of indecent liberties with child and asserted carnal knowledge, where examining physician was out of jurisdiction and unavailable, report of his medical examination was not admissible. Whittaker v. United States (1960, 281 F. 2d 631, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

Incriminating statements made prior to illegal detention of a defendant without taking him to committing magistrate were not inadmissible because of such detention. Perry v. United States (1958, 253 F. 2d 337, 102 U. S. App. D. C. 315, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 785, 356 U. S. 941, 2 L. Ed. 2d 816).

In prosecution for rape, admission into evidence of manifest kept by taxi driver was not error, where such exhibit met requirements of Federal Business Records Act of being made in usual course of business and within reasonable time after event in issue, in absence of showing of prejudice to defendant. Hines v. United States (1955, 220 F. 2d 381, 95 U. S. App. D. C. 118).

In prosecution for rape, action of trial court in admitting into evidence certain articles of wearing apparel worn by victim, which were not turned over to police until morning after crime, was not error, where reasons for articles not being turned over until next morning were adequately explained. Id.

In prosecution for carnally knowing a female child, allowing child to testify, over objection that defendant had abused her similarly on previous occasions was proper in view of fact that there was independent evidence which pointed to defendant as having committed the offense charged. Crawford v. United States (1952, 198 F. 2d 976, 91 U.S. App. D. C. 234).

Where prosecuting witness is under age of consent her reputation for unchastity is inadmissible. Her reputation for truth and veracity may be attacked, as in the case of any other witness. Sacks v. United States (1913, 41 App.

D.C. 34). See, also, Kidwell v. United States (1912, 38 App. D.C. 566); Monalokos v. United States (1913, 41 App. D.C. 19).

Prosecuting witness in cases of rape may testify as to whether or not she made complaint, when and to whom, although the details of the disclosure are not admissible except on cross-examination or to confirm her testimony after it is impeached, or unless a part of the res gestae. Harris v. United States (1921, 269 F. 481, 50 App. D.C. 139). See, also, Snowden v. United States (1893, 2 App. D.C. 89); Lyles v. United States (1902, 20 App. D.C. 559); Roney v. United States (1915, 43 App. D.C. 533).

In prosecutions for statutory rape testimony of similar acts prior to the offense charged in the indictment is admissible. Weaver v. United States (1924, 299 F. 893, 55 App. D.C. 26).

On charge of carnal knowledge, evidence of subsequent marriage of parties is admissible. Id.

In prosecution for sex offenses, evidence of prior acts between the same parties is admissible as showing a disposition to commit the act charged, the probabilities being that the emotional predisposition or passion will continue. Bracey v. United States (1944, 142 F. 2d 85, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 23, certiorari denied 64 S. Ct. 1274, 322 U.S. 762, 88 L. Ed. 1589).

In prosecution for carnally knowing and abusing a 12 year old girl, where defendant elected to defend on issue of conspiracy against himself, and the only evidence which he offered in support of that defense was that which he produced by cross-examination of his 11 year old daughter, who testified that she disliked her father, rebuttal testimony indicating that daughter's dislike was based on father's commission of similar offense against daughter was properly admitted. Id.

In rape prosecution, where defense witness had testified to facts which, if believed, established defendant's innocence, and during cross-examination regarding interview with prosecutrix's mother, as to which defense witness had not testified on direct examination, witness denied that she had stated she believed defendant guilty, that he was facing the electric chair, and that she had to be on his side, but the prosecutrix's mother subsequently testified that the defense witness made such statements, evidence was admissible within the "self-contradiction rule," within the "impeachment rule," and for purpose of affecting credibility of defense witness by showing bias, and was not objectionable as being on "collateral matter." Ewing v. United States (1943, 135 F. 2d 633, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 14, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 829, 318 U.S. 776, 87 L. Ed. 1145, rehearing denied 63 S. Ct. 991, 318 U.S. 803, 87 L. Ed. 1167).

—Circumstantial evidence

In prosecution for carnally knowing and abusing a female child under the age of 16 years, child's statement, which had been given to the police, and which was used to impeach the child's testimony exonerating defendant, did not constitute direct evidence of the crime charged. Wheeler v. United States (1954, 211 F. 2d 19, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 159, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 876, 347 U.S. 1019, 98 L. Ed. 1140, rehearing denied 75 S. Ct. 21, 348 U.S. 852, 99 L. Ed. 671).

In prosecution for rape, circumstantial evidence was sufficient to corroborate complaining witness' testimony. McGuinn v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 477, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 197).

Only circumstantial evidence is required to corroborate complaining witness' testimony in rape case. Id.

—Confession

Where issue of voluntariness of confessions was for jury, defendant was not prejudiced because trial judge did not in the first instance hear the testimony as to the admissibility of the confession, out of the presence of the jury. De Lorenzo v. United States of America (1955, 219 F. 2d 506, 95 U.S. App. D.C. 74, certiorari denied 75 S. Ct. 897, 349 U.S. 964, 99 L. Ed. 1286).

In rape prosecution, issue of voluntariness of confessions was for jury to determine. Id.

—Corroboration

Credit cards found in automobile, belonging to companion of rape victim, provided enough corroboration to allow jury to consider case against the defendant.

United States v. J. O. Gambrill (1971, 449 F. 2d 1148, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 72).

Charges of rape and assault with intent to commit rape may not be presented to jury solely on testimony of victim, and the degree of corroboration required varies with case, dependent in large part on danger of falsification by particular complainant. United States v. E. L. Huff (1971, 442 F. 2d 885, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 163).

Evidence in corroboration of complainant's testimony was sufficient to warrant submission of charges of rape and assault with intent to commit rape. Id.

As a general rule, for conviction of a sex offense testimony of the victim must be corroborated both as to the corpus delicti and the identity of the accused; however, the standard by which to determine adequacy of identifying evidence is not as stringent as is required for proof of the offense itself. United States v. R. Jenkins (1970, 436 F. 2d 140, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 392).

Where the complaining witness' identification of rapist, shortly after attack, as to skin color, height, build and voice matched that of the defendant, whom she picked out of lineup, and witness testified that she was able to see assailant's face in light over basement door and that she had a good look at him when he dragged her into basement and when he was having intercourse with her, identification evidence was sufficient for jury without further corroboration. Id.

Testimony of the complaining witness must be corroborated with respect to fact of sexual assault and generally must be corroborated as to identification of accused by complainant; but in both instances, corroboration need not be by "direct evidence", but may consist of proven circumstances which tend to support complainant's story. W. A. Carter, Jr. v. United States (1970, 427 F. 2d 619, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 349).

The need for corroboration of complainant's testimony depends upon danger of falsity and danger of erroneous identification in rape case is not of same magnitude as danger of fabricated rape. Id.

Corroboration of evidence by medical evidence sustained conviction for carnal knowledge of 15-year-old complainant. P. E. A. Duckett v. United States (1969, 410 F. 2d 1004, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 305).

There existed ample corroboration of identification of defendant charged with carnal knowledge to warrant jury to reach the conclusion of guilt. T. F. Dade v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 692, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 229).

There were sufficient corroborative facts and circumstances to merit submission to jury of a prosecution for carnally knowing female under 16 years of age. J. Bailey and R. Humphries v. United States (1968, 405 F. 2d 1352, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 82).

Independent proof must exist that points to probable guilt of the defendant or at least corroborates indirectly testimony of prosecutrix to warrant a conviction of carnally knowing female under 16 years of age. Id.

Since prosecutrix in carnal knowledge prosecution positively identified defendant the day following the crime, and her description of event was supported by her prompt report, condition of her clothing, welts on her neck, and her reported emotional condition, and in view of absence of evidence casting doubt on her trustworthiness or credibility of her testimony that she had abundant and unfettered opportunity to observe defendant prior to the crime, her identification did not require further corroboration because of minimal danger of falsification. G. W. Thomas v. United States (1967, 387 F. 2d 191, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 233).

The failure to instruct that corroboration of identity was required in proof of rape required reversal of conviction as to a defendant who preserved the issue by motion for judgment of acquittal at close of plaintiff's evidence and as to whom corroboration was then lacking; however, allowing case against two codefendants to go to jury without such instruction was not plain error, where the two codefendants did not except to court's charge on corroboration of identity and there was evidence in government's case on which jury could have found corroboration as to the two codefendants. Franklin, Price and Brooks v. United States (1964, 330 F. 2d 205, 117 U.S. App. D.C. 331).

Where government's own evidence showed that victim was raped several times, merely showing that she was raped was no corroboration of a defendant as one of the offenders. Id.

In prosecution for rape and housebreaking, testimony of complainant's mother relating to telephone call made by complainant immediately after alleged attack was properly received in evidence. B. Smith v. United States (1962, 312 F. 2d 867, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

In rape prosecution "corroboration," in the sense that there must be circumstances in proof which tend to support the prosecutrix's story, is required. Ewing v. United States (1943, 135 F. 2d 633, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 14, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 829, 318 U.S. 776, 87 L. Ed. 1145, rehearing denied 63 S. Ct. 991, 318 U.S. 803, 87 L. Ed. 1167).

In rape prosecution, evidence that defendant was present in apartment visiting with prosecutrix and another shortly before crucial time and spent night either in living room or in room across hall, that force was used against door of prosecutrix's bedroom making a new break in already defective lock with no other evidence to explain the new condition, that complaint was made to friends within twelve hours, to police within 24 hours, and was followed by defendant's arrest and confrontation with prosecutrix and medical evidence that the prosecutrix had recently had intercourse for the first time, was sufficient "corroboration." Id.

— Examination of witnesses

In rape prosecution where during cross-examination defense witness, who had testified to facts which, if believed, established defendant's innocence, was asked whether in interview with prosecutrix's mother witness had given affirmative answer to question whether she thought defendant was guilty and prosecutrix's mother later testified that the defense witness stated that she believed defendant guilty, the province of the jury was not invaded. Ewing v. United States (1943, 135 F. 2d 633, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 14, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 829, 318 U.S. 776, 87 L. Ed. 1145, rehearing denied 63 S. Ct. 991, 318 U.S. 803, 87 L. Ed. 1167).

In rape prosecution, action of prosecuting attorney in cross-examining defense witness as to whether defendant suggested to witness that they get some whiskey and girls and have a party was not prejudicial error where witness' negative response was later corroborated by defendant. Id.

In prosecution for rape, and for robbery of cleaning establishment, where court warned defendants' counsel that if he asked question of witness regarding whether defendant had been identified as the man who robbed another cleaning establishment about a week prior to the commission of the offenses involved, he would do so at his peril, refusal to allow the contradiction of witness' answer was proper. McKenzie v. United States (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

— Hearsay

Where female child, whom defendant was charged with having carnally known and abused, went to her grandmother's home three blocks away within an hour, at most, after alleged attack, and when child arrived she was highly distraught, in shock, and crying, and when grandmother asked child what was wrong with her, child replied that defendant just had something to do with her, court properly admitted grandmother's testimony concerning child's statement to grandmother, under the spontaneous exclamation exception to the hearsay rule. Wheeler v. United States (1954, 211 F. 2d 19, 93 U.S. App. D. C. 159, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 876, 347 U.S. 1019, 98 L. Ed. 1140, rehearing denied 75 S. Ct. 21, 348 U.S. 852, 99 L. Ed. 671).

In prosecution for carnally knowing a female child, where defendant initiated inquiry into child's statement and made full use thereof to cast doubt upon his identity as the assailant, the interest of justice would not require reversal because of admission, without objection, of other statement by child on same subject which defendant, upon appeal, maintained should have been excluded by trial court as hearsay. Crawford v. United States (1952, 198 F. 2d 976, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 234).

— Impeachment

In prosecution for rape and housebreaking, wherein defendant admitted sex relations and testified that prosecutrix had consented, prosecutor was properly allowed to impeach defendant's credibility by reading affidavit, which defendant had made as indigent defendant to secure subpoena and in which defendant had stated that witness whom he sought to subpoena could establish alibi for him. B. Smith v. United States (1962, 312 F. 2d 867, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

— Res gestae

In prosecution for rape of child about five years old the statements of the child made to her grandmother on the same day of crime was admissible as part of the res gestae. Snowden v. United States (2 App. D.C. 89).

— Sufficiency

In this case, the evidence was sufficient to corroborate the testimony of complaint that identified the defendant as her attacker. W. A. Carter v. United States (1970, 427 F. 2d 619, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 349).

In this case, the evidence in rape prosecution was sufficient to submit issue of victim's consent to jury and to support conviction for rape. B. J. Johnson v. United States (1970, 426 F. 2d 651, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 174; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1258, 401 U.S. 846).

Whether evidence of joint participation in rape was sufficient and whether instruction on subject was deficient did not have to be determined where evidence indicated that certain defendants did commit rape and that the other defendant aided and abetted. Franklin, Price and Brooks v. United States (1964, 330 F. 2d 205, 117 U.S. App. D.C. 331).

In prosecution for rape, evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction. Hines v. United States (1955, 220 F. 2d 381, 95 U.S. App. D. C. 118). See also, Robinson v. United States (1942, 128 F. 2d 322, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 29).

Evidence warranted a conviction for rape, and death penalty therefor. Holmes v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 1022, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 168).

In rape prosecution, testimony of complaining witness and the circumstantial evidence supporting it, which were sufficient to show that the intercourse occurred and took place by force and against her will in the sense that her resistance was overcome by physical force and threats which put her in fear of her life, sustained jury's implicit finding, that the act was without the "consent" of the complaining witness. Ewing v. United States (1943, 135 F. 2d 633, 77 U.S. App. D.C. 14, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 829, 318 U.S. 776, 87 L. Ed. 1145, rehearing denied 63 S. Ct. 991, 318 U.S. 803, 87 L. Ed. 1167).

In rape prosecution, "consent" is not shown when the evidence discloses resistance is overcome by threats which put the woman in fear of death or grave bodily harm or by those combined with some degree of physical force. Id.

— Suppression

Ordinarily, one seeking to challenge legality of search or seizure must establish that he was victim of alleged invasion of privacy. F. Hair & J. I. Burroughs v. United States (1961, 289 F. 2d 894, 110 U.S. App. D.C. 153).

Evidence obtained under warrant issued on basis of observations derived by police officers from illegal entry is inadmissible. Id.

Harmless error

Assuming arguendo that the defendant's confrontation with victim at precinct station was conducted in an impermissible manner, any error with regard to fact that government elicited a single reference to precinct confrontation was harmless, since, in context of extensive testimony about victim's previous street identification, impact of single reference must have been negligible. United States v. J. K. Green (1970, 436 F. 2d 290, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 136).

Identification

In view of record showing that complainant had ample opportunity to observe her assailant, in terms of time available, lighting, and succession of events at time of offense when the assailant raped her in hallway after robbing her on the elevator and the fact that she gave a description of her assailant to police immediately after offense and stated only that one of the photographs exhibited by police looked like but was not assailant and spontaneously identified him on the street some 11 days afterward, there was sufficiently convincing identification of defendant to obviate need for further corroboration. United States v. A. C. Hines (1972, 460 F. 2d 949, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 441).

Introduction in evidence of photograph of defendant and photograph of man selected by complainant as defendant's look-alike was not wholly irrelevant to issue of identification and did not prejudice defendant. Id.

Identification of the defendants by rape victim could not stand where she was completely unable to select one of the defendants at first lineup held within six days of the crime, and where intervening exhibition of two single photographs and the ten-man lineup photograph, together with victim's seeing two Negroes seated at counsel table, both of whom she had viewed at the lineup, contained elements of suggestiveness that probably led to victim's testimony at trial that she did "recognize both of them now." United States v. J. O. Gambrill (1971, 449 F. 2d 1148, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 72).

Although it is unquestionably highly suggestive to present a single suspect to a witness for identification, such procedure may be justified in some circumstances, as when a single suspect is promptly presented to a witness who is critically ill or to a witness whose recollection of offense is still exceedingly fresh; an interest in speedy identification that justifies failure to arrange a formal lineup may also justify failure to provide suspect with counsel. United States v. J. K. Green (1970, 436 F. 2d 290, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 136).

Assuming arguendo that the defendant's confrontation with victim at precinct station was conducted in an impermissible manner, victim's ability to identify was not so irreparably tainted by confrontation as to make her in-court identification inadmissible, since in-court identification had an independent source, in that victim observed her assailant closely and at length at time of crime. Id.

Impartial jury

Where on voir dire only those jurors were excluded who could not under any circumstance render verdict of guilty with death penalty and one juror who was opposed to death penalty was seated and actually served, defendants sentenced under Federal Youth Corrections Act, after being found guilty of carnally knowing female under 16 years of age, were not entitled to reversal of conviction on ground that jury was not impartial. J. Bailey and R. Humphries v. United States (1968, 405 F. 2d 1352, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 82).

Impeachment

Permitting impeachment, in prosecution for rape and for assault with intent to commit rape, of defense witness by means of question as to whether he had been convicted of rape and response thereto that he was convicted of assault with intent to commit rape, does not constitute plain error. United States v. E. L. Huff (1971, 442 F. 2d 885, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 163).

Indictment

Indictment charging defendant with unlawfully attempting to commit crime of rape on specified day against form of statute clearly spelled out charge of attempted forcible rape. H. S. Bush v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 215 A. 2d 853).

Inclusion in information of age of alleged 12-year-old victim of attempted rape was unnecessary in view of charge of defendant with forcible rape, not statutory rape of a minor. Id.

Evidence failed to show that defendant was prejudiced by lack of particularity of informations which did not contain that particular facts constituting the charged offenses of attempted forcible rape of, simple assault upon, and threats against a 12-year-old girl. Id.

Although complaining witness' name did not appear in body of attempted forcible rape information, her identity was readily available from the other two informations, i.e., simple assault and threats, under which defendant was also tried, from the evidence, and from the list of witnesses in the attempted rape information, and guilty verdict thus cured lack of particularity, if any, in that information. Id.

Count of indictment charging defendant with violating this section punishing one who carnally knows a female child under 16 years of age can be joined with count charging defendant with violation of statute punishing any person who takes, or attempts to take, any immoral, improper, or indecent liberties with any child of either sex, under the age of 16 years to arouse or gratify sexual desires, though latter statute provides that it shall not apply to the offenses covered by this section, if jury is told that it cannot find defendant guilty of both counts and can find him guilty under the second count only if he is found not guilty under the first count. Thompson v. United States (1956, 228 F. 2d 463, 97 U. S. App. D. C. 116).

That indictment charging rape contained four counts relating to two acts of intercourse did not prejudice defendant, where defendant made no election, stated that he was ready to go to jury on all four counts, and in no way questioned charge allowing case to go to jury only on two counts charging carnal knowledge of a girl under age of consent because testimony was that complaining witness was under 16. Robinson v. United States (1942, 128 F. 2d 322, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 29).

That indictment charging rape was signed by an Assistant United States Attorney rather than by the United States Attorney concerned a "matter of form" which did not prejudice defendant. Id.

Where indictments charging rape and robbery were returned by a grand jury which did not have upon it any member of the negro race, the indictments could not be quashed on ground that systematic course of procedure had been adopted for purpose of excluding negroes from grand jury on account of their color, in absence of proof or offer of proof of intentional exclusion of negroes from service on grand jury. McKenzie v. United States (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

Instructions

Instruction in prosecution for rape and assault with intent to commit rape that evidence, that was introduced by defendant, as to prior rape of complainant by defendant was to be used, if it at all "solely for your consideration whether it tends to show a predisposition on the part of the defendant to gratify his sexual desires with the complainant," is not plain error, notwithstanding contention that such evidence, that was introduced solely to impeach complainant for hostility to defendant, was not admissible because of its tendency to show criminal propensity. United States v. E. L. Huff (1971, 442 F. 2d 885, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 163).

Evidence in prosecution for rape and assault with intent to commit rape required instruction, that was requested but not given, on lesser offense of simple assault. Id.

Instruction by trial court, in rape prosecution, that identification of assailant by the complaining witness may be sufficient if circumstances would convince of its accuracy beyond reasonable doubt and that, in considering accuracy of such identification, the jury could consider opportunity which complaining witness had to observe, or other factors and other evidence which may tend to corroborate identification was adequate when considered in context of general instruction that there must be corroboration of testimony of complaining witness. W. A. Carter, Jr. v. United States (1970, 427 F. 2d 619, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 349).

Refusal to give requested instruction as to requirement of corroboration of complainant's testimony that identified the defendant as her attacker was not error where the instruction in purporting to summarize evidence corroborating complainant's testimony, presented incomplete, diluted and inaccurate statement of evidence that might have had tendency to mislead jury. Id.

The court's instruction that the jury could find defendant guilty of both carnal knowledge and taking indecent liberties with minor child as result of same incident was error. United States v. W. D. Heard (1969, 420 F. 2d 628, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

In this case the failure of trial judge in prosecution for carnal knowledge of female under 16 years of age to instruct the jury on need for corroboration of prosecutrix' identification of defendant was not cause for reversal since no objection was made at trial and such instruction was not requested by defense counsel. United States v. J. Dews (1969, 417 F. 2d 753, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 185).

In this case the failure of trial judge in prosecution for carnal knowledge of female under 16 years of age to instruct on lesser included offenses was not reversible error since objection was not taken to portion of charge given and such instruction was not requested. Id.

Defendants who were convicted of carnally knowing a female under 16 years of age were not prejudiced because jury was instructed that the statute permitted them to impose the death penalty, even though such provision of the statute was constitutionally invalid, where prosecutor specifically stated that he was not going to seek the death penalty and presented no evidence to that end. J. Bailey and R. Humphries v. United States (1968, 405 F. 2d 1352, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 82).

In prosecution on two-count indictment for taking indecent liberties with child and for carnal knowledge, court acted properly at close of government's case when it granted partial judgment of not guilty under second count, stating that there was no evidence to support carnal knowledge charge but submitting to jury lesser included offense of assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge, but court erred in failing to instruct that jury was first to consider included charge of assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge and was only to consider alleged taking of indecent liberties with child if it found defendant not guilty of the former crime. Whittaker v. United States (1960, 281 F. 2d 631, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

In rape prosecution, wherein jury had been instructed on verdicts of guilty with death penalty, guilty as charged, not guilty by reason of insanity, or not guilty, and jury after deliberating several hours asked court whether jury could be assured that defendant legally would be imprisoned for remainder of his life, court's response that the maximum term that court could impose was 30 years but that court also was required to impose a minimum sentence so that longest term court could impose would be indeterminate sentence of 10 to 30 years and that at end of minimum sentence parole board would have to decide whether maximum should be served or anything less than the maximum, did not constitute error. Mallory v. United States (1956, 236 F. 2d 701, 98 U. S. App. D. C. 406, reversed on other grounds 77 S. Ct. 1356, 354 U. S. 449, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1479).

Count of indictment charging defendant with violating statute punishing one who carnally knows a female child under 16 years of age can be joined with count charging defendant with violation of statute punishing any person who takes, or attempts to take, any immoral, improper, or indecent liberties with any child of either sex, under the age of 16 years to arouse or gratify sexual desires, though latter statute provides that it shall not apply to the offenses covered by the prior statute, if jury is told that it cannot find defendant guilty of both counts and can find him guilty under the second count only if he is found not guilty under the first count. Thompson v. United States (1956, 228 F. 2d 463, 97 U. S. App. D. C. 116).

In prosecution for rape, action of trial court in submitting question of death penalty to jury where government had not asked for such penalty, was not error, where court advised jury that government did not ask that penalty and that they could take that fact into consideration, and where death penalty actually was not returned and defendant was not thereby prejudiced. Hines v. United States (1955, 220 F. 2d 381, 95 U. S. App. D. C. 118).

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's prayer for instruction requiring utmost resistance by complaining witness incorrect. McGuinn v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 477, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 197).

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's prayers for instructions assuming as fact that complaining witness did not offer opposition should have been denied. Id.

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's prayer for instruction requiring that complaining witness' fear be mortal to negative her consent was properly denied, as fear of grave bodily harm was sufficient. Id.

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, court properly instructed jury that there must be absence of consent by complaining witness to warrant conviction, unless consent was induced by putting her in fear of grave bodily harm or death or by exercise of actual force against her person. Id.

Where evidence in prosecution for rape of nine-year-old girl raised defense of insanity, but no instructions thereon were given, and counsel for defendant stated in closing argument to jury that verdict of guilty was proper and trial court in its charge referred to such concession of guilt and omitted to instruct jury that notwithstanding concession, defendant was entitled to have jury alone determine his guilt or innocence, there was reversible error. Tatum v. United States (1951, 190 F. 2d 612, 88 U.S. App. D. C. 386).

In prosecution on two counts for assault with a dangerous weapon and on one count for rape, where court's charge did not discuss nor define offenses included within the indictment and jury were not told what assault with intent to rape was nor how it was distinguished from rape and were not informed that a verdict of not guilty might be returned, there was prejudicial error. Williams v. United States (1942, 131 F. 2d 21, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 299).

In prosecution for rape and robbery, where pistol which victim stated assailant used, clothing which he said he had stolen and money which he had taken were not found in possession of defendant, neighbors testified to good character of defendant and to his having a night job at which he worked regularly, and thorough examination by police failed to shake statement of defendant that he had never seen the prosecuting witness before, such circumstances were important enough to be called to the attention of the jury to be weighed together with evidence in support of legal presumption of innocence. McKenzie v. United States (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

In prosecution for rape and robbery, failure to instruct jury in precise terms that a not guilty verdict was necessary in event of failure by the government to prove each of the elements of the offenses charged beyond a reasonable doubt was error requiring reversal, notwithstanding the court instructed that defendant was presumed to be innocent and that the government was obliged to rebut the presumption by proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Id.

In prosecution for rape and robbery, where verity of identification of accused by prosecuting witness was point on which case turned, failure to instruct jury in plain words that if circumstances of identification were not convincing, jury should acquit accused was error. Id.

In prosecution for rape and robbery where court referring to conditions obtaining at time of prosecuting witness' identification of accused stated that the jury should take into consideration the attitude of the prosecuting witness upon coming in view of the accused and that they should search their reasoning power regarding what motivated the selection of the accused from among all others, in view of fact that verity of identification was the point on which the case turned, the court should have cautioned that if the motivation was not convincing beyond a reasonable doubt the jury should find the defendant not guilty. Id.

Nothing suggests that the jury did not understand and respect the action and instructions of the court for unless it appears to the contrary, jurors should be presumed to have understood and followed the court's instructions. Hall v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 347, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 209).

Intent

Specific intent to commit rape is not required to warrant conviction thereof. McGuinn v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 477, 89 U.S. App. D. C. 197).

Jencks Act

In this case, the court held that refusal to submit to jury complainant's Jencks Act statement, which had not been offered or received in evidence, was not error. W. A. Carter, Jr. v. United States (1970, 427 F. 2d 619, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 349).

Lesser included offense

Assault with intent to rape is lesser offense included in charge of rape. Johnson v. United States (1965, 350 F. 2d 784, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Mental capacity

In prosecution for rape of nine-year-old girl, evidence as to alleged insanity of defendant, was sufficient to raise issue to jury under guidance of instructions. Tatum v. United States (1951, 190 F. 2d 612, 88 U.S. App. D. C. 386).

After conviction of rape, a sanity inquisition was denied when it did not occur to either his counsel or to the court that he was mentally irresponsible; and that during his examination and cross-examination, it did not "suggest, in the slightest degree, that defendant was not fully and entirely responsible from a mental standpoint." Jackson v. United States (1928, 25 F. 2d 549, 58 App. D.C. 125).

Evidence regarding insanity of defendant was insufficient to justify reversal of conviction for rape. Holloway v. United States (1945, 148 F. 2d 665, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 3, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1507, 334 U.S. 852, 92 L. Ed. 1774).

Newly discovered evidence

Defendant who was convicted of carnally knowing female under 16 years of age was not entitled to a new trial upon newly discovered evidence consisting of discrepancies in testimony of prosecutrix and her mother at the trial of one defendant's younger brother for the same offense. J. Bailey and R. Humphries v. United States (1968, 405 F. 2d 1352, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 82).

Partial invalidity of statute

Invalidity of portion of a statute which permitted the jury to impose the death penalty upon a person convicted of carnally knowing female under 16 years of age did not render remainder of statute invalid. J. Bailey and R. Humphries v. United States (1968, 405 F. 2d 1352, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 82).

Invalidity of statutory provision which permitted the jury to impose death penalty upon person convicted of carnally knowing female under 16 years of age did not render invalid convictions of defendants who received trial by completely fair and impartial jury and were not intimidated by threat of death into either waiving trial by jury or pleading guilty. Id.

Plea of guilty

This section authorizing jury to recommend death penalty in a rape case does not deprive court of inherent jurisdiction to accept plea of guilty, but defendant does not have absolute right to plead guilty. United States v. Willis (D.C.D.C. 1948, 75 F. Supp. 628).

Plea of guilty of carnal knowledge, avoiding possibility of death sentence, was accepted in exercise of trial court's discretion, upon recommendation of United States Attorney and in view of facts of particular case. Id.

"In all cases (of rape) the court must have the verdict of the jury upon which to base its judgment," and there is, therefore no error in refusing to accept a plea of guilty. Green v. United States (1913, 40 App. D.C. 426).

Prejudicial remarks

In prosecution for rape and housebreaking, prosecutor's remark to jury as to defendant's objection to admission of hospital records of physical examination of prosecutrix was improper and required new trial where records were not admitted and examination in fact showed no evidence of rape, and thus any possible or probable implication to jury that such records would be damaging to defendant was misleading. B. Smith v. United States (1962, 312 F. 2d 867, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

Pre-trial discovery

The court held that any exculpatory information in government's possession should be given, in accordance with juveniles' request, to the three juveniles charged separately with rape. District of Columbia v. H. J. Jackson, C. M. Simpson and F. M. Alston (D.C. App. 1970, 261 A. 2d 511).

Prosecutor's conduct

Conduct of prosecutor in asking defense witness, in criminal prosecution, whether she had testified at preliminary hearing, for purpose of permitting prosecutor to claim recent fabrication solely on failure of such witnesses to testify at hearing is improper, but is not plain or prejudicial error regarding reversal. United States v. E. L. Huff (1971, 442 F. 2d 885, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 163).

Prosecutor's remarks to jury

Prosecutor's characterizing defendant in rape action as a teenage hoodlum walking the streets was improper and should have been condemned by the trial court, sua sponte, in the presence of the jury; however, the statement does not require reversal of this case in view of probability that jury convicted on basis of its view of the evidence. United States v. R. Jenkins (1970, 436 F. 2d 140, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 392).

In prosecution for murder and rape, evidence regarding whether defendant's oral admissions against interest and his written confession were voluntary was sufficient to justify the submission of the issue of voluntariness to the jury. Catoe v. United States (1942, 131 F. 2d 16, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 292).

In rape cases and other cases of the nature of a sexual assault, delay in making complaint is a subject for consideration of jury and may seriously affect credibility of complaining witness. Stitley v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 491).

Remedy on appeal

Although defendant who was charged with both carnal knowledge and with taking indecent liberties with minor child did not request that the jury consider indecent liberties charge only after an acquittal of carnal knowledge and jury convicted defendant on both charges after being erroneously instructed that conviction on one charge should not influence verdict on other charge, the proper remedy was to remand case with instruction to vacate judgment of conviction of taking indecent liberties with minor child. United States v. W. D. Heard (1969, 420 F. 2d 628, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Defendant was not entitled to vacation of sentence on ground that he was denied effective assistance of counsel because he allegedly advised defendant to take no appeal, where record disclosed that defendant was adequately represented by able, experienced and conscientious counsel, and that defendant was fully apprised of his rights. Watson, Jr. v. United States (1960, 281 F. 2d 619, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 256).

Where accused was found not guilty by reason of insanity and was committed to hospital and some two months thereafter accused petitioned for writ of habeas corpus without prepayment of costs and District Court denied such petition without a hearing and without stating reasons for denial, case would be remanded and District Court, if it rejected allegation of poverty, would be required to state basis for such rejection, and if leave to file without costs was permitted or if accused should pay necessary filing fees, hospital superintendent would be directed to report as to accused's condition, and upon the return the District Court should conduct hearing to determine whether accused had recovered sanity and would not be dangerous to himself or others in reasonable future. Tatem, Sr., v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 894, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 230).

Statement of counsel for defendant in closing argument to jury in prosecution for rape of nine-year-old, that verdict of guilty was proper under the circumstances and evidence, was a defect affecting "substantial rights" within meaning of rule that plain errors or defects affecting "substantial rights" may be noticed on appeal though they were not brought to attention of the trial court. Tatum v. United States (1951, 190 F. 2d 612, 88 U. S. App. D.C. 386).

Where counsel for defendant in prosecution for rape of nine-year-old girl stated in closing argument to jury that a verdict of guilty was proper, reference by trial court in charge to the concession of guilt, and failure to caution jury that notwithstanding such concession, defendant was entitled to have the jury alone determine his guilt or innocence, constituted a defect affecting "substantial right" within meaning of rule that plain errors or defects affecting "substantial rights" may be noticed on appeal though they were not brought to attention of the trial court. Id.

Where record presented no reversible error and evidence supported conviction for rape, conviction was affirmed.

Clinton v. United States (1945, 151 F. 2d 12, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 413).

That failure of the Government to call all of its witnesses whose names and addresses had been given to defendant took him by surprise could not be urged on appeal from conviction for rape, where defendant did not allege or show that witnesses were not available for him and made no proffer of proof that their testimony would have helped him. Robinson v. United States (1942, 128 F. 2d 322, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 29).

— Assignment of error

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's assignment of error in trial court's failure to declare mistrial because of prosecuting attorney's comment, in opening statement to jury, that only one woman survived defense challenge to jurors, was without foundation, in absence of motion by defendant for mistrial or exception to trial court's action in merely telling jury to disregard remark as improper after objection thereto. McGuinn v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 477, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 197).

Scope of review

Although Court of Appeals may review sentence given upon plea of guilty, provided there is illegality or impropriety in same, where the defendant made no such claim, and indeed, disposition was favorable to him in its provisions for probation, appeal from sentence is frivolous and would be dismissed. United States v. C. McElyea (1970, 439 F. 2d 548, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 38).

A defendant's voluntary plea of guilty entered after receiving the advice of counsel waives objections to non-jurisdictional defects in his conviction. Id.

Where a defendant claimed error in taking of his plea, the district court will consider whether he should be allowed to withdraw his plea or whether his conviction and sentence should be set aside, but where the defendant does not allege any error in taking of plea, there is no basis for a remand to provide such consideration in district court. Id.

Sentence

Defendant's motion, filed before expiration of minimum time of indeterminate sentence imposed by District Court on his conviction of rape, to correct later indeterminate sentence on his subsequent unrelated conviction of assault with intent to rape, will not be dismissed by Court of Appeals as premature, thereby relegating defendant to refile identical motion in District Court, in view of statute and criminal procedure rule authorizing motion attacking sentence and correction of illegal sentence at any time. Holloway v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 504, 89 U. S. App. D. C. 332).

Severance

Where the second defendant moved for severance at first trial after alibi witness had testified for the first defendant, contending that alibi presented was incredible and that second defendant would be prejudiced by its use, which motion was refused, where instruction was given that first defendant's witnesses were offered on behalf of first defendant alone, where counsel for first defendant voiced no objection to the instruction at the time it was given or at any subsequent time, and where second defendant did not take the stand and was not subject to cross-examination concerning either his whereabouts on night of the crime or his reasons for refusing to subscribe to alibi presented by first defendant's witnesses, separate trial should be afforded the defendants on remand if it should appear that the same situation would reoccur. United States v. J. O. Gambrell (1971, 449 F. 2d 1148, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 72).

Where defendant was convicted of rape and assault with intent to kill, and death penalty was imposed, but convictions were reversed and new trial ordered, even though 16 months elapsed between date of order awarding new trial and date defendant was sentenced after government was willing to accept pleas of guilty to offenses not punishable by death, and defendant voluntarily entered pleas after alleged unlawful delay, defendant was not deprived of constitutional right to speedy trial. United States v. Lindsey (D.C.D.C. 1959, 178 F. Supp. 598).

Treatment as a capital case

Defendants were not prejudiced because case was submitted to the jury as a capital case although a provision in the statute which authorized the jury to impose the death penalty for carnally knowing female under 16 years of age was constitutionally invalid, inasmuch as jury was offered no choice as to offenses for which defendant could be found guilty and prosecution made it clear it was not seeking the death penalty. J. Bailey and R. Humphries v. United States (1968, 405 F. 2d 1352, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 82).

Trial procedure

Defendant, who was convicted of statutory rape, but was not given a death sentence, was not prejudiced by the fact that the case was treated as a capital one, on ground that the verdict of guilty may have been a compromise, where prosecution never requested death penalty or even adverted to it, and trial judge gave it only a one-sentence mention in the charge to jury. T. M. Springfield v. United States (1968, 403 F. 2d 572, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 166).

Order of proof and conduct of trial in trial for rape is within court's discretion. Mears v. United States (1932, 55 F. 2d 745, 60 App. D.C. 387).

Contention of appellant's counsel that he should have been permitted to argue to the jury the so-called "sociological aspects of the case" is without merit because, for such a crime as rape, there can never be any extenuating circumstances. Holmes v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 1022, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 168).

In a prosecution for rape, the remarks of the prosecutor were improper where he asked defendant if he were a "sex fiend" since cross-examination is no place for argument or for vituperation; nor could a former offense be used for any other purpose than to reflect upon the credibility of appellant's testimony. Hall v. United States (1949, 171 F. 2d 347, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 209).

When a child under the age of consent has been defiled, the law conclusively presumes force on the part of her seducer, and the question of consent is immaterial. Yeager v. United States (1900, 16 App. D.C. 356).

Carnal knowledge of child under age specified is rape. Sanselo v. United States (1916, 44 App. D.C. 508).

Withdrawal of guilty plea, hearing on

Trial court should hold hearing on defendant's presentment motion to be allowed to withdraw plea of guilty to offense of assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge based on allegations of perjured testimony by complaining witness, where government opposition to motion had not been served on court-appointed defense counsel or defendant prior to denial of motion, and government's opposition failed to controvert allegations of defendant's motion and gave erroneous reasons for dismissal of charge against codefendant who had elected to go to trial. J. E. Hawk v. United States (1964, 340 F. 2d 792, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 267).

Whoever by force or violence, whether against resistance or by sudden or stealthy seizure or snatching, or by putting in fear, shall take from the person or immediate actual possession of another anything of value, is guilty of robbery, and any person convicted thereof shall suffer imprisonment for not less than two years nor more than fifteen years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1322, ch. 854, § 810; Dec. 27, 1967, Pub. L. 90-226, § 603, title VI, 81 Stat. 737.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS*Abuse of discretion

Refusal to permit introduction of evidence that the defendant had been mistakenly arrested in another robbery case was not an abuse of discretion, since defense counsel did not bring out any relationship between two charges (other than that they were both for robbery) and did not proffer that there was any similarity between the two offenses in terms of modus operandi. United States v. L. P. Hallman (1971, 439 F. 2d 603, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 93).

In robbery prosecution of pickpocket who allegedly took wallet from purse of lady in line of people outside White House grounds waiting to gain entrance to observe children's annual Easter egg roll, denial of request to instruct the jury on lesser included offense of larceny was not abuse of discretion. R. T. Davis, Jr. v. United States (1970, 433 F. 2d 1222, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 116).

The trial judge did not exceed his discretion when he ruled that prosecutor would be allowed to impeach defendant, if he testified, with two earlier convictions for petit larceny. Id.

The decision of the trial court, rendered after hearing on admissibility, that 1959 conviction of one defendant for housebreaking and larceny and 1962 conviction of another defendant for attempted housebreaking could be brought out on cross-examination in robbery prosecution unless either defendant could satisfy court that since conviction he had led legally blameless life, was not an abuse of discretion. United States v. J. L. Bailey et al. (1970, 426 F. 2d 1236, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 242).

In robbery prosecution in this section, in which store detective testified that he saw defendant and codefendant enter store together and saw defendant bump shopper while codefendant opened pocketbook and remove wallet, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in admitting expert testimony on modus operandi of pickpockets. United States v. O. J. Jackson (1970, 425 F. 2d 574, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 143).

It was not an abuse of discretion to deny impeachment of complaining witness in prosecution for robbery by reference to complaining witness' prior convictions for assault and rape affecting substantial rights of defendants where impeachment of the witness with three convictions for crimes of auto theft, robbery, and burglary, each crime having element of dishonesty, was permitted. G. A. Davis, et al. v. United States (1969, 409 F. 2d 453, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 167).

The Court of Appeals, in the exercise of its supervisory power, declared that in the future, in both criminal and civil cases, the American Bar Association standard, eliminating element of "Allen" charge advising that the minority jurors owe deference to the majority, would be adopted as guideline which charges on duty of jurors to consult open-mindedly with disposition to hearken to fellow-jurors and to agree when no violation of conscience is involved must abide, and that American Bar Association approved instruction would be adopted as the vehicle for informing juries of their responsibilities in event of disagreement, when a trial court decides to do so. United States v. A. C. Thomas (1971, 449 F. 2d 1177, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 101).

Submission of "Allen" charge, with certain statements added thereto, in prosecution for robbery and assault, is not reversible error since the defendants did not object to the charge as given, either initially or as part of the supplementary instructions, and court's formulation did not in either instance constitute plain error. United States v. J. Wilson (1971, 449 F. 2d 1005, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 343).

Appeal and error

Even if trial court was in error in determining that a source for an incourt identification existed independently of invalid pretrial confrontations, reversal of robbery conviction is not required, since victim's wallet was found by police in police car in which defendant was being transported upon his apprehension shortly after crime. United States v. T. A. Horton (1971, 440 F. 2d 253, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 225).

Error, if any, in refusing to bar use of defendant's prior conviction for impeachment purposes in prosecution for robbery is harmless, given evidence against defendant. Id.

Arrest—Forcible entry

Exceptions to requirement that officers seeking to effectuate an arrest or search announce their purpose prior to breaking a door or window of a house include situation where announcement imposes a danger to the officer, a danger of flight or a danger of destruction of evidence and situation where the victim or some other person is in peril; likewise, a declaration of purpose is unnecessary where the occupant knows their purpose so that an announcement would be a useless gesture. United States v. R. S. Wylie (1972, 462 F. 2d 1178, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 283).

Where within minutes of purse snatching police had followed eyewitnesses' trail of perpetrator to dwelling house and, for five minutes, had loudly shouted in vain, "police officer, open up," and on entering building officers found defendant hiding in crawl space under eaves of roof, it would have been a useless gesture for officers to have announced purpose of their entry; thus, forced entry without notice of authority was proper. Id.

Assistance of counsel

Where record indicated that the trial court was aware of defendant's long term dissatisfaction with his retained counsel, that defendant had sought to discharge counsel, that defendant had asked chief judge of District Court for counsel from legal aid agency and that defendant was a pauper seeking court-appointed counsel, but record did not reflect specifically what action was taken by District Court, case would be remanded to District Court to determine what action, if any, was taken by District Court on motion to discharge counsel of record and request for appointed counsel and whether defendant was prejudiced thereby. United States v. T. R. Thomas (1971, 450 F. 2d 1355, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 308).

The appropriate standard for ineffective assistance of counsel is whether gross incompetence blotted out the essence of a substantial defense. A. Bruce v. United States (1967, 379 F. 2d 113, 126 U.S. App. D.C. 336).

Failure of United States Commissioner to assign counsel to defendant at preliminary proceeding and use at trial of testimony that defendant had confessed to police after the preliminary hearing had been continued for four weeks could not serve as a basis for reversal of conviction where neither point had been raised in district court, no objection had been made upon introduction of the defendant's oral confession, and no relief had been asked below. L. Moon, Jr. v. United States (1963, 317 F. 2d 544, 115 U.S. App. D.C. 133).

Where defendants, who allegedly entered plea of guilty at preliminary hearing to charge of robbery, were without counsel until arraignment but when counsel was assigned by court, defendants pleaded not guilty and adhered to the plea throughout trial and on appeal and denied that they had had hearing on robbery charge and claimed that they had pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges only, in determining whether alleged plea of guilty at preliminary hearing was admissible, court was required to assume that defendants, who had not been asked whether they wanted counsel or informed regarding privilege against self-incrimination, did not know their rights and did not intend to waive them when they allegedly pleaded guilty. Wood v. United States (1942, 128 F. 2d 265, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 274, 141 A.L.R. 1318).

Bifurcated trial

Refusal of trial court to grant bifurcated trial sought on ground that defendant would defend on ground of want of criminal responsibility, was not reversible error where defense assured trial court that there was no defense on merits, and evidence to prove that defendant was one who robbed filling station was very strong. United States v. R. A. Grimes (1969, F. 2d 1119, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 184).

Concurrent sentences

Since concurrent sentences raised substantial question as to whether Congress intended Federal sentence to be cumulative to sentence for state violation for what was factually same offense, Federal sentence would be vacated without deciding question, inasmuch as this course will not result in overriding needs of government, and interests of justice will be served by avoiding substantial time and effort required for deciding question and by devoting limited resources of courts confronted with ever-mounting dockets to determination of issues that must be decided. United States v. J. L. Hooper (1970, 432 F. 2d 604, 139 U.S. App. D.C. 171).

Conduct of prosecuting attorney

In robbery prosecution, prosecutor's statements that the defendants did not make a statement that they struck the victim in self-defense and that the prosecutor did not intend to convey that to the jury and that it was only an inference that the prosecutor was trying to say could be drawn from the evidence but that he thought that testimony was that they struck the victim were not reversible error under the evidence. Johnson v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 898, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 234).

In robbery prosecution, language of prosecuting attorney to jury was not so extreme as to vitiate judgment and permit collateral attack. Adams v. United States (1955, 222 F. 2d 45, 95 U.S. App. D. C. 354).

Confessions

Admission in evidence in robbery and murder trial of defendant's pretrial address to the court which included statement "I feel I am going in blind, you know just going to start this trial, although personally I know I am guilty" constituted reversible error where he did not intend that the statement be considered as confession or as admission and was therefore not voluntary. United States v. L. P. Robinson (1972, 459 F. 2d 1164, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

Confrontation

Defendant was not denied his Sixth Amendment right of confrontation when confessions of two codefendants implicating defendant were admitted and such defendants repudiated their confessions at trial inasmuch as defendants' counsel did not avail himself of opportunity to cross-examine codefendants and bring out all details of alleged coerced confession and any details conformatory of noninvolvement of defendant at time of offense. L. Jackson v. United States (1970, 439 F. 2d 529, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 19).

Consecutive sentences

Sentencing of defendant, who was adjudged guilty on five counts of assaulting five individuals with a dangerous weapon and on one count of robbery from the person, to consecutive terms of imprisonment for robbery and assault is not error since assaults on four individuals, excluding assault charge relating to robbery victim, are separate offenses from robbery and defendant had prior felony conviction. G. Sutton, Jr. v. United States (1970, 434 F. 2d 462, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 188; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1676, 402 U.S. 988).

If additional punishment is to be meted out in armed robbery prosecution for use of a dangerous weapon, consecutive sentences for robbery and assault with dangerous weapon may be an inappropriate means to accomplish that result and more impregnable sentence may result if the offense is charged and sentenced under statute providing that robbery as crime of violence may be punished more severely when committed with a dangerous weapon and statute authorizing indeterminate sentence up to life for crimes of violence when committed with a dangerous weapon. Id.

It is proper to increase punishment where there have been convictions under the conventional robbery statute and under statute prohibiting assaults with a dangerous weapon by imposing consecutive sentences. United States v. J. L. Suggs and C. Blair (1967, 269 F. Supp. 732).

Defendant, who allegedly committed crime of assault with a dangerous weapon in parking lot of store or near door to store, and who allegedly committed a robbery in office of store could be given consecutive sentences upon being convicted for both crimes. Id.

Consecutive sentences for two separate offenses

The distinctions that assault and petit larceny are separate and distinct offenses requiring different elements of proof, and that one is a crime of general intent against the person, and the other a crime of specific intent against property, are no longer conclusive in determining the legality of consecutive sentences for two crimes committed in a single course of conduct. G. Mahoney v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 243 A. 2d 684).

The compelling reasons which call for the application of the rule of lenity are absent in this case, and there is no substantial doubt Congress would have intended, in the discretion of the court, that consecutive punishment be imposed for historically separate offenses, against different societal interests, for which it has provided separate deterrents. Id.

Constitutionality

This section is valid. Pope v. Huff (1944, 141 F. 2d 727, 79 U. S. App. D. C. 18).

Construction

The Federal mail robbery statute and the District of Columbia robbery and crime of violence statutes are applicable throughout the District of Columbia. United States v. W. B. Spears (1971, 449 F. 2d 946, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 284).

Where evidence in proof of count II which charged defendant under District of Columbia robbery and crime of violence statutes with robbing post office custodian of money showed that the defendant actually consummated the same robbery he was charged with attempting in count I under the Federal mail robbery statute, defendant could not be convicted of both the attempt and the completed robbery since Congress did not intend that a statute drawn to proscribe attempt should also support a separate conviction for completed offense when defendant is charged with and convicted of substantially the same crime he is charged with attempting. Id.

Federal statute [Pub. L. 90-226] for District of Columbia, defining crime of burglary in first degree and increasing minimum and maximum punishments therefor and increasing minimum punishment for robbery by amending prior laws on both crimes became effective at 3:05 p.m. when it was signed by the President, and not before. United States v. R. L. Casson (1970, 434 F. 2d 415, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 141).

Notation on federal bill as to time of its approval by the President, though such notation is not required by Constitution or statute, constitutes contemporaneous memorandum and is best evidence of fact that nature of case permits. Id.

Under statutory provision that United States statutes at large shall be "legal evidence of laws," it is held that bill was approved at time endorsed on official document and stated in Statutes at Large rather than at time alleged in hearsay affidavits based upon hearsay newspaper statements; such hearsay newspaper statements are not sufficient basis for overcoming best evidence of which case was susceptible and presumption of regularity. Id.

Ancient distinction that robbery offends person and burglary habitation has not been obliterated by Congress with respect to District of Columbia even where robbery inside dwelling follows closely on heels of housebreaking of that dwelling. Irby v. United States (D.C.D.C. 1965, 250 F. Supp. 983).

Cross-examination

Record of prosecution for robbery and other offenses wherein defendant, who was denied bifurcated trial, claimed want of criminal responsibility and testified as to his state of mind did not show that the trial court, in its rulings on particular questions asked on cross-examination of defendant, substantially departed from court's ruling that it would allow cross-examination as to defendant's state of mind but not as to possible participation in offense. United States v. R. A. Grimes (1969, 421 F. 2d 1119, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 184).

Cross-examination of defendant's wife, concerning her alleged statements to officers, although she had said nothing of these matters on direct examination and they did not directly challenge her direct testimony, was not proper on any ground and required reversal, despite sufficiency of other evidence and lack of objection, and was not cured by instruction that testimony could be considered only on question of wife's credibility. C. Dixon v. United States (1962, 303 F. 2d 226, 112 U.S. App. D.C. 366).

Defense, requisites of

In prosecution for rape and robbery, the defendant did not have the obligation of making out a complete defense. McKenzie v. United States (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

Determination of sentence

Although defendant, who was found guilty of robbery by a jury, continued to assert his innocence at allocution, this fact could not properly be considered in determining sentence to be imposed. V. E. Scott v. United States (1969, 419 F. 2d 264, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 377).

The court's belief that defendant committed perjury on witness stand in denying participation in robbery with which he was charged could not properly be considered in determining sentence to be imposed. Id.

Directed verdict

Where foreman of jury in robbery prosecution sent trial judge note stating that jury was unable to reach unanimous decision and felt that more conclusive evidence was needed to bring about full vote, and that seven jurors were of opinion that defendant was guilty, four that he was not guilty, and one was undecided, note neither compelled nor warranted directed verdict of not guilty. H. Mullin, Jr. v. United States (1966, 356 F. 2d 368, 123 U.S. App. D.C. 29).

Failure of defendant to object when mistrial was granted and when order was carried out and jury was dispersed barred subsequent claim by defendant that he was entitled to directed verdict of not guilty. Id.

Double jeopardy

The constitutional immunity from double jeopardy is a personal right which, if not affirmatively pleaded by defendant at time of trial, will be regarded as waived. United States v. C. E. Scott (1972, 464 F. 2d 832, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Where defendant did not raise at his second trial the issue that his acquittal of armed robbery at first trial was acquittal of unarmed robbery as well, defendant waived the defense of double jeopardy. Id.

Where first jury returned verdict of not guilty of armed robbery but was unable to agree as to whether defendant was an unarmed robber and mistrial was declared, the acquittal of armed robbery was not an acquittal of unarmed robbery charge and double jeopardy prohibition did not preclude retrial of unarmed robbery charge. Id.

Where purpose and effect of proceeding in juvenile court were to provide a prompt preliminary hearing in order to set a date for trial, if allegations of petitions were denied, or to continue case pending completion of full social study and recommendations for disposition of child, case had not reached stage at which juvenile's liberty had been placed in jeopardy by his acknowledgment that he held a toy gun during alleged robbery, and when trial judge subsequently waived jurisdiction to district court for trial, indictment was not subject to dismissal on ground of double jeopardy. United States v. Dickerson (1959, 271 F. 2d 487, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 221).

Due process

In order to establish denial of due process in pretrial photographic identification, defendant must make showing that the photographic identification procedure was so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. United States v. C. J. Ash, Jr. (1972, 461 F. 2d 92, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 1; cert. granted 92 S. Ct. 2436, 407 U.S. 909).

Defendant's claim that continuation of his robbery trial, after his codefendant changed his plea to guilty at completion of government's case and after trial judge, in questioning codefendant, elicited statement that implicated defendant, constituted denial of due process is not valid, either on theory that trial judge, having heard statement, would be prejudiced against defendant or on theory that jury must have realized that codefendant had changed his plea and must have been improperly influenced thereby in passing on defendant's guilt. V. E. Scott v. United States of America (1969, 419 F. 2d 264, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 377).

Elements of offense

In District of Columbia, robbery retains common-law elements modified only to extent that Congress has enlarged it to encompass stealthy as well as forcible takings. Irby v. United States (D.C.D.C. 1965, 250 F. Supp. 983).

Robbery conviction requires proof of taking from person of another by sudden or stealthy seizure or snatching, or by putting in fear. G. R. Hunt v. United States (1963, 316 F. 2d 642, 115 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

"Robbery", as used in this section, means robbery in the usual common-law sense as expanded to include sudden or stealthy seizure or snatching. United States v. Mann et al. (D.C.D.C. 1954, 119 F. Supp. 406).

Evidence

Government is not guilty of any impropriety in failing to produce photographs of defendants, made on day of arrest, before they were demanded by defense counsel. United States v. P. J. Trantham, Jr. (1971, 448 F. 2d 1036, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 113).

Prosecution may not affirmatively use at trial defendant's testimony in support of motion to suppress evidence. W. E. Pendergast v. United States (1969, 416 F. 2d 776, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 20, cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 1782).

— Admissibility

Admission of officer's testimony of identification of defendant, at time and place close to offense, by victim who was tendered for cross-examination was not error. United States v. J. E. Ruth (1972, 461 F. 2d 1213, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Where officer had testified on direct as to victim's identifying defendant shortly after crime occurred, permitting officer to give same testimony on rebuttal after victim had recanted identification testimony was not prejudicial. Id.

Where testimony offered by defendant in prosecution for armed bank robbery which was excluded constituted only collateral impeachment, the exclusion was not reversible error and would not have been so even if testimony had been offered by defense counsel. United States v. C. J. Ash, Jr. (1972, 461 F. 2d 92, 149 U.S. App. D.C. —; cert. granted 92 S.Ct. 2436, 407 U.S. 909).

Photographs of defendant and codefendant, which were constitutionally impermissible because shown to witnesses in violation of the two defendants' right to counsel, were not otherwise admissible in bank robbery trial because subject of photographic identification had been "opened up" by the counsel for codefendant. Id.

Defense counsel's accession to procedure whereby all five photographs of defendant, codefendant and three others would be admitted so as to avoid prejudice against defendant, and be admitted by stipulation to avoid dispute whether the photographs, already held admissible, should be offered by codefendant's counsel or by the prosecutor, did not waive defendant's objection to the admission of the photographs in evidence on constitutional grounds. Id.

Where police officers who had observed the defendant entering apartment building returned with robbery victim to apartment building and began searching same after being advised of robbery and, when defendant opened his door, victim identified him as robber, officers who entered room, took custody of defendant and companion, and seized toy gun found under mattress of bed in room acted reasonably and toy gun is admissible. United States v. R. L. Williams (1972, 454 F. 2d 1016, 147 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

In prosecution for armed robbery of bus passengers and assault with dangerous weapon, even if the defendant's statement, "I didn't mean to do it" made after he was arrested and brought back to the scene and confronted by outraged passengers was somehow attributable to hostile confrontation of passengers, it was not of character to justify finding that it undermined fairness of trial, considering evidence as whole. United States v. I. Porcha (1971, 450 F. 2d 697, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 236).

Robbery victim's testimony identifying pistols as resembling very closely those used at robbery by the defendant and coparticipant who was identified by name, and his testimony that he had identified both defendant and coparticipant, together with stipulation that money had been found on coparticipant at station house, provides adequate proof of joint participation to warrant admission of evidence associated with coparticipant against the defendant. United States v. L. H. Thurman (1970, 436 F. 2d 280, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 126).

Police officers, who observed automobile occupied by five men parked in front of a bank and saw the automobile make a U-turn and follow an overdue delivery truck whose driver had just left bank, were authorized in stopping suspicious-acting automobile and detaining the automobile and its occupants for brief questioning, and when officer observed from outside automobile what appeared to be shotgun barrel protruding from underneath the seat, seizure of shotgun was not illegal as actions did not exceed in scope what would be dictated by purpose to disarm, and shotgun is admissible. T. R. Young v. United States (1970, 435 F. 2d 405, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 333).

Payroll envelopes, which were identified as having been taken in armed robbery and which were found on or under couch or daybed in living room at time of arrest, were admissible in evidence since they were properly seized at time of arrest which occurred prior to United States Supreme Court decision limiting scope of search incident to arrest to the person or immediate surrounding area. G. Sutton, Jr. v. United States (1970, 434 F. 2d 462, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 188; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1676, 402 U.S. 988).

Testimony of circumstances surrounding defendant's arrest by officers pursuant to a warrant for his arrest, not for the robberies and murder for which he was being tried, but for armed assault on police officer, offered as indicating consciousness of guilt or resistance to arrest, was admissible in context in which case was tried. C. Gregory v. United States (1966, 369 F. 2d 185, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

Admission of hearsay testimony was not prejudicially erroneous where direct testimony affirmed hearsay. R. Williams v. United States (1964, 338 F. 2d 530, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 190).

Case wherein defendant was convicted of robbery, resting upon admission of evidence claimed on appeal to have been inadmissible, was not one calling for exercise of reviewing court's discretion under rule permitting reversal for plain error not brought to attention of trial court. D. Baxter v. United States (1964, 337 F. 2d 547, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 151).

Evidence that defendant, who was charged with robbery, at time of his apprehension had in his possession an automobile driver's license bearing a name other than his own was irrelevant, but admission of such evidence did not require a reversal when jury trial was waived and evidence of guilt was strong. L. Fennel v. United States (1963, 320 F. 2d 784, 116 U.S. App. D.C. 62).

Even though oral and written confessions of defendants made before preliminary hearing may have been inadmissible for violation of rule requiring preliminary hearing without unnecessary delay, defendants' reaffirmation and enlargement of the formal written confession after preliminary hearing, including re-enactment of the crime, were not inadmissible as being the fruit of the original confessions, where the reaffirmation came within an hour after defendants had received both the judicial warning and their counsel's advice that they had right to remain silent and that any statements made by them could be used against them, and the defendants were not merely asked to mechanically state whether the terms of their earlier confession were true and their confessions were reread to them and were reaffirmed, and the defendants made highly incriminating admissions at scene of crime, and in their colloquy with the person who had been robbed and a witness who had been present at time of robbery. Goldsmith & Carter v. United States (1960, 277 F. 2d 355, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 305, certiorari denied 81 S. Ct. 106, 364 U.S. 863, 5 L. Ed. 2d 86).

The mere fact that a confession is made to the police, or while an accused is in custody, does not destroy its value as evidence, and once an accused has been legally charged and is in lawful detention, police interrogation is not forbidden. Id.

In prosecution for robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon, admission of police officer's testimony that before preliminary hearing the defendants had orally admitted the crimes in officer's presence was not prejudicial, where trial court gave careful instructions to jury to disregard officer's testimony and officer's testimony was cumulative and testimony could have had no measurable impact alongside the overwhelming evidence of guilt from other sources. Id.

Where certain challenged evidence, in a robbery prosecution, was not shown to have consisted of statements made during illegal detention and did not result from police interrogation, it could not be deemed inadmissible. Rogers v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 902, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 65, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1127, 359 U.S. 994, 3 L. Ed. 2d 982).

Where defendant, after arrest but prior to arraignment, denied having any connection with robbery but admitted being in company of two other men, charged with same offense, shortly before and shortly after the robbery, admission of evidence of defendant's statement was not error where statement was not claimed to have been coerced. Sykes v. United States (1944, 143 F. 2d 140, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 97).

Housebreaking, robbery and burglary are merely aggravated forms of larceny and evidence competent in one case is competent, also, in the others. Edwards v. United States (1944, 139 F. 2d 365, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 226, certiorari denied 64 S. Ct. 523, 321 U.S. 769, 88 L. Ed. 1064).

In prosecution for robbery of a watch, a purse, a key, and $37 in money, admission of a watch, purse, key, and a $5 bill, without testimony either of prosecuting witness or officer who allegedly took the articles from defendant, constituted reversible error upon ground that identification of articles was insufficient. Smith v. United States (1946, 157 F. 2d 705, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 296).

Where testimony connecting defendant with another crime which had no connection with armed robbery for which he was being tried, was elicited by defendant's own counsel on cross-examination, admission of the testimony was no ground for reversal of conviction. Felton v. United States (1948, 170 F. 2d 153, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 277, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 18, 335 U.S. 831, 93 L. Ed. 385).

— Burden of proof

Where defendant, accused of murder and robbery, introduced evidence that on date thereof he was suffering from mental disease or defect, it became duty of government to prove him sane beyond reasonable doubt at the time of commission of crimes charged. H. S. Carey v. United States (1961, 296 F. 2d 422, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 300).

Where there is evidence that accused was of unsound mind when offenses occurred, prosecution is under necessity of establishing to satisfaction of jury beyond reasonable doubt that offenses were not result of accused's insanity. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 232).

In order to justify conviction, where there is evidence that accused was of unsound mind when offenses occurred, proof, considered with presumption of sanity, must exclude beyond reasonable doubt the hypothesis that conduct indicted was product of a diseased mind or mental defect. Id.

— Examination of witnesses

In prosecution for robbery, conspiracy to commit robbery, and for carrying a deadly weapon without a license, requiring counsel for one defendant to ask a more precise question than question counsel asked a witness for prosecution as to whether such witness was convicted several times of prostitution during specified years was within discretion of trial court. Bundy v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 694, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 12, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 638, 343 U.S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

— Production of evidence

In robbery prosecution, wherein after direct examination of witness called by the United States was concluded, defendant moved for production of witness' statement made to the police, and when prosecutor indicated he did not have the statement court told counsel to ask policeman for the statement when he "takes the stand," such action was error since the statute requires production of witness' statement for use in his cross-examination, and court by its action required defendant's counsel to proceed with cross-examination of witness without it. W. H. Leach v. United States (1963, 320 F. 2d 670, 115 U.S. App. D.C. 351).

In robbery prosecution, wherein after direct examination of witness called by the United States was concluded, defendant moved for production of witness' statement made to police, error in instructing counsel to ask policeman for statement when he "takes the stand" was harmless where when policeman took the stand entire police file was produced and made available to defense counsel, and after counsel read the file, the matter of the statement was not pursued. Id.

In prosecution for robbery, conspiracy to commit robbery, and for carrying a deadly weapon without a license, action of trial court in not requiring production under subpoena of arrest record of a witness for prosecution was not prejudicial to defendant where police officer testified he had no arrest record of witness by name contained in subpoena and did not know such witness used other names mentioned by him by counsel for defendant, and counsel for defendant did not during trial procure any further subpoena for arrest record of witness under any other name. Bundy v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 694, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 12, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 638, 343 U.S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

— Sufficiency

Evidence sustained conviction of first-degree felony-murder, first-degree premeditated murder and armed robbery. United States v. R. L. Mack (1972, 466 F. 2d 333, 151 U.S. App. D.C. 162; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 297, 409 U.S. 952).

Evidence on issue of joint criminal venture and possession of purse and shotgun found in speeding automobile, occupied by defendants as driver and passenger, a short time after a purse had been forcibly taken from a pedestrian by two men, one of whom was armed with pistol, was sufficient to support conviction of armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon and possession of unregistered firearm, notwithstanding that at least one of four or five original occupants of vehicle had fled and that identification of defendants was "inconclusive" at best. United States v. J. E. McCall (1972, 460 F. 2d 952, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 444).

Evidence that, inter alia, the defendant, and two other men entered store together, that they conversed together until other customers left the store, that defendant did not lie on the floor when one of the codefendants, with a gun, announced a "stick-up" and said "To the floor," and that defendant moved from near the door to near the cash register after a codefendant ordered store employee to open it is sufficient to support defendant's conviction for armed robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon, and conflicting testimony of defendant and his codefendants whereby they all sought to establish that defendant and one of his codefendants were innocent bystanders did not destroy the permissible inference of defendant's guilt. United States v. W. D. Lumpkin (1971, 448 F. 2d 1085, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 162).

Evidence, including testimony as to statements of the defendant and codefendant describing the events and circumstances at time of shooting of cab driver, sustained convictions of robbery and felony murder. United States v. J. R. Carter (1971, 445 F. 2d 669, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 193; cert. denied 92 S. Ct. 988, 405 U.S. 932).

Evidence, including permissible inference jury was permitted to draw from fact that the defendant was found within an hour of larceny in exclusive possession of recently stolen truck, supported convictions of kidnapping of truck helper, armed robbery, and assault with a dangerous weapon. United States v. L. B. Wolford (1971, 444 F. 2d 876, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Complaining witness' testimony that he was robbed at gunpoint is sufficient to sustain conviction for armed robbery even though the weapon used was not put in evidence. United States v. R. Stevenson (1971, 443 F. 2d 661, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 246).

Evidence that the defendant was seen entering getaway car, carrying a gun, some ten minutes before robbery, accompanied by one of confessed active perpetrators, that someone drove getaway car, and that the defendant was seen with two of active robbers one day later is sufficient to take to jury aiding and abetting case against defendant for entering bank with intent to commit robbery therein, bank robbery, armed robbery, and assault with a dangerous weapon. United States v. T. Parker (1971, 442 F. 2d 779, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 57).

Evidence of the circumstances of participation in robbery culminating in physical possession by the defendant of a portion of the money is sufficient warrant the verdict. United States v. J. L. Cunningham (1970, 436 F. 2d 907, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 177).

In determining whether evidence is sufficient to sustain conviction, the rule is not that inference, no matter how reasonable, is to be rejected if it in turn depends upon another reasonable inference; rather, the question is merely whether total evidence, including reasonable inferences, if put together is sufficient to warrant jury to conclude that defendant is guilty beyond reasonable doubt. United States v. T. D. Harris (1970, 435 F. 2d 74, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 270; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1675, 402 U.S. 986).

In a criminal case, standard, stated in terms of probability from individual juror's point of view, for determining whether evidence is sufficient to sustain conviction, is whether it is so probable that the defendant is guilty that it would be unreasonable to believe otherwise. Id.

In robbery prosecution of pickpocket who allegedly took wallet from purse of lady in line of people outside White House grounds waiting to gain entrance to observe children's annual Easter egg roll, evidence was sufficient to permit the jury to conclude beyond reasonable doubt that the defendant gained possession of the purse from the immediate actual possession of the lady. R. T. Davis, Jr. v. United States (1970, 433 F. 2d 1222, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 116).

Evidence in this case, including evidence of defendant's in-trial identification and testimonial references to pre-trial forerunners, sustained conviction for robbery and assault with dangerous weapon. United States v. T. McNair (1970, 433 F. 2d 1132, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 26).

Evidence, in prosecution arising out of armed robbery of a grocery supermarket, was sufficient to present question for jury as to guilt of the defendant, even though two employee witnesses of the supermarket, who actually saw bandits depart, could not identify the defendant as either one of the armed robbers who came into the store or as driver of the automobile in which the getaway was accomplished. United States v. C. Johnson (1970, 432 F. 2d 626, 139 U.S. App. D.C. 193; cert. denied. 91 S. Ct. 257, 400 U.S. 949).

The evidence portrayed in a view most favorable to the Government, of defendant's presence at scene of crime, his slight association with actual perpetrator, and subsequent flight, did not sustain conviction for robbery. J. L. Bailey v. United States (1969, 416 F. 2d 1110, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 95).

In this case in light of the evidence on issue of whether offense was product of mental illness, conviction for robbery of property belonging to United States, assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying dangerous weapon would be affirmed. T. H. Adams v. United States (1969, 413 F. 2d 411, 134 U.S. App. D.C. 137).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain robbery conviction of pickpockets. R. T. Davis, Jr., et ano. v. United States (1969, 409 F. 2d 458, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 172).

In a robbery prosecution, government made out a case sufficient to go to the jury. H. J. Macklin v. United States (1969, 409 F. 2d 174, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 139).

Conflicting evidence in robbery prosecution was sufficient for jury. E. Trimble v. United States (1966, 369 F. 2d 950, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

Unchallenged testimony by robbery victim that someone actually saw defendant take wallet out of her purse, together with evidence that defendant was at the bus stop where crime occurred and was found to have stolen money in his possession, was sufficient to sustain conviction for robbery. Jackson v. United States (1966, 359 F. 2d 260, 123 U.S. App. D.C. 276).

Evidence sustained conviction for robbery. R. L. E. Smith v. United States (1964, 340 F. 2d 797, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 272).

Evidence was sufficient to permit convictions under indictment charging robbery and assault with intent to commit robbery. J. Rogers and H. Waldon v. United States (1963, 318 F. 2d 223, 115 U.S. App. D.C. 252).

Evidence sustained conviction for robbery. R. X. Williams v. United States (1963, 321 F. 2d 744, 116 U.S. App. D.C. 131).

Evidence supported conviction of robbery. Thompson v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 652, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 235). See, also, Bullock v. United States (1946, 157 F. 2d 702, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 271, certiorari denied 67 S. Ct. 860, 330 U.S. 829, 91 L. Ed. 1278).

One could be convicted of robbery on uncorroborated testimony of complainant. Thompson v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 652, 88 U. S. App. D. C. 235).

In robbery prosecution, where defendant claimed that he acted under compulsion by another after having intended only an extortion, evidence justified conviction. Vinci v. United States (1947, 159 F. 2d 777, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 386).

— Suppression

Where police officer had probable cause to arrest defendant for crime of robbery, trial court correctly refused to suppress victim's wallet, that was found by police in police car in which defendant was being transported upon his apprehension shortly after crime. United States v. T. A. Horton (1971, 440 F. 2d 253, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 225).

Ordinarily, one seeking to challenge legality of search or seizure must establish that he was victim of alleged invasion of privacy. F. Hair & J. I. Burroughs v. United States (1961, 289 F. 2d 894, 110 U.S. App. D.C. 153).

Evidence obtained under warrant issued on basis of observations derived by police officers from illegal entry is inadmissible. Id.

In prosecution for robbery, defendant was not entitled to suppression of gun which was taken from defendant's automobile after his arrest by police upon a warrant. Bennett v. United States (1957, 249 F. 2d 505, 101 U. S. App. D. C. 413).

Ex post facto

Statute providing increased punishment for acts committed "prior to the date of enactment of this Act [Pub. L. 90-226]," is not on its face ex post facto. United States v. R. L. Casson (1970, 434 F. 2d 415, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 141).

If legislation must pass notice test to escape ex post facto condemnation, public is charged with knowledge of all published information concerning congressional bill which is available during entire legislative process. Id.

If notice is required to avoid ex post facto condemnation of application of statute increasing penalties for certain offenses, congressional record and documents published by Congress proving that bill and all its provisions were in public domain for over six months, received widest publicity and full disclosure by Congress, and distribution of more than 100,000 copies of bill in exact form in which it passed are more than adequate notice to public of contents of bill. Id.

Actual notice to a particular individual that legislation has passed or is about to be passed or approved is not prerequisite to application of act, as against ex post facto condemnation. Id.

That staff members of congressional committees accommodate public, on request, by informing them of status of bills in various stages of legislative process is a matter of common knowledge of which reviewing court takes judicial notice in considering on ex post facto claim, how much notice was available to public in respect to legislation being considered by Congress. Id.

Force and violence

Intent of this section is to denounce pocket picking and the like, together with common-law robbery, under the single general name of "robbery" and though it is true that the provision for "sudden and stealthy seizure or snatching" is preceded by the phrase "by force and violence"; yet the requirement for force is satisfied within the sense of this section by an actual physical taking of the property from the person of another even without his knowledge and consent, and though the property be unattached to his person. Turner v. United States (1927, 16 F. 2d 535, 57 App. D.C. 39).

Under this section conviction for "robbery" may be had though victim did not have knowledge of the theft at the time, since "stealth" necessarily connotes lack of knowledge on part of victim. Spencer v. United States (1941, 116 F. 2d 801, 73 App. D.C. 98).

The force used to remove money from victim's pocket is sufficient "force or violence" within this section defining "robbery" as a taking by "force or violence," whether against resistance or by sudden or stealthy seizure or snatching, or by putting in fear. Id.

Habeas corpus

Where petitioners were arrested in Pennsylvania, charged with committing certain crimes in the District of Columbia, habeas corpus proceedings would be proper to raise jurisdictional questions respecting their removal to the District. U.S. ex rel. Miller et al. v. Reing (D.C. Pa. 1949, 81 F. Supp. 367).

Harmless error

In view of clear evidence that the defendant aided and abetted his confederate who was armed with a gun, any error concerned with alleged prolixity of indictment that charged both armed robbery and robbery, or any other claim of defect in presentation of two theories of robbery to jury, is harmless. United States v. I. Porcha (1971, 450 F. 2d 697, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 236).

Identification

While lineup was not conducted under most ideal circumstances it was not so impermissibly suggestive to misidentification as to preclude identification testimony by eyewitnesses who had ample opportunity to view defendant during armed robbery. United States v. G. H. Neverson (1972, 463 F. 2d 1224, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 133).

Where circumstances of photographic identification of defendant by one of the eyewitnesses was fully explored at pretrial hearing and there was no suggestion that police had acted wilfully, recklessly or in bad faith in not producing the photographs which made up group from which witness selected defendant's picture at a time before the importance of recording photographs used in group was emphasized by any court, failure of police to produce photographs at trial, in which Government did not rely on photographic identification and made no reference to it, was not prejudicial to defendant who asserted that failure to produce pictures circumscribed his right to explore fairness of identification process. United States v. H. R. Thomas, Jr. (1972, 463 F. 2d 314, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 368; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 198, 409 U.S. 870).

Although absence of photographs used in making up group of pictures shown to eyewitness who picked defendant's picture was a factor to be considered in weighing evidence concerning identification of defendant by eyewitness, the absence of photographs did not create any presumption of impropriety in identification process. Id.

Where witness was asked to come to police station to identify a certain credit card that had been taken from him by a robber, and, on arrival at station and being told that particular officer was not there, decided to wait for officer in lobby, whereupon, while waiting, he saw two officers bring in two men and saw them go into another room, and immediately told person seated at desk that one of men looked like man who robbed him that day, and where police officers testified that they had not intended any confrontation, confrontation at police station was not constitutionally defective by reason of fact that it occurred without benefit of counsel. United States v. J. A. Conner (1972, 462 F. 2d 296, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 192).

Where defendants were represented at lineup by counsel, lineup itself met requirements of Sixth Amendment, photograph of that lineup was completely neutral and wholly exact reproduction, witness requested, at time she was leaving lineup, to see photograph of lineup, Government complied with her request seven months after lineup and two weeks immediately prior to trial and witness initiated discussion of lineup photograph from which she identified defendants as the two robbers, photograph of lineup was not subject to suppression because counsel for defendants were not present when witness viewed pho-

Where photograph depicted lineup which was fairly conducted, during which defendants were represented by counsel, witness and officer who conducted interview with witness were vigorously cross-examined regarding the interview at which witness identified defendants as robbers from the lineup photograph and there was nothing improper in manner in which photograph was presented to witness, defendants' right to due process was not violated by the witness' pretrial photographic identification. Id.

Witness' pretrial identification of defendants in photograph of lineup at which she had not made identification because of lighting conditions was not tainted by other showings of photographs of the defendants to the witness. Id.

Where witness to robbery and murder was in close proximity to the robbers and had ample opportunity to observe them at time of robbery and murder, witness had independent source from which she might attempt in-court identification of accused at trial, regardless of whether witness' identification of defendants from photograph of lineup was improper. Id.

Police have authority to secure suspect's participation in a timely lineup, with counsel present, even though he is eligible for release on recognizance or bail, because that is the means that best combines and assures both effectiveness and integrity of law enforcement investigation procedures. United States v. C. J. Ash, Jr. (1972, 461 F. 2d 92, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 1; cert. granted 92 S. Ct. 2436, 407 U.S. 909).

Presentation by prosecution of photographs of accused to government witnesses, subsequent to arrest and on the eve of trial, was like a lineup as being a critical stage of the prosecution, and required presence of counsel for the accused. Id.

Fact that employee of robbed liquor store was unable to identify defendant as robber did not establish that in-court identification by part-owner of liquor store did not have source independent of photographic and lineup identifications where employee and part-owner observed robbers from different angles and under different stresses. United States v. L. T. Lee (1972, 459 F. 2d 1365, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 341).

Where victims of robbery reported that one robber had short hair and the other had "an African haircut," photographic identification from nine photographs of five men with bush haircuts and four with shorter hair was not impermissibly suggestive. Id.

Where police had probable cause for arrest of defendant following armed robbery, procedure in taking defendant to scene of crime less than 15 minutes after robbery for identification did not give rise to undue suggestability, evidence of identification of defendant at scene was admissible in subsequent prosecution. United States v. J. Moore (1972, 459 F. 2d 1360, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 336).

On-the-scene identification of the defendant, conducted within minutes of his arrest as robbery suspect, was not unduly suggestive even though an unusual number of policemen were present, defendant was handcuffed when brought before the witnesses, eyewitnesses were in state of nervousness and counsel was absent, and identification did not violate Fifth and Sixth Amendments. United States v. W. A. Hines (1972, 455 F. 2d 1317, 147 U.S. App. D.C. 249; cert. denied 92 S. Ct. 2427, 406 U.S. 975).

Where no suggestion was made to robbery victim that defendant was believed to be one of the two robbers, but only that victim was asked to view two men because they seemed to fit descriptions victim had furnished the police and identification confrontation occurred within an hour to an hour and a half of robbery, the identification confrontation at victim's home shortly after robbery did not violate the defendant's right to due process. United States v. F. Perry (1971, 449 F. 2d 1026, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 364).

Identification of the defendants who were charged with armed robbery and assault with a deadly weapon, by victim, after defendants were picked up near scene of the crime and brought back to a squad car did not violate the defendants' due process rights on theory identification was tainted by suggestive circumstances surrounding it since the victim had given officer a detailed description of the robbers, had participated in the search for them and in fact had pointed out defendants to the arresting officer. United States v. J. Wilson (1971, 449 F. 2d 1005, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 343).

Since only a few minutes elapsed from time of liquor store robbery until arrest of defendant in waiting room of dentist, and one of the owners of the liquor store, who had observed robber for several minutes in well-lit liquor store, identified defendant as the robber, the confrontation was not so unnecessarily suggestive as to deny defendant due process. United States v. D. O. Miller (1971, 449 F. 2d 974, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 312).

Where robbery took place under excellent lighting condition and complaining witness had a good look at the defendant's face and on the same morning was called to the police station to view by himself a book of approximately 30 colored photographs, 10 of which were of persons of the same age of accused and were not of the typical mug shot variety, there was no showing of possibility of suggestivity in the process of selecting the defendant's picture from array even though prosecution was unable to regroup the photographs that had since been reassembled into other books. United States v. R. Clemons (1971, 445 F. 2d 711, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 235; cert. denied 92 S. Ct. 322, 404 U.S. 956).

Evidence that, prior to lineup, victim had unhesitatingly selected the defendant's photograph out of a group of seven photographs shown to her is not subject to condemnation under rule banning use of "mug shots," even though a jury may have conjectured that there was prior suspicion of defendant, where photograph was an ordinary snapshot and had no markings to suggest prior criminal behavior. United States v. L. P. Hallman (1971, 439 F. 2d 603, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 93).

District of Columbia Court of General Sessions judge, sitting as a magistrate, had judicial power to issue process, short of commanding formal arrest, requiring the person identified from photographs as possible perpetrator of rape to participate in proper lineup. C. Wise, Jr. v. The Honorable Tim Murphy et al. (D.C. App. 1971, 275 A. 2d 205).

Where victim of rape at knife point stated that one photograph among pictures of "possible suspects" revealed features similar to those of the man who assaulted her, requiring the person identified as a possible perpetrator to stand in lineup under constitutional safeguards would not violate Fourth Amendment requirements of reasonableness even in absence of facts warranting formal arrest for rape. Id.

Police seeking order to compel person identified from photographs as possible perpetrator of rape to appear for lineup must specify how they arrived at their conclusion that the individuals in the group of photographs shown to the victim were possible suspects. Id.

Where the validity of lineup is challenged by defendant on ground of asserted absence of counsel, burden is on the government, at least in the case of routine lineups, to establish that counsel was present. United States v. J. C. Garner and T. C. Parker (1970, 439 F. 2d 525, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 15; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1531, 402 U.S. 930).

Deficiency of lineup identification arising from absence of counsel is not cured by conducting second lineup, with counsel present, shortly after the initial lineup. Id.

Record, including sketch of robber made by witness, a commercial artist, supported finding that there was an independent source for courtroom identification by such witness, notwithstanding deficiency as to intervening lineup identification. Id.

Evidence of identification of the defendant as robber after defendant was brought back to scene of robbery within hour after it occurred is admissible. United States v. J. L. Cunningham (1970, 436 F. 2d 907, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 177).

Evidence, disclosing that the four defendants dressed in casual attire were placed in lineup with two men with coats and ties and that the sawed-off shotgun which was seized at time of their arrests and which was similar to the one used in robbery was on view in lineup room into which robbery victim was brought and asked to make identifications, raised substantial issue as to whether the lineup was so unnecessarily suggestive and conducive to irreparable mistaken identification as to result in denial of due process and a remand is required for elucidation of issues surrounding identification. T. R. Young v. United States (1970, 435 F. 2d 405, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 333).

Identification of the defendant at scene of crime, about ten minutes after holdup by the two victims thereof who had a good opportunity to observe assailant and had given police a description which corresponded with the defendant who at time of arrest was wearing clothing similar to that described by victims and possessed a gun which looked like weapon used in holdup, did not deprive defendant of constitutional rights, although both victims were together when they identified defendant. United States v. J. H. L. Wilson (1970, 435 F. 2d 403, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 331).

Even though confrontation is inherently suggestive because of presentation of a single suspect, in view of countervailing considerations that prompt, on-the-scene identifications are likely to promote fairness by enhancing reliability of identifications and permit expeditious release of innocent subjects, testimony concerning on-the-scene confrontations is admissible in criminal prosecutions. Id.

If it is feasible for each witness, victim or otherwise, to stand alone when asked to make an identification, this is the procedure which should be followed in on-the-scene confrontations. Id.

Since, in addition to two eyewitnesses who identified defendant at lineup, there was a third eyewitness who saw defendant before robbery and during robbery over period of two minutes from distance as close as two feet and who identified defendant at trial, admission at trial of evidence of two lineup identifications of defendant could not have been prejudicial. United States v. R. Queen (1970, 435 F. 2d 66, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 262).

Presence of attorney from legal aid agency on behalf of each suspect, including the defendant, placed in lineup, satisfied constitutional requirement of counsel at lineup even though the "substitute counsel" had not been formally appointed to represent defendant. Id.

Evidence of identification of the defendant at lineup, not otherwise challenged as unfair, is admissible although assigned counsel had not been notified and was not present, since substitute counsel of legal aid agency was present. United States v. T. Kirby (1970, 427 F. 2d 610, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 340).

Testimony that witness saw the defendant confront victim, that witness heard defendant demand money and saw defendant run away when police arrived, and that witness identified defendant immediately after police pursued and brought him back to scene of crime was properly admitted as on-the-scene identification even though no counsel was present. O. Solomon v. United States (1969, 408 F. 2d 1306, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 103).

The proper way to raise a Wade objection is by a motion to suppress identification testimony before trial; that procedure allows a suppression hearing and a decision on disputed evidence before a jury is empaneled, and promotes an orderly and uninterrupted trial; a distinctly second-best procedure is a defense motion to suppress during trial. Id.

It would be better practice if district judges, when confronted by cases that appear to involve identification testimony, would on the record and out of presence of jury inquire of defense counsel whether they object on Wade or Stovall grounds to any identification testimony that might be offered; such procedure may also be performed by district judge hearing pretrial motions in a case, if any such motions are made. Id.

— In-court

Evidence supported finding that each of witnesses who identified defendants as the persons who robbed restaurant had seen defendants under circumstances affording an independent basis for their subsequent in-court identifications, although photographs had been used in identification process. R. E. Matthews v. United States (1971, 449 F. 2d 985, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Although victim of robbery and assault picked defendant out of group sitting in General Sessions courtroom at time when defendant was not accompanied by counsel, since such identification followed three photographic identifications based upon face-to-face encounter taking place only a few hours before first photographic identification, the General Sessions identification did not taint the later in-court identification by victim and the in-court identification was not improper. United States v. J. E. York (1970, 321 F. Supp. 539).

The Government has the burden of presenting clear and convincing evidence that in-court identification of defendant by victim of robbery and assault is based on other than an illegally obtained pretrial identification; but there is no presumption of invalidity. Id.

—Lineup

Where trial court denied defendant's motion for an order for a lineup at which he could test ability of two witnesses to identify him in unsuggestive circumstances and, though there was no misstatement as such, prosecutor's statements gave impression that there were two eyeball witnesses for each of the robberies, and prosecutor failed to say there was only one witness from each robbery, and person who failed to identify defendant at lineup was only person who witnessed both robberies and the only government witness to first robbery was "prodred" to make an identification at a palpably over-suggestive showup, interest of justice would best be served by remanding case to trial court for further determination of what ought to be done. United States v. G. Caldwell (1972, 465 F. 2d 669, 151 U.S. App. D.C. 84).

Immediate actual possession

"Immediate actual possession," within this section defining robbery as a taking from the "immediate actual possession" of another, refers to an area within which victim could reasonably be expected to exercise some physical control over his property. Spencer v. United States (1941, 116 F. 2d 801, 73 App. D.C. 98).

The word "possession" in this section is not used in strict larcenous sense, but is used in a colloquial sense, meaning nothing more than custody or control. Neufield v. United States (1941, 118 F. 2d 375, 73 App. D.C. 174, certiorari denied 62 S. Ct. 580, 316 U.S. 798, 86 L. Ed. 1199).

Impeachment

Had defendant taken stand in prosecution for armed robbery, assault with dangerous weapon, and carrying dangerous weapon without license, evidence of prior conviction for impersonating owner of federal check would have been admissible for impeachment purposes. United States v. J. Moore (1972, 459 F. 2d 1360, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 336).

Refusal to allow defense counsel to use the arresting officer's grand jury summary, which on its face was inconsistent with his trial testimony that the defendant was one who wore orange shirt and drove car, to impeach his credibility, on ground that defense counsel was not impeaching him because officer testified on his redirect examination out of presence of jury that if he said in the summary that another man wore the orange shirt it was a mistaken identification, is improper and requires reversal of defendant's conviction. United States v. W. H. Broadus (1971, 450 F. 2d 1312, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 265).

Refusal to allow defense counsel to use joint written summary of grand jury testimony given by robbery victims to impeach credibility of one of victims as a witness on ground that it was not possible to determine which statements in summary were made by victim and which by other victim is improper. Id.

Cross-examination of defendant during which the prosecution was permitted to develop that for some time prior to date of offense defendant had been absent from his military post without leave was improper, and the prejudice was magnified by the erroneous admission of government's rebuttal evidence as to defendant's absence from military post. United States v. W. A. Shumate et al. (1970, 429 F. 2d 777, 139 U.S. App. D.C. 98).

In prosecution for, inter alia, robbery, where defendant testified, after being denied bifurcated trial, the trial court did err in permitting impeachment by showing prior offense of housebreaking, though it had occurred six years earlier and defendant had pleaded guilty to the housebreaking offense. United States v. R. A. Grimes (1969, 421 F. 2d 1119, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 184).

Where defense raises issue of whether evidence of defendant's prior convictions should be excluded from trial for purposes of impeaching defendant's credibility when he testifies, even though burden of persuasion remains on defendant, there is a duty on judge to make sufficient inquiry to inform himself on relevant considerations L. B. Jones v. United States (1968, 402 F. 2d 639, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 88).

On showing that defendant's testimony at his trial for robbery was essential because prosecution based whole case on delayed identification by complaining witness and therefore decision depended on credibility, trial judge's permitting evidence of defendant's prior conviction of assault to be introduced to impeach defendant's credibility was an abuse of discretion. Id.

Crime of assault is remotely, if at all, probative on issue of veracity of a defendant who testifies at his own trial. Id.

Impeachment of witness

Defense witness' robbery conviction is admissible in robbery prosecution for impeachment purposes, notwithstanding contention that robbery is not a crime involving dishonest conduct. United States v. O. Baber, Jr. (1971, 447 F. 2d 1267, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 98; cert. denied 92 S. Ct. 324, 404 U.S. 957).

Included offense

Larceny is a necessarily included offense of robbery. W. Walker, Jr. v. United States (1969, 418 F. 2d 1116, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 280).

Inconsistent verdicts

Convictions for both robbery and second degree murder could stand even if they were inconsistent where the conviction of robbery was consistent with the evidence and the conviction of second degree murder was also consistent with the evidence. L. Jackson v. United States (1962, 313 F. 2d 572, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 181).

Independent crimes

Counts of housebreaking and robbery, to which petitioner pleaded guilty, charged independent crimes, since housebreaking count charged and made necessary proof of entry of dwelling with intent to steal property but proof of entry was not essential to robbery count, whereas robbery charge required proof of taking in particular manner of something of value from victim's person or immediate actual possession, facts that were not essential elements of housebreaking. Irby v. United States (D.C.D.C. 1965, F. Supp. 983).

Indictment

Robbery indictment should state offense charged more precisely rather than by setting forth omnibus statutory provision under which defendant is charged. F. H. Jackson v. United States (1965, 348 F. 2d 772, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 160).

Offense of assault with dangerous weapon was not necessarily included in indictment charging robbery. R. H. Crosby v. United States (1964, 339 F. 2d 743, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 244).

Trial court lacked jurisdiction to convict defendant, who had been indicted only for robbery, of assault with dangerous weapon (an offense not necessarily included in robbery) even though defendant failed to object to dangerous-weapon charge. Id.

Crimes of robbery and of attempted robbery are similar in nature and joinder in indictment is permissible. N. L. Drew v. United States (1964, 331 F. 2d 85, 118 U.S. App. D.C. 11).

Where indictment, containing a single count, charged, in part, the commission of the offense "by force and violence and against resistance, and by putting in fear, and by sudden and stealthy seizure and snatching," this was a proper and sufficient charge to support the conviction. Tomlinson v. United States (1938, 93 F. 2d 652, 68 App. D.C. 106, 114 A. L. R. 1315).

Where indictments charging rape and robbery were returned by a grand jury which did not have upon it any member of the negro race, the indictments could not be quashed on ground that systematic course of procedure had been adopted for purpose of excluding negroes from grand jury on account of their color, in absence of proof or offer of proof of intentional exclusion of negroes from service on grand jury. McKenzie v. United States (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

Where this section did not itself express all of the elements of the crime of robbery at common law but Congress meant to make robbery a crime and by "robbery" meant robbery in the usual common-law sense of the term except as expanded by this section it was necessary and permissible for indictment to overlap this section in order to charge crime of robbery. Neufield v. United States (1941, 118 F. 2d 375, 73 App. D.C. 174, certiorari denied 62 S. Ct. 580, 315 U.S. 798, 86 L. Ed. 1199).

It was proper to charge in robbery indictment that money taken from named individual was property of bank and that money was stolen, notwithstanding fact that this section did not express the elements of common-law robbery that the property shall belong to some one other than the robber, and that it shall be stolen. Id.

Variance between indictment and proof, as to ownership of property in robbery, is not material, so long as offense is otherwise described with sufficient certainty to identify the act of robbery and to establish that the property was in the immediate actual possession of the person robbed. United States v. Mann et al. (D.C.D.C. 1954, 119 F. Supp. 406).

Ownership of property, alleged to have been subject of robbery, need be alleged in indictment only to show that property was in some one else other than accused and to describe the property taken. Id.

Informants

Where record of prosecution arising out of armed robbery showed that the informant contacted police, some three weeks after crime, and told them of source and whereabouts of shotgun involved and of alleged conspiracy to murder government's principal witness, but record was otherwise silent as to participation by the informant in offense itself, disclosure of identity of the informant on pain of dismissal should not have been required. United States v. J. T. Skeens (1971, 449 F. 2d 1066, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 404).

Insanity defense

Where record unequivocally established that, after three years of representing defendant, defense counsel concurred with conclusions reached by psychiatrist and judge that defendant was a malingerer and expressed opinion that it was tactically unwise to raise an insanity defense unless he felt he had a chance, defendant was not entitled to reversal of conviction of armed robbery assault with a deadly weapon and carrying a pistol without a license on ground of judicial interference with his defense counsel's attempt to pursue insanity issue. United States v. F. L. Simms (1972, 463 F. 2d 1273, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 182).

Trial judge's decision not to interpose an insanity defense sua sponte was not an abuse of discretion constituting reversible error, especially in view of finding that defendant was malingering. Id.

Finding by the trial court that commission of robbery and assault with dangerous weapon was not causally connected with defendant's alleged mental illness and narcotic addiction was supported by substantial testimony. United States v. E. F. Carter (1970, 436 F. 2d 200, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 46).

Instructions

Evidence on question as to whether missing alibi witness was peculiarly available to defendant was sufficient to support instruction that failure of party to produce as witness one peculiarly within power of such party creates inference that such testimony would be unfavorable. United States v. C. E. Scott (1972, 464 F. 2d 832, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Record in prosecution on charge of robbery by fear failed to show that trial judge's identity instruction, which erroneously included statement that defense did not deny that robbery took place, was plain error warranting reversal by reviewing court even though no objection was made in trial court. United States v. G. P. Todd (1972, 463 F. 2d 302, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 356).

Court's "mistake in identity" instruction which included statement that jury should consider not only testimony of victim who recanted prior identification testimony but also other elements including testimony of police officer as to victim's having identified defendant and defendant's grand jury testimony was not erroneous. United States v. J. E. Ruth (1972, 461 F. 2d 1213, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 127).

Failure to give the Pendergrast instruction, that is, the model instruction on the inference to be drawn from possession of recently stolen property, did not constitute plain error where other instructions cured any potential abuse, court properly instructed on presumption of innocence, Government's burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt the facts from which the inference might be drawn and that the jury might, but not that it must, draw the inference and no objections were voiced at trial. United States v. J. E. McCall (1972, 460 F. 2d 952, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 444).

Giving of charge that jury might draw an inference of guilt from "defendants' possession" of recently stolen property was not prejudicial on ground that it created erroneous impression that both defendants could be found guilty if only one was in possession of stolen property where court had carefully instructed the jury to consider evidence against each defendant separately, study the evidence applicable to each defendant individually and render a separate verdict as to each defendant on each charge. Id.

Instruction on defendant as witness, including statement that jury might consider defendant's vital interest in outcome, was not improper. United States v. J. Jones (1972, 459 F. 2d 1225, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

In absence of direct evidence that defendant charged with entering a bank with intent to commit robbery and attempted robbery was under the influence of narcotics, and in light of defendant's testimony to the contrary, his statements to teller to place the fives, tens, and twenties neatly in bag, his counsel's failure to request specific instruction on narcosis or object to instruction given, and counsel's successful objection to question calling for witness' opinion as to whether defendant was under the influence of drugs, failure to instruct that voluntary narcosis could negate specific intent was not plain error. United States v. R. Richardson (1972, 459 F. 2d 1133, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 109).

Giving of unobjected to instruction in robbery prosecution on reasonable doubt that is couched in language identical with recommended model instruction of District of Columbia Junior Bar Association is not plain error. United States v. O. Baber, Jr. (1971, 447 F. 2d 1267, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 98; cert. denied 92 S. Ct. 324, 404 U.S. 957).

Since, in prosecution for robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon, there was no evidence that gun used in commission of crime was loaded, giving of instruction that a loaded pistol is a dangerous weapon is error and probably prejudicial. United States v. H. L. Wyatt (1971, 442 F. 2d 858, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 136).

Viewing the trial court's charge in its entirety clearly showed that instruction on specific intent was not omitted in prosecution for armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, and carrying a dangerous weapon. United States v. S. F. Gaither (1971, 440 F. 2d 262, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 234).

When the only objection made to flight instruction was that there was a question of whether flight by defendant took place, the trial court properly ruled that this was an issue for the jury to decide. United States v. J. H. L. Wilson (1970, 435 F. 2d 403, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 331).

Defense counsel who objected to flight instruction on an alternative ground could not urge for the first time, on appeal, an objection that instruction should have been accompanied by a fuller explanation of the variety of motive which might prompt flight. Id.

Refusal to instruct that pay envelopes recovered in defendant's apartment were introduced only against the defendant and were not relevant on question of co-defendant's guilt was not error, in that discovery of the envelopes was corroborative of occurrence of robbery and of defendant's participation therein and evidence that defendant participated in robbery was, in view of evidence that two men joined to participate in robbery, circumstantial evidence against the codefendant. G. Sutton, Jr. v. United States (1970, 434 F. 2d 462, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 188; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1676, 402 U.S. 988).

Submission to the jury of a further "Allen" type instruction, after jury reported a deadlock, to the effect that absolute certainty could not be expected, and that jurors should give deference to opinions of each other, would not be considered a ground for reversal on theory of plain error since defense counsel did not object to the charge. United States v. C. Johnson (1970, 432 F. 2d 626, 139 U.S. App. D.C. 193; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 257, 400 U.S. 949).

The court properly instructed that the defendant's exclusive possession of property recently stolen from robbery victims was a basis for permissible inference that defendant was one of the robbers unless that possession was satisfactorily explained by the evidence even though prosecution had eyewitness testimony regarding the defendant's acquisition of the property which was in conflict with the explanatory testimony produced by defense. W. E. Pendergast v. United States (1969, 416 F. 2d 776, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 20, cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 1782).

Trial judge's statements in instruction that robbery victim identified third defendant as one of persons who attacked and robbed him misstated evidence and doing so, together with giving further instruction that if jury was convinced by identification it could find defendant guilty, was plain error, since even if defendant's presence at robbery scene was shown issue of participation remained. Cooper v. United States (1966, 357 F. 2d 274, 123 U.S. App. D.C. 83).

Convictions of two of three defendants for robbery sustained on grounds that evidence was sufficient and minor misstatements in instructions did not affect substantial rights. Id.

Robbery prosecution instruction on intent, that "when you do a thing on purpose, you do that which you intend to do", was clearly erroneous, since crime required specific intent to deprive victim of property. F. H. Jackson v. United States (1965, 348 F. 2d 772, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 160).

Robbery requires specific intent to deprive victim of property. Id.

Reading robbery statute, which defined several patterns of behavior as robbery in single convoluted sentence and did not clearly set forth elements government must prove, and reading of indictment which was in language similar to statute but replaced disjunctives with conjunctives, did not satisfy requirement that jury be given clear statement of each element government must prove. Id.

In prosecution for robbery and assault, court's statement in instruction to jury, that "one of the persons charged here" had succeeded in getting pocketbook of one complaining witness went beyond permissible comment on evidence, where identification was issue for jury. D. Battle and M. F. Davis v. United States (1965, 345 F. 2d 438, 120 U.S. App. D.C. 221).

Robbery statute does not set forth all essential elements of offense and, therefore, reading robbery statute to jury afforded insufficient guidance as to nature of offense and burden on government to prove every essential element thereof. A. E. Byrd v. United States (1965, 342 F. 2d 939, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 360).

Where jury foreman asked if dissenting jurors could be replaced by the (two) alternate jurors and stated, in response to court query, that dissenting jurors were clear minority, court's additional charge, including statement that no juror should go to jury room with blind determination that verdict should represent his own opinion of case at moment and that jurors finding themselves in distinct minority should question soundness of their reason for being in minority was prejudicially erroneous as being possibly coercive. R. Williams v. United States (1964, 338 F. 2d 530, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 190).

In view of substantial evidence tending to show that defendant was too drunk to form requisite intent to rob, it was reversible error for trial court to refuse to allow issue to go to jury, though it was not theory of defense. S. Womack v. United States (1964, 336 F. 2d 959, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 40).

Instruction in robbery prosecution, wherein there was no direct evidence that complaining witness' wallet had been stolen but witness testified that he had felt a slight jostle and had been told that two people were running down street, that verdict would be relatively simple to arrive at once jury decided which of witnesses were telling truth, was plain error requiring reversal, there being no instruction that different inferences might be drawn from complaining witness' testimony even if it were believed. L. C. Miller, Jr. v. United States (1963, 320 F. 2d 767, 116 U.S. App. D.C. 45).

Had defendant, who was charged with taking billfold from pocketbook, but who, upon search conducted immediately after alleged robbery, was not found to have billfold, requested charge on lesser included offense of attempted robbery, its denial would have been reversible error, but failure to give instruction was not plain error.

R. X. Williams v. United States (1963, 321 F. 2d 744, 116 U.S. App. D.C. 131).

Failure to give instruction on circumstantial evidence to effect that unless there is substantial evidence of facts which exclude every reasonable hypothesis but that of guilt, verdict must be not guilty was not plain error in robbery case. Id.

Instructions which may have implied that jury could infer guilt from circumstances without first resolving conflicts in testimony over whether circumstances had actually occurred were not plain error in view of charge considered as whole. Id.

That court failed to instruct that jury must find circumstances of identification of accused as the criminal were convincing in order to convict would not be deemed erroneous where there had been no request for such instruction, court had fully instructed jury on all questions of law including burden of proof and weighing of evidence, and there was evidence from which jury could have reasonably concluded that defendant's identification was established beyond reasonable doubt. Obery v. United States (1955, 217 F. 2d 860, 95 U.S. App. D.C. 28, certiorari denied 75 S. Ct. 665, 349 U.S. 923, 99 L. Ed. 1255).

That trial court had failed to instruct that oral confession made by defendant to police should be regarded with caution did not constitute reversible error where there had been no request for such instruction and, under circumstances of case, omission did not affect defendant's substantial rights. Id.

In prosecution for rape and robbery, where pistol which victim stated assailant used, clothing which she said he had stolen and money which he had taken were not found in possession of defendant, neighbors testified to good character of defendant and to his having a night job at which he worked regularly, and thorough examination by police failed to shake statement of defendant that he had never seen the prosecuting witness before, such circumstances were important enough to be called to the attention of the jury to be weighed together with evidence in support of legal presumption of innocence. McKenzie v. United States (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

In prosecution for rape and robbery, failure to instruct jury in precise terms that a not guilty verdict was necessary in event of failure by the government to prove each of the elements of the offenses charged beyond a reasonable doubt was error requiring reversal, notwithstanding the court instructed that defendant was presumed to be innocent and that the government was obliged to rebut the presumption by proof of guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Id.

In prosecution for rape and robbery, where verity of identification of accused by prosecuting witness was point on which case turned, failure to instruct jury in plain words that if circumstances of identification were not convincing, jury should acquit accused was error. Id.

In prosecution for rape and robbery where court referring to conditions obtaining at time of prosecuting witness' identification of accused stated that the jury should take into consideration the attitude of the prosecuting witness upon coming in view of the accused and that they should search their reasoning power regarding what motivated the selection of the accused from among all others, in view of fact that verity of identification was the point on which the case turned, the court should have cautioned that if the motivation was not convincing beyond a reasonable doubt the jury should find the defendant not guilty. Id.

Where defendant's counsel had characterized person reporting alleged robbery as a "busybody," court's charge that it was duty of citizens to report felonies and that if there was a robbery persons reporting it could not be characterized as "busybodies" was proper. Beck v. United States (1944, 140 F. 2d 169, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 10).

In prosecution for robbery, where defendants had denied that they were present at robbery, charge that if jury found that defendants were present jury could consider whether denial of presence was due to consciousness of guilt or some other reason was not improper. Id.

The absence from the trial of an eyewitness to the robbery of which defendant was convicted was not prejudicial, where court instructed the jury in effect that they might infer from the witness' absence that his testimony would not be favorable to the government. Furgueron v. United States (1947, 158 F. 2d 193, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 329).

In robbery prosecution, where defendant's testimony was that a robbery occurred and that he participated in it, both before and after, with an interlude of nonparticipation, court's statement to jury that defendant claimed that he had repented and voluntarily withdrawn from robbery was not improper. Vinci v. United States (1947, 159 F. 2d 777, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 386).

Intent to commit other crime

There is no statutory requirement for either robbery or assault with a dangerous weapon, that there be a specific intent to commit the other. United States v. J. L. Suggs and C. Blair (1967, 269 F. Supp. 732).

Interrogation by court

Although there were many instances when the defendant's answers were less than direct and it was appropriate for the court to lend assistance to avoid confusion on part of jurors, under circumstances, court's extensive examination of defendant and his alibi witness, that included questions that opened new areas of inquiry or gave an undue eminence to matters otherwise irrelevant to offenses with which defendant was charged, constituted error, and when considered together with an incorrect instruction, required reversal of defendant's conviction. United States v. H. L. Wyatt (1971, 442 F. 2d 858, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 136).

Joinder

Since the offenses of robbery, assault with dangerous weapon, assault on member of police force, unauthorized use of vehicle, and carrying dangerous weapon were based on two or more connected acts constituting part of common scheme and plan, the defendants were alleged to have participated in same series of acts constituting offenses, and each of defendants aided and abetted offenses charged against other defendants, it was proper for grand jury to join defendants and offenses in the indictment. United States v. C. Wilson, Jr. et ano. (1970, 434 F. 2d 494, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 220).

Where defendant, with two others, was charged with robbery in one count of indictment which included a separate count charging the other two persons with another robbery committed the day before and the two counts and the three defendants were tried at same time, there was no reversible error in joinder of defendants and counts or in joint trial, inasmuch as counsel for defendant quite deliberately, after mature consideration extending over a weekend which intervened during the trial, and after the trial judge had suggested severance, deemed it prudent from standpoint of his client to proceed with the trial and so advised the court. Wynn v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 648, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 190).

Defendant was not deprived of effective assistance of counsel because during the trial his counsel entered an appearance also for two other defendants who were charged with the same robbery and who were also charged with another robbery committed the day before, where no conflict of interests or detriment appeared and the added representation was assumed by counsel as a calculated move on his part to aid defendant in his defense. Id.

Judgment inconsistent with verdict

Where the jury, under proper instructions, found defendant guilty of armed robbery and rendered no verdict on count charging robbery and since the judgment was to the effect that defendant was convicted of armed robbery, robbery, and assault with dangerous weapon, judgment is inconsistent with verdict and remand for correction of such judgment is required. United States v. T. D. Harris (1970, 435 F. 2d 74, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 270; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1675, 402 U.S. 986).

Jurisdiction

Where Superior Court judge dismissed juvenile's petition for habeas corpus without prejudice to its being filed in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, the respondent was federal officer, petitioner was charged with federal offense as well as with violations of District of Columbia law and petitioner was challenging the conditions of his confinement, federal court had jurisdiction to consider the petition. J. Bland v. C. M. Rodgers (1971, 332 F. Supp. 989).

1963 robbery conviction was not invalid on ground that, since defendant had been committed to hospital following his 1961 acquittal by reason of insanity, district court was without jurisdiction to try him, in absence of hearing to determine his competency to stand trial in 1963, where prior to both 1961 and 1963 trials defendant was referred to hospital for mental examination resulting, in both instances, in certification by hospital that he was competent to stand trial, and 1963 certification was not objected to by either defendant or government. W. Green v. United States (1965, 351 F. 2d 198, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 33).

Limited affirmance

In this case where the evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction of unauthorized use of automobile but the court had doubts as to its sufficiency to support convictions for robbery and for transporting stolen vehicle across state line in violation of Dyer Act, sentence of youthful offenders under Federal Youth Corrections Act would be affirmed in interest of justice limited to a conviction of unauthorized use of automobile. C. S. Kee and W. J. Johnson v. United States (1969, 418 F. 2d 465, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 249).

Merger of offenses

Contention that it is improper for defendant to be convicted and sentenced on both counts I which charged under Federal mail robbery statute with assaulting post office custodian with intent to rob him, and count II under District of Columbia robbery and crime of violence statute with robbing the custodian because the assault charged in count I "merged" with completed robbery charged in count II will be considered by the Court of Appeals even though issue was not raised in trial court. United States v. W. B. Spears (1971, 449 F. 2d 946, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 284).

The part of the Federal mail robbery statute prohibiting assault was intended by Congress to prohibit certain kinds of attempts to rob and cannot support an independent conviction when a defendant is charged with and convicted of committing, in violation of robbery statute applicable in District of Columbia, the same crime he is charged with attempting. Id.

Where helper on truck was detained and transported against his will to a different location, several miles away from the scene where truck was hijacked, and purpose of detention, to facilitate success of hijacking, was to secure benefit to hijackers, two separate and distinct crimes were committed, i. e., kidnapping and armed robbery of contents of truck, and the offenses did not merge. United States v. L. B. Wolford (1971, 444 F. 2d 876, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Lesser offense of entry with intent to rob merged into completed bank robbery when the latter offense was proved. M. Marshall v. United States (1970, 436 F. 2d 155, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Convictions of appellant on the three charges of entering with intent to rob were not permissible where appellant was convicted of actual taking or robbery, since those offenses in the circumstances merged into completed robberies. B. A. Bryant v. United States (1969, 417 F. 2d 555, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 138; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1534, 402 U.S. 932).

Mistrial

Where foreman of jury in robbery prosecution sent trial judge note stating that jury was unable to reach unanimous decision and felt that more conclusive evidence was needed to bring about full vote, and that seven jurors were of opinion that defendant was guilty, four that he was not guilty, and one was undecided, trial judge properly declared mistrial, independent of claimed deadlock, because of improper action of jury foreman in revealing status of votes. H. Mullin, Jr. v. United States (1966, 356 F. 2d 368, 123 U.S. App. D.C. 29).

Model instruction

Model instructions was proposed by the court for use in robbery and larceny cases. W. E. Pendergast v. United States (1969, 416 F. 2d 776, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 20, cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 1782).

New trial

Since evidence was sufficient to raise jury issue as to robbery, new trial, ordered because of trial court's error in refusing to instruct jury on lesser included offense of larceny, would not be limited to larceny charge only. E. A. Graves v. United States (1963, 318 F. 2d 265, 115 U.S. App. D.C. 294).

Denial of motion for new trial made after conviction for robbery and based on newly discovered evidence bearing only upon the credibility of a witness for prosecution was not abuse of discretion. Wilkins, Jr., v. United States (1956, 228 F. 2d 37, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 66).

Refusal of defendant's motion for new trial after conviction of robbery on basis of newly discovered evidence discrediting any prosecuting witness was not abuse of discretion, where it appeared that alleged newly discovered evidence consisting of police record of prosecuting witness could have been procured by defendant before trial, and further that such evidence was not of such a nature that new trial would properly produce an acquittal. Thompson v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 652, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 235).

"Person" defined

Dead man is a "person" within robbery statute; accordingly, there can be a robbery even if the victim was dead before property was taken. United States v. G. L. Butler (1972, 455 F. 2d 1338, 147 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

Victim of homicide, even though dead, was "person" within robbery statute under circumstances where time interval between stabbing and taking of money from her body was short, and even if intent of taking money did not occur until after she was dead perpetrator could properly be convicted of robbery. H. S. Carey v. United States (1961, 296 F. 2d 422, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 300).

Since the record in this case disclosed nothing more than the fact that there was photographic identification, and there was no issue of suggestiveness that was plausibly tendered by circumstances disclosed in record, it is unnecessary to remand case for further proceedings on alleged suggestiveness of photographic identification. H. B. Dorman v. United States (1970, 435 F. 2d 385, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 313).

Where witnesses to armed robbery had an excellent opportunity to observe perpetrator, witnesses looked at several hundred police photographs without making any identifications and single photograph was shown within a week after robbery, identification from single photograph was verified by witnesses at lineup, at which defendant was represented by counsel, and witnesses positively identified defendant at trial, the original identification by means of single photograph and lineup in which defendant was the only person wearing dark shirt did not establish a substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification sufficient to establish a violation of due process. G. Sutton, Jr. v. United States (1970, 434 F. 2d 462, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 188; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1676, 402 U.S. 988).

The problem of fairness of photographic identification is to be considered in terms of whether the identification has been conducted with impermissible suggestiveness and not by prophylactic rule requiring appointment of counsel for one who is not present at time of identification, has not been arrested for or charged with crime, and is not in custody. United States v. T. Kirby (1970, 427 F. 2d 610, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 340).

Record established that the victim's photographic identification of defendant as robber and assailant was not conducted under circumstances so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. United States v. J. E. York (1970, 321 F. Supp. 539).

There is no presumption that photographic identification of defendant by the victim of robbery and assault is invalid. Id.

In a prosecution for robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon, where robbery victim on morning after robbery was shown 15 photographs depicting males of various ages, including one photograph of defendant that was not highlighted so as to prompt its selection and victim identified defendant's photograph, which was sixth photograph shown to him, as that of robber and remained firm in such identification after examining remaining photographs, such identification did not deny due process and did not vitiate subsequent in-court identification. United States v. E. L. Hamilton (1969, 420 F. 2d 1292, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 89).

There was a serious and irreconcilable breach of due process of law in view of circumstances surrounding photographic identification of defendants, including the fact that one robbery victim was shown only the photographs of the four suspects, that those photographs contained police markings, and that there was no necessity whatsoever for a photographic identification since the suspects had been apprehended, established that the identification procedure was "so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to a very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification". United States v. S. Washington, Jr., et al. (1968, 292 F. Supp. 284).

Evidence, including the fact that the defendants were not brought to trial until more than two years after the robbery, and that the robbery victims had never seen any of the individuals involved in the crime prior to the event, established that an in-court identification of the defendants by the robbery victims would not have been arrived at independent of improper photographic identifications secured by the police. Id.

Pickpocketing

"Pickpocketing," or robbery by stealth, is a crime which, by its very nature, is difficult of proof; unexplained possession plus suspicious circumstances can be submitted to the sound discretion of the jury. R. T. Davis, Jr. v. United States (1970, 433 F. 2d 1222, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 116).

Plea of guilty

District judge did not abuse his discretion in refusing to permit withdrawal of guilty plea to count as to which defendant at hearing on motion to withdraw plea admitted his guilt since he had entered plea intelligently and voluntarily, with assistance of retained counsel, and candidly admitted all essential facts of crime in open court. C. D. Everett v. United States (1964, 336 F. 2d 979, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Police lineup procedures

Where defendant was acquitted of all charges that were not dismissed by the government and he could not again be placed in position of one facing a lineup without first giving the government probable cause to issue new charges against him, as to him, his case for declaratory judgment concerning various aspects of police lineup procedures in District of Columbia was moot. H. A. Spriggs v. J. V. Wilson, Chief of Police, et al. (1972, 467 F. 2d 382, 151 U.S. App. D.C. 328).

Dismissal of complaint for declaratory judgment concerning various aspects of police lineup procedures in the District of Columbia was proper exercise of district court's discretion to refuse to grant declaratory relief. Id.

Prejudicial error

In this case, assuming that failure of the trial judge to inform defendant's counsel of larceny charge before he summed up constituted error, where defendant was indicted for robbery and assault with a deadly weapon, however, that failure lacked the prejudice necessary to constitute reversible error where, inter alia, defendant's admission in open court established his intention and his attempt to trick complainants, so that damage was done when defendant took the stand and it was not likely that a variation in summation would have changed the verdict. W. Walker, Jr. v. United States (1969, 418 F. 2d 1116, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 280).

Denial of motion of defendant that court obtain assistance of medical expert to examine witness, who identified defendant as robber, and who allegedly had defective eyesight, and to testify concerning vision of witness was not prejudicial error, where matter of vision of witness was adequately explored on cross-examination, and there was other strong identifying testimony. E. G. Robinson v. United States (1963, 318 F. 2d 272, 115 U.S. App. D.C. 301).

The hearing called for by the Federal Criminal Procedure Rule relating to appearance before commissioner is not an "arraignment" but a preliminary examination of the arrested person, and it is more accurate to refer to the proceeding as a "preliminary hearing"; such hearing is the occasion for judicial warnings as to such person's rights, and it is also a purpose of the hearing to have a judicial determination as to whether such person should be held. Goldsmith & Carter v. United States (1960, 277 F. 2d 335, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 305, certiorari denied 81 S. Ct. 106, 364 U.S. 863, 5 L. Ed. 2d 86).

Where a person was arrested and search of his person produced a newspaper clipping about a robbery, and his explanation for having the clipping was that he had been playing cards with a friend who had stated that the friend's brother and brother's companion had committed such robbery, there was sufficient ground for arresting the brother and brother's companion, and after arrest it was incumbent on police to investigate more thoroughly by verifying or testing the statements about brother and brother's companion before deciding whether brother and companion should have a preliminary hearing or be released, and if the friend was willing to repeat his "charges" in presence of brother and brother's companion and in a manner which convinced officers of the friend's reliability, the police had an adequate basis to take brother and brother's companion before the magistrate and ask that they be held for the grand jury. Id.

The questioning of a suspect prior to preliminary hearing cannot be for the purpose of eliciting damaging statements to support the arrest and there cannot be prolonged or intensive questioning easily gliding into the evils of the third degree, and if a suspect, arrested or not, denies knowledge of a crime, the police are entitled, if indeed not obliged, to confront him with those who have implicated him. Id.

Presentence investigation

Under facts including showing that the defendant, convicted of robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon, had stated that "a probationary report would be more detrimental to me than anything else" and that "a probationary hearing wouldn't do anything for me", the trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting defendant's explicit request to be sentenced without an investigation. United States v. M. J. Spadoni (1970, 435 F. 2d 448, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 376).

Imposition of maximum sentence just after guilty verdicts were rendered against defendants, one of whom was 21 years of age and the other 19 years of age, was improper, vacation of sentences at suggestion of United States and reimposition thereafter of same sentences was not curative of procedure followed, sentences must be vacated and pre-sentence investigation must be made with opportunity to present information in mitigation of punishment. Peters and Mills v. United States (1962, 307 F. 2d 193, 113 U.S. App. D.C. 236).

Presentence report

Denial of defense counsel's request for permission to inspect presentence reports utilized by the court in sentencing constitutes an abuse of discretion, where defendant was sentenced to 18 to 54 years imprisonment. United States v. B. A. Bryant (1971, 442 F. 2d 775, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 53).

Discretion whether and to what extent defendant or his counsel is to have access to presentence report, with accompanying opportunity to comment upon it, must be exercised in each individual case; sound judicial administration requires that fact that such discretion has been exercised appear on the face of the record. Id.

Discretion of trial judge to furnish to the defendant or his counsel presentence investigation report is to be exercised in individual cases and trial judge is not to adopt a uniform policy of nondisclosure in all cases irrespective of circumstances. United States v. R. Queen (1970, 435 F. 2d 66, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 262).

Where defendant's record of prior convictions was disclosed to the defendant and his counsel during trial so that they had opportunity to confirm or deny such record and to explain circumstances, failure of trial judge to furnish defendant or counsel with presentence investigation report did not deny due process to defendant. Id.

Pretrial hearing

Where a victim tentatively identified the defendant from a photograph shown him about a month after the crime of robbery but police waited seven months thereafter before arresting the defendant though defendant was living at his mother's apartment and working, as police were aware, a few blocks from his home, the defendant was entitled to a full pretrial hearing in which the government would be given an opportunity to justify seven-month delay in defendant's arrest and in which the defendant would be given opportunity to show extent to which delay prejudiced him. L. B. Jones v. United States (1968, 402 F. 2d 639, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 88).

Probable cause

Where victim of purse snatching observed brown-shirted robber as he ran with purse into adjacent apartment building, a bit later victim's friend observed man clad in brown shirt scramble over back fence and race through abutting alley, a pedestrian almost bowled over by brown-shirted man observed man take refuge in house on that street and police officers arrived within minutes and had followed trail marked by eyewitnesses from scene of crime to defendant's doorstep, police had probable cause for warrantless arrest. United States v. R. S. Wylie (1972, 462 F. 2d 1178, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 283).

Where the defendant, in response to investigatory stop by police officer who saw defendant fleeing from direction of robbery, voluntarily entered officer's scout car and stated that he was tired of running, the officer had necessary cause to arrest defendant. United States v. W. A. Hines (1972, 455 F. 2d 1317, 147 U.S. App. D.C. 249; cert. denied 92 S. Ct. 2427, 406 U.S. 975).

Where police officer upon hearing defendant identified as robber went to home of defendant's brother to investigate and met another officer who had followed suspect to the home and who was waiting and preparing to call for assistance, officers had probable cause to believe that person who had entered home had been involved in the crime and even if woman who admitted officers into home did not voluntarily consent to officers' entry, the entry was lawful under the circumstances and subsequent arrest was valid. Id.

Police officer, who knew robbery had been committed in immediate vicinity and who saw defendant fleeing from direction of robbery and continuously glancing over his shoulder in that direction, had requisite degree of suspicion to make a detention of defendant for purpose of questioning even if probable cause to arrest was lacking. Id.

There was probable cause to arrest defendant for crime of robbery, where description of robber was received by arresting officer on his radio, where officer was less than three blocks away from the scene of the crime, and where only a few minutes had elapsed. United States v. T. A. Horton (1971, 440 F. 2d 253, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 225).

Police officer, who had heard radio description of person involved in robbery, who answered call about second robbery accompanied by another officer, who saw two suspects on roof, who heard noise which sounded like someone dropping and saw the defendant crouching in basement stairwell, who observed that defendant fitted broadcast description of robber, and who was told by the defendant that he was not "one of those hold-up men," had probable cause for arrest. United States v. L. H. Thurman (1970, 436 F. 2d 280, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 126).

Where the defendant was hiding in rear of automobile not 100 yards from scene of bank robbery, a few minutes after robbery, and made no response to inquiries, the police officer had probable cause to arrest. M. Marshall v. United States (1970, 436 F. 2d 155, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Evidence disclosing that shortly after defendants' arrests for violation of Firearms Act police officer determined that the defendants fit the lookout that had been broadcast for an earlier robbery established probable cause to detain defendants for robbery, over and above the violation for which they had been arrested, and their detention, before being taken to a magistrate, for slightly over an hour in order to have a lineup was not unreasonable. T. R. Young v. United States (1970, 435 F. 2d 405, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 333).

Victim's physical condition and his positive identification of defendant as participant in robbery were sufficient to give arresting officer probable cause to arrest defendant. W. E. Pendergast v. United States (1969, 416 F. 2d 776, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 20, cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 1782, 395 U.S. 926).

In a case where police officers in plain clothes saw two defendants who were known to the officers to be pick-pockets get onto bus, and the first defendant bumped into the victim, and second defendant brushed up against the victim, and officers arrested the second defendant, and search disclosed keycase of the victim, there was probable cause for arrest of the second defendant, and district court properly denied motion of defendants to suppress the keycase in robbery prosecution. R. T. Davis, Jr. et al. v. United States (1969, 409 F. 2d 458, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 172).

Where complaining witness who was pursuing defendant and his alleged accomplice shouted to police officer that men he was chasing had robbed him and accomplice was arrested by another officer who blocked exit to alley into which accomplice had run, officer had probable cause to arrest accomplice without warrant so that statement made by accomplice shortly after his arrest that he had seen money he was charged with robbing fall to ground was not inadmissible at trial of defendant and accomplice as fruit of an alleged arrest. E. Trimble v. United States (1966, 369 F. 2d 950, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

— Entry without warrant

Police officers acted reasonably and did not violate the constitutional rights of defendant when they proceeded in furtherance of their objective to arrest defendant who they had probable cause to believe was armed felon, to make warrantless, unconsented, nonforceable entry into his home late in evening, some few hours after armed robbery and within an hour after they obtained eyewitness identification of defendant, and when magistrate was not readily available. H. B. Dorman v. United States (1970, 435 F. 2d 385, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 313).

Police officers, who knew that armed robbers had fled in a maroon automobile bearing license plates registered to another vehicle, that the defendant, whose employer was robbery victim, and who bore same last name as man to whom plates were registered, owned a maroon automobile, that vehicle answering description of getaway vehicle, with engine and exhaust still warm, and bearing no license plates was parked near defendant's address, and that part of money taken consisted of coins, and who, after knocking at door of defendant's apartment and identifying themselves, overheard movement of furniture and observed that person answering door filled description of one of robbers and that there were stacks of coins on dining room table, had probable cause to arrest occupants. United States v. T. D. Harris (1970, 435 F. 2d 74, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 270; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1675, 402 U.S. 986).

Prosecutions

In a robbery case, the Government has the right to charge, as separate assaults, assaults against bystanders who are not robbed. G. Sutton, Jr. v. United States (1970, 434 F. 2d 462, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 188; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1676, 402 U.S. 988).

Prosecutor's remarks

Reference by prosecutor in closing argument of robbery case to "reputable officers" and "very sweet" complaining witness who testified for government did not exceed advocacy. Jackson v. United States (1966, 359 F. 2d 260, 123 U.S. App. D.C. 276).

Reversal of robbery conviction would not be appropriate, even assuming that prosecutor's comments in closing argument that government was exceptionally proud of its witnesses in the case were objectionable, where testimony of victim was convincingly substantiated by fact that her critical identification of distinctive nature of items taken from her pocketbook had been given to police before defendant's capture with these items in his possession, and other key government witness likewise gave convincing testimony. Id.

Omission from robbery indictment of language in statute that property was taken by a "sudden or stealthy seizure or snatching" would not warrant reversal of conviction where no showing was made that such omission resulted in denial of a substantial right to defendant. Id.

Purpose

The purpose of Congress in enacting this section was to expand the common-law definition of robbery so that it would comprehend the taking by sudden or stealthy seizure or snatching. Neufield v. United States (1941, 118 F. 2d 375, 73 App. D.C. 174, certiorari denied 62 S. Ct. 580, 315 U.S. 798, 86 L. Ed. 1199).

Questions for jury

In prosecution for robbery and assault with dangerous weapon, whether the defendant was one of holdup men in robbery of shoe store was question for jury. United States v. J. E. York (1969, 426 F. 2d 1191, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 197).

Jury was justified in finding that assault with intent to commit robbery and robbery were not product of alleged mental disease of defendant, where psychiatrist testified that defendant was suffering from low grade mental illness predisposing to psychosis particularly when defendant was under influence of large amounts of alcohol, and evidence indicated that defendant was completely sober at time of alleged offenses. T. Hawkins v. United States (1962, 310 F. 2d 849, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 44).

Evidence upon question whether defendant was not guilty of robbery by reason of insanity was sufficient to raise jury question. E. C. Campbell v. United States (1962, 307 F. 2d 597, 113 U.S. App. D.C. 260).

In prosecution for robbery and carrying a dangerous weapon wherein government's testimony on issue of insanity was offered by a number of lay witnesses and a qualified psychiatrist, and on part of defendant there was opposing testimony both lay and psychiatric, issue of insanity was for jury. Niport v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 901, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 64).

In robbery prosecution, issue of identity of defendant was one of fact which trial court properly submitted to jury. Thompson v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 652, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 235).

Release on personal recognizance

Appellant, who was convicted of robbery and assault with a deadly weapon, and whose appeal presented a substantial claim that he was wrongfully identified, was ordered released on personal recognizance on certain enumerated conditions which were so structured as to allow for a maximum amount of supervision over appellant while still allowing for his freedom from incarceration. W. Banks v. United States (1969, 414 F. 2d 1150, 134 U.S. App. D.C. 254).

Reversible error

Admission of hearsay declaration by apartment lessee to detective to effect that four men who were friends of his entered his apartment and three of them were carrying guns was not reversible error, since it was not developed by defendant's counsel that his client was not present during conversation between detective and lessee, no objection to admission of statement was made by defense at the time nor was any objection or motion made as to such testimony in subsequent conference and hearings out of presence of jury, and from context of subsequent discussions it appeared that the propriety of the testimony was recognized. United States v. G. L. Harris (1970, 437 F. 2d 686, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 253).

Trial court's comment concerning two defendants who entered pleas of guilty during trial of defendant for robbery allegedly involving four men was not plain error that could be considered in absence of objection, where, since jury knew of involvement of defendants who pleaded guilty at the start, court was required to make some explanation concerning their sudden absence from trial and it did so by telling jury that cases of those defendants had been disposed of and jury was not to speculate on what that disposition was. Id.

Question regarding defendant's financial condition in prosecution for robbery, though error, did not require reversal where one defendant did not object at the trial and other defendant did not object that it resulted in prejudice until after line of questioning had been completed. G. A. Davis, et al. v. United States (1969, 409 F. 2d 453, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 167).

Review

Record on appeal from robbery conviction does not support contention that defense witness' inconsistent statement, that was taken by prosecution in cellblock during previous night, and that was marked as government exhibit for identification, was admitted in evidence and permitted to go to jury; marking for identification is not equivalent to admission. United States v. O. Baber, Jr. (1971, 447 F. 2d 1267, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 98; cert. denied 92 S. Ct. 324, 404 U.S. 957).

Appeal from robbery conviction of defendant, who alleged, inter alia, error in admission of defense witness' robbery conviction, in admission of defense witness' prior statement, and in giving of certain instruction on reasonable doubt, and that evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction, is appropriate for disposition without oral argument, notwithstanding contention that there is a constitutional right to oral argument on appeal. Id.

Issues as to whether trial court erred in permitting prosecutor to impeach defendant with cross-examination respecting prior conviction of assault and in permitting prosecutor to impeach defense witness with cross-examination respecting her chastity would not be noticed for the first time on appeal from conviction for assault with intent to commit robbery. C. E. Green v. United States (1968, 397 F. 2d 643, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 82).

Where there was no suggestion of coercion, with respect to defendant's oral admissions to the police or any factor making it appropriate for the appellate court to reach the question of admissibility despite the absence of objection, the matter was not reviewable. Gilliam v. United States (1958, 257 F. 2d 185, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 181, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 728, 359 U.S. 947, 3 L. Ed. 2d 680, rehearing denied 79 S. Ct. 899, 359 U.S. 981, 3 L. Ed. 2d 931, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1129, 359 U.S. 995, 3 L. Ed. 2d 983).

— Record on appeal

Record upon appeal from conviction in Federal District Court for armed robbery showed no prejudicial error. Thompson v. United States (1955, 223 F. 2d 627, 96 U. S. App. D. C. 162, certiorari denied 76 S. Ct. 324, 350 U. S. 949, 100 L. Ed. 827).

— Remand

Since counsel for defendant, convicted of robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon, was not appointed until almost one year after offense, counsel was appointed slightly more than one month before trial, although counsel's failure to appear on date case was first set was allegedly due to misunderstanding case was not removed from ready calendar, and it was alleged that counsel had inadequate time in which to obtain specified physical evidence and interview specified witnesses, reviewing court remanded case to trial court for determination whether new trial should be granted on ground of ineffective assistance of counsel. United States v. W. D. Weaver (1970, 422 F. 2d 711, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 274).

Though jury was not warranted on evidence in failing to entertain reasonable doubt that except for diseased mental condition defendant would have committed robberies, Court of Appeals would not direct that defendant be acquitted by reason of insanity, but would remand for a new trial, where testimony of expert who had not testified at second trial would be available at retrial, resolvable ambiguities existed in testimony, and dearth of prosecution's nonmedical testimony, might be overcome. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U.S. App. D. C. 232).

Reversible error

Any judicial intervention and criticism which occurred in robbery case did not deprive defendant of a fair trial and thus was not reversible error. Wynder v. United States (1965, 352 F. 2d 662, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 186).

Revocation of probation

Where trial court had imposed a suspended sentence conditioned upon satisfactory completion of three years on probation after conviction of robbery, such probation was revoked on request of United States Probation Officer and on appeal the Court of Appeals remanded the case for preparation of statement of evidence, reporter's notes of hearing being unavailable, and parties were unable to reconstruct such statement and a de novo hearing was held and sentencing judge reaffirmed the revocation of probation, the revocation was not an abuse of discretion. T. Hurt v. United States (1966, 374 F. 2d 283, 126 U.S. App. D.C. 69).

Defendant's constitutional right to counsel was not violated when after his arrest but in absence of counsel police showed eyewitnesses a group of photographs and an eyewitness, who had had a good opportunity for observation of defendant did pick defendant's photograph, where judge found that there was an independent source for the identification in court and there was no evidence of unfairness in exhibition of photographs. United States v. H. R. Thomas, Jr. (1972, 463 F. 2d 314, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 368; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 198, 409 U.S. 870).

In the circumstances of the case, defendant's constitutional right to counsel at critical stages of the prosecution was violated when the government, having him in custody, and having failed to arrange corporeal lineup, made presentation of color photographs of defendant and codefendant to witnesses to bank robbery without attendance of defense counsel on the day before trial and the admission of the color photographs at trial produced reversible error. United States v. C. J. Ash, Jr. (1972, 461 F. 2d 92, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 1; cert. granted 92 S. Ct. 2436, 407 U.S. 909).

A corporeal lineup is "critical stage" of the prosecution at which defendant is entitled to aid of counsel, even though lineup is held prior to trial or even to the filing of formal charges. Id.

Generally, subject to certain exceptions, requirement of presence of counsel is applicable to government exhibition of photographs of a person in custody for an offense to witnesses called to identify the person who committed the offense. Id.

Requirement of presence of defense counsel at viewings of photographs by identification witnesses held under auspices of prosecutor is not tantamount to requirement of counsel at every conference between the prosecutor and government witnesses. Id.

There are instances in which photographic exhibition— even though event capable of being adduced at trial—is too preliminary and preparatory to be regarded as critical stage of prosecution requiring attendance of defense counsel, such as when case is in the pre-arrest investigative stage, provided there is no undue suggestiveness. Id.

There is limited exception to requirement of counsel at photographic identifications conducted after the defendant is in custody where there is on-going investigation and time is of the essence; such exception would be limited to case of special circumstances where even the slight delay involved in attendance of counsel or substitute counsel would not be feasible without jeopardizing the effectiveness and fairness of continuing investigation. Id.

Admission of testimony of robbery victims who, at time when defendant was not represented by counsel, identified defendant on his being brought into house by officers following his being restrained by men observing him fleeing from house, did not violate defendant's right to counsel, as defendant neither said nor did anything at that time that his counsel could have stopped had he been present. Kennedy v. United States (1965, 353 F. 2d 462, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 291).

Search and seizure

Where police officers had received radio dispatched descriptions of getaway car which went out of control and was abandoned, search of car did not violate Fourth Amendment rights of defendant. United States v. J. Moore (1972, 459 F. 2d 1360, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 336).

Where police officers found the defendant in waiting room of dentist, and they properly made a search of other rooms of suite of dentist to look for possibly dangerous persons, and in plain view in laboratory of dentist was stolen bottle of whiskey, seizure of bottle and its subsequent admission into evidence were proper. United States v. D. O. Miller (1971, 449 F. 2d 974, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 312).

Where testimony of the defendant himself established that he had no authority to open or use drawer, in which gun was found, and there was no suggestion that gun itself belonged to defendant, there was no violation of defendant's Fourth Amendment rights, even if search and seizure of gun were unlawful. Id.

Police officers can seize fruits, instrumentalities or evidence of crime that they recognize to be of importance to prosecution of arrestee if items involved are in plain view of police when they enter premises to make arrest. United States v. T. D. Harris (1970, 435 F. 2d 74, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 270; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1675, 402 U.S. 986).

Where police officers, upon entering apartment, had made valid arrest pertaining to armed robbery, search of adjoining bedroom, which occurred prior to Supreme Court decision limiting lawful search incident to valid arrest to area within defendant's immediate control and which resulted in discovery of money under mattress, was within permissible area of search. Id.

Sentence

Where bank robbery had been consummated, defendant could not be properly given a concurrent sentence for entering a bank with intent to commit robbery. United States v. J. M. Hopkins (1972, 464 F. 2d 816, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 307).

Where robbery constituted a unitary transaction, defendant could not properly be convicted and sentenced on two robbery counts. Id.

Where, though bank employees and a customer were put in fear at point of a pistol, joint conduct of robbers constituted a single continuous transaction, defendant could not properly be convicted and sentenced on four counts of assault with a dangerous weapon. Id.

Defendant's sentence was not to depend upon his refusal to express remorse. Id.

Where the district court had discretion to sentence 21-year-old defendant under regular adult statutory provision only if it found that the defendant would not derive benefit from rehabilitative treatment under the Youth Corrections Act, and it was not apparent from record, just what the court concluded as to defendant's susceptibility to benefit from commitment under Act, matter would be remanded for further illumination of the district court's intent. United States v. R. T. Ward (1971, 454 F. 2d 992, 147 U.S. App. D.C. 149).

The Court of Appeals will consider claim that it was improper for the defendant to be convicted and sentenced on both counts I which charged under Federal mail robbery statute the assault of post office custodian with intent to rob him, and count II which charged under District of Columbia statutes the robbing of custodian, notwithstanding fact that the defendant received concurrent sentences, because of possible harmful effect on defendant of myriad collateral consequences of an improper double felony conviction and desirability of having such issue settled. United States v. W. B. Spears (1971, 449 F. 2d 946, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 284).

Where 21-year-old defendant had had number of contacts with authorities, had been continuously involved in a program designed to assist him in making proper social adjustment and had not responded, had been arrested on felony-murder, second-degree murder, armed robbery and robbery charges while on probation for another charge seven months earlier and social worker at children's center had recommended that his commitment to the department be set aside and defendant apparently had been on drugs for sometime, it was more appropriate to sentence the defendant, on guilty plea to robbery charge, under the applicable penalty provision rather than under the Federal Youth Corrections Act. United States v. R. T. Ward (1971, 337 F. Supp. 185).

In a prosecution for carrying an unlicensed pistol and for increased punishment by reason of recidivism, defense counsel's concession, in bail application, that defendant had been convicted of robbery in 1957 is insufficient proof, for purpose of sentencing under recidivist statute, that defendant had been convicted of robbery in 1958 as charged by government. United States v. E. Clemons (1970, 440 F. 2d 205, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 177; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 959, 401 U.S. 945).

Since 19-year-old defendant found guilty of 3 counts of robbery and 3 counts of assault with dangerous weapon moved for presentence observation at youth center and after observation was sentenced to 4 to 12 years for robbery and 3 to 9 years for assault with sentence to run concurrently and thereafter defendant filed motion for reconsideration and requested that he be sentenced under Youth Corrections Act but was transferred to penitentiary despite recommendation for confinement in youth institution, and court thereafter denied motion, sentence will be vacated and case remanded to district court for resentencing under Youth Corrections Act. United States v. T. P. Waters (1970, 437 F. 2d 722, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 289).

Where defendant had been committed to hospital for mental observation before trial and had been reported competent to stand trial and during trial judge heard testimony of several witnesses as to the defendant's mental condition and some six weeks elapsed between finding of guilt and imposition of sentence during which probation office conducted investigation and submitted report which was before trial judge when sentence was imposed, sentence is not improper on theory that trial judge should have referred case to legal psychiatric service for the presentence evaluation. United States v. E. F. Carter (1970, 436 F. 2d 200, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 46).

Under statute providing that sentence begins to run from date prisoner is received at penal institution for service of sentence, sentence was not illegal, within rule providing that court may correct illegal sentence at any time, merely because court in imposing maximum sentence for robbery gave no credit for time spent in custody before sentence. T. Williams v. United States (1964, 335 F. 2d 290, 118 U.S. App. D.C. 255).

Where sentence imposed was within that allowed by statute, relief was available to defendant, in absence of relief at hands of district court, only in executive branch of government. Id.

Where at time of sentence upon robbery conviction defendant stated to court that he was "under a psychiatrist for one year" in 1935, that he "had a mental disorder from 1952," that he was "under a doctor in the state prison at Trenton" in 1952, and that all but 63 days of the past 31 years, since he was 19 years old, he had spent in various prisons, and court imposed the maximum penalty without responding to defendant's request for a mental examination prior to sentence, case would be remanded to district court for reconsideration of the sentence. Wm. H. Leach v. United States (1963, 320 F. 2d 670, 115 U.S. App. D.C. 351).

On remand for consideration of sentence, district court refused to disturb sentence previously imposed on defendant, who has extensive criminal record, following a third conviction for armed robbery, in view of probation office report failing to refer defendant to legal psychiatric services and recommending that probation be denied and evidence which failed to indicate that defendant was suffering from mental disease. United States v. W. H. Leach (D.C.D.C. 1963, 218 F. Supp. 271).

District Court's denial of defendant's motion to vacate sentence of two to seven years imposed on defendant's plea of guilty to charges of robbery, on ground that plea was coerced, would not be disturbed by Court of Appeals, where testimony could be viewed to support thesis that court-appointed counsel of defendant merely brought his professional judgment and experience to bear, as he was bound to do, in advising defendant of high probability of conviction and of sentences some courts had imposed on pleas of guilty in such cases, and it was not shown that counsel's estimate of case was either erroneous or made to mislead defendant, and it did not appear that counsel's estimate of sentence was offered defendant as a promise rather than a hope. Smith v. United States (1959, 265 F. 2d 99, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 115).

Where defendant, who had been sentenced on first indictment from two to six years, on each of four counts in second indictment from one to three years, with such sentences to take effect consecutively with one another and with sentence on first indictment, and on third indictment from one to three years concurrently with the other sentences, had actually pleaded guilty only to one count in each of the three indictments, Court of Appeals would set aside sentence on second indictment except as to one sentence from one to three years, and, as to first indictment, district court could resentence defendant in view of fact that existing sentence was a general one covering two counts. Campbell v. United States (1958, 258 F. 2d 160, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 308).

Sentence of 3 to 12 years for robbery for which maximum sentence was 15 years was valid as conforming with statute relating to indeterminate sentences and providing for a maximum sentence not exceeding maximum fixed by law for crime committed, as against contention maximum sentence of entire term imposed by statute violated was required. McDonald v. Johnston (C.C.A. 9, 1937, 86 F. 2d 329).

Application for habeas corpus was premature when it challenged the validity of consecutive sentences as the first sentence of robbery had not expired. Johnson v. Aderhold (C. C. A. 5, 1934, 73 F. 2d 102).

— Consecutive

In determining whether consecutive sentences could be validly imposed upon conviction of housebreaking and robbery, statutes are first examined to ascertain if they will bear interpretation as creating separate offense, and if so court will inquire whether Congress also intended to pyramid penalties or only to establish different degrees or types of offense. Irby v. United States (D.C.D.C. 1965, 250 F. Supp. 983).

Defendant who had been convicted of housebreaking and robbery was not entitled to post-conviction relief from consecutive sentences on theory that offenses were committed by single series of chronologically related events, where offenses were independent. Id.

Severance

Denial of defendant's pretrial motion for severance, in bank robbery prosecution in which defendant's brother was a codefendant, did not constitute abuse of discretion, where there were no statements by defendant's brother received in evidence against defendant, and at defendant's request jury was instructed that fact that defendants were brothers in and of itself should not lead them to conclude that they acted in concert in robbing the bank. United States v. J. M. Hopkins (1972, 464 F. 2d 816, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 307).

Where alibi testimony of defendants charged with robbery of drugstore as to their presence at pool hall did not state assuredly that they were there at the same time and, even if they had been, the fact that neither recalled seeing the other was somewhat corroborative of principal defense that neither knew other until arrest, their alibi testimony did not present conflicting and irreconcilable defenses and severance was not required, especially since the United States attorney in his jury argument made no comment on failure of defendants to recall seeing each other. United States v. C. Wilson, Jr. et ano. (1970, 434 F. 2d 494, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 220).

Refusal to grant a severance for trial purposes as to defendant tried for several crimes including first-degree murder arising out of two separate robberies was prejudicial to defendant because there was not only the danger that evidence with respect to two robberies would cumulate in juror's minds and tend to prove defendant guilty of each, but also because the evidence as to one of the robberies was so weak that its primary usefulness was to support government's case as to robbery which resulted in the murder. C. Gregory v. United States (1966, 369 F. 2d 185, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 140).

Speedy trial

A delay of over one year between arrest and trial raises a Sixth Amendment claim of prima facie merit and places on government necessity of justification, the burden of which increases with length of the delay, and when the delay approaches a year and one half, government must provide a justification which convincingly outweighs prejudice which can normally be assumed to have been caused defendant. United States v. E. Rucker, Jr. (1972, 464 F. 2d 823, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 314).

A defendant would be deemed significantly prejudiced by 18-month delay in bringing his case to trial where the delay might well have cost defendant opportunity to serve most of sentence for offense of which he was found guilty concurrently with sentences imposed at a prior time, and where government failed to present convincing justification for the delay. Id.

Where defendant was arrested on December 19, was accorded a preliminary hearing December 29, was indicted February 10, and arraigned March 4, and thereafter from time to time over next seven months, there were filed assorted defense motions requiring attention by district court down to October 28 when defense first moved for speedy trial, and with government announcing its readiness for trial at any time, defendant's trial counsel represented he was then involved in another lengthy case, and defendant's case was next called for trial December 3, whereupon defense counsel requested that trial date be set for January 11, 1971, at which time trial went forward, defendant was not denied his right to a speedy trial. United States v. J. M. Hopkins (1972, 464 F. 2d 816, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 307).

Where there was delay of approximately 21 months between arrest and hearing on defendant's motion to dismiss for lack of speedy trial, Government failed to offer any justification for unusually lengthy interval between arrest and trial, major cause of delay arose from defendant's incarceration in Maryland that began only 26 days after his preliminary hearing and evidence of guilt against defendant was not so overwhelming as to negate any inference of prejudice to him in preparation of his defense, trial court erred in denying defendant's motion to dismiss indictment for want of speedy trial. C. D. Coleman v. United States (1971, 442 F. 2d 150, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 402).

Summation

Where portions of prosecution's closing argument were objectionable but were sufficiently offset by court's warning to jury respecting same matter, objectionable argument was not ground for reversal of robbery conviction. E. Trimble v. United States (1966, 369 F. 2d 950, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

Trial procedure

In its context and under all the circumstances of criminal case, trial judge's statement, in course of his response to jury's note of their inability to agree on verdict, that "You have got to reach a decision in this case" was coercive. M. C. Jenkins v. United States (1965, 85 S. Ct. 1059).

Viewed in context of whole charge, trial court's statements refusing to accept note that jury was deadlocked after only two hours deliberation and that jury should resume deliberations the next day were not coercive or an improper comment upon the evidence to jury which found defendant guilty on robbery count and not guilty on count charging assault with intent to commit robbery. M. C. Jenkins v. United States (1964, 330 F. 2d 220, 117 U.S. App. D.C. 346; rev'd 85 S. Ct. 1059).

In prosecution for rape, and for robbery of cleaning establishment, where court warned defendant's counsel that if he asked question of witness regarding whether defendant had been identified as the man who robbed another cleaning establishment about a week prior to the commission of the offenses involved, he would do so at his peril, refusal to allow the contradiction of witness' answer was proper. McKenzie v. United States (1942, 126 F. 2d 533, 75 U.S. App. D.C. 270).

Unnecessary delay

A reasonable period of time elapsing between occurrence of oral confession and the time reasonably necessary to reduce it to writing for it to be signed is not "unnecessary delay" within Federal Criminal Procedure Rule governing appearance before commissioner. Goldsmith & Carter v. United States (1960, 277 F. 2d 335, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 305, certiorari denied 81 S. Ct. 106, 364 U.S. 863, 5 L. Ed. 2d 86).

Under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure, preliminary hearing must be made promptly and without unnecessary delay and there is no requirement that preliminary hearing be immediate. Id.

Where there is a plea of unnecessary delay before preliminary hearing, the court must examine in detail all the surrounding circumstances, taking into consideration the manner in which the interrogation was conducted, the length of time involved, and particularly the purposes which the police had in conducting their inquiry, if the purposes can be discerned, and the court must not forget that interrogation is not an evil per se but an absolute necessity and that it often leads to releases, not charges. Id.

Validity of arrest

Allegations of lack of probable cause for defendant's arrest were not sufficient to warrant remand for hearing on that issue, where only attack on arrest related to reliability of informant upon whose lead defendants were arrested for robbery and informant's reliability had been established at a hearing in a related case. W. Cooper and V. Cooper v. United States (1963, 331 F. 2d 776, 118 U.S. App. D.C. 30).

Variance

There is no fatal variance between count which charged that the defendant took money from the "immediate actual possession" of post office custodian and proof that money he took was taken from postal employees, where the evidence showed that custodian had control and custody of money taken, that the defendant took money from an area within which the custodian reasonably could have been expected to exercise some physical control, and that the defendant did so by force directed at the custodian personally. United States v. W. B. Spears (1971, 449 F. 2d 946, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 284).

Robbery conviction will not be reversed on grounds there was a variance between indictment and proof where there was no objection to introduction of variant evidence and there was no showing or claim of actual prejudice. Jackson v. United States (1966, 359 F. 2d 260, 123 U.S. App. D.C. 276).

Verdict

In appropriate case there is duty to set aside verdict of guilty and to direct verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity; though this duty is to be performed with caution because of deference due jury in resolving factual issues. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U. S. App. D. C. 232).

Witnesses

Trial court properly rejected attempt by two witnesses who were unfamiliar with the defendant's reputation as to character traits in issue in robbery and assault case to testify as to his character. United States v. W. A. Hinkle (1971, 448 F. 2d 1157, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 234).

§ 22-2902. Attempt to commit robbery.

Whoever attempts to commit robbery, as defined in section 22-2901, by an overt act, shall be imprisoned for not more than three years or be fined not more than five hundred dollars, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1322, ch. 854, § 811.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Possession of fire arm, additional penalty, see §§ 22-3201, 22-3202.

Acquittal on one count, effect

Under this section and § 22-2901, attempted robbery or actual robbery is possible without assault, and acquittal of assault with intent to rob does not require acquittal of attempted robbery. Pope v. Huff (1944, 141 F. 2d 727, 79 U. S. App. D. C. 18).

Arrest without warrant

A police officer, who received a report from man that defendant appeared to have robbed a girl and started to walk toward defendant, who called a scout car for assistance when the defendant began running from officer, had probable cause for a warrantless arrest of defendant. A. B. Clarke v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 256 A. 2d 782).

Corroboration

Evidence sustained conviction of attempt to commit robbery in violation of this section, notwithstanding fact that testimony of principal prosecution witness was uncorroborated and that intent to rob could only be inferred. Accardo v. United States (1957, 249 F. 2d 519, 102 U. S. App. D. C. 4, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 787, 356 U. S. 943, 2 L. Ed. 2d 817).

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence, including testimony of girl friend of one defendant as to incriminating statements which both defendants made to her; sustained convictions for felony murder and for attempted robbery. A. Calloway and T. L. S. McCovey v. United States (1968, 399 F. 2d 1006, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 273).

Indictment

There was prejudice in joinder of crimes of robbery and attempted robbery and separate trials should have been granted, where the similarities were not so close that proof of one crime would establish proof of the other if there were separate trials, and the jury was confused and was unable to treat the evidence relevant to each charge separately and distinctly. Nathan L. Drew v. United States (1964, 331 F. 2d 85, 118 U.S. App. D.C. 11).

Under section 22-2901 robbery includes taking by force or violence, whether against resistance or by sudden or stealthy seizure or snatching, or by putting in fear, and to charge a taking "by force and violence, and by sudden and stealthy seizure, and against resistance, and by putting in fear" did not constitute a misjoinder of actions in a single count. Turner v. United States (1927, 16 F. 2d 535, 57 App. D. C. 39).

Infamous crime

Robbery is an infamous crime, and must be prosecuted by indictment. United States v. Evans (1906, 28 App. D.C. 264).

Sentence

After defendant's successful appeal of conviction for robbery and for assault with intent to commit robbery, for which he had been given concurrent sentences, defendant was upon his resentence for offense of attempted robbery, which arose out of conduct resulting in original indictment for assault with intent to commit robbery, entitled to credit on sentence for time he was in custody for want of bail prior to imposition of sentence for robbery, an offense with mandatory minimum sentence. W. L. Short, Jr. v. United States (1965, 344 F. 2d 550, 120 U.S. App. D.C. 165).

Where defendant, who had been sentenced on first indictment from two to six years, on each of four counts in second indictment from one to three years, with such sentences to take effect consecutively with one another and with sentence on first indictment, and on third indictment from one to three years concurrently with other sentences, had actually pleaded guilty only to one count in each of the three indictments, Court of Appeals would set aside sentence on second indictment except as to one sentence from one to three years, and, as to first indictment, district court could resentence defendant in view of fact that existing sentence was a general one covering two counts. Campbell v. United States (1958, 258 F. 2d 160, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 308).

Sentence fixing a maximum of twelve years conformed with the act of July 15, 1932, as did the minimum period of three years, being for a minimum period "not exceeding one-fifth of the maximum period fixed by law." McDonald v. Johnston (C. C. A. 9, 1937, 86 F. 2d 329).

Chapter 30.—SEDUCTION

Sec.

22-3001. Seduction.

§ 22-3001. Seduction.

If any person shall seduce and carnally know any female of previous chaste character, between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one years, out of wedlock, such seduction and carnal knowledge shall be deemed a misdemeanor, and the offender, being convicted thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years, or fined not exceeding two hundred dollars or may be punished by both such fine and imprisonment. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1332, ch. 854, § 873.)

Chastity

Virginity is the test of chastity. Bray v. United States (1913, 39 App. D.C. 600)

Evidence

Subsequent misconduct of prosecutrix with others is inadmissible "unless, perhaps, when improper relations with others follow closely upon the commission of the offense by the accused, and are preceded by proof of circumstances tending to show that the prosecutrix had not been previously chaste." Bray v. United States (1913, 39 App. D.C. 600).

Promise of marriage

"The object of the statute is to protect the chaste virgin against betrayal from an honest belief in the betrayer's protestations of love and affection, or an existing promise of marriage, or a present unqualified promise of marriage as an inducement for the commission of the act," but does not cover a promise of marriage contingent upon pregnancy resulting from the intercourse. Hamilton v. United States (1914, 41 App. D.C. 359, 51 L.R.A., N.S. 809).

Subsequent marriage

Subsequent marriage of the parties is no bar to prosecution. Bray v. United States (1913, 39 App. D.C. 600).

§ 22-3002. Seduction by teacher.

Any male person, over twenty-one years of age, who is superintendent, tutor, or teacher in any public or private school, seminary, or other institution, or instructor of any female in any branch of instruction, who has sexual intercourse with any female under twenty-one years of age and not under sixteen years of age, with her consent, while under his instruction during the term of his engagement as superintendent, tutor, or teacher, shall be imprisoned for not less than one year nor more than ten. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1331, ch. 854, § 871; June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 535, ch. 1329.)

1902—Act June 30, 1902, inserted the words "and not under sixteen years of age."

§ 22-3101. Forcible entry and detainer.

Whoever shall forcibly enter upon any premises, or, having entered without force, shall unlawfully detain the same by force against any person previously in the peaceable possession of the same and claiming right thereto, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than one year or a fine of not more than one hundred dollars, or both. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1327, ch. 854, § 851.)

§ 22-3102. Unlawful entry on property.

Any person who, without lawful authority, shall enter, or attempt to enter, any public or private dwelling, building or other property, or part of such dwelling, building or other property, against the will of the lawful occupant or of the person lawfully in charge thereof, or being therein or thereon, without lawful authority to remain therein or thereon shall refuse to quit the same on the demand of the lawful occupant, or of the person lawfully in charge thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $100 or imprisonment in the jail for not more than six months, or both, in the discretion of the court. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1324, ch. 854, § 824; Mar. 4, 1935, 49 Stat. 37, ch. 23; July 17, 1952, 66 Stat. 766, ch. 941, § 1.)

1935—Act Mar. 4, 1935, added the clause relating to unlawful entry of an unoccupied private dwelling.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 23-581.

Abuse of discretion

Record did not disclose abuse of discretion in denial of defendants' motion for new trial in prosecution for unlawful entry. A. Fatemi et al. v. United States (D.C. App. 1963, 192 A. 2d 525).

Applicability to White House

The District of Columbia unlawful entry statute applies to all public buildings, i.e., government buildings in the District of Columbia, including the White House or Executive Mansion. D. H. Whittlesey, et al. v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 221 A. 2d 86).

Arrest without warrant

Warrantless arrest of defendant, resulting in discovery of heroin upon his person, was justified by fact of defendant's unlawful entry committed in the presence of the arresting officers, in fifth floor of a vacant building being used as a narcotics pad; moreover, considering all the circumstances, the police officers had reasonable grounds to believe that narcotics laws were being violated and for that reason to arrest the defendant. United States v. Williams (1970, 442 F. 2d 738, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 16).

Assimilation of subsequently enacted statute

The District of Columbia statute providing that provisions of several laws and regulations within District of Columbia for protection of public or private property and preservation of peace and order are extended to all public buildings and public grounds belonging to United States within District of Columbia assimilated subsequently enacted District of Columbia unlawful entry statute, if such assimilation were necessary. D. H. Whittlesey, et al. v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 221 A. 2d 86).

Bona fide entry

Where existence of a bona fide belief of a right to enter is genuinely questionable, an issue proper for jury's determination arises, and a defendant who is accused of unlawful entry is entitled to an instruction thereon, but when there is no evidence supportive of accused's claim of a bona fide belief of a right to enter there is no duty to instruct that such a belief constitutes a valid defense. J. T. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 281 A. 2d 438).

Person who enters building for good purpose and with bona fide belief of his right to enter is not guilty of an unlawful entry in violation of District of Columbia statute. T. J. McGloin v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 232 A. 2d 90).

Where defendants received concurrent sentences in prosecution for possession of narcotics, possession of implements of crime, unlawful entry and narcotics vagrancy and evidence was sufficient to support conviction of possession of narcotics and possession of implements of crime, District of Columbia Court of Appeals would not pass upon sufficiency of evidence to support other convictions. S. Keith, R. L. Payne and T. J. Walker v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 232 A. 2d 92).

Constitutional rights

Unlawful entry conviction of defendant for failing to leave restaurant following request to leave by one lawfully in charge of the restaurant was not unconstitutional on ground defendant's presence in restaurant was in exercise of his First Amendment right of assembly with his friends in a public place. A. Drew v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 292 A. 2d 164; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 569, 409 U.S. 1062).

Construction

In this case, the court held that the conduct of defendants charged with unlawful entry in refusing to quit steps of United States capitol after being ordered to do so by chief of capitol police and in reading names of Vietnam war dead in ordinary speaking voice did not come within prohibition of Capitol Grounds statute as interpreted. United States v. J. Nicholson et al. (D.C. App. 1970, 263 A. 2d 56).

Conviction

Although conviction for second-degree burglary is vacated because of insufficiency of indictment, government can seek another grand jury indictment for such offense, but since indictment is sufficient to charge an unlawful entry and evidence is sufficient to support such a conviction, case is remanded for entry of judgment of conviction for unlawful entry if government does not object and trial court considers such action in the interests of justice; otherwise government can decide whether it wishes to submit defendant's case again to grand jury. United States v. J. B. Seegers, Jr. (1971, 445 F. 2d 232, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 162).

Custodial interrogation

Questions addressed to three defendants by arresting officers seeking an explanation for defendants' being in condemned house were noncoercive and not "custodial interrogation" within rule of Miranda v. State of Arizona. S. Keith, R. L. Payne and T. J. Walker v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 232 A. 2d 92).

Diplomatic immunity

District of Columbia police had authority to enter embassy and arrest foreign nationals, who had no claim to immunity and who were violating local law by trespassing in embassy, at Minister's request. A. Fatemi et al. v. United States (D.C. App. 1963, 192 A. 2d 525).

Due process

Actions of United States attorney in entering nolle prosequi of informations charging the more serious offense of unlawful entry and, thereafter, filing new informations regarding the less serious offense of disorderly conduct were not a violation of due process. Smith v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 219 A. 2d 842).

Duty to arrest

When police detectives saw narcotics paraphernalia in possession of defendants, officers were under statutory duty to arrest the offenders immediately. S. Keith, R. L. Payne and T. J. Walker v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 232 A. 2d 92).

Entry without lawful authority is requisite element of the offense of unlawful entry. C. Jones, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 282 A. 2d 561).

When a person enters a place with a good purpose and with a bona fide belief of the right to enter, he lacks the element of criminal intent required by this section and is not guilty of unlawful entry. J. T. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 281 A. 2d 438).

To be against the will of the lawful occupant the entry must be against the expressed will, that is, after warning to keep off the premises. Id.

Where construction company, the occupant of lot, had posted signs indicating its rightful control of the site, it had never authorized the defendant to use the site at night when no one was present, and where site was protected at night by locked gates and a mesh chain length fence topped by barbed wire, there was no need that an explicit "keep out" sign be posted to establish that the defendant was acting against the will of the construction company when he entered the site. Id.

One of the necessary elements for unlawful entry conviction is proof that the defendant entered or attempted to enter premises without lawful authority against the will of its lawful occupant. W. H. Dent v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 699).

Defendant who was found wandering by police officer inside of four-unit apartment building and on the roof and fire escape thereof could properly be convicted of unlawful entry under District of Columbia statute without showing that owner had not given an express warning that he should stay out of building. T. J. McGloin v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 232 A. 2d 90).

Statute proscribing unauthorized entry is not mere intent to restate common law of criminal trespass; statute punishes one who, without lawful authority, enters premises against will of lawful occupant. W. H. Bowman v. United States (D.C. App. 1965, 212 A. 2d 610).

For entry to be against will of lawful occupant in violation of statute entry must be against the expressed will, that is, after warning to keep off; it is not necessary that such warning be verbally expressed, it may be expressed by sign. Id.

In a prosecution for unlawfully entering a private dwelling against the will and without consent or authority of lawful occupant, one of essential elements is whether entry was against will of one who was lawful occupant. Moore v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 136 A. 2d 868).

Entry to secure divorce evidence

In prosecution for unlawful entry by a private detective and photographer, employed by husband to secure evidence against his wife in a divorce proceeding, alleged right of husband to make what would otherwise be an illegal entry in order to prevent the debauchment of his wife would be personal to the husband and could not be invoked by the defendants. Leon and McManaway v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 136 A. 2d 588).

Evidence—Admissibility

Prosecuting witness' testimony, in prosecution under this section, that she had had conversation with defendant as to whether or not he was entitled to go into her apartment on occasion when he had come in and beaten her up was admissible in that such testimony, along with her direct testimony that she had not given defendant permission to enter premises, bore directly upon defendant's lack of lawful authority to enter witness' apartment. W. H. Dent v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 699).

Where defendants' arrest for narcotics violations was legal, narcotics paraphernalia seized at time of the arrest was properly admitted in defendants' joint trial for narcotics violations. S. Keith, R. L. Payne and T. J. Walker v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 232 A. 2d 92).

—Sufficiency

Evidence, including evidence that the defendant was discovered by occupant of home about halfway through window, sustained conviction for unlawful entry. United States v. R. L. Thomas, Jr. (1971, 444 F. 2d 919, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 44).

Evidence in this case is sufficient to sustain conviction for unlawful entry. C. Jones, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 282 A. 2d 561).

Evidence, which showed that appellant was found in parts of the airlines' offices which were not open to the public and where he had no right to be, sustained conviction for unlawful entry. V. J. Bond, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 233 A. 2d 506).

Evidence supported conviction for unlawful entry. L. Perry v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 230 A. 2d 721).

Evidence, including evidence as to exclusive control or possession of television in defendant, sustained conviction for unlawful entry and petit larceny. J. L. Benboro v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 227 A. 2d 772).

Defendants were properly convicted under statute for unlawful entry where they, without a ticket and intent to board a train, had entered restricted area despite sign and public announcements whereby only persons having tickets were permitted through the gate to the restricted area. W. H. Bowman v. United States (D.C. App. 1965, 212 A. 2d 610).

Ineffective assistance of counsel

Fact that new counsel was appointed not more than 60 minutes before trial did not amount to ineffective assistance of counsel of defendant charged with simple assault, unlawful entry and petit larceny where no continuance was requested and defendant announced he was ready for trial, factual situation was not so complex as to necessitate any extensive investigation and there were no witnesses for the defense who could have been called, new counsel was experienced and diligent and made no claim that he was hampered by appointment shortly before trial. S. A. Tuttle v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 238 A. 2d 590).

Infamous crime

Prosecution for unlawful entry, which carries punishment by imprisonment not to exceed six months, is not "infamous crime" within constitutional provision relating to prosecutions by indictment. A. E. Harvin v. United States (1971, 445 F. 2d 675, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 199; cert. denied 92 S. Ct. 292, 404 U.S. 943).

Provision of Fifth Amendment requiring prosecution for infamous crimes by indictment does not preclude utilization of Youth Corrections Act following conviction of noninfamous offense upon prosecution by information, notwithstanding that defendant might be imprisoned under that Act up to six years. Id.

Information

Offense of unlawful entry may be charged by information. United States v. R. L. Thomas, Jr. (1971, 444 F. 2d 919, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 44).

— Sufficiency

Defendants, who were arrested after refusing to move out of corridor in House wing of Capitol building when ordered to do so by Capitol police, were entitled to know with certainty offense with which they were charged and possible penalty threatened and were entitled to definite reference to the law which they had allegedly violated, and thus where, notwithstanding request of defense, no one had given citation of statute under which prosecution was being had, other than statement of prosecutor that two sections were involved, convictions under section carrying lighter sentence, as requested by prosecutor, were required to be set aside. D. Smith et al. v. District of Columbia (1967, 387 F. 2d 233, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 275).

Instructions

In burglary prosecution, evidence that, during period of widespread disturbances and looting, the defendant was found hiding in a clothing store that had broken window and locked door did not warrant instruction on lesser offense of unlawful entry. United States v. R. Sinclair (1971, 444 F. 2d 888, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 13).

To warrant an instruction that a bona fide belief of a right to enter constitutes a defense to a charge of unlawful entry it is not sufficient that the accused merely claim a belief of a right to enter; a bona fide belief must have some reasonable basis. J. T. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 281 A. 2d 438).

Defendant is not entitled to an instruction that a good-faith belief by him that he could enter area is a defense to charge of unlawful entry since defendant's transgression of construction site in the daytime when construction activity was in progress and workers were present could not be said to have created a right, or a reasonable belief in such, to trespass on the locked unguarded site at night. Id.

Jurisdiction

Under former section 11-603, the police court had jurisdiction of information charging that accused unlawfully entered and unlawfully declined to leave dwelling house in District of Columbia. Fletcher v. McMahon (1941, 121 F. 2d 729, 73 App. D. C. 263, certiorari denied 62 S. Ct. 131, 314 U. S. 662, 86 L. Ed. 531).

Appellant having been convicted in police court under this section appealed the case and by so doing deprived lower court of jurisdiction, and they had no power to commit appellant to jail. Prioleau v. Superintendent of Wash. Asylum and Jail (1925, 2 F. 2d 317, 55 App. D.C. 99).

Lawful arrest

Police officer who observed defendant in hallway of building and, upon questioning defendant, received no logical explanation for his presence and who thereupon learned from building manager that the building was usually kept locked and the public was not invited to enter had sufficient ground to arrest defendant for unlawful entry committed in officer's presence, and after that valid arrest, the right to search defendant naturally followed. W. C. Best v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 237 A. 2d 825).

Lesser included offense rule

Lesser included offense rule was properly applied when court instructed jury that the offense of larceny from interstate commerce, for which offense appellant was charged, included the lesser offense of taking property without right, an offense for which appellant was not charged, and since sentence for taking property without right ran concurrently with sentence for unlawful entry, court need not consider claim of error predicated on the instruction. W. E. Humphrey v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 236 A. 2d 438).

Person lawfully in charge

Under District of Columbia unlawful entry statute making it a misdemeanor offense for any person, without lawful authority to enter a public building against will of lawful occupant or of person lawfully in charge thereof, one who was commanding officer of White House police and who was responsible for security of building had authority to order defendants to leave when they violated the regulations respecting visitors at the White House. D. H. Whittlesey, et al. v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 221 A. 2d 86).

Probable cause

Where the arresting officers had knowledge that no one had owner's permission to occupy particular vacant apartment, officers observed broken lock, damaged door panel and the opened door of the apartment, through which the defendant and companion could be seen, officers had probable cause to believe that the defendant and his companion had made unlawful entry, officers' entry into apartment without warrant to effect arrest was justified and search of the premises was valid as incident to lawful arrest. C. Jones, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 282 A. 2d 561).

Prosecution by indictment

Prosecution by indictment for unlawful entry was not constitutionally required where defendant was subject to imprisonment for more than one year when sentenced under the Federal Youth Corrections Act. A. E. Harvin v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 245 A. 2d 307; aff'd 445 F. 2d 675, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 199; cert. denied 92 S. Ct. 292, 404 U.S. 943).

Questions for jury

In prosecution for unlawful attempt to enter a private building, evidence was sufficient to raise jury question as to defendant's guilt. McFarland v. United State (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 163 F. 2d 627).

In prosecution for unlawfully entering a private dwelling against the will and without consent or authority of lawful occupant, wherein complaining witness presented evidence tending to show that she was tenant in possession of apartment and defense introduced testimony of rental agent that apartment was rented to a couple, whether complainant was a lawful occupant was a question for the jury. Moore v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 136 A. 2d 868).

Reasonable cause for arrest

Court in prosecution for unlawful entry was not required to inquire into legality or illegality of defendant's arrest, where no evidence was obtained as result of arrest. L. E. Smith v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 173 A. 2d 739).

Police officer who, while walking to rear of tavern more than one hour after closing time, saw a man who had been peering from rear of tavern, suddenly pull his head back, and who then observed two men walking away rapidly, one of whom, when stopped by officer, was holding hammer between his legs, had reasonable cause to believe that the two men were engaged in a felonious act, and, therefore, their arrest was proper and admission of hammer in evidence in subsequent criminal prosecution was proper. McFarland v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 163 A. 2d 627).

Review—Remand

In a case in which guilty verdict was ambiguous for failure to state whether it referred to offense of house-breaking or to offense of unlawful entry, the court held that remand for new trial was appropriate remedy. K. F. Glenn v. United States (1969, 420 F. 2d 1323, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 120).

Sentence

Where youth was found guilty of unlawful entry, an offense punishable by fine or imprisonment in jail for not more than six months, he was subject to sentence under D.C. Code § 22-3202 or under Youth Corrections Act, and was properly sentenced under latter, which authorizes sentence thereunder on conviction of offense punishable by imprisonment, despite youth's service of seven months' presentence jail time for which he claimed credit under statute. United States v. A. E. Lewis, Jr. (1971, 447 F. 2d 1262, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 93).

Unlawful purposes of occupancy

In prosecution for unlawfully entering a private dwelling against will and without consent or authority of lawful occupant, issues as to whether complaining party occupied apartment under an alias or occupied it for purpose of having adulterous relations with another had no bearing on question of whether she was a lawful occupant. Moore v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 136 A. 2d 868).

Verdict

Where defendant was charged with housebreaking and jury was instructed on elements of both housebreaking and on lesser included offense of unlawful entry and returned one word verdict of "guilty" without specifying to which offense this finding related, the verdict is ambiguous and conviction for housebreaking cannot be founded upon it. K. F. Glenn v. United States (1969, 420 F. 2d 1323, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 120).

Information—Sufficiency

Defendants, who were arrested after refusing to move out of corridor in House wing of Capitol building when ordered to do so by Capitol police, were entitled to know with certainty offense with which they were charged and possible penalty threatened and were entitled to definite reference to the law which they had allegedly violated, and thus where, notwithstanding request of defense, no one had given citation of statute under which prosecution was being had, other than statement of prosecutor that two sections were involved, convictions under section carrying lighter sentence, as requested by prosecutor, were required to be set aside. D. Smith et al. v. District of Columbia (1967, 387 F. 2d 233, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 275).

Information charging defendant arrested during peace demonstration with disorderly conduct in that she did with intent to provoke breach of peace congregate with others on public street and on grounds of United States Capitol, and did refuse to move, which failed to specify which of several potentially applicable statutes was basis of prosecution, was insufficient. D. Feeley v. District of Columbia (1967, 387 F. 2d 216, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 258).

Prosecution by U.S. attorney

United States, through the United States attorney, and not the District of Columbia, through corporation counsel, is the proper prosecutive authority for alleged violation of this section prescribing maximum fine of $500, or imprisonment for not more than six months, or both, for disorderly and unlawful conduct in or about public buildings and public grounds belonging to the United States within the District. District of Columbia v. C. Ackerman (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 24).

Sentence

Since prosecutions were brought under general disorderly conduct sections rather than the Capitol Grounds statute, defendants should have been sentenced under statute providing that any person guilty of disorderly conduct in or about public buildings and public grounds shall upon conviction thereof be fined not more than $50 so that sentences of 91 days in jail were improper notwithstanding that government might have had a choice as to which statute it would proceed under. D. Feeley, A. Uhrie, B. Dunlap v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 220 A. 2d 325).

§ 22-3112. Destroying or defacing buildings, statues, monuments, offices, dwellings, and structures.

It shall not be lawful for any person or persons to wilfully or wantonly disfigure, cut, chip, or cover or rub with or otherwise place filth or excrement of any kind upon any property, public or private, in the District of Columbia, or any public or private building, statue, monument, office, dwelling or structure of any kind, or which may be in course of erection, or the doors, windows, steps, railing, fencing, balconies, balustrades, stairs, porches, or halls, or the walls or sides, or the walls of any inclosure thereof; or to write, mark, or paint obscene or indecent words or language thereon, or to draw, paint, mark, or write obscene or indecent figures representing obscene or indecent objects; or to write, mark or draw, or paint any other word, sign, or figure thereon, without the consent of the owner or proprietor thereof, or, in case of public property, of the person having charge, custody, or control thereof, under penalty of a fine not to exceed one hundred dollars, or imprisonment not to exceed six months, or both such fine and imprisonment. (July 29, 1892, 27 Stat. 322, ch. 320, § 1; July 8, 1898, 30 Stat. 723, ch. 638; Apr. 21, 1906, 34 Stat. 126, ch. 1647; Nov. 8, 1965, 79 Stat. 1307, Pub. L. 89-347, § 2.)

1965—Section 2 of act Nov. 8, 1965, amended section by striking, "destroy, injure, disfigure, cut, chip, break" and inserting in lieu "disfigure, cut, chip."

1906—Act Apr. 21, 1906, inserted the words "wilfully or wantonly", increased the fine limits from $50 to $100 and provided for imprisonment or fine and imprisonment.

CROSS REFERENCE

Prosecution, see § 22-109.

NOTES TO DECISIONS*Application of section

This section does not apply to the destruction of movable property (see § 22-403). Nation v. District of Columbia (1910, 34 App. D.C. 453, 26 L.R.A., N.S., 996).

Evidence

In prosecution for destroying private property, where complainant purchased premises at foreclosure and sent a letter to defendant alleging ownership, and successfully prosecuted a suit for eviction, while deed was admissible evidence of ownership, it was not the only admissible evidence and complainant's testimony relating thereto, was equally admissible. Sims v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 120 A. 2d 69).

Evidence supported conviction of destroying private property. Id.

Indictment of information

The value of the injured property need not be alleged or proved in prosecutions under this section. Nation v. District of Columbia (1910, 34 App. D.C. 453, 26 L.R.A., N.S., 996).

Prosecutions by United States Attorney

United States Attorney for District of Columbia rather than Corporation Counsel for District was the attorney who should prosecute offense of destroying private property in violation of the District of Columbia Code, where the offense was punishable by fine not to exceed $100, or imprisonment not to exceed six months, or both. District of Columbia v. Moody, Hill and Hamilton (1962, 304 F. 2d 943, 113 U.S. App. D.C. 67).

Questions for jury

In prosecution for destroying private property, evidence upon the question as to whether complainant was holder of legal title or had right of possession when the offense was committed was sufficient for the jury. Sims v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 120 A. 2d 69).

Variance in proof

There was no fatal variance between information charging defendant with defacing doors of elevator in private building by drawing, marking and writing sign or figure thereon and proof which showed that defendant, who did not ask for any further particulars, put stickers on door. J. Patler, etc. v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 171 A. 2d 508).

§ 22-3113. Destroying or defacing building material for streets.

It shall not be lawful for any person or persons to destroy, break, cut, disfigure, deface, burn, or otherwise injure any building materials, or materials intended for the improvement of any street, avenue, alley, foot pavement, roads, highways, or inclosure, whether public or private property, or remove the same (except in pursuance of law or by consent of the owner) from the place where the same may be collected for purposes of building or improvement as aforesaid; or to remove, cut, destroy, or injure any scaffolding, ladder, or other thing used in or about such building or improvement, under a penalty of not more than twenty-five dollars for each and every such offense. (July 29, 1892, 27 Stat. 322, ch. 320, § 2.)

Prosecutions, see § 22-109.

§ 22-3114. Destroying cemetery railing or tomb.

If any person shall maliciously cut down, demolish, or otherwise injure any railing, fence, or inclosure around or upon any cemetery, or shall injure or deface any tomb or inscription thereon, he shall be fined not more than one hundred dollars. (Mar. 3 1901, 31 Stat. 1327, ch. 854, § 850.)

§ 22-3115. Offenses against property of electric lighting, heating, or power companies.

Whoever shall knowingly connect or disconnect any electrical conductor belonging to any company using or engaged in the manufacture and supply of electric current for purposes of light, heat, and power, or either of them, or makes any connection with any such electrical conductor for the purpose of using or wasting the electric current, or who in any wise tampers with any meter used to register current consumed, or who interferes with the operating of any dynamo or other electrical appliance of such company, or tampers with or interferes with the poles.

wires, conduits, or other apparatus used by such companies, unless such person or persons shall be duly authorized by or be in the employ of such company, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one thousand dollars or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both. (June 30, 1902, 32 Stat. 534, ch. 1329, § 826a.)

§ 22-3116. Tapping gas pipes.

Any person who, with intent to injure or defraud any gas company in the District of Columbia, shall make or cause to be made any pipe, tube, or other instrument or contrivance, or connect the same, or cause it to be connected with any main service pipe or other pipe for conducting or supplying illuminating gas in such manner as to connect with and be calculated to supply illuminating gas to any burner or orifice by which illuminating gas is consumed, around or without passing through the meter provided for the measuring and registering of the quantity of gas there consumed, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding six months or by fine not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars. (June 23, 1874, 18 Stat. 280, ch. 480, § 15.)

§ 22-3117. Tapping or injuring water-pipes—Tampering with water meters.

Any person who, with intent to injure or defraud the District of Columbia, shall make or cause to be made any pipe, tube, or other instrument or contrivance, or connect the same or cause it to be connected with any water main or service pipe or other pipe for conducting or supplying Potomac water, in such manner as to pass or carry the water, or any portion thereof, around or without passing through the meter provided for the measuring and registering of the Potomac water supplied to any premises, or who shall, without permission from the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, tamper with or break any water meter or break the seal thereof, or in any manner change the reading of the dial thereof, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or by fine not exceeding two hundred and fifty dollars. (Apr. 5, 1892, 27 Stat. 14 ch. 34.)

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS TO COMMISSIONER

§ 22-3118. Maliciously making water impure.

Every person who maliciously commits any act by reason of which the supply of water, or any part thereof, to the city of Washington, becomes impure, filthy, or unfit for use, shall be fined not less than $500 nor more than $1,000, or imprisoned at hard labor not more than three years nor less than one year. #### § 22-3119. Placing obstructions on or displacement of railway tracks.

track, with intent to endanger the passage of any locomotive or car, shall be imprisoned for not more than ten years. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1327, ch. 854, § 846.)

§ 22-3120. Obstructing public road—Removing milestones.

§ 22-3121. Obstructing public highway.

Any person who, without lawful authority, shall obstruct the free use of any of the public highways, which had been used and recognized as public county roads for twenty-five years prior to May 3, 1862, and which were thereafter duly surveyed, recorded, and declared public highways according to law, shall be subject to a fine for each offense of not less than one hundred nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars and be imprisoned till the fine and the costs of suit and collection of the same are paid. ### § 22-3201. Possession, sale, transfer, and use of dangerous weapons—Definition.

"Pistol," as used in this chapter, means any firearm with a barrel less than twelve inches in length.

"Sawed-off shotgun," as used in this chapter, means any shotgun with a barrel less than twenty inches in length.

"Machine gun," as used in this chapter, means any firearm which shoots automatically or semi-automatically more than twelve shots without re-loading.

"Person," as used in this chapter, includes individual, firm, association, or corporation.

"Sell" and "purchase" and the various derivatives of such words, as used in this chapter, shall be construed to include letting on hire, giving, lending, borrowing, and otherwise transferring.

"Crime of violence," as used in this chapter, means any of the following crimes, or an attempt to commit any of the same, namely: Murder, manslaughter, rape, mayhem, maliciously disfiguring another, abduction, kidnaping, burglary, robbery, housebreaking, larceny, any assault with intent to kill, commit rape, or robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, or assault with intent to commit any offense punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 650, ch. 465, § 1; Dec. 27, 1967, Pub. L. 90-226, § 501, title V, 81 Stat. 736.)

AMENDMENT

1967—Section 501, Act Dec. 27, 1967, Pub. L. 90-226 amended the definition "Crime of violence" by adding "robbery" thereto.

REPEALS

Section 17 of act July 8, 1932, provided that: "The following sections of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia, 1919, namely, sections 855, 856, and 857 [erroneously declared to be D.C. Code 1919, probably intended to read D.C. Code 1901; codified in D.C. Code 1929, title 6, §§ 114-116], and all other Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent herewith [act July 8, 1932], are hereby repealed."

Construction

Enactment of gun control law (this chapter) for the District of Columbia in 1932 did not foreclose further exercise of power granted District by 1906 Act (§ 1-227) authorizing Council to make and enforce all regulations deemed necessary for regulation of firearms in absence of expression in 1932 Act of intent to preempt the entire field and in view of demonstrated design of the regulations to leave areas preempted by the statute unaffected. Maryland & District of Columbia Rifle and Pistol Association, Inc. v. W. E. Washington, Commissioner, et al. (1971, 442 F.2d 123, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 375).

Unsuccessful efforts by D.C. Board of Commissioners to obtain legislation supplementing 1932 gun control law enacted for the District of Columbia, and congressional inaction on the Commissioners' requests, does not indicate doubt as to Commissioners' authority to adopt gun control regulations and does not obliterate authority derived from 1906 statute (§ 1227) authorizing gun control regulations. Id.

Merger of offenses

Contention that it is improper for defendant to be convicted and sentenced on both counts I which charged under Federal mail robbery statute with assaulting post office custodian with intent to rob him, and count II under District of Columbia robbery and crime of violence statute with robbing the custodian because the assault charged in count I "merged" with completed robbery charged in count II will be considered by the Court of Appeals even though issue was not raised in trial court. United States v. W. B. Spears (1971, 449 F.2d 946, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 284).

Sentence

The Court of Appeals will consider claim that it was improper for the defendant to be convicted and sentenced on both counts I which charged under Federal mail robbery statute the assault of post office custodian with intent to rob him, and count II which charged under District of Columbia statutes the robbing of custodian, notwithstanding fact that the defendant received concurrent sentences, because of possible harmful effect on defendant of myriad collateral consequences of an improper double felony conviction and desirability of having such issue settled. United States v. W. B. Spears (1971, 449 F.2d 946, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 284).

§ 22-3202. Committing crime when armed—Added punishment.

(a) Any person who commits a crime of violence in the District of Columbia when armed with or having readily available any pistol or other firearm (or imitation thereof) or other dangerous or deadly weapon (including a sawed-off shotgun, shotgun, machinegun, rifle, dirk, bowie knife, butcher knife, switchblade knife, razor, blackjack, billy, or metallic or other false knuckles)—

(1) may, if he is convicted for the first time of having so committed a crime of violence in the District of Columbia, be sentenced, in addition to the penalty provided for such crime, to a period of imprisonment which may be up to life imprisonment; and

(2) shall, if he is convicted more than once of having so committed a crime of violence in the District of Columbia, be sentenced, in addition to the penalty provided for such crime, to a minimum period of imprisonment of not less than five years and a maximum period of imprisonment which may not be less than three times the minimum sentence imposed and which may be up to life imprisonment.

(b) Where the maximum sentence imposed under this section is life imprisonment, the minimum sentence imposed under subsection (a) may not exceed fifteen years' imprisonment.

(c) Any person sentenced under subsection (a) (2) of this section may be released on parole in accordance with chapter 2 of title 24, at any time after having served the minimum sentence imposed under that subsection.

(d) (1) Chapter 402 of title 18 of the United States Code (Federal Youth Corrections Act) shall not apply with respect to any person sentenced under paragraph (2) of subsection (a).

(2) The execution or imposition of any term of imprisonment imposed under paragraph (2) of subsection (a) may not be suspended and probation may not be granted.

(e) Nothing contained in this section shall be construed as reducing any sentence otherwise imposed or authorized to be imposed.

(f) No conviction with respect to which a person has been pardoned on the ground of innocence shall be taken into account in applying this section. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 650, ch. 465, § 2; Dec. 27, 1967, Pub. L. 90-226, § 605, title VI, 81 Stat. 737; July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 205, title II, 84 Stat. 600.)

1967—Section 605, Act Dec. 27, 1967, Pub. L. 90-226, amended section to read as set out in supplements I, II, and III of the 1967 edition of the code. For provisions of section prior to this amendment, see 1967 edition of the code.

APPLICABILITY OF 1970 AMENDMENT

Section 901(b)(3) of Pub. L. 91-358, provided as follows: (3) The amendments made by sections 201 [sections 22-104 and 22-104a] and 205 [Sections 22-3202 and 22-3213] of this Act shall apply with respect to any person who commits an offense after the effective date of this Act. [For effective date see note preceding § 11-101.]

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1970 AMENDMENT

See note preceding section 11-101.

SENTENCE FOR OFFENSES COMMITTED PRIOR TO DEC. 27, 1967, AND SEPARABILITY OF PROVISIONS

See §§ 1101 and 1102 of Act Dec. 27, 1967, Pub. L. 90-226, set out as notes to § 22-501.

CROSS REFERENCE

Minimum sentence when previously convicted of a crime of violence, see § 24-203.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 22-3213, 24-203.

Allen charge

Submission of "Allen" charge, with certain statements added thereto, in prosecution for robbery and assault, is not reversible error since the defendants did not object to the charge as given, either initially or as part of the supplementary instructions, and court's formulation did not in either instance constitute plain error. United States v. J. Wilson (1971, 449 F. 2d 1005, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 343).

Assistance of counsel

Where record indicated that the trial court was aware of defendant's long term dissatisfaction with his retained counsel, that defendant had sought to discharge counsel, that defendant had asked chief judge of District Court for counsel from legal aid agency and that defendant was a pauper seeking court appointed counsel, but record did not reflect specifically what action was taken by District Court, case would be remanded to District Court to determine what action, if any, was taken by District Court on motion to discharge counsel of record and request for appointed counsel and whether defendant was prejudiced thereby. United States v. T. R. Thomas (1971, 450 F. 2d 1355, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 308).

Consecutive sentences

Sentencing of defendant, who was adjudged guilty on five counts of assaulting five individuals with a dangerous weapon and on one count of robbery from the person, to consecutive terms of imprisonment for robbery and assault is not error since assaults on four individuals, excluding assault charge relating to robbery victim, are separate offenses from robbery and defendant had prior felony conviction. G. Sutton, Jr. v. United States (1970, 434 F. 2d 462, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 188; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1676, 402 U.S. 988).

If additional punishment is to be meted out in armed robbery prosecution for use of a dangerous weapon, consecutive sentences for robbery and assault with dangerous weapon may be an inappropriate means to accomplish that result and more impregnable sentence may result if the offense is charged and sentenced under § 22-3201 providing that robbery as crime of violence may be punished more severely when committed with a dangerous weapon and this section authorizing indeterminate sentence up to life for crimes of violence when committed with a dangerous weapon. Id.

Construction

The Federal mail robbery statute and the District of Columbia robbery and crime of violence statutes are applicable throughout the District of Columbia. United States v. W. B. Spears (1971, 449 F. 2d 946, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 284).

Where evidence in proof of count II which charged defendant under District of Columbia robbery and crime of violence statutes with robbing post office custodian of money showed that the defendant actually consummated the same robbery he was charged with attempting in count I under the Federal mail robbery statute, defendant could not be convicted of both the attempt and the completed robbery since Congress did not intend that a statute drawn to proscribe attempt should also support a separate conviction for completed offense when defendant is charged with and convicted of substantially the same crime he is charged with attempting. Id.

Dangerous or deadly weapon

A pistol, even though nonoperable, was a "dangerous weapon" within meaning of statute forbidding suspension of sentence or probation for person committing crime of violence when armed with a dangerous or deadly weapon. United States v. J. Prater (1972, 462 F. 2d 292, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 188).

Double jeopardy

The constitutional immunity from double jeopardy is a personal right which, if not affirmatively pleaded by defendant at time of trial, will be regarded as waived. United States v. C. E. Scott (1972, 464 F. 2d 832, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Where defendant did not raise at his second trial the issue that his acquittal of armed robbery at first trial was acquittal of unarmed robbery as well, defendant waived the defense of double jeopardy. Id.

Where first jury returned verdict of not guilty of armed robbery but was unable to agree as to whether defendant was an unarmed robber and mistrial was declared, the acquittal of armed robbery was not an acquittal of unarmed robbery charge and double jeopardy prohibition did not preclude retrial of unarmed robbery charge. Id.

Due process

Exhibition, in presence of defense counsel, of photograph of formal counseled lineup to two eyewitnesses to robbery on day of robbery trial, 14 months after the robbery, did not constitute violation of due process. United States v. W. S. King (1972, 461 F. 2d 152, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 61).

Evidence

Government is not guilty of any impropriety in failing to produce photographs of defendants, made on day of arrest, before they were demanded by defense counsel. United States v. P. J. Trantham, Jr. (1971, 448 F. 2d 1036, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 113).

Admissibility

In prosecution for armed robbery of bus passengers and assault with dangerous weapon, even if the defendant's statement, "I didn't mean to do it" made after he was arrested and brought back to the scene and confronted by outraged passengers was somehow attributable to hostile confrontation of passengers, it was not of character to justify finding that it undermined fairness of trial, considering evidence as whole. United States v. I. Porcha (1971, 450 F. 2d 697, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 236).

Sufficiency

Evidence sustained conviction of first-degree felony-murder, first-degree premeditated murder and armed robbery. United States v. R. L. Mack (1972, 466 F. 2d 333, 151 U.S. App. D.C. 162; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 297, 409 U.S. 952).

Evidence including testimony of policemen and victims that there was a gun and that a voiced threat was made to shoot one victim was sufficient to justify jury in findings that gun was dangerous and that the offense of assault with intent to rob was committed while armed with a dangerous weapon as alleged in indictment. United States v. J. Prater (1972, 462 F. 2d 292, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 188).

Evidence on issue of joint criminal venture and possession of purse and shotgun found in speeding automobile, occupied by defendants as driver and passenger, a short time after a purse had been forcibly taken from a pedestrian by two men, one of whom was armed with pistol, was sufficient to support conviction of armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon and possession of unregistered firearm, notwithstanding that at least one of four or five original occupants of vehicle had fled and that identification of defendants was "inconclusive" at best. United States v. J. E. McCall (1972, 460 F. 2d 952, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 444).

Evidence that, inter alia, the defendant and two other men entered store together, that they conversed together until other customers left the store, that defendant did not lie on the floor when one of the codefendants, with a gun, announced a "stick-up" and said "To the floor.", and that defendant moved from near the door to near the cash register after a codefendant ordered store employee to open it is sufficient to support defendant's conviction for armed robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon, and conflicting testimony of defendant and his codefendants whereby they all sought to establish that defendant and one of his codefendants were innocent bystanders did not destroy the permissible inference of defendant's guilt. United States v. W. D. Lumpkin (1971, 448 F. 2d 1085, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 162).

Evidence, including permissible inference jury was permitted to draw from fact that the defendant was found within an hour of larceny in exclusive possession of recently stolen truck, supported convictions of kidnapping of truck helper, armed robbery, and assault with a dangerous weapon. United States v. L. B. Wolford (1971, 444 F. 2d 876, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Complaining witness' testimony that he was robbed at gunpoint is sufficient to sustain conviction for armed robbery even though the weapon used was not put in evidence. United States v. R. Stevenson (1971, 443 F. 2d 661, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 246).

Evidence that the defendant was seen entering getaway car, carrying a gun, some ten minutes before robbery, accompanied by one of confessed active perpetrators, that someone drove getaway car, and that the defendant was seen with two of active robbers one day later is sufficient to take to jury aiding and abetting case against defendant for entering bank with intent to commit robbery therein, bank robbery, armed robbery, and assault with a dangerous weapon. United States v. T. Parker (1971, 442 F. 2d 779, 143 U.S. App. D.C. 57).

Harmless error

In prosecution for assault with intent to kill while armed and carrying dangerous weapon, in view of overwhelming direct evidence timely placing the defendant at scene of crime and equivocal and unsupported nature of his own testimony concerning his whereabouts at time of offense, any emphasis by the court or his counsel on his more general defenses and any other claimed error were harmless beyond reasonable doubt. United States v. W. D. Craven (1972, 458 F. 2d 802, 147 U.S. App. D.C. 383).

In view of clear evidence that the defendant aided and abetted his confederate who was armed with a gun, any error concerned with alleged prolixity of indictment that charged both armed robbery and robbery, or any other claim of defect in presentation of two theories of robbery to jury, is harmless. United States v. I. Porcha (1971, 450 F. 2d 697, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 236).

Identification

Where circumstances of photographic identification of defendant by one of the eyewitnesses was fully explored at pretrial hearing and there was no suggestion that police had acted wilfully, recklessly or in bad faith in not producing the photographs which made up group from which witness selected defendant's picture at a time before the importance of recording photographs used in group was emphasized by any court, failure of police to produce photographs at trial, in which Government did not rely on photographic identification and made no reference to it, was not prejudicial to defendant who asserted that failure to produce pictures circumscribed his right to explore fairness of identification process. United States v. H. R. Thomas, Jr. (1972, 463 F. 2d 314, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 368; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 198, 409 U.S. 870).

Although absence of photographs used in making up group of pictures shown to eyewitness who picked defendant's picture was a factor to be considered in weighing evidence concerning identification of defendant by eyewitness, the absence of photographs did not create any presumption of impropriety in identification process. Id.

Case must be considered on its own facts, and convictions based on eyewitness identification at trial following pretrial identification by photograph will be set aside on that ground only if photographic identification procedure was so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. United States v. W. S. King (1972, 461 F. 2d 152, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 61).

Where witnesses to robbery had ample opportunity to observe defendant at time of robbery, prosecutor offered pretrial photographic identification procedure for protection of defendant, the viewing by the two witnesses of photographs of formal counseled, corporeal lineup was in presence of defense counsel and the procedure was conducted fairly, the photographic identification procedure was not so impermissibly suggestive as to give rise to very substantial likelihood of irreparable misidentification. Id.

Fact that employee of robbed liquor store was unable to identify defendant as robber did not establish that in-court identification by part-owner of liquor store did not have source independent of photographic and lineup identifications where employee and part-owner observed robbers from different angles and under different stresses. United States v. L. T. Lee (1972, 459 F. 2d 1365, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 341).

Where victims of robbery reported that one robber had short hair and the other had "an African haircut," photographic identification from nine photographs of five men with bush haircuts and four with shorter hair was not impermissibly suggestive. Id.

Identification of the defendants who were charged with armed robbery and assault with a deadly weapon, by victim, after defendants were picked up near scene of the crime and brought back to a squad car did not violate the defendants' due process rights on theory identification was tainted by suggestive circumstances surrounding it, since the victim had given officer a detailed description of the robbers, had participated in the search for them and in fact had pointed out defendants to the arresting officer. United States v. J. Wilson (1971, 449 F. 2d 1005, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 343).

Indictment

The words "said defendants being then and there armed with a certain pistol" were considered as mere surplusage to an indictment for robbery and not to charge a separate offense for the purpose of increasing the punishment. Tomlinson v. United States (1938, 93 F. 2d 652, 68 App. D.C. 106, 114 A.L.R. 1315, certiorari denied 58 S. Ct. 645, 303 U.S. 646, 82 L. Ed. 1102).

Insanity defense

Where record unequivocally established that, after three years of representing defendant, defense counsel concurred with conclusions reached by psychiatrist and judge that defendant was a malingerer and expressed opinion that it was tactically unwise to raise an insanity defense unless he felt he had a chance, defendant was not entitled to reversal of conviction of armed robbery, assault with a deadly weapon and carrying a pistol without a license on ground of judicial interference with his defense counsel's attempt to pursue insanity issue. United States v. F. L. Simms (1972, 463 F. 2d 1273, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 182).

Trial judge's decision not to interpose an insanity defense sua sponte was not an abuse of discretion constituting reversible error, especially in view of finding that defendant was malingering. Id.

Instructions

Where prosecution goes beyond offering identical hearsay testimony elicited by defense, court should give immediate limiting instruction. United States v. M. Thompson, Jr. (1972, 465 F. 2d 583, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 403).

Where defendant elicited hearsay testimony from prosecution witness for purpose of impeachment and did not request any limiting instruction, failure of trial court to sua sponte give limiting instruction following Government's examination of witness during which same hearsay testimony was offered in light favorable to Government was not reversible error. Id.

Evidence on question as to whether missing alibi witness was peculiarly available to defendant was sufficient to support instruction that failure of party to produce as witness one peculiarly within power of such party creates inference that such testimony would be unfavorable. United States v. C. E. Scott (1972, 464 F. 2d 832, U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Instruction on defendant as witness, including statement that jury might consider defendant's vital interest in outcome, was not improper. United States v. J. Jones (1972, 459 F. 2d 1225, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

Viewing the trial court's charge in its entirety clearly showed that instruction on specific intent was not omitted in prosecution for armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying a dangerous weapon. United States v. S. F. Gaither (1971, 440 F. 2d 262, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 234).

Since the defendant's trial counsel did not move, during time either side was presenting evidence, for order of production of the two possible witnesses who were alleged to have been in the house at time of robbery, and there was no showing that government had control over the witnesses, the trial court properly denied missing witness instruction. United States v. R. K. Pugh (1970, 436 F. 2d 222, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 68).

Jurisdiction

Where Superior Court judge dismissed juvenile's petition for habeas corpus without prejudice to its being filed in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, the respondent was federal officer, petitioner was charged with federal offense as well as with violations of District of Columbia law and petitioner was challenging the conditions of his confinement, federal court had jurisdiction to consider the petition. J. Bland v. C. M. Rodgers (1971, 332 F. Supp. 989).

Contention that it is improper for defendant to be convicted and sentenced on both counts I which charged under Federal mail robbery statute with assaulting post office custodian with intent to rob him, and count II under District of Columbia robbery and crime of violence statute with robbing the custodian because the assault charged in count I "merged" with completed robbery charged in count II will be considered by the Court of Appeals even though issue was not raised in trial court. United States v. W. B. Spears (1971, 449 F. 2d 946, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 284).

The part of the Federal mail robbery statute prohibiting assault was intended by Congress to prohibit certain kinds of attempts to rob and cannot support an independent conviction when a defendant is charged with and convicted of committing, in violation of robbery statute applicable in District of Columbia, the same crime he is charged with attempting. Id.

Where helper on truck was detained and transported against his will to a different location, several miles away from the scene where truck was hijacked, and purpose of detention, to facilitate success of hijacking, was to secure benefit to hijackers, two separate and distinct crimes were committed, i.e., kidnapping and armed robbery of contents of truck, and the offenses did not merge. United States v. L. B. Wolford (1971, 444 F. 2d 876, 144 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Prosecutions

In a robbery case, the Government has the right to charge, as separate assaults, assaults against bystanders who are not robbed. G. Sutton, Jr. v. United States (1970, 434 F. 2d 462, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 188; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 1676, 402 U.S. 988).

Government has the right, in robbery prosecution, to charge lesser included or alternative offenses to armed robbery in order to allow for contingencies in proof. Id.

The Government may decline to charge armed robbery under this section authorizing an indeterminate sentence up to life for crimes of violence when committed with a dangerous weapon, and may instead rely on prior formulation of robbery and assault with a dangerous weapon. Id.

Question for jury

Whether defendant, who armed himself with a pistol following discovery of theft of tape deck from his automobile, who attempted to retrieve deck when companion discovered deck in service station and who shot and seriously wounded service station attendant following argument, had acted in self-defense was for jury. United States v. D. W. McCrae (1972, 459 F. 2d 1140, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 116).

Remand

Conviction of juvenile of first-degree felony-murder armed robbery, assault with dangerous weapon, assault upon police officer with dangerous weapon and carrying dangerous weapon would be remanded to District Court to consider possibility of sentencing under the Youth Corrections Act. United States v. W. Howard (1971, 449 F. 2d 1086, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 10).

Right to counsel

Defendant's constitutional right to counsel was not violated when after his arrest but in absence of counsel police showed eyewitnesses a group of photographs and an eyewitness, who had had a good opportunity for observation of defendant did pick defendant's photograph, where judge found that there was an independent source for the identification in court and there was no evidence of unfairness in exhibition of photographs. United States v. H. R. Thomas, Jr. (1972, 463 F. 2d 314, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 368; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 198, 409 U.S. 870).

Sentence

The Court of Appeals will consider claim that it was improper for the defendant to be convicted and sentenced on both counts I which charged under Federal mail robbery statute the assault of post office custodian with intent to rob him, and count II which charged under District of Columbia statutes the robbing of custodian, notwithstanding fact that the defendant received concurrent sentences, because of possible harmful effect on defendant of myriad collateral consequences of an improper double felony conviction and desirability of having such issue settled. United States v. W. B. Spears (1971, 449 F. 2d 946, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 284).

Where youth was found guilty of unlawful entry, an offense punishable by fine or imprisonment in jail for not more than six months, he was subject to sentence under D.C. Code § 22-3202 or under Youth Corrections Act, and was properly sentenced under latter, which authorizes sentence thereunder on conviction of offense punishable by imprisonment, despite youth's service of seven months' presentence jail time for which he claimed credit under statute. United States v. A. E. Lewis, Jr. (1971, 447 F. 2d 1262, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 93).

A delay of over one year between arrest and trial raises a Sixth Amendment claim of prima facie merit and places on government necessity of justification, the burden of which increases with length of the delay, and when the delay approaches a year and one half, government must provide a justification which convincingly outweighs prejudice which can normally be assumed to have been caused defendant. United States v. E. Rucker, Jr. (1972, 464 F. 2d 823, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 314).

A defendant would be deemed significantly prejudiced by 18-month delay in bringing his case to trial where the delay might well have cost defendant opportunity to serve most of sentence for offense of which he was found guilty concurrently with sentences imposed at a prior time, and where government failed to present convincing justification for the delay. Id.

Variance

There is no fatal variance between count which charged that the defendant took money from the "immediate actual possession" of post office custodian and proof that money he took was taken from postal employees, where the evidence showed that custodian had control and custody of money taken, that the defendant took money from an area within which the custodian reasonably could have been expected to exercise some physical control, and that the defendant did so by force directed at the custodian personally. United States v. W. B. Spears (1971, 449 F. 2d 946, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 284).

Witnesses

Trial court properly rejected attempt by two witnesses who were unfamiliar with the defendant's reputation as to character traits in issue in robbery and assault case to testify as to his character. United States v. W. A. Hinkle (1971, 448 F. 2d 1157, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 234).

§ 22-3203. Unlawful possession of a pistol.

No person shall own or keep a pistol, or have a pistol in his possession or under his control, within the District of Columbia, if—

- (1) he is a drug addict;
- (2) he has been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of a felony;
- (3) he has been convicted of violating section 22-2701, section 22-2722, or sections 22-3302 to 22-3306; or
- (4) he is not licensed under section 22-3210 to sell weapons, and he has been convicted of violating this chapter.

No person shall keep a pistol for, or intentionally make a pistol available to, such a person, knowing that he has been so convicted or that he is a drug addict. Whoever violates this section shall be punished as provided in section 22-3215, unless the violation occurs after he has been convicted of a violation of this section, in which case he shall be imprisoned for not more than ten years. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 651, ch. 465, § 3; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 93, ch. 159, § 204(b).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, amended section by substituting the provisions of the text for former language which had provided that no one who had been convicted of a crime of violence should own or possess a pistol in the District of Columbia.

DEFINITION

Section 204(a) of act June 29, 1953, provided that: "For the purposes of this section [amending this section and sections 22-3204, 22-3207, 22-3208, 22-3210, and 22-3214], the term 'Dangerous Weapons Act' means the Act of July 8, 1932, as amended, providing for the control of dangerous weapons in the District."

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 22-3207, 22-3208, 22-3210, 24-203.

Assistance of counsel

The record did not sustain the claim of ineffective assistance of counsel who was a defense attorney with many years of experience and who presented all substantial defenses, made appropriate motions and objections, attempted to suppress the evidence on the charge of unlawful possession of a pistol after conviction of a felony, and was able to obtain acquittal on a charge of threats to do bodily harm and directed verdict in defendant's favor on a charge of assault by threatening in a menacing manner. I. Gressette v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 256 A. 2d 418).

Defenses

Even though defendant, who was charged with making threats in a menacing manner and with unlawfully possessing an automatic pistol, had been discharged from hospital as having recovered from a mental disorder less than two months before date of alleged crimes, usual presumption of defendant's sanity, under District of Columbia law, existed at the time of trial. Williams v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 104 A. 2d 828).

Double jeopardy

In a case where a defendant waived his right to jury trial and the government entered nolle prosequi after witnesses had been sworn, but before the first witness began to testify, jeopardy did not attach and did not bar subsequent prosecution for carrying pistol without a license. C. R. Newman v. United States (1969, 410 F. 2d 259, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 271).

Where defendant was charged by information with violation of statute which makes it unlawful for one to own or have in his possession a pistol if previously convicted of possession of a prohibited weapon, and before any witness took stand prosecuting attorney announced that Government could not go forward with charge and would nolle prosequi and bring new charge of carrying a pistol without a license, plea of double jeopardy was not a valid plea in new prosecution because the two informations charged separate and distinct offenses. C. R. Newman v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 239 A. 2d 152).

Evidence—Admissibility

Where police officer was merely investigating possibility that crime might have been committed when he was told by defendant that he had been playing with gun which had gone off accidentally and officer did not believe that crime had been committed until defendant stated he was on parole, statement made by defendant was not inadmissible on basis that defendant had not been advised of his rights and did not have assistance of counsel. Coleman v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 219 A. 2d 496).

Corroboration

Defendant's admission that he had been playing with gun and it went off accidentally was sufficiently corroborated by testimony of another placing defendant in room with victim when victim was shot and by detective's testimony that the other person had told him that defendant accidentally shot victim, in prosecution for unlawful possession of pistol after conviction of felony. Coleman v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 219 A. 2d 496).

Prior conviction

While statute provided for imprisonment for not more than 10 years on second conviction of carrying a dangerous weapon, where there was no proof that defendant had ever been convicted previously under such statute the felony penalty could not be invoked, so that charge that defendant was in unlawful possession of pistol after he had been previously convicted for carrying a dangerous weapon was within jurisdiction of District of Columbia Court of General Sessions, which could not impose fine of more than $1,000 or a sentence of longer than one year. R. B. Burrell v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 223 A. 2d 377).

Proof of possession

Introduction of pistol in evidence was not necessary to prove unlawful possession of pistol. Coleman v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 219 A. 2d 496).

Inasmuch as suppression order went only to pistol which was wrongfully seized by police, defendant's possession of the pistol could properly be established by independent means, in prosecution for unlawful possession of a pistol after conviction of a felony. Id.

Prosecution

Prosecutor had authority to charge the defendant, a felon who possessed an unlicensed pistol while not in his dwelling or on his land, under felony-repeater provisions of § 22-3204 rather than under misdemeanor statute [this section] and by doing so did not deny right to equal protection. R. F. Palmore v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 290 A. 2d 573; see also 93 S. Ct. 66, 409 U.S. 840).

Sentences

Municipal court could impose a sentence to commence at termination of that imposed for another distinct offense, irrespective of whether initial sentence was imposed by the municipal court or by the district court. Williams v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 133 A. 2d 112).

Subject of search

Under the circumstances of this case, it was not unreasonable for officers to seize pistol which, as convicted felon, defendant was forbidden to possess, incidental to authorized search of his apartment for narcotics, in absence of showing that presence of pistol on premises was attributable to eight-day delay in execution of search warrant. J. E. Curtis v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 263 A. 2d 653).

Witnesses

Defendant had no standing to challenge overruling Fifth Amendment claim of a witness. Coleman v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 219 A. 2d 496).

Privilege against self-incrimination is personal to witness who can waive privilege. Id.

§ 22-3204. Carrying concealed weapons.

No person shall within the District of Columbia carry either openly or concealed on or about his person, except in his dwelling house or place of business or on other land possessed by him, a pistol, without a license therefor issued as hereinafter provided, or any deadly or dangerous weapon capable of being so concealed. Whoever violates this section shall be punished as provided in section 22-3215, unless the violation occurs after he has been convicted in the District of Columbia of a violation of this section or of a felony, either in the District of Columbia or in another jurisdiction, in which case he shall be sentenced to imprisonment for not more than ten years. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 651, ch. 465, § 4; Nov. 4, 1943, 57 Stat. 586, ch. 296; Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 743, ch. 469; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 94, ch. 159, § 204(c).)

AMENDMENTS

1953—Act June 29, 1953, amended section by striking out proviso authorizing arrests without a warrant and searches and seizures pursuant thereto for violation of the section which is now covered by section 23-306 and to provide for a maximum penalty of ten years for a conviction of violating the section after having previously been convicted of such offense, or of a felony.

1947—Act Aug. 4, 1947, added proviso authorizing arrests without a warrant and searches and seizures pursuant thereto for violation of the section.

1943—Act Nov. 4, 1943, amended section by inserting word "either openly or" preceding "concealed on or about", and by adding "capable of being so concealed" following "deadly or dangerous weapon."

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 22-3205.

NOTES TO DECISIONS*Abuse of discretion

Where names of alleged alibi witnesses were known on day of trial and alibi testimony of witnesses, in light of complainant's positive identification of his assailant, would not have produced defendant's acquittal, refusal of defendant's motion for new trial on basis of newly discovered evidence consisting of alibi witnesses was not an abuse of discretion. J. Williams v. United States (1972, 295 A. 2d 503).

Acquiescence in plea of insanity

Where petitioner had not himself sought introduction of insanity defense at his trial and had not acquiesced in assertion of that defense, his commitment to hospital for the mentally ill following his acquittal by reason of insanity was not authorized and he was entitled to habeas corpus. C. C. Rouse v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 387 F. 2d 241, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 283).

Appeal and error

Court's refusal to permit defendant, who was arrested after guns were found in vehicle which had been occupied by him and others and which had been stopped after officers observed wired-on license plates and defective tail lights, to inquire as to nature of police procedure followed in cases of routine spot checks was not error. D. E. Garriss, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 510).

Trial court erred in granting pretrial motion of defendant to suppress evidence seized without warrant on ground that the information was defective, since motion could be made only by defendant aggrieved by unlawful search or seizure and for defendant to prevail it is necessary for him to demonstrate that the property was illegally seized without warrant. United States v. R. E. Hobby (D.C. App. 1971, 275 A. 2d 235).

Record in prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license in violation of this section supported finding that defendant, to whom Miranda warnings were read by policeman from standard police form and who was given the form to read in police station before being questioned, but who was not asked if he understood contents of form, had been sufficiently informed of his right to remain silent and to counsel. M. J. Brewster v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 409).

In view of the overwhelming evidence that the particular address claimed by defendant to be his dwelling house was not his dwelling house, any error with respect to whether defendant waived any of his constitutional rights to remain silent and to counsel before being questioned as to his residence was harmless. Id.

Where record showed that defendant was found in possession of concealed weapon and his own testimony on trial confirmed such fact, absence of indication that defendant made informed decision, after appropriate advice, to proceed with joint counsel did not require reversal of conviction for carrying concealed weapon. F. J. Ford v. United States of America (1967, 379 F. 2d 123, 126 U.S. App. D.C. 346).

Record on appeal from conviction for carrying concealed pistol without license failed to establish plain error warranting reversal, notwithstanding failure to raise issue below, on ground that defendant's arrest for disorderly conduct was sham employed by police as gamble for detecting larger crime. H. Johnson v. United States (1966, 370 F. 2d 489, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 243).

Arrest

Special police officer, who had been appointed under authority of § 4-115 authorizing commissioning of such officers for duty in connection with property of or under control of corporation or individual, had authority to arrest the defendant, whom officer noted had revolver in top of his trousers, for misdemeanor of carrying a concealed weapon. United States v. C. J. Dorsey (1971, 449 F. 2d 1104, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 28).

Failure of defense counsel, in prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license and for unlawful possession of marihuana, to call uncle of defendant for purposes of interrogating uncle as to uncle's ownership or prior possession of pistol, did not deprive defendant of his constitutional right to adequate representation where, at a previous trial of defendant for the same offenses, it was suggested to counsel that uncle might claim his Fifth Amendment privilege. J. Terrell v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 860; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1398, 410 U.S. 938).

Where record indicated that the trial court was aware of defendant's long term dissatisfaction with his retained counsel, that defendant had sought to discharge counsel, that defendant had asked chief judge of District Court for counsel from legal aid agency and that defendant was a pauper seeking court appointed counsel, but record did not reflect specifically what action was taken by District Court, case would be remanded to District Court to determine what action, if any, was taken by District Court on motion to discharge counsel of record and request for appointed counsel and whether defendant was prejudiced thereby. United States v. T. R. Thomas (1971, 450 F. 2d 1355, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 308).

Refusal of trial court to grant bifurcated trial, sought on ground that defendant would defend on ground of want of criminal responsibility, was not reversible error where defense assured trial court that there was no defense on merits, and evidence to prove that defendant was one who robbed filling station was very strong. United States v. R. A. Grimes (1969, 421 F. 2d 1119, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 184).

Burden of proof

In prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license, prosecution had no burden of proving that defendant either owned the pistol, customarily carried it, or was intending to use it. United States v. R. Freeman (1972, 462 F. 2d 290, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 186).

Burden of proving exception

In prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license, the defendant has the burden of bringing himself within exception providing that no person shall carry a pistol without a license except in his dwelling house or place of business or on other land possessed by him. R. F. White v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 21).

Defendant had burden of bringing himself within statutory exception to offense charged rather than that of the prosecution to negative it. M. L. Williams v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 237 A. 2d 539).

Concealed about his person

"The words 'concealed about his person, as used in the statute, were intended to mean and do mean concealed in such proximity to the person as to be convenient of access and within reach." Brown v. United States (1929, 30 F. 2d 474, 58 App. D.C. 311).

Collateral estoppel

Collateral estoppel did not bar prosecution for federal offense of carrying pistol without license after previous conviction for violation of regulation requiring registration of same pistol, since different proof was required for the offenses and there were no inconsistencies between convictions. United States v. J. A. Wilder (1972, 463 F. 2d 1263, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 172).

Consent to defense of insanity

Finding that petitioner himself sought introduction of insanity defense at his trial was clearly erroneous in view of evidence, including evidence that new counsel retained by petitioner's mother did not confer with petitioner prior to filing motion for pretrial mental examination and that petitioner did not even know new counsel's identity when he saw him at hearing on the motion and thought that he was still being represented by assigned counsel. C. C. Rouse v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 387 F. 2d 241, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 283).

Finding that petitioner evidenced his acquiescence in insanity defense by waiting almost four years to attack validity of his mandatory commitment to hospital for the mentally ill was not warranted in light of petitioner's apparent disabilities, including his lack of financial means and learning in the law and the likelihood that he had been suffering from some mental illness. Id.

Consolidation

Prosecutions for carrying pistol without license, in violation of District of Columbia Code, and failing to register same pistol, in violation of District regulation, could not be combined in one proceeding, since one was within prosecutorial jurisdiction of District Counsel's office and under jurisdiction of Court of General Sessions while other was under prosecutorial authority of federal attorney and within jurisdiction of District Court. United States v. J. A. Wilder (1972, 463 F. 2d 1263, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 172).

Constitutional rights

Stops as well as arrests must satisfy the Fourth Amendment requirement of reasonable cause commensurate with extent of official intrusion, and if defendant challenges evidence as fruit of illegal seizure the government must come forward with specific and articulable facts which, taken together with rational inferences from those facts, reasonably warrant that intrusion. T. R. Young v. United States (1970, 435 F. 2d 405, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 333).

Because police questioning concerning defendant's address could be incriminating in view of charge of violating this section prohibiting carrying an unlicensed pistol except in one's dwelling house, Fifth Amendment applies to questioning concerning defendant's address and the required constitutional warnings as to right to remain silent and right to counsel are also applicable. M. J. Brewster v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 409).

Failure to show that defendant was advised of constitutional rights at time of arrest did not entitle him to reversal of conviction for carrying deadly weapon, absent introduction of any statements made by him. W. C. Best v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 237 F. 2d 825).

Constitutionality

Statute prohibiting carrying of concealed deadly or dangerous weapon is not unconstitutionally vague or indefinite in its prohibition of objects which are not ordinarily carried about person for personal convenience or for a legitimate purpose. J. L. Scott v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 243 A. 2d 54).

Statute which makes it an offense to carry a pistol without a license was not so clearly unconstitutional as a violation of defendant's constitutional right to keep and bear arms that it should have been ruled upon by trial court despite defendant's failure to raise the point in trial court, and, in such circumstances, the Court of Appeals would decline to exercise its discretion to consider the constitutional question raised for first time on appeal. M. L. Williams v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 237 F. 2d 539).

This section denouncing offense of carrying a pistol without a license to do so is not unconstitutional in permitting imposition of greater penalty when accused has been previously convicted of that offense in District or of felony in District or anywhere. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

Construction

Words "dwelling house" and "land possessed by him," within this section providing that no person shall carry a pistol without a license except in his dwelling house, place of business or on other land possessed by him, would not be read to include entire apartment building. R. F. White v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 21).

The statute being criminal, penal, prohibitive and in derogation of the common law it must be given a strict rather than liberal construction. Brown v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 66 A. 2d 491).

The qualifying phrase "without a license" is not to be treated as an exception to the statute but rather as a descriptive part of the offense, an "adjectival" and descriptive negative defining the corpus delicti and the phrase is incorporated in the definition forming an integral element of the crime. Id.

Construction with other laws

The statute making it a crime for a person to carry "elsewhere" than in his home "or place of business or on land possessed by him a pistol without a license * * * or any deadly or dangerous weapon capable of being so concealed," and the statute prohibiting possession "anywhere" with intent to use unlawfully against another an imitation pistol reflect the purpose of Congress to strengthen the existing law and tighten controls over the possession of dangerous weapons and each has distinctive objects of correction. United States v. J. H. Parker (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 185 A. 2d 913).

The statute prohibiting the possession "anywhere" with intent to use unlawfully against another an imitation pistol or other "dangerous weapon" embraces the possession of a real pistol and possession of a pistol may be charged under such statute. Id.

Section 22-3214 (b) specifically prohibiting possession of knife with intent to use unlawfully against another was not intended to cover the whole subject matter of knives in District of Columbia, in the sense of repealing deadly weapon statute which required no proof of unlawful intent, and hence information alleging violation of the older statute was sufficient though it specified knife as the deadly weapon and did not allege intent to use knife unlawfully against another. United States v. W. E. Shannon (D. C. Mun. App. 1958, 144 A. 2d 267).

Continuance

In view of examination of prospective jurors and instructions to jurors, trial court did not abuse discretion in denying continuance of prosecution under this section for carrying unlicensed pistol on ground of publicity regarding gun control, assassination of senator, and other events concomitant with trial. United States v. E. Clemons (1970, 440 F. 2d 205, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 177; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 959, 401 U.S. 945).

The granting or refusal of a continuance is largely left to discretion of the trial judge, and his decision will not be disturbed without a clear showing of abuse in the exercise of that discretion. W. E. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 235 A. 2d 574).

Dangerous purpose

Instrument may be dangerous in its ordinary use as contemplated by its design and construction, or where the purpose of carrying the object, under the circumstances, is its use as a weapon. J. L. Scott v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 243 A. 2d 54).

Statute prohibiting carrying of concealed deadly or dangerous weapon does not prohibit carrying of knives for a legitimate purpose. Id.

Statute prohibiting carrying of concealed deadly or dangerous weapon outlaws carrying of otherwise useful object where the surrounding circumstances, such as the time and place the defendant was found in possession of such instrument, or the alteration of the object, indicate that the possessor would use the instrument for a dangerous purpose. Id.

Dangerous weapon

Test to be applied in determining whether kitchen knife is a "deadly dangerous weapon", within this section prohibiting carrying either openly or concealed on or about person any deadly or dangerous weapon capable of being concealed, is whether, under the circumstances, purpose of carrying such knife was its use as weapon. J. Nelson v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 280 A. 2d 531).

The test of whether the object being carried by an accused is a dangerous weapon is whether the purpose of carrying the object, under circumstances, is its use as weapon. A. B. Clarke v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 256 A. 2d 782).

In a case where the defendant was carrying the razor in company of an armed companion in a crowded, commercial area of the city in late afternoon, and defendant was apprehended after he ran up an alley at approach of a police officer investigating citizen's report concerning him, jury was apprised of circumstances sufficiently probative to allow them to conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that razor was being carried as deadly or dangerous weapon. Id.

Under certain circumstances a hawk-bill knife can be a "dangerous weapon" within statute. W. C. Best v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 237 A. 2d 825).

Evidence supported finding that hawk-bill knife found in pocket of defendant who was unable to explain his presence in hallway of building which was usually kept locked and which public was not invited to enter constituted a "dangerous weapon" within statute. Id.

Deadly or dangerous weapon

A "deadly or dangerous weapon" is one which is likely to produce death or great bodily injury by the use made of it. J. L. Scott v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 243 A. 2d 54).

Evidence that knife taken from defendant in movie theater was ten inches long when extended with blade slightly more than four and one-half inches from shank to tip supported finding that knife was a deadly weapon within meaning of statute prohibiting carrying of concealed deadly or dangerous weapon. Id.

Deadly weapon

Hawk-billed linoleum clasp knife with three and a half-inch blade altered to open 270 degrees was properly determined to be a "deadly weapon" and was unlawfully carried. L. Perry v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 230 A. 2d 721).

Defendant's absence during trial

Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure providing that the defendant shall be present at every stage of trial, including return of verdict, but that his voluntary absence after trial has been commenced in his presence shall not prevent continuing trial to and including return of verdict, is designed primarily to insure defendant's presence, not to permit trial to proceed in his absence. W. R. Wade v. United States (1971, 441 F. 2d 1046, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 356).

Since there was no showing of willful intention on part of the defendant to interfere with ordinary processes of court or of desire not to be present at times when he knew he should have been in court, trial judge was not authorized to proceed without him. Id.

Delay in charging defendant with felony

The United States Attorney has responsible role in implementing possibility that crimes of violence may be deterred by visiting severe punishment upon convicted felon later found carrying deadly weapon. R. W. Epperson v. United States (1967, 371 F. 2d 966, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 303).

The courts will not skimp in affording prosecutor opportunity to obtain and appraise prior record of accused in order to determine whether to seek felony conviction for carrying dangerous weapon without license. Id.

Double jeopardy

Double jeopardy rule did not prevent prosecution for unlicensed possession of pistol in violation of District of Columbia Code, although defendant had earlier been convicted of violation of District regulation requiring registration of same pistol, although offenses arose from single arrest, since federal offense concerns personal qualifications of individual while regulation concerns firearm in question and required proof is not the same. United States v. J. A. Wilder (1972, 463 F. 2d 1263, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 172).

Where same act or transaction constitutes violation of two distinct statutory provisions, test to be applied to determine whether there are two offenses or only one is whether each provision requires proof of fact which other does not. Id.

Where defendant was charged by information with violation of statute which makes it unlawful for one to own or have in his possession a pistol if previously convicted of possession of a prohibited weapon, and before any witness took stand prosecuting attorney announced that Government could not go forward with charge and would nolle prosequere it and bring new charge of carrying a pistol without a license, plea of double jeopardy was not a valid plea in new prosecution because the two informations charged separate and distinct offenses. C. R. Newman v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 239 A. 2d 152).

Defendant, who allegedly carried concealed unlicensed pistol on his person and produced it and shot victim, was not put twice in jeopardy for same offense by prosecution upon two counts, for assault with deadly weapon, and also for carrying concealed unlicensed weapon, since element of proof in second count, that gun was unlicensed, was not necessary in proof of assault charge. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

Dues process

Right of defendant to a fair trial, his Sixth Amendment right to counsel, and the use of compulsory process for witnesses, did not require finding that Government's failure to extend immunity, to defendant's uncle, who allegedly owned pistol found in possession of defendant, who was convicted of carrying a pistol without a license and of unlawful possession of marihuana, amounted to a deprivation of due process of law. J. Terrell v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 860; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1398, 409 U.S. 1127).

Dwelling house

Defendant's possession of unlicensed pistol in apartment house hallway on floor above his own apartment was not within exception providing that no person shall carry a pistol without a license except in his dwelling house, place of business or on other land possessed by him, since the defendant did not have exclusive control and possession of the hallway on the floor above his apartment. R. F. White v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 21).

Election of offenses

Government is not required to bring all knife cases under code section prohibiting possession of knife with blade longer than three inches; and defendant who carried openly or concealed on or about his person a "pocket knife" which had a black outer case and a blade three-eighths of an inch wide and four and one-quarter inches from shank to tip was properly prosecuted under code section forbidding any person to carry either openly or concealed on or about his person a deadly or dangerous weapon capable of being so concealed. Degree v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1958, 144 A. 2d 547).

In prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license, prosecution need not prove that pistol was carried openly or was concealed, in view that it is an offense under this section to carry a pistol without a license irrespective of whether pistol was carried openly or concealed. United States v. Waters (D.C.D.C. 1947, 73 F. Supp. 72, appeal dismissed 69 S. Ct. 168, 335 U.S. 869, 93 L. Ed. 413, cause certified 175 F. 2d 340, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 127).

Evidence that defendant taxicab driver did not need to move from front seat of his taxicab to obtain his pistol established that he had pistol "about his person" within this section prohibiting a party from carrying about his person a pistol without license. Id.

In prosecution for carrying gun without license, testimony of Lieutenant of Metropolitan Police Department that he had searched records of all persons who held licenses to carry pistols in District of Columbia and that there was no record that defendant had a license was primary evidence of state of facts and not hearsay. Bussie v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 247).

Action of one police officer in reaching under front seat of defendant's automobile constituted an illegal search and pistol found under seat was inadmissible, in prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license, where, at time officer reached under seat, defendant had already been arrested for driving automobile with altered tags and having an altered registration and had been removed from his automobile and placed in police vehicle and officers had the altered tags and registration in their possession, no action of defendant indicating attempt to conceal contraband in automobile and officers had no reason to believe that automobile contained weapons or other contraband. A. P. Dickerson v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 296 A. 2d 708).

Where defendant, who was convicted of carrying a pistol without a license, and of unlawful possession of marihuana, testified that he had been beaten by police and desired hospitalization, Government could rebut such testimony with evidence that defendant's purpose of seeking hospital treatment was that he was a heroin addict, and admission of such evidence did not require a mistrial, as had occurred on previous occasion when such evidence was admitted, where tactical choice of defense counsel was in all probability to proceed. J. Terrell v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 860; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1398, 410 U.S. 938).

That it was determined that duress, which involved defendant's desire to protect automobile driver and its female passengers and which resulted in defendant's oral admission that pistol found in automobile was his, ceased to exist when defendant, 15 minutes later at precinct station, signed written statement admitting possession did not render written statement admissible, absent determination of whether written confession was produced directly by existence of oral confession. L. N. Ruffin v. United States et al. (D.C. App. 1972, 293 A. 2d 477).

Where, following arrest of apartment dweller as an accessory after the fact to fatal shooting, dweller had been informed of her right to counsel and right to remain silent, the search of her purse prior to taking her downstairs to squad car was clearly within scope of protective search and, gun found in purse, was properly admitted in trial of defendant. Convicted of second-degree murder, assault with a dangerous weapon, and carrying a dangerous weapon; fact that officers subsequently determined it to be wiser to release apartment dweller because of potential explosive situation in neighborhood and to issue a summons neither vitiated initial arrest nor invalidated search incident thereto. United States v. C. R. Honesty (1971, 459 F. 2d 1279, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 255).

Where pertinent municipal regulation authorized police to move an illegally parked automobile, conduct of officer, who observed the defendant parked in bus zone and who arrested defendant for failure to have driver's permit in his possession, in opening door of defendant's automobile after defendant had been placed in police car and in seizing pistol that was in plain view on floor of automobile was proper and pistol is admissible in prosecution for carrying pistol without a license. R. H. Banks v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 287 A. 2d 85).

Evidence of the circumstances surrounding prior robbery investigation, involving defendant and the complainant in present prosecution for assault with a dangerous weapon and for carrying a pistol without a license, was admissible since such evidence was clearly relevant to the identification question which defendant raised by his defense of mistaken identity; moreover, since no evidence was introduced connecting defendant in any way with the earlier crime, the possibility of any prejudice to defendant in the instant case was remote. United States v. N. R. Mizell (1971, 452 F. 2d 1328, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 399).

Where testimony, in prosecution for assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying a concealed weapon, by complaining witness concerning alleged rape by the defendant was highly probative of defendant's intent and motive in pointing gun at her and in explaining circumstances surrounding defendant's use of the gun for purposes of frightening her into submission, and where jury was given immediate cautionary instruction concerning limited purpose of the testimony, and similar instruction was contained in final charge, admission of that testimony was not an abuse of discretion. R. D. Wooten v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 285 A. 2d 308).

Since it was not shown that the defendant, when interrogated by postal inspector, was under arrest or was given reason to believe he was under arrest or that such interrogation was ever shifted to "accusatory stage", and police officers before attempting any interrogation read defendant warning as to his right to counsel and to remain silent, admissions obtained from defendant by postal inspector and police officers were not inadmissible on ground they were the product of custodial interrogation made before defendant was warned as to his right to counsel and to remain silent. H. G. Brown v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 278 A. 2d 462).

Since it is impossible to determine from testimony whether limitations on authority of police officers to cause a temporary investigatory detention were exceeded, and whether gun was discovered in process of an unlimited and full-scale search of defendant's person, or as a consequence of a protective pat down, case will be remanded for a supplementary evidentiary inquiry. United States v. R. Morris (1970, 440 F. 2d 224, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 196).

Where police officers, shortly after midnight and in area where many policemen had been shot, observed defendant driving vehicle bearing Virginia rental tags, followed him three or four minutes during which he made five turns and when officers called defendant back, after defendant ran from vehicle that he parked with lights on and rear protruding five to seven feet into street, officers observed bulge under his sweater, officers' conduct in searching defendant was reasonable and gun found was admissible. United States v. E. M. Marshall (1970, 440 F. 2d 195, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 167; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 153, 400 U.S. 909).

Robbery victim's testimony identifying pistols as resembling very closely those used at robbery by the defendant and coparticipant who was identified by name, and his testimony that he had identified both defendant and coparticipant, together with stipulation that money had been found on coparticipant at station house, provides adequate proof of joint participation to warrant admission of evidence associated with coparticipant against the defendant. United States v. L. H. Thurman (1970, 436 F. 2d 280, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 126).

Police officers, who observed automobile occupied by five men parked in front of a bank and saw the automobile make a U-turn and follow an overdue delivery truck whose driver had just left bank, were authorized in stopping suspicious-acting automobile and detaining the automobile and its occupants for brief questioning, and when officer observed from outside automobile what appeared to be shotgun barrel protruding from underneath the seat, seizure of shotgun was not illegal as actions did not exceed in scope what would be dictated by purpose to disarm, and shotgun is admissible. T. R. Young v. United States (1970, 435 F. 2d 405, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 333).

Where defendant was acting in a suspicious manner outside store, officers who were at store to investigate earlier robbery acted reasonably in asking defendant for identification and in seizing pistol as defendant disclosed its presence in the form of a bulge under his waistband while pulling his coat aside in an apparent effort to reach toward his rear pocket and, therefore, the pistol was admissible in prosecution under this section. United States v. L. T. Lee (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 566).

Although there was ample testimony by two police officers of possession of a weapon by appellant without a license in violation of District of Columbia code, this did not render harmless identification and display in front of the jury, of three dangerous weapons which were taken from appellant's companions at time they were arrested but which were not charged to appellant's possession. F. Macklin, Jr. v. United States (1969, 410 F. 2d 1046, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 347).

Absent plain error, defendant's failure to voice objection to introduction of knife against him in prosecution for carrying deadly weapon precluded assertion on appeal that admission of the knife was error. W. C. Best v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 237 A. 2d 825).

Photographs of fingerprints discovered at scene of crime and identified as defendant's on basis of prints of defendant retained after prior conviction, did not render them inadmissible, on ground that his conviction for earlier crime had been set aside pursuant to provisions of Youth Corrections Act. M. C. Stevenson and E. S. Borum v. United States (1967, 380 F. 2d 590, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 43).

When deputy police chief's certificate that search of police department records disclosed that defendant had no license to carry pistol was admitted in prosecution for carrying weapon in violation of statute, defendant was not prejudiced by failure to produce certificate that police chief had custody of records of pistol licenses, since judicial notice could be taken that custody of the records was in the police chief. Smith v. United States (1965, 353 F. 2d 838, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 300).

— Burden of proof

In prosecution for carrying gun without license, prosecution was required only to prove that accused carried gun and had no license to carry it, and was not required to prove all contents of original record of all licenses for carrying guns issued by superintendent of police. Bussie v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 247).

The elements of the crime being the carrying of a pistol, without a license, the burden of proceeding does not shift to the defendant once the prima facie case of carrying the weapon has been established but remains with the prosecution. Brown v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1949, 66 A. 2d 491).

— Examination of witnesses

In prosecution for robbery, conspiracy to commit robbery, and for carrying a deadly weapon without a license, requiring counsel for one defendant to ask a more precise question than question counsel asked a witness for prosecution as to whether such witness was convicted several times of prostitution during specified years was within discretion of trial court. Bundy v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 694, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 12, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 638, 343 U.S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

— Illegal search

Refusing to suppress evidence relating to weapon seized from defendant charged with carrying dangerous weapon on ground that it was obtained as result of unlawful search and seizure was not error, where evidence supported finding that defendant was not arrested until officer observed gun in defendant's hand. E. A. Contee v. United States (D.C. App. 1965, 212 A. 2d 342).

Impounding of automobile, which motorist had parked in front of police station after being ordered to follow police officers to police precinct, was not authorized under regulation permitting impounding of unattended vehicles found parked in violation of traffic regulation, and pistol discovered in search of automobile was not admissible. D. A. Williams v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 170 A. 2d 233).

— Prior conviction, proof of

Where defendant was charged with carrying unlicensed pistol after felony conviction, and, on defendant's motion, allegations in indictment concerning prior conviction of felony were stricken, and defendant's counsel, out of defendant's hearing, stipulated that defendant had previously been convicted of a felony and waived later proof

thereof, but concession of counsel was made without defendant's knowledge or consent, there was no waiver by defendant of necessity of proof of felony conviction, and imposition of enhanced sentence, on ground of prior felony conviction, was error. Jackson v. United States (1955, 221 F. 2d 883, 95 U.S. App. D.C. 328).

— Production

In prosecution for robbery, conspiracy to commit robbery, and for carrying a deadly weapon without a license, action of trial court in not requiring production under subpoena of arrest record of a witness for prosecution was not prejudicial to defendant where police officer testified he had no arrest record of witness by name contained in subpoena and did not know such witness used other names mentioned by him by counsel for defendant, and counsel for defendant did not during trial procure any further subpoena for arrest record of witness under any other name. Bundy v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 694, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 12, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 638, 343 U.S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

In prosecution for carrying gun without license, best procedure to prove that defendant had no license would be to produce official custodian of police records. Bussie v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 247).

— Sufficiency

Evidence, including affidavits of records division director that defendant did not have license to carry pistol and evidence that he was not carrying license as required, sustained conviction for carrying pistol without license. H. Durant, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 292 A. 2d 157; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 946, 409 U.S. 1127).

Evidence that pistol was found on floor mat of the defendant's automobile shortly after he alighted from automobile, that automobile was owned by defendant and that ammunition found in possession of defendant was of same caliber as that of pistol found in automobile is sufficient to show that defendant had been in possession of pistol and sustains conviction of carrying pistol without a license despite contention that woman passenger in automobile could have placed pistol on floor mat without defendant's knowledge after he had been removed from automobile. R. H. Banks v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 287 A. 2d 85).

Evidence sustained conviction of right front seat passenger of carrying unlicensed pistol that was lying on left side of rear seat of automobile, notwithstanding the defendant's contention that she did not have possession of the pistol. T. M. Holley v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 286 A. 2d 222).

Evidence that defendant knew that weapon was present under seat in automobile before police stopped vehicle and testimony that both officers saw the gun in defendant's hand supported trial court's finding that defendant was "carrying" the pistol within meaning of statute prohibiting one who has been convicted of a felony from carrying a dangerous weapon. United States v. R. B. James (1971, 452 F. 2d 1375, 147 U.S. App. D.C. 43).

Evidence in prosecution for assault with dangerous weapon and carrying a dangerous weapon after conviction of felony did not warrant grant of motion for acquittal on theory of self defense. Id.

Evidence on issues whether the defendant, who was occupying driver's seat of automobile belonging to his wife and who along with the codefendant had previously created disturbance at nightclub, had knowledge and control of revolver, that was found under passenger side of front seat of automobile at time it was being occupied by defendant and codefendant, who was sitting on passenger side of front seat, is sufficient to support conviction of carrying a pistol without a license. J. J. Porter v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 282 A. 2d 559).

Evidence that the defendant was a considerable distance from his home, in public eating establishment, standing in front of cash register during evening hour with a kitchen knife openly displayed in his belt is sufficient to present jury question as to whether the knife was a deadly or dangerous weapon, in prosecution for carrying either openly or concealed on person any deadly or dangerous weapon capable of being concealed. J. Nelson v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 280 A. 2d 531).

From facts that the defendant had been present in car immediately before officer noticed narcotics paraphernalia protruding from under seat where defendant had just been seated, that the defendant had been driving car immediately prior to time articles were recovered, that the defendant was owner of the car, that a single needle and syringe were within defendant's reach, and that puncture marks were found on defendant's arm, it was reasonable to infer that the defendant had dominion and control over needle and syringe under his seat, and, viewing evidence in light most favorable to the government, it was adequate to support the jury's finding that defendant had possession of the needle and syringe. T. Crawford, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 278 A. 2d 125).

Evidence, in prosecution arising out of armed robbery of a grocery supermarket, was sufficient to present question for jury as to guilt of the defendant, even though two employee witnesses of the supermarket, who actually saw bandits depart, could not identify the defendant as either one of the armed robbers who came into the store or as driver of the automobile in which the getaway was accomplished. United States v. C. Johnson (1970, 432 F. 2d 626, 139 U.S. App. D.C. 193; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 257, 400 U.S. 949).

In this case there was adequate evidence to support convictions of assault and carrying a dangerous weapon. United States v. L. White (1970, 429 F. 2d 711, 139 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

Evidence that the defendant had on his person at 3:00 in the morning at bus terminal a "pegged" knife, which is a clasp knife with the blade folding into the handle but which has been altered by insertion of a small peg between the blade and the handle so that the knife could be more quickly opened for use than regular folding knife, is sufficient to support conviction for carrying a dangerous weapon. J. C. Gilmore v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 783).

The court held the evidence sustained finding that defendant, who was charged under this section with carrying pistol without a license, had requisite knowledge and control of weapon found between backrest and seat to left of where defendant had been sitting in automobile. L. R. Kenhan v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 263 A. 2d 253).

Knowledge of presence of pistol could be reasonably inferred from fact that one or two inches of butt of pistol were sticking out from between backrest and seat to left of where defendant had been sitting in automobile. Id.

Evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction for carrying a pistol without a license, although the government did not offer any direct proof of defendant's knowledge of gun. L. L. Powell v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 246 A. 2d 641).

Officer's independent testimony with respect to defendant's possession of gun to which no objection was made was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for carrying pistol without a license. L. G. Lee v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 242 A. 2d 212).

Evidence supported conviction for carrying dangerous weapon without license. R. W. Epperson v. United States (1967, 371 F. 2d 956, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 303).

Evidence supported conviction for carrying a deadly weapon. L. Perry v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 230 A. 2d 721).

Conviction for carrying concealed weapons would not be reversed, on ground that trial judge, in finding defendant guilty, erroneously considered stipulation, made in connection with motion to suppress evidence, to effect that defendant had a possessory interest in two pistols sought to be suppressed where no formal written stipulation was presented to judge who heard motion to suppress, and it was merely a verbal statement by counsel, and a different judge presided at the trial, and he certified that his decision was based solely on testimony adduced at trial, and in stenographic transcript there appeared no testimony or offer of testimony as to stipulation, and it did not appear to have affected decision in any way, and testimony of police officer supplied essentials on which to predicate a conviction. Emburgh v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 164 A. 2d 342).

In absence of objection to testimony of police lieutenant who stated that he had searched pistol license records, and in absence of attempt to cross-examine him as to extent of his knowledge and familiarity with records or contention that he was not in a position to make a complete search and render accurate report, testimony was of sufficient probative force to show that accused had no license even though official custodian was not produced. Bussie v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 247).

— Suppression

Although citizen refused to give his name when he told police officers that named person was sitting on porch in certain block, was wearing black shirt, blue knit hat, had artificial leg and had gun in his waistband, officers who found on porch in the described block a sleeping man wearing described clothing and who determined the man had artificial leg, had right to question man and, before questioning, had right to make limited search or frisk to ascertain if he was armed; thus pistol found in his waistband was legally seized and should not have been suppressed. United States v. W. A. Walker (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 376).

Defendant, who removed revolver from his coat pocket and tossed it into street before pursuing policeman caught up to him, lacked standing to make motion to suppress the weapon as evidence. C. J. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 292 A. 2d 150).

Record in support of order granting pre-trial motion to suppress pistol seized from beneath seat of defendant's automobile near scene of his arrest for disorderly conduct was insufficient since there were no findings upon which Court of Appeals could base judgment as to whether pistol was product of search and seizure incident to lawful arrest, whether, if so, seizure was so far beyond the area within defendant's immediate control as to be constitutionally impermissible, and whether, if pistol was not product of search and seizure in Fourth Amendment sense (officer testified that he reached under seat in search of seat adjustment lever with intent of driving automobile to precinct station) the intrusion into the automobile was reasonable and warranted under the circumstances. United States v. H. R. Jones (D.C. App. 1971, 275 A. 2d 541).

Fingerprint tests, duty to make

There is no requirement that imposes on the Government the affirmative duty to make paraffin or fingerprint tests in regard to pistol involved in prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license, and there was no showing of prejudice from failure to make tests. M. L. Williams v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 237 A. 2d 539).

Guilty plea

The record did not show that the trial judge failed to determine that defendant's plea of guilty to carrying deadly weapon after previous conviction of like offense or of a felony had been made voluntarily, after proper advice, with understanding of nature of charge and consequences. H. L. Barnett v. United States (1968, 403 F. 2d 918, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 192).

Harmless error

In prosecution for assault with intent to kill while armed and carrying dangerous weapon, in view of overwhelming direct evidence timely placing the defendant at scene of crime and equivocal and unsupported nature of his own testimony concerning his whereabouts at time of offense, any emphasis by the court or his counsel on his more general defenses and any other claimed error were harmless beyond reasonable doubt. United States v. W. D. Craven (1972, 458 F. 2d 802, 147 U.S. App. D.C. 383).

Where it was the defendant's own suspicious and furtive effort in retreating to rear of store when police arrived that brought attention to him before he was arrested, and defendant in fact denied ever seeing gun or going behind store's meat counter in back of which gun was found, while still warm to the touch, presumably from body contact, on floor, no search of defendant's constitutionally protected environs disclosed weapon or resulted in its seizure, oral motion to suppress before jury was sworn was frivolous, and failure to entertain it in prosecution for carrying pistol without a license was harmless error or defect not affecting substantial rights of defendant. W. J. Shellie v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 277 A. 2d 288).

Identification

While lineup was not conducted under most ideal circumstances it was not so impermissibly suggestive to misidentification as to preclude identification testimony by eyewitnesses who had ample opportunity to view defendant during armed robbery. United States v. G. H. Neverson (1972, 463 F. 2d 1224, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 133).

Where police had probable cause for arrest of defendant following armed robbery, procedure in taking defendant to scene of crime less than 15 minutes after robbery for identification did not give rise to undue suggestibility, and evidence of identification of defendant at scene was admissible in subsequent prosecution. United States v. J. Moore (1972, 459 F. 2d 1360, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 336).

Question of identification was one of fact for jury in prosecution for assault and for carrying a deadly weapon. J. J. Durham v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 237 A. 2d 830).

Impeachment

Had defendant taken stand in prosecution for armed robbery, assault with dangerous weapon, and carrying dangerous weapon without license, evidence of prior conviction for impersonating owner of federal check would have been admissible for impeachment purposes. United States v. J. Moore (1972, 459 F. 2d 1360, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 336).

It is difficult to attach any impeaching quality to evidence which identified and displayed in front of a jury, over objection and against judge's doubts, of three dangerous weapons, which had been taken from defendant's companions when they were arrested but were not charged to possession of defendant, who was indicted for carrying a dangerous weapon without a license in violation of District of Columbia code, and any probative value of the evidence was outweighed by its prejudicial effect. F. Macklin, Jr. v. United States (1969, 410 F. 2d 1046, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 347).

That the indictment charged each defendant with having carried pistol "openly and concealed" about his person, rather than in statutory language "openly or concealed," presents no occasion for reversal of convictions. United States v. E. Clemons (1970, 440 F. 2d 205, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 177; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 959, 401 U.S. 945).

When an indictment carefully traces the language of this section in indicting a defendant for carrying a dangerous weapon without a license, the indictment is valid and it is of no legal significance that the presentment merely states that the defendant was carrying a dangerous weapon, which is not an offense. United States v. W. Bridges (1970, 432 F. 2d 692, 139 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

Failure of pistol-carrying count of indictment to allege or prove to show that defendant had been previously convicted of felony, did not preclude imposition of greater penalty applicable to defendant who has previously been convicted of felony, where defendant had on cross-examination admitted prior felonies, and defendant was not denied right of allocution, nor was he prepared to show that he had not been previously convicted, and Government after conviction and before sentence filed information alleging prior convictions. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

Pistol-carrying count of indictment was not defective in using conjunctive "and," instead of statutory disjunctive "or," in charging that defendant "did carry openly and concealed a dangerous weapon", where proof tended to show that weapon was concealed when defendant approached scene of shooting and was then produced and carried openly. Id.

Indictment charging defendant with carrying a pistol but failing to charge, as required by this section, that pistol was carried by defendant without a license failed to charge an offense. United States v. Waters (D.C.D.C. 1947, 73 F. Supp. 72, appeal dismissed 69 S. Ct. 168, 335 U.S. 869, 93 L. Ed. 413, cause certified 175 F. 2d 340, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 127).

Where record unequivocally established that, after three years of representing defendant, defense counsel concurred with conclusions reached by psychiatrist and judge that defendant was a malingerer and expressed opinion that it was tactically unwise to raise an insanity defense unless he felt he had a chance, defendant was not entitled to reversal of conviction of armed robbery assault with a deadly weapon and carrying a pistol without a license on ground of judicial interference with his defense counsel's attempt to pursue insanity issue. United States v. F. L. Simms (1972, 463 F. 2d 1273, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 182).

Trial judge's decision not to interpose an insanity defense sua sponte was not an abuse of discretion constituting reversible error, especially in view of finding that defendant was malingering. Id.

Defendant charged with carrying a dangerous weapon without a license was not entitled to a directed verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity where the only evidence of insanity produced was the testimony of a psychiatrist, who stated that defendant was a sexual deviate whose sexual impulses were associated with violence and the implements of violence. United States v. G. E. Evans (1972, 459 F. 2d 1134, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Instructions

Where count charged that offense of carrying a dangerous weapon occurred on July 14, in view of testimony elicited during trial concerning confrontation between defendant and another on July 21 when defendant appeared at the other's apartment with a weapon in his hand, it was plain error to charge that defendant could be found guilty of carrying a dangerous weapon on that date. United States v. L. L. Williams (1972, 463 F. 2d 958, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 122).

In prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license, court may not charge that mere holding of loaded pistol makes man guilty if the theory of the defense shows, e.g., that defendant did not get the gun except in self-defense. United States v. R. Freeman (1972, 462 F. 2d 290, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 186).

In context in prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license, in which defendant claimed he was holding pistol for a friend, defendant was not entitled to instruction to effect that prosecution must prove that possession was not temporary and innocent. Id.

Testimony that defendant and a female had run from scene of fatal shooting after female had been released by decedent's brother, and that decedent's brother, who was armed with shotgun, had left scene, coupled with fact that when defendant was apprehended in female's apartment he was in process of shaving off his heavy beard, was sufficient to support an instruction on flight or concealment. United States v. C. R. Honesty (1971, 459 F. 2d 1279, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 255).

Although, in prosecution for assault with a dangerous weapon and for carrying a pistol without a license, prosecution evidence was introduced to the effect that the defendant assaulted the complainant in retaliation for her telling the police she believed he had been involved in a robbery, the trial judge is not required to, sua sponte, give a limiting instruction concerning the evidence connecting defendant with the robbery, particularly since the evidence in question concerned not so much acts that had been engaged in by defendant, but rather the activities of the complainant, and since that evidence is relevant on the issues of identity and motive. United States v. N. R. Mizzell (1971, 452 F. 2d 1328, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 399).

Viewing the trial court's charge in its entirety clearly showed that instruction on specific intent was not omitted in prosecution for armed robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, and carrying a dangerous weapon. United States v. S. F. Gaither (1971, 440 F. 2d 262, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 234).

Instruction that the Government has no affirmative duty to make a paraffin test of gun seized from defendant charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and with carrying a concealed weapon to determine if he had ever used it is not "plain error" warranting review in absence of objection. R. D. Wooten v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 285 A. 2d 308).

Since the trial judge's charge contained two erroneous instructions equating intent with malice as essential ingredient of murder and stating that law infers or presumes malice from use of deadly weapon in commission of homicide and both instructions were later reread to jury and jury returned verdict, not of first-degree murder, but of murder in second degree and the jury did not accept whole of government's evidence bearing on degree of defendant's culpability, instructional errors will be noticed by Court of Appeals despite defendant's failure to object at trial and require reversal of conviction of murder in second degree. United States v. A Wharton (1970, 433 F. 2d 451, 139 U.S. App. D.C. 293).

Submission to the jury of a further "Allen" type instruction, after jury reported a deadlock, to the effect that absolute certainty could not be expected, and that jurors should give deference to opinions of each other, would not be considered a ground for reversal on theory of plain error since defense counsel did not object to the charge. United States v. C. Johnson (1970, 432 F. 2d 626, 139 U.S. App. D.C. 193; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 257, 400 U.S. 949).

Defendant may not complain on appeal of deficiencies in instructions given by trial judge in manslaughter prosecution where none of alleged shortcomings were brought to the attention of trial court by appropriate objection or request. United States v. E. Carter (1969, 420 F. 2d 150, 136 U.S. App. D.C. 308).

A charge to the jury outlining the various necessary elements of offense of carrying deadly or dangerous weapon, defining a "deadly or dangerous weapon" and advising that in determining whether the instrument was such a weapon "you may consider all the circumstances surrounding its possession and use" was adequate. G. O. Leftwich v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 251 A. 2d 646).

In a prosecution for carrying deadly or dangerous weapon, where court's charge on weapon was adequate and there was no cause for confusion in the minds of the jury, it was within the trial court's discretion to give the "Allen" charge reminding jurors that they should give some thought to views of others and should consider their position in light of those views. Id.

In prosecution for unlawfully carrying a pistol, failure to instruct jury on "criminal intent" on ground that such intent was an essential ingredient in the crime derived from the common law was not error since carrying a dangerous weapon without a license was not an offense at common law and all that was needed was an intent to commit the proscribed act. Cooke v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 887, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 223).

Where, although trial judge did not charge jury that it must find that the defendant intended to carry an unlicensed gun in a public place, defendant's trial counsel made no objection, but defendant testified that he intentionally put the gun in his pocket before leaving his shop, omission from the charge was not plain error which could be noticed on appeal in absence of exception in court below. Id.

Joinder

Since the offenses of robbery, assault with dangerous weapon, assault on member of police force, unauthorized use of vehicle, and carrying dangerous weapon were based on two or more connected acts constituting part of common scheme and plan, the defendants were alleged to have participated in same series of acts constituting offenses, and each of defendants aided and abetted offenses charged against other defendants, it was proper for grand jury to join defendants and offenses in the indictment. United States v. C. Wilson, Jr. et ano. (1970, 434 F. 2d 494, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 220).

Judicial notice

In prosecution for carrying without a license pistol that was found in defendant's automobile after he was observed parked in bus zone and was unable to produce his driver's license, the trial judge is required to take judicial notice of municipal regulation authorizing police to move an illegally parked automobile since such regulation comes within Superior Court's original jurisdiction. R. H. Banks v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 287 A. 2d 85).

Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction of the Court of General Sessions extended to prosecution for carrying a dangerous weapon, possessing a prohibited weapon and driving a motor vehicle without an operator's license, notwithstanding contention that the trial court had jurisdiction only over offenses punishable by fine or imprisonment and that the offenses charged carried penalties of a fine, imprisonment, or both. W. P. Martin v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 448).

Jury question

Evidence showing that police officers saw defendant drop an object later found to be a .22 caliber sawed-off rifle from his automobile posed question for determination by jury as to defendant's guilt or innocence of carrying dangerous weapon. R. Watson, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 262 A. 2d 121).

It was a jury question whether pistol had been lying on front seat of automobile next to defendant driver within convenient access and reach of defendant so that he might have been found to have had possession under statute, or whether pistol fell out of pocket of passenger and police intervened before defendant could have had access to it, in a prosecution for carrying pistol without a license. H. E. Waterstaat v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 252 A. 2d 507).

Knowledge

Whether front seat passenger had knowledge of presence of unlicensed gun in rear seat is a question for the trier. T. M. Holley v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 286 A. 2d 222).

Lawful arrest

Conduct of police officers, who had information that man was sitting in described automobile with gun, in approaching automobile fitting description and asking occupant to step out of automobile constituted a justifiable investigative stop and it was proper for one officer to seize the pistol that came within his plain view when occupant opened automobile door and to arrest occupant. E. L. Davis v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 284 A. 2d 459).

Where police officers noted automobile bearing license tags registered to a different make automobile and requested driver, without making any similar request of passenger, to follow them to precinct house and to go inside, passenger who accompanied the driver and accidentally revealed a loaded revolver in his pocket while inside precinct house had not therefore been under arrest but gave police officer who observed the pistol sufficient grounds for arrest so that the arrest made by that officer was lawful and accompanying search was valid and evidence of pistol was accordingly not subject to suppression in prosecution for carrying a deadly weapon. J. B. Conyers v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 237 A. 2d 838).

Arrest of defendant, who was observed by officers running across street from church doorway at midnight, and who, when stopped, used obscene language toward officers, on charges of disorderly conduct was lawful, and thus incriminating statement made by defendant and pistol found near scene of arrest were not inadmissible on the grounds asserted. H. Johnson v. United States (1966, 370 F. 2d 489, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 243).

Moot question

Where a defendant, who was convicted of carrying a dangerous weapon without license in violation of District of Columbia code, had served his sentence, his appeal was not dismissable as moot, since statute under which he was indicted provided for consequence of conviction which did not disappear with expiration of his sentence. F. Macklin, Jr. v. United States (1969, 410 F. 2d 1046, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 347).

Multiple convictions for the same offense

The fact that the passenger in a vehicle driven by defendant was convicted of carrying pistol without license, following police officer's discovery of pistol lying on seat of vehicle between passenger and driver, did not preclude conviction of driver for same offense. H. E. Waterstaat v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 252 A. 2d 507).

Place of business

D.C. 1929, title 6, § 114, permitted the carrying of a dangerous or deadly weapon from the place of purchase to the purchaser's dwelling or place of business, especially when person was conducting himself in a quiet, peaceable, and orderly manner. Bolt v. United States (1925, 2 F. 2d 922, 55 App. D.C. 120).

Provision of this section prohibiting a person from carrying a pistol without a license "except in his dwelling house or place of business or on other land possessed by him" manifests the intent that the "place of business" referred to is land, and would not apply so as to exempt a taxicab driver who carried a pistol without a license while in his taxicab, since the cab would not be the driver's "place of business". United States v. Waters (D.C.D.C. 1947, 73 F. Supp. 72, appeal dismissed 69 S. Ct. 168, 335 U.S. 869, 93 L. Ed. 413, cause certified 175 F. 2d 340, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 127).

Plain error

In this prosecution for carrying a dangerous weapon, wherein evidence disclosed that the defendant was a part owner and in possession of the apartment building where assault occurred, the prejudice to defendant from counsel's failing to mention the statutory exception, to the prohibition of carrying a weapon if carrying is in a dwelling house or place of business or other land possessed by defendant, required invocation of the "plain error" rule. A. C. Roumel v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 261 A. 2d 240).

Under this section prohibiting the carrying of a weapon "except in his dwelling house or place of business or on other land possessed by him", a person need not be a sole rather than part owner of the premises involved. Id.

Plea of guilty

Petition alleging that armed robbery guilty plea was not voluntary because the defendant had been falsely told by attorney that attorney had talked to trial judge and had made arrangements for Youth Corrections Act treatment was too specific to be denied as merely conclusory and could not be said to be so palpably incredible as to permit rejection of same without a hearing. United States v. E. W. Simpson (1970, 436 F. 2d 162, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 8).

Possession of firearms

Fact that the codefendant had been convicted of carrying the same pistol did not preclude conviction of the defendant of carrying the pistol without a license, since the defendants could be found to have jointly possessed weapon, that was found under passenger's side of front seat of automobile. J. J. Porter v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 282 A. 2d 559).

Direct personal possession of prohibited weapon is not required for occupant of automobile to be convicted of violation of this section prohibiting carrying pistol without a license. L. R. Kenhan v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 263 A. 2d 253).

This section clearly establishes that possession of a firearm in one's home is not a crime. Morton v. United States (1950, 183 F. 2d 844, 87 U.S. App. D.C. 135).

Prejudicial error

Government's introduction, in its case-in-chief, of .22-caliber pellet pistol found on search of rear seat passenger when police stopped automobile occupied by defendant and two others and similar pistols found under driver's seat, in addition to admission of .32-caliber pistol found under seat where defendant had been sitting, with no limiting instruction being given, was prejudicial and required new trial on charge of carrying a pistol without a license, notwithstanding government's contention that purpose of offering additional pistols was to enhance showing that pistol found under seat occupied by defendant had in fact been possessed by him. C. D. Coleman v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 896).

Prior conviction

While statute provided for imprisonment for not more than 10 years on second conviction of carrying a dangerous weapon, where there was no proof that defendant had ever been convicted previously under such statute the felony penalty could not be invoked, so that charge that defendant was in unlawful possession of pistol after he had been previously convicted for carrying a dangerous weapon was within jurisdiction of District of Columbia Court of General Sessions, which could not impose fine of more than $1,000 or a sentence of longer than one year. R. B. Burrell v. United States (D.C. App. 1966, 223 A. 2d 377).

A state legislature does not violate equal protection provision of Fourteenth Amendment of United States Constitution, in enacting statutes which impose heavier penalty for second or subsequent offenses, since fact of prior conviction in such cases is considered as affording reasonable basis for classification. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

Where defendant had been convicted of carrying a dangerous weapon and for housebreaking and larceny, and sentence for first offense was not to take effect under judgment until expiration of sentences on other offenses, but judgment of conviction on other offenses was reversed on appeal, appropriate procedure would be to vacate judgment of conviction on first offense and remand case for entry of judgment thereon with direction for new trial as to other offenses. Payton v. United States (1955, 222 F. 2d 794, 96 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Probable cause

After police officers found ammunition and marihuana on person of defendant, earlier occupancy by defendant of vehicle, his assault of police officer, his flight and his resistance to being taken into custody, were sufficient to establish probable cause to search the vehicle for further related evidence, such as ammunition, guns, or drugs. J. Terrell v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 860; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1398, 410 U.S. 938).

Where police officers who had observed the defendant peering into automobiles later observed defendant holding some object under his coat and when defendant refused to remove his hands from his pockets search for weapons was made disclosing that defendant was concealing beneath his coat a tape player, the connecting wires of which had been broken, action of police in confronting defendant on street was reasonable and disclosure of the tape player gave officers probable cause for arrest even though no victim had reported a loss, and pistol seized two days later during execution of arrest warrant was not the fruit of an unlawful arrest. L. A. Jenkins v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 284 A. 2d 460).

Police officer had probable cause to go into pocket of armed robber suspect's jacket and seize pistol in pocket, when suspect was voluntarily returning to scene of crime with police officer and officer picked up suspect's jacket which was about to be left on fence and felt something heavy and sensed that it might be a pistol. J. C. Shepard v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 274 A. 2d 413).

Since automobile stopped by police officers 45 minutes after offense was reliably identified as one used by suspect to leave scene of offense and search of defendant operator and his companion failed to produce any weapon, police had ample grounds for concluding that weapon used in assault was likely secreted in automobile, authorizing a warrantless search of automobile at scene of arrest, inasmuch as the only way in which a warrant could have been obtained would have been by temporarily seizing automobile and immobilizing it. United States v. D. Free (1970, 437 F. 2d 631, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 198).

In this case, since the police officers were investigating reported burglary, and defendants were seen carrying coffee table, and their distinctive clothing matched clothing of men seen in vicinity of burglary, and there was a furtive disposal of instrumentalities of burglary by one defendant, and other defendant attempted to get his gun out of pocket as officers approached, there was probable cause for arrest of defendants and for their search and search of their automobile. United States v. R. Cunningham et ano. (1970, 424 F. 2d 942, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 29).

Police officers, who, pursuant to information from an unidentified citizen that certain automobile was carrying weapons, followed automobile and discovered that it had improper license tags, were warranted in stopping automobile, frisking occupants, and arresting defendant when loaded pistol was found in his possession; thus, the defendant was not entitled to have pistol suppressed as evidence in prosecution under this section for carrying pistol without license. United States v. R. W. Frye (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 788).

Police officer, who as told by taxicab driver who pointed toward three men walking on street that driver had seen person up the street tuck gun under his belt, had probable cause to stop and search the only three men who were present on street even though taxicab driver did not say which of the men he had seen with gun, and gun found on person of defendant in such search was admissible. H. L. Gaskins v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 262 A. 2d 810).

Officers' initial observation of defendant's passing what appeared to be a pistol to his companion in the rear seat of an automobile, provided the police officers with probable cause to arrest defendant for possession of a pistol or to search vehicle; it was also lawful for officers to ask the defendant's companion to come out of the vehicle incident to the search, and seizure of the pistol when it fell to floor following companion's move to alight from vehicle was proper. G. Neal v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 260 A. 2d 89).

Viewing by officers of the inside of the automobile in which defendant was sitting on parking lot of restaurant at 4:30 A.M. did not constitute a search and was merely a customary check of premises when they saw two other persons lying down in automobile and observed what appeared to be a .38 caliber cartridge on the floor they had probable cause to believe that there was a dangerous weapon in the automobile and were justified in arresting defendant, and revolver which was in plain sight when officers opened door to make arrest was admissible. J. E. Lucas v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 256 A. 2d 574).

Police officers, to whom was communicated through regular channels a report from an unknown eyewitness concerning purported robbery and presence of nearby suspect who was identified in manner which fit defendant's description, had probable cause to arrest without a warrant defendant whom they found near scene of purported robbery, and gun taken in search of defendant's person was admissible in prosecution for carrying the pistol without a license, notwithstanding robbery report was later proved to be false. C. W. Carter, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 244 A. 2d 483).

Probable cause to justify arrest for carrying dangerous weapon does not require exact knowledge of character of the weapon. J. L. Scott v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 243 A. 2d 54).

Officer who before beginning conversation with defendant and defendant's companion in lobby of movie theater saw defendant's companion drop knife into cigarette ash container and who saw defendant attempting to slide knife up sleeve of his coat had probable cause for arrest and for subsequent seizure of defendant's knife. Id.

Arrest without a warrant for carrying a dangerous or deadly weapon may be made on probable cause. L. G. Lee v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 242 A. 2d 212).

Police officer is not privileged to ignore facts which would give him reasonable cause to believe that a person is carrying a dangerous or deadly weapon. Id.

Where officer at early hour in morning saw defendant and another man talking to manager of motel and when officer approached they hurriedly moved away from door and officer received inconsistent answers to his inquiries to the men and officer noted that defendant was carrying bag containing large heavy object and when officer asked if there was gun in the bag, defendant started backing off and did not answer, officer had probable cause to arrest defendant for carrying pistol and to seize the gun. Id.

Probable cause for arrest

In view of defendant's reaction as observed by trained narcotics officer when defendant first saw officer entering poolroom in which defendant was present and in view of officer's seeing defendant make under-handed throwing motion toward front of poolhall, where officer then found cigarette package which he believed contained narcotics, and defendant's exclamation, in reference to the package, "Don't give that to me," officer had probable cause to arrest defendant. United States v. J. R. Johnson (1972, 459 F. 2d 1229, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 205).

Where some 26 minutes following robbery and some three blocks from scene police officers observed individual reasonably matching description given in radio lookout, officers had probable cause to arrest individual, who met broadcast description that robber was wearing three-quarter length trench coat and had scar on his neck; minor discrepancies in age and size were overcome by identifying scar. D. Atkinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 899).

Proof of intent is not required to use a knife to menace or inflict bodily harm under statute proscribing carrying a deadly or dangerous weapon. G. O. Leftwich v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 251 A. 2d 646).

Proposed charge encompassing the defense theory that an intent to use knife to menace or inflict bodily harm was a necessary ingredient of offense of carrying deadly or dangerous weapon was incorrect and would have misled jury seriously and was properly refused. Id.

Under statute prohibiting carrying of concealed deadly or dangerous weapon, proof of intent to use knife for unlawful purpose is not element of the offense. J. L. Scott v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 243 A. 2d 54).

Evidence established that police officers saw gun handle sticking out of defendant's pocket and had probable cause to believe that defendant was carrying dangerous weapon in violation of law. United States v. P. Jenkins, Jr. (1967, 276 F. Supp. 958).

Officer who was investigating speeding violation had probable cause to arrest operator of vehicle; he did not act unreasonably in opening door of vehicle once found and he was not required to disregard weapons which he saw when he opened vehicle's door, and motion to suppress evidence relating to blackjack and gun was properly denied. R. F. Mosley v. United States (D.C. App. 1965, 209 A. 2d 796).

Where police were seeking suspect who operated in one block area, robbing prostitutes and their customers, and defendant, who fitted description of suspect, gave evasive and irreconcilable answers to police questions after being stopped in area of robberies, whereupon he was arrested and search revealed a loaded pistol, and defendant admitted he was headed toward an automobile later found to contain prostitute and her customer, there was probable cause for arrest and defendant's motion to suppress evidence was properly denied. L. A. Franklin v. United States (D.C. App. 1964, 204 A. 2d 341).

Officer had probable cause to believe that housebreaking had been committed and that defendant was offender, so as to justify arrest without warrant in course of which was discovered a pistol giving rise to prosecution for carrying weapon without license, in view of strong belief communicated to officer by one who knew defendant that defendant was one who had broken into such individual's mother's home, and in view of officer's observation and other information he learned from both such individual and defendant, and accordingly pistol was admissible in evidence. J. E. Paris v. United States (1963, 321 F. 2d 378, 116 U.S. App. D.C. 112).

There is a difference between what is required to prove guilt in criminal case and what is required to show probable cause for arrest or search, and, in dealing with probable cause, court deals with probabilities, they are not technical but are factual and practical considerations of everyday life on which reasonable and prudent men, not legal technicians, act. Id.

Where police officers about 1:30 a.m. observed defendant and his companion seated in parked automobile on dark street, and, as officers approached automobile, defendant and his companion "appeared to duck down" and one of the officers shined his flashlight into rear of automobile where defendant was sitting and noticed a shiny object which appeared to be a gun falling to floor near defendant's feet, and that officer drew his revolver and ordered defendant and his companion out of automobile, and shiny object on floor of automobile was in fact a fully loaded pistol, and on back seat officers found another loaded pistol in a bag, there was probable cause to justify arrest of defendant, and, in prosecution for carrying concealed weapons, trial court properly denied defendant's motion to suppress evidence, on ground that there was no probable cause for arrest and that search incidental thereto was unlawful. Emburgh v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 164 A. 2d 342).

Prosecution

Prosecutor had authority to charge the defendant, a felon who possessed an unlicensed pistol while not in his dwelling or on his land, under felony-repeater provisions of this section rather than under misdemeanor statute [§ 22-3203] and by doing so did not deny right to equal protection. R. F. Palmore v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 290 A. 2d 573; see also 93 S. Ct. 66, 409 U.S. 840).

Statutes proscribing the carrying of a dangerous weapon and possession of a prohibited weapon and providing for imprisonment for not more than ten years in event of violation occurring after conviction for previous weapons offense or felony do not mandatorily require prosecution as a "repeater"; rather, if the Government, in the exercise of its prosecutorial discretion, chooses to proceed against a defendant as a second offender, then it must do so under the second offender provisions contained in the statutes. W. P. Martin v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 448).

In view of statutes proscribing the carrying of a dangerous weapon and possession of prohibited weapon, prosecution had no authority to charge the defendant under § 22-104 as a "general" repeat offender for carrying a dangerous weapon and possessing a prohibited weapon, and as the defendant received no proper and timely notice that he was subject to as much as ten years' imprisonment under the statutes specifically covering the offenses, the defendant in effect was merely tried as a first offender on a misdemeanor and the Court of General Sessions did not lack jurisdiction on theory that the defendant faced possibility of being sentenced to up to ten years in prison. Id.

Prosecutor's comments

In a prosecution for carrying a deadly or dangerous weapon, the prosecutor did not comment on defendant's failure to testify and there was no error requiring a reversal where the comment was that defendant "spoke very loud and clear as to this knife. And when was that? That was when he saw the officer. Because, what did he do? He took it from the small of his back and he threw it to the ground, trying to get rid of it". G. O. Leftwitch v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 251 A. 2d 646).

Prosecutor's remarks to jury

Prosecutor's statement to effect that defense counsel could not have known of unloaded condition of guns unless client had told counsel was error but was harmless in view of defense counsel's immediate objection and statement of how he obtained such knowledge and defense counsel's reiteration of the circumstances in closing argument. D. E. Garris, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 510).

Where prosecutor realizes that he has made misstatement, it would be sound policy for him to join in defense's motion for curing instruction. Id.

In a case where jury was apprised of circumstances sufficiently probative to allow them to conclude beyond reasonable doubt that the razor was being carried as a deadly or dangerous weapon, under the circumstances defendant's conviction did not turn in any significant degree on remarks during closing argument by government counsel which attempted to place jury in shoes of victims or likely victims of crime, and in this case no reversal was required. A. B. Clarke v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 256 A. 2d 782).

A demonstration of the way a razor might be used as a weapon made by officer during trial was relevant to issue of whether razor was dangerous or deadly weapon, and was not prejudicial to the defendant. Id.

Purpose

Acquittal by defendant of assault with a dangerous weapon, did not require his acquittal on companion charge of carrying a pistol which he used to defend himself on ground that such acquittal demonstrated conclusively that defendant was carrying pistol for a lawful purpose notwithstanding defendant was exposed to a serious current threat by victim, that he did not have time to get a license and that he made a serious attempt to secure police protection, in light of the history of antiweapon legislation evidencing the clearest intent to drastically tighten ban on carrying dangerous weapons. Cooke v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 887, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 223).

Purpose of carrying weapon

In a case where police officer observed defendant walking along a street looking into parked automobiles and trying their door handles, and officer pulled abreast of defendant in patrol automobile, and defendant quickly withdrew behind nearby tree, and officer got out of automobile and approached defendant who reached behind his back and pulled large butcher knife from his belt, in area of small of his back, and threw it to ground in tree box space, test as to whether defendant was carrying deadly or dangerous weapon in violation of statute was whether the purpose of carrying butcher knife was its use as weapon. G. O. Leftwitch v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 251 A. 2d 646).

Questions for jury

Whether defendant, who armed himself with a pistol following discovery of theft of tape deck from his automobile, who attempted to retrieve deck when companion discovered deck in service station and who shot and seriously wounded service station attendant following argument, had acted in self-defense was for jury. United States v. D. W. McCrae (1972, 459 F. 2d 1140, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 116).

In prosecution for robbery and carrying a dangerous weapon wherein government's testimony on issue of insanity was offered by a number of lay witnesses and a qualified psychiatrist, and on part of defendant there was opposing testimony both lay and psychiatric, issue of insanity was for jury. Niport v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 901, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 64).

In prosecution for violation of this section defining the offense a person commits in carrying a pistol without license except in his dwelling house or place of business or on other land possessed by him, jury question was presented as to whether place at which defendant was carrying weapons was his place of business. Alexander v. United States (1954, 210 F. 2d 727, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 240).

In prosecution for violation of statute forbidding carrying of pistol on or about one's person without a license question whether, in having loaded pistol under hinged front seat of automobile so that he could get it by alighting from automobile and tilting driver's seat upward and forward, defendant had the weapon in such proximity to his person as to be convenient of access and within reach was one for jury. Wilson v. United States (1952, 198 F. 2d 299, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 135).

"The defendant had a right to carry the revolver, loaded or unloaded, from the place of purchase to his home; and whether he had it on his person at the time of his arrest, for that purpose only, or for some unlawful purpose as well, was a question of fact, which should have been submitted to the jury." Bell v. United States (1920, 265 F. 1007, 49 App. D.C. 367).

In prosecution for carrying gun without license, whether defendant had license was a question for the jury. Bussie v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 247).

Release pending appeal

Appellant's motion for release on his personal recognition pending his appeal from a conviction of carrying a dangerous weapon, after conviction of a felony, would be denied where paying deference to the action of District Court, considered with appellant's record, including the conviction and his failure to comply with prior probation and release requirements, the Court of Appeals was of the opinion that no one or more conditions of release would reasonably assure that the appellant would not pose a danger to any other person or to the community if released pending the appeal. United States v. A. Blyther, Jr. (1969, 407 F. 2d 1279, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 344).

Remand

Conviction of juvenile of first-degree felony-murder armed robbery, assault with dangerous weapon, assault upon police officer with dangerous weapon and carrying dangerous weapon would be remanded to District Court to consider possibility of sentencing under the Youth Corrections Act. United States v. W. Howard (1971, 449 F. 2d 1086, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 10).

Retrial

Since the issue of whether defendant, who was convicted of carrying a dangerous weapon came within the exception of this section on the ground that he was at least a "possessor" of the apartment building where assault occurred was not fully litigated at trial, government would be given option of a retrial to show if it could, that defendant did not come within the exception. A. C. Roumel v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 261 A. 2d 240).

Right to testify

Since the defendant presented six witnesses whose version of the events leading to defendant's arrest for carrying dangerous weapon could not have materially differed from any evidence defendant would have given had he chosen to testify, even if court did rule that government could impeach defendant by use of his prior record, defendant was not precluded from testifying and was not prejudiced in his defense. R. Watson, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 262 A. 2d 121).

Role of United States Attorney

Delay of almost three months between charging defendant with misdemeanor of carrying deadly weapon and charging him instead with felony of carrying dangerous weapon after having previously been convicted of felony was not objectionable although prosecutor knew the day after arrest that defendant could be held for felony because of previous conviction in District of Columbia of carrying a deadly weapon, in view of time it took to obtain so-called "rap sheet" from F.B.I. showing defendant's felony record outside the District. R. W. Epperson v. United States (1967, 371 F. 2d 956, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 303).

Ruling of district court as binding on Court of General Sessions

United States district court decision in prosecution for narcotics violation, which suppressed certain evidence as products of illegal search and seizure was not binding on District of Columbia Court of General Sessions, where defendant was charged with possession of prohibited weapon and possession of numbers slips, and which had held previously to United States District Court ruling that certain evidence, which was seized under same circumstances as evidence in federal prosecution, was admissible. B. R. Burrell v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 252 A. 2d 897).

Search and seizure

When arrest on traffic charge is used as pretext to justify search for evidence of other crimes, search is invalid. United States v. H. Green (1972, 465 F. 2d 620, 151 U.S. App. D. C. 35).

Police officers who observed speeding car run stop sign late at night and who observed furtive movement of driver as car was brought to stop acted reasonably in ordering driver from car, frisking him, and in searching beneath front seat of car. Id.

Conduct of officers making arrest for traffic violation who proceed to conduct search must be viewed from vantage point of prudent, reasonable, cautious officer unseen at time of arrest guided by his experience and training. Id.

Where defendant, after patdown at scene of arrest for driving without proper permit resulted in discovery of five bullets, indicated, in response to question regarding presence of a gun, that gun was under front seat of car, seizure of gun was proper. United States v. M. R. Wheeler (1972, 459 F. 2d 1228, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 204).

Where police officers had probable cause to arrest when they stopped defendant some 26 minutes following robbery and within three blocks of scene, it was immaterial whether search of paper bag defendant was carrying, which search revealed two fully loaded pistols, occurred prior to or following arrest; probable cause to arrest for robbery gave reasonable cause to search. D. Atkinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 899).

Warrantless search of vehicle in which defendant was found, based on probable cause, which would have been valid immediately, was not rendered invalid merely because it became necessary to move the vehicle from a hostile crowd which gathered after defendant was taken into custody, especially where defendant asked a friend to take the vehicle to defendant's fiancée, who was later shown to be the owner of the vehicle. J. Terrell v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 860; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1398, 410 U.S. 938).

Officer who received radio report that man of a specific description had a gun and was seated in a specific booth in a restaurant and who entered restaurant and saw defendant who matched description given in radio report acted reasonably in putting his gun to defendant's side and seizing gun from under defendant's coat. E. D. Murphy v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 293 A. 2d 849).

Where officers had stopped defendant after observing him at night driving automobile with expired inspection sticker and defendant was wholly bereft of any documents which could have aided in determining to whom car belonged, officers' decision to secure automobile and leave it parked on street until matter of ownership could be resolved constituted legitimate reason for being present beside automobile at time one officer shined flashlight into automobile and observed partially obscured pistol on front seat; thus, seizure of pistol was within "plain view" exception to requirement of obtaining search warrant. F. Payne, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 292 A. 2d 800).

Pat down of defendant, which revealed a concealed weapon, violated Fourth Amendment's protection against unreasonable "intrusion," where there was little, if any, evidence from which it could be concluded that police officers, who observed defendant for about six minutes, and who stated that they saw a passing of money on a street which the officers characterized as being located in a "high narcotics area," had either an articulable suspicion or reasonable grounds to believe that the suspects, defendant included, were armed and dangerous, so that pistol was seized in an illegal search and should have been suppressed in prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license. N. Gray v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 292 A. 2d 153).

Actions of police officers in stopping rented vehicle in order to determine if the defendant had proper license and rental agreement was reasonable, and seizure of pistol that was in plain view of officer who was looking at interior of car with flashlight while other officer was engaged in conversation with defendant did not violate the Fourth Amendment. R. F. Palmore v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 290 A. 2d 573; see also 93 S. Ct. 66, 409 U.S. 840).

Police officers, who, upon arriving at scene of holdup that had occurred a few minutes earlier, were told that escaping culprits had fled down alley, who then proceeded down alley and observed the defendant standing in alley approximately 400 or 500 feet from scene of crime, who, as they approached defendant, saw defendant turn his back and begin fumbling with something in front of him, and also observed an old crumpled paper bag in defendant's right hand, acted reasonably in stopping defendant and inquiring as to contents of bag, and after defendant handed bag to officer and explained, "that's not my gun," defendant was properly arrested for carrying weapon, the seizure of which was amply justified. C. M. Williams v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 287 A. 2d 814).

Where two police officers had been provided information by a reliable informant, indicating possible illegal narcotics activity and, after observing the defendant and another emerge from building as predicted, officers had right to stop the occupants of the taxicab long enough to ask to talk to them and to investigate, seizure of the pistol, that the defendant held in plain view of the officers, was proper and, once the defendant was lawfully under arrest, the seizure of the cartridges, in reasonable search of the vehicle incident to such arrest, was clearly appropriate. United States v. R. B. James (1971, 452 F. 2d 1375, 147 U.S. App. D.C. 43).

Where postal inspector was called at his home at about 3 o'clock in the morning and informed by a reliable source that an unidentified postal employee had brought pistol onto employment premises, and subject of investigation was alleged violation of federal regulations prohibiting carrying of firearm while on federal property except for official purposes, warrantless search of the defendant's coat in post office cloak room and seizure of pistol by postal authorities was reasonable and constitutionally permissible. H. G. Brown v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 278 A. 2d 462).

Police officer, who found 9 rounds of .22-caliber bullets on defendant's person when he was searched prior to incarceration after being stopped for traffic offenses and charged with disorderly conduct, had probable cause to make warrantless search of automobile that defendant had been driving and that was owned by another person who had the right to drive the automobile away at any time, and to seize pistol that was seen protruding from under the automobile seat. P. G. Hurley v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 273 A. 2d 840).

Since it is impossible to determine from testimony in this case whether limitations on authority of police officers to cause a temporary investigatory detention were exceeded, and whether gun was discovered in process of an unlimited and full-scale search of defendant's person, or as a consequence of a protective pat down, case will be remanded for a supplementary evidentiary inquiry. United States v. R. Morris (1970, 440 F. 2d 224, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 196).

Police, who received information that there had been a holdup and robbery of a motel and who saw defendant, who was wearing outer clothing fitting description of one of robbers, in a restaurant in vicinity in company of a known felon, and who observed a bulge under defendant's shirt resembling a pistol, had probable cause to arrest and search defendant, and pistol discovered in course of search was admissible in prosecution on charge of carrying a pistol. T. A. Teresi v. United States (D.C. App. 1963, 187 A. 2d 492).

Removal of unlicensed pistol from floor of parked automobile did not constitute an unreasonable search and seizure where officer, who discovered pistol lying in plain view on automobile floor, was making an investigation at scene of reported burglary and after noticing defendant's keys in ignition in violation of law had opened automobile door to remove keys. C. A. Campbell v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 174 A. 2d 87).

Self-defense

Where defendant, who was seated on right front fender of his automobile was attacked by disorderly group of men and women, retreated to driver's side of automobile, obtained pistol on floor of automobile under driver's seat and fired on his pursuers while backing away, defendant was justified in using weapon in self-defense, and fact that he had it in his hands did not constitute violation of statute forbidding carrying of pistol on or about one's person without a license. Wilson v. United States (1952, 198 F. 2d 299, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 135).

Sentences

Objection to sentence was not properly addressed to the appellate court where it was within the statutory maximum and judgment did not reveal inconsistent or legally impermissible approaches, mistake of law, failure to use sentencing aids, failure to exercise discretion, or failure to supply legally required findings. United States v. R. Freeman (1972, 462 F. 2d 290, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 186).

One-year sentence imposed upon defendant convicted of carrying a dangerous weapon without a license was not plainly illegal so as to entitle trial court to vacate such sentence and resentence defendant to a term of three to ten years, even though trial court, when first sentence was imposed, was operating under misapprehension that defendant was serving another sentence, where such misapprehension was the fault of the court itself or the prosecutor. United States v. G. E. Evans (1972, 459 F. 2d 1134, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Defendant convicted of carrying a pistol without a license, in violation of this section, was not eligible for sentencing under Young Adult Offenders Act. D. Atkinson v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 899).

In imposing a more severe sentence on conviction of carrying a pistol without a license where defendant has suffered a prior similar conviction or a prior felony conviction, the mandatory statutory procedure must be followed. C. D. Coleman v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 896).

Sentence of from three to nine years on conviction of carrying a pistol without a license in violation of District of Columbia law is required to be vacated and case remanded for resentencing since the record is barren of any presentence notice to defendant or proof to court of existence of statutory preconditions of imposition of greater than one-year sentence, to wit, prior conviction of similar offense or of any other felony. United States v. H. Lucas, Jr. (1971, 441 F. 2d 1056, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 366).

Sentence on conviction of carrying a pistol without a license and assault with a dangerous weapon could be cumulated, notwithstanding that both counts arose out of single transaction, since the evidence militated against conclusion that defendant carried pistol with particular purpose in mind of using it to inflict injury but rather portrayed a sudden flare-up and precipitous resort to the pistol during verbal affray. Id.

In a prosecution for carrying an unlicensed pistol and for increased punishment by reason of recidivism, defense counsel's concession, in bail application, that defendant had been convicted of robbery in 1957 is insufficient proof, for purpose of sentencing under recidivist statute, that defendant had been convicted of robbery in 1958 as charged by government. United States v. E. Clemons

In proceedings to increase punishment under recidivist statutes, not only existence of prior conviction but also its character, its continuing efficacy, and its constitutional validity are among inquiries appropriate. Id.

Proceeding to increase punishment under recidivist statute is criminal in character, and the accused recidivist must be sheltered by suitable safeguards against improper sentence. Id.

Procedural standards to be observed in imposing increased punishment under recidivist statute include reasonable notice of recidivist charge, the opportunity to be heard, the right to counsel, and proof of prior conviction. Id.

Where prosecuting attorney filed "Information of Prior Conviction" with clerk but during sentencing proceedings there was no mention of Information or prior conviction and there was no proof of such conviction in the presence of the defendant, imposition of sentence on basis that defendant, found guilty of carrying pistol without a license, had prior offense was improper. United States v. E. M. Marshall (1970, 440 F. 2d 195, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 167; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 153, 400 U.S. 909).

A sentence of not less than three or more than ten years was not unduly severe after defendant pleaded guilty to carrying deadly weapon after previous conviction of similar offense or of a felony, who had prior convictions of house breaking, grand larceny and receiving stolen property and who had failed to consistently report back to jail in interim between entry of his guilty plea and date of sentencing. H. L. Barnett v. United States (1968, 403 F. 2d 918, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 192).

Where general sentence imposed following convictions for robbery, assault with a dangerous weapon, and carrying concealed weapon was in excess of statutory maximum for carrying concealed weapon, and convictions for robbery and assault with dangerous weapon were required to be reversed because of absence of indication that defendant made informed decision, after appropriate advice, to proceed with joint counsel, case would be remanded for resentencing on count of carrying concealed weapon. F. J. Ford v. United States of America (1967, 379 F. 2d 123, 126 U.S. App. D.C. 346).

Determination of whether evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for carrying a dangerous weapon without a license would not be made where defendant was convicted upon sufficient evidence of a different offense and sentences imposed upon defendant for the two offenses ran concurrently. J. Hart v. United States (D.C. App. 1963, 187 A. 2d 329).

Trial court did not abuse discretion in sentencing defendant, who had entered plea of guilty and whose motions for continuation of bail and for immediate sentencing were denied, to one year imprisonment without crediting him for 52 days which had elapsed between plea of guilty and date on which he was sentenced. R. W. Epperson v. S. A. Anderson, Supt. etc. (1963, 326 F. 2d 665, 117 U.S. App. D.C. 122).

Defendant simultaneously carrying two pistols, each of which was unlicensed, committed but a single offense and could not be given consecutive sentences by reason of being separately charged with carrying of unlicensed pistol in two separate informations. Cormier v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 137 A. 2d 212).

Special policemen

Despite fact that the defendant was a special policeman at time of his arrest for carrying a pistol without a license in violation of statute, he did not come within the "policemen or other duly appointed law-enforcement officers" exception to the statute, since a special policeman is not empowered to exercise his authority outside the property or area he is appointed to protect, or to carry weapons away from such area with certain exceptions, and since the factual circumstances in the instant case were not even close to being within those limited exceptions. J. E. Franklin v. United States (1972, 458 F. 2d 861, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 39).

Since the defendant, although in uniform, was not due to report for duty as special policeman for six hours and was not traveling without deviation, immediately before or immediately after period of actual duty, between area where he worked and his residence, he was not "policeman" nor "law enforcement officer" within provision exempting policemen or law enforcement officers from statute proscribing carrying a pistol either openly or concealed without a license. J. E. Franklin v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 784).

Special policemen are commissioned for special purpose of protecting property on premises of employer and do not have general duties and broad authority of a policeman or law enforcement officer in the ordinary sense of those terms. Id.

Verdict

Where concurrent sentences were imposed for second-degree murder and for carrying a pistol without a license, murder conviction was affirmed and there were difficult factual and legal problems with respect to the weapons conviction, public interest and the interest of administration of justice required that the conviction on weapons count be vacated. United States v. D. Bobbitt (1971, 450 F. 2d 685, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 224).

Waiver of trial by jury

In a prosecution, without jury, where there is a right to trial by jury, did and for the record of what occurred in open court was silent as to waiver of defendant's right to a jury trial, case would be remanded for a determination, after hearing, of whether defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived his right to jury trial in open court and requested a trial by the court, even though informations had been stamped with notation "Jury Trial Demand Withdrawn". F. H. Jackson v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 262 A. 2d 106).

The court said that the public interest in obtaining swift and certain justice for those charged with crime, requires that trial court assume responsibility for making certain that record in all criminal trials in which accused has a constitutional right to trial by jury, which are conducted without a jury contains evidence from which it may be found that defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived such right. Id.

The court held that in trials commenced after issuance of this opinion, there should be in the record a statement in open court by defendant himself in order to provide a basis for subsequently determining, if necessary, that he knowingly and voluntarily waived his constitutional right to trial by jury. Id.

§ 22-3205. Exceptions to section 22-3204.

The provisions of section 22-3204 shall not apply to marshals, sheriffs, prison or jail wardens, or their deputies, policemen or other duly appointed law-enforcement officers, or to members of the Army, Navy, Air Force, or Marine Corps of the United States or of the National Guard or Organized Reserves when on duty, or to the regularly enrolled members of any organization duly authorized to purchase or receive such weapons from the United States, provided such members are at or are going to or from their places of assembly or target practice, or to officers or employees of the United States duly authorized to carry a concealed pistol, or to any person engaged in the business of manufacturing, repairing, or dealing in firearms, or the agent or representative of any such person having in his possession, using, or carrying a pistol in the usual or ordinary course of such business or to any person while carrying a pistol unloaded and in a secure wrapper from the place of purchase to his home or place of business or to a place of repair or back to his home or place of business or in moving goods from one place of abode or business to another. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 651, ch. 465, § 5).

CODIFICATION

"Air Force" was inserted on authority of section 207(a) (f) of Act July 26, 1947, ch. 343, 61 Stat. 502.

Assistance of counsel

In this case the record did not show that defendant's trial counsel who declined to cross-examine either complainant or arresting officer ineffectively assisted defendant who himself testified and denied assault. J. J. Scott v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 259 A. 2d 353; leave to appeal denied 427 F. 2d 609, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 339).

Burden of proving exception

Defendant had burden of bringing himself within statutory exception to offense charged rather than that of the prosecution to negative it. M. L. Williams v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 237 A. 2d 539).

Business of repairing firearms

Defendant charged with carrying pistol for which he had no license, was not within District of Columbia statute providing that licensing provisions did not apply to persons engaged in business of repairing firearms when pistol is carried unloaded in a secure wrapper from place of business to home, where defendant claimed that repairing guns was only his hobby and that he had volunteered to work on gun which he claimed belonged to another. Cormier v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 137 A. 2d 212).

Special policemen

Despite fact that the defendant was a special policeman at time of his arrest for carrying a pistol without a license in violation of statute, he did not come within the "policemen or other duly appointed law-enforcement officers" exception to the statute, since a special policeman is not empowered to exercise his authority outside the property or area he is appointed to protect, or to carry weapons away from such area with certain exceptions, and since the factual circumstances in the instant case were not even close to being within those limited exceptions. J. E. Franklin v. United States (1972, 458 F. 2d 861, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 39).

Since the defendant, although in uniform, was not due to report for duty as special policeman for six hours and was not traveling without deviation, immediately before or immediately after period of actual duty, between area where he worked and his residence, he was not "policeman" nor "law enforcement officer" within provision exempting policemen or law enforcement officers from statute proscribing carrying a pistol either openly or concealed without a license. J. E. Franklin v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 784).

Special policemen are commissioned for special purpose of protecting property on premises of employer and do not have general duties and broad authority of a policeman or law enforcement officer in the ordinary sense of those terms. Id.

A defendant was neither a "policeman" nor a "law enforcement officer" so as to be exempt from section 22-3205 against carrying a pistol without a license, where defendant was a special policeman appointed by the Commissioners and he was not "on actual duty in the area" of the place where he was arrested nor was he "traveling without deviation immediately before and immediately after the period of actual duty between such places and his residence" within the Commissioner's regulation authorizing the carrying of firearms by special policemen under such circumstances. McKenzie v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 158 A. 2d 912).

§ 22-3206. Issue of licenses to carry pistol.

The superintendent of police of the District of Columbia may, upon the application of any person having a bona fide residence or place of business within the District of Columbia or of any person having a bona fide residence or place of business within the United States and a license to carry a pistol concealed upon his person issued by the lawful authorities of any State or subdivision of the United States, issue a license to such person to carry a pistol within the District of Columbia for not more than one year from date of issue, if it appears that the applicant has good reason to fear injury to his person or property or has any other proper reason for carrying a pistol and that he is a suitable person to be so licensed. The license shall be in duplicate, in form to be prescribed by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia and shall bear the name, address, description, photograph, and signature of the licensee and the reason given for desiring a license. The original thereof shall be delivered to the licensee, and the duplicate shall be retained by the superintendent of police of the District of Columbia and preserved in his office for six years. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 651, ch. 465, § 6.)

§ 22-3207. Selling pistol to minors and others.

No person shall within the District of Columbia sell any pistol to a person who he has reasonable cause to believe is not of sound mind, or is forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol, or, except when the relation of parent and child or guardian and ward exists, is under the age of twenty-one years. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 652, ch. 465, § 7; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 94, ch. 159, § 204(d).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, substituted "forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol" for a "a drug addict, or is a person who has been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of a crime of violence" and increased the age requirement from eighteen to twenty-one.

§ 22-3208. Transfers of firearms regulated.

No seller shall within the District of Columbia deliver a pistol to the purchaser thereof until forty-eight hours shall have elapsed from the time of the application for the purchase thereof, except in the case of sales to marshals, sheriffs, prison or jail wardens or their deputies, policemen, or other duly appointed law-enforcement officers, and, when delivered, said pistol shall be securely wrapped and shall be unloaded. At the time of applying for the purchase of a pistol the purchaser shall sign in duplicate and deliver to the seller a statement containing his full name, address, occupation, color, place of birth, the date and hour of application, the caliber, make, model, and manufacturer's number of the pistol to be purchased and a statement that he is not forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol. The seller shall, within six hours after such application, sign and attach his address and deliver one copy to such person or persons as the superintendent of police of the District of Columbia may designate, and shall retain the other copy for six years. No machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, or blackjack shall be sold to any person other than the persons designated in section 22-3214 as entitled to possess the same, and then only after permission to make such sale has been obtained from the superintendent of police of the District of Columbia. This section shall not apply to sales at wholesale to licensed dealers. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 652, ch. 465, § 8; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 94, ch. 159, § 204(e).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, substituted "a statement that he is not forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol" for "a statement that he has never been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of a crime of violence."

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Chief of Police as successor to Major and Superintendent of Police, see note under section 4-103.

§ 22-3209. Dealers of weapons to be licensed.

No retail dealer shall within the District of Columbia sell or expose for sale or have in his possession with intent to sell, any pistol, machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, or blackjack without being licensed as provided in section 22-3210. No wholesale dealer shall, within the District of Columbia, sell, or have in his possession with intent to sell, to any person other than a licensed dealer, any pistol, machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, or blackjack. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 652, ch. 465, § 9.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 22-3210.

§ 22-3210. Licenses of dealers of weapons—Records—By whom granted—Conditions thereof.

The Commissioner of the District of Columbia may, in his discretion, grant licenses and may prescribe the form thereof, effective for not more than one year from date of issue, permitting the licensee to sell pistols, machine guns, sawed-off shotguns, and blackjacks at retail within the District of Columbia subject to the following conditions in addition to those specified in section 22-3209, for breach of any of which the license shall be subject to forfeiture and the licensee subject to punishment as provided in this chapter.

1. The business shall be carried on only in the building designated in the license.

2. The license or a copy thereof, certified by the issuing authority, shall be displayed on the premises where it can be easily read.

3. No pistol shall be sold (a) if the seller has reasonable cause to believe that the purchaser is not of sound mind or is forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol or is under the age of twenty-one years, and (b) unless the purchaser is personally known to the seller or shall present clear evidence of his identity. No machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, or blackjack shall be sold to any person other than the persons designated in section 22-3214 as entitled to possess the same, and then only after permission to make such sale has been obtained from the superintendent of police of the District of Columbia.

4. A true record shall be made in a book kept for the purpose, the form of which may be prescribed by the commissioners, of all pistols, machine guns, and sawed-off shotguns in the possession of the licensee, which said record shall contain the date of purchase, the caliber, make, model, and manufacturer's number of the weapon, to which shall be added, when sold, the date of sale.

5. A true record in duplicate shall be made of every pistol, machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, and blackjack sold, said record to be made in a book kept for the purpose, the form of which may be prescribed by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia and shall be personally signed by the purchaser and by the person effecting the sale, each in the presence of the other and shall contain the date of sale, the name, address, occupation, color, and place of birth of the purchaser, and, so far as applicable, the caliber, make, model, and manufacturer's number of the weapon, and a statement by the purchaser that he is not forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol. One copy of said record shall, within seven days, be forwarded by mail to the superintendent of police of the District of Columbia and the other copy retained by the seller for six years.

6. No pistol or imitation thereof or placard advertising the sale thereof shall be displayed in any part of said premises where it can readily be seen from the outside. No license to sell at retail shall be granted to anyone except as provided in this section. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 652, ch. 465, § 10; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 94, ch. 159, § 204 (f), (g).)

Par. 5, first sentence, amended by act June 29, 1953, § 204(g), which substituted "a statement by the purchaser that he is not forbidden by section 22-3203 to possess a pistol" for "a statement signed by the purchaser that he has never been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of a crime of violence."

Chief of Police as successor to Major and Superintendent of Police, see note under section 4-103.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 22-3203, 22-3209, 22-3214.

§ 22-3211. False information forbidden in sale of weapons.

No person shall, in purchasing a pistol or in applying for a license to carry the same, or in purchasing a machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, or blackjack within the District of Columbia, give false information or offer false evidence of his identity. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 653, ch. 465, § 11.)

§ 22-3212. Alteration of identifying marks of weapons prohibited.

No person shall within the District of Columbia change, alter, remove, or obliterate the name of the maker, model, manufacturer's number, or other mark or identification on any pistol, machine gun, or sawed-off shotgun. Possession of any pistol, machine gun, or sawed-off shotgun upon which any such mark shall have been changed, altered, removed, or obliterated shall be prima facie evidence that the possessor has changed, altered, removed, or obliterated the same within the District of Columbia: Provided, however, That nothing contained in this section shall apply to any officer or agent of any of the departments of the United States or the District of Columbia engaged in experimental work (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 653, ch. 465, § 12.)

§ 22-3213. Exceptions.

Except as provided in section 22-3202 and section 22-3214(b), this chapter shall not apply to toy or antique pistols unsuitable for use as firearms. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 653, ch. 465, § 13; July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 205(b), title II, 84 Stat. 601.)

AMENDMENT

1970—Section 205(b) of Act July 29, 1970, Public Law 91-358 amended section by striking out "This" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Except as provided in section 2 and section 14(b) of this Act [section 22-3202 and section 22-3214(b)], this".

APPLICABILITY OF 1970 AMENDMENT

Section 901(b)(3) of Pub. L. 91-358, provided as follows: (3) The amendments made by sections 201 [sections 22-104 and 22-104a] and 205 [sections 22-3202 and 22-3213] of this Act shall apply with respect to any person who commits an offense after the effective date of this Act. [For effective date see note preceding § 11-101.]

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1970 AMENDMENT

See note preceding section 11-101.

§ 22-3214. Possession of certain dangerous weapons prohibited—Exceptions.

(a) No person shall within the District of Columbia possess any machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, or any instrument or weapon of the kind commonly known as a blackjack, slung shot, sand club, sandbag, switch-blade knife, or metal knuckles, nor any instrument, attachment, or appliance for causing the firing of any firearm to be silent or intended to lessen or muffle the noise of the firing of any firearms: Provided, however, That machine guns, or sawed-off shotguns, and blackjacks may be possessed by the members of the Army, Navy, Air Force, or Marine Corps of the United States, the National Guard, or Organized Reserves when on duty, the Post Office Department or its employees when on duty, marshals, sheriffs, prison or jail wardens, or their deputies, policemen, or other duly-appointed law-enforcement officers, officers or employees of the United States duly authorized to carry such weapons, banking institutions, public carriers who are engaged in the business of transporting mail, money, securities, or other valuables, wholesale dealers and retail dealers licensed under section 22-3210.

(b) No person shall within the District of Columbia possess, with intent to use unlawfully against another, an imitation pistol, or a dagger, dirk, razor, stiletto, or knife with a blade longer than three inches, or other dangerous weapon.

(c) Whoever violates this section shall be punished as provided in section 22-3215, unless the violation occurs after he has been convicted in the District of Columbia of a violation of this section or of a felony, either in the District of Columbia or in another jurisdiction, in which case he shall be imprisoned for not more than ten years. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 654, ch. 465, § 14; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 94, ch. 159, § 204(h).)

REFERENCE IN TEXT

The "Post Office Department", referred to in subsec. (a), was abolished and all its functions, powers, and duties were transferred to the United States Postal Service by section 4(a) of Act Aug. 12, 1970, Pub. L. 91-375, 84 Stat. 773. Section 6(o) of that Act provided that a reference in another law to the Post Office Department shall be considered a reference to the United States Postal Service.

CODIFICATION

In subsec. (a), "Air Force" was inserted on authority of section 207(a)(f) of Act July 26, 1947, ch. 343, 61 Stat. 502.

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, designated existing provisions as subsec. (a), included switch-blade knives in the list of weapons forbidden to be possessed and added subsecs. (b) and (c).

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 9-132, 22-3208, 22-3210, 22-3213.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN U.S. CODE

This section is referred to in title 40, section 193m, U.S. Code.

Abuse of discretion

The decision of the trial court, rendered after hearing on admissibility, that 1959 conviction of one defendant for housebreaking and larceny and 1962 conviction of another defendant for attempted housebreaking could be brought out on cross-examination in robbery prosecution unless either defendant could satisfy court that since conviction he had led legally blameless life, was not an abuse of discretion. United States v. J. L. Bailey at ano. (1970, 426 F. 2d 1236, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 242).

Appeal and error

Where judge hearing case without jury had opportunity visually to inspect knife, that was included in record, and it appeared that blade exceeded requisite length by fraction of inch, denying defense the opportunity to demonstrate in court by measuring instrument that blade was not beyond requisite length was not error even if cutting edge of blade measured less than requisite length. S. McIntyre v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 814).

Construction

Defendant who was convicted of possession of weapon which he seized from his wife when she attempted to shoot him "possessed" the gun within statute proscribing possession of prohibited weapon, where he held the gun long enough to threaten to shoot wife. Earl Cooke v. United States (D.C. App. 1965, 213 A. 2d 508).

Construction with other laws

The statute making it a crime for a person to carry "elsewhere" than in his home "or place of business or on land possessed by him a pistol without a license * * * or any deadly or dangerous weapon capable of being so concealed," and the statute prohibiting possession "anywhere" with intent to use unlawfully against another an imitation pistol reflect the purpose of Congress to strengthen the existing law and tighten controls over the possession of dangerous weapons and each has distinctive objects of correction. United States v. J. H. Parker (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 185 A. 2d 913).

The statute prohibiting the possession "anywhere" with intent to use unlawfully against another an imitation pistol or other "dangerous weapon" embraces the possession of a real pistol and possession of a pistol may be charged under such statute. Id.

The 1953 act specifically prohibiting possession of knife with intent to use unlawfully against another was not intended to cover the whole subject matter of knives in District of Columbia, in the sense of repealing deadly weapon statute which required no proof of unlawful intent, and hence information alleging violation of the older statute was sufficient though it specified knife as the deadly weapon and did not allege intent to use knife unlawfully against another. United States v. W. E. Shannon (D. C. Mun. App. 1958, 144 A. 2d 267).

Double jeopardy

Where defendant was charged by information with violation of statute which makes it unlawful for one to own or have in his possession a pistol if previously convicted of possession of a prohibited weapon, and before any witness took stand prosecuting attorney announced that Government could not go forward with charge and would nolle prosequere it and bring new charge of carrying a pistol without a license, plea of double jeopardy was not a valid plea in new prosecution because the two informations charged separate and distinct offenses. C. R. Newman v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 239 A. 2d 152).

Election of offenses

Government is not required to bring all knife cases under code section prohibiting possession of knife with blade longer than three inches; and defendant who carried openly or concealed on or about his person a "pocket knife" which had a black outer case and a blade three-eighths of an inch wide and four and one-quarter inches from shank to tip was properly prosecuted under code section forbidding any person to carry either openly or concealed on or about his person a deadly or dangerous weapon capable of being so concealed. Degree v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1958, 144 A. 2d 547).

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction for possession of prohibited weapon. B. R. Burrell v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 252 A. 2d 897).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction for assault and possession of dangerous weapon with intent to use the same unlawfully. C. Willis v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 250 A. 2d 569).

Hearing de novo

It was not erroneous to deny a hearing de novo upon the issue of whether girl in whose apartment defendant, charged with possession of submachine gun, was staying gave her valid consent to search of bed wherein defendant had secreted gun where conflict in testimony between police officers at pretrial hearing on issue was not substantially inconsistent and defendant at no time proffered substance of any new evidence that would be offered by additional officers he had subpoenaed. R. W. Dupont v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 259 A. 2d 355).

Inconsistent verdict

In this case, the court held that since there was evidence that defendant not only struck officer with nightstick but also hit him and engaged in general scuffling, finding by jury that defendant was not guilty of charge involving possession of nightstick did not preclude conviction on charge of simple assault. C. T. Matthews v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 267 A. 2d 826; cert. denied 92 S. Ct. 221, 404 U.S. 884).

Insanity

A general verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity carried with it a finding that, except for the question as to his sanity, defendant was guilty as charged. Rucker v. United States (1960, 280 F. 2d 623, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 75).

In prosecution for assault with intent to kill and possession of a rifle with intent to use it unlawfully against another, where the court found the defendant not guilty by reason of insanity and it did not appear that defendant actually understood and acquiesced that the question of his guilt was being tried in that it did not appear that he understood and acquiesced in what was being accomplished without witnesses or evidence and he protested promptly a few day after the verdict, the defendant was entitled to a new trial. Id.

Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction of the Court of General Sessions extended to prosecution for carrying a dangerous weapon, possessing a prohibited weapon and driving a motor vehicle without an operator's license, notwithstanding contention that the trial court had jurisdiction only over offenses punishable by fine or imprisonment and that the offenses charged carried penalties of a fine, imprisonment, or both. W. P. Martin v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 448).

Prosecution

Statutes proscribing the carrying of a dangerous weapon and possession of a prohibited weapon and providing for imprisonment for not more than ten years in event of violation occurring after conviction for previous weapons offense or felony do not mandatorily require prosecution as a "repeater"; rather, if the Government, in the exercise of its prosecutorial discretion, chooses to proceed against a defendant as a second offender, then it must do so under the second offender provisions contained in the statutes. W. P. Martin v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 448).

In view of statutes proscribing the carrying of a dangerous weapon and possession of prohibited weapon, prosecution had no authority to charge the defendant under § 22-104 as a "general" repeat offender for carrying a dangerous weapon and possessing a prohibited weapon, and as the defendant received no proper and timely notice that he was subject to as much as ten years' imprisonment under the statutes specifically covering the offenses, the defendant in effect was merely tried as a first offender on a misdemeanor and the Court of General Sessions did not lack jurisdiction on theory that the defendant faced possibility of being sentenced to up to ten years in prison. Id.

Purpose

Acquittal by defendant of assault with a dangerous weapon did not require his acquittal on companion charge of carrying a pistol which he used to defend himself on ground that such acquittal demonstrated conclusively that defendant was carrying pistol for a lawful purpose notwithstanding defendant was exposed to a serious current threat by victim, that he did not have time to get a license and that he made a serious attempt to secure police protection, in light of the history of antiweapon legislation evidencing the clearest intent to drastically tighten ban on carrying dangerous weapons. Cooke v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 887, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 223).

Ruling of district court as binding on Court of General Sessions

United States district court decision, in prosecution for narcotics violation, which suppressed certain evidence as products of illegal search and seizure was not binding on District of Columbia Court of General Sessions, where defendant was charged with possession of prohibited weapon and possession of numbers slips, and which had held previously to United States District Court ruling that certain evidence, which was seized under same circumstances as evidence in federal prosecution, was admissible. B. R. Burrell v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 252 A. 2d 897).

Search and seizure

Where defendant left hotel shortly after robbery in hotel had been committed, matched description given police officer of one of the robbers with respect to clothing, age, and general appearance, broke into run after officer started to follow him, and tried to break away after officer overtook him and said he would like to talk to him, action of the arresting officer in subduing defendant and discovering switchblade knife in his back pocket was accomplished with probable cause and was not unreasonable under circumstances, and admission of knife in prosecution under this section presented no plain error or defect affecting substantial rights. J. E. Herring v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 273 A. 2d 835).

A defendant, who was lawfully arrested for operating automobile without a valid permit, was taken to police station in his own automobile, and charged with driving without a valid permit, possession of prohibited weapon and possession of numbers slips, but did not protest or withhold his consent to use by police of his automobile to drive him to police station and was not coerced in any way, there was no seizure of defendant's automobile by police prior to arrival at police station. B. R. Burrell v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 252 A. 2d 897).

Self-defense

Defendant who was convicted of possession of weapon which he seized from his wife when she attempted to shoot him was not acting in self-defense where he pushed wife over the bed after he seized the weapon and threatened to shoot her. Earl Cooke v. United States (D.C. App. 1965, 213 A. 2d 508).

Sentence—Consecutive

Consecutive sentences were properly imposed on defendant convicted of simple assault and possession of prohibited weapon, notwithstanding that both offenses arose out of his attack on his wife, where government had to prove that defendant attempted to inflict bodily injury and did not have to prove possession of weapon in order to sustain assault charge, and the weapon charge, on the other hand, required proof of possession of weapon but did not require evidence of attempt to harm. E. Cooke v. United States (D.C. App. 1965, 213 A. 2d 508).

Waiver of trial by jury

In a prosecution, without jury, where there is a right to trial by jury, and for the record of what occurred in open court was silent as to waiver of defendant's right to a jury trial, case would be remanded for a determination, after hearing, of whether defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived his right to jury trial in open court and requested a trial by the court, even though informations had been stamped with notation "Jury Trial Demand Withdrawn". F. H. Jackson v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 262 A. 2d 106).

The court said that the public interest in obtaining swift and certain justice for those charged with crime, requires that trial court assume responsibility for making certain that record in all criminal trials in which accused has a constitutional right to trial by jury which are conducted without a jury, contains evidence from which it may be found that defendant knowingly and voluntarily waived such right. Id.

The court held that in trials commenced after issuance of this opinion, there should be in the record a statement in open court by defendant himself in order to provide a basis for subsequently determining, if necessary, that he knowingly and voluntarily waived his constitutional right to trial by jury. Id.

Witnesses

Where witness in prosecution for murder and possession of prohibited weapon was long time drug addict who had used drugs on day of trial and who had been hospitalized for drug addiction, trial court abused its discretion by refusing defendant's request that trial judge subpoena and examine locally available hospital records pertaining to witness' competency. United States v. R. H. Crosby (1972, 462 F. 2d 1201, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 306).

§ 22-3215. Penalties.

Any violation of any provision of this chapter for which no penalty is specifically provided shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 654, ch. 465, § 15.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 22-3203, 22-3204, 22-3214.

Appeal and error

Record in prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license in violation of § 22-3204 supported finding that defendant, to whom Miranda warnings were read by policeman from standard police form and who was given the form to read in police station before being questioned, but who was not asked if he understood contents of form, had been sufficiently informed of his right to remain silent and to counsel. M. J. Brewster v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 409).

In view of the overwhelming evidence that the particular address claimed by defendant to be his dwelling house was not his dwelling house, any error with respect to whether defendant waived any of his constitutional rights to remain silent and to counsel before being questioned as to his residence was harmless in prosecution for violation of § 22-3204 prohibiting the carrying of an unlicensed pistol except in one's dwelling house. Id.

Double jeopardy

Defendant, who allegedly carried concealed unlicensed pistol on his person and produced it and shot victim, was not put twice in jeopardy for same offense by prosecution upon two counts, for assault with deadly weapon, and also for carrying concealed unlicensed weapon, since element of proof in second count, that gun was unlicensed, was not necessary in proof of assault charge. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

Indictment

Failure of pistol-carrying count of indictment to allege or prove to show that defendant had been previously convicted of felony, did not preclude imposition of greater penalty applicable to defendant who has previously been convicted of felony, where defendant had on cross-examination admitted prior felonies, and defendant was not denied right of allocution, nor was he prepared to show that he had not been previously convicted, and Government after conviction and before sentence filed information alleging prior conviction. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

Pistol-carrying count of indictment was not defective in using conjunctive "and", instead of statutory disjunctive "or," in charging that defendant "did carry openly and concealed a dangerous weapon", where proof tended to show that weapon was concealed when defendant approached scene of shooting and was then produced and carried openly. Id.

Prior conviction

A State legislature does not violate equal protection provision of Fourteenth Amendment of United States Constitution, in enacting statutes which impose heavier penalty for second or subsequent offenses, since fact of prior conviction in such cases is considered as affording reasonable basis for classification. Kendrick v. United States (1956, 238 F. 2d 34, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 173).

Where defendant was charged with carrying unlicensed pistol after felony conviction, and, on defendant's motion, allegations in indictment concerning prior conviction of felony were stricken, and defendant's counsel, out of defendant's hearing, stipulated that defendant had previously been convicted of a felony and waived later proof thereof, but concession of counsel was made without defendant's knowledge or consent, there was no waiver by defendant of necessity of proof of felony conviction, and imposition of enhanced sentence, on ground of prior felony conviction, was error. Jackson v. United States (1955, 221 F. 2d 883, 95 U.S. App. D.C. 328).

Sentences

Procedural standards to be observed in imposing increased punishment under recidivist statute include reasonable notice of recidivist charge, the opportunity to be heard, the right to counsel, and proof of prior conviction. United States v. E. Clemons (1970, 440 F. 2d 205, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 177; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 959, 401 U.S. 945).

Where prosecuting attorney filed "Information of Prior Conviction" with clerk but during sentencing proceedings there was no mention of Information or prior conviction and there was no proof of such conviction in the presence of the defendant, imposition of sentence on basis that defendant, found guilty of carrying pistol without a license, had prior offense was improper. United States v. E. M. Marshall (1970, 440 F. 2d 195, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 167; cert. denied 91 S. Ct. 153, 400 U.S. 909).

A sentence of not less than three nor more than ten years was not unduly severe after defendant pleaded guilty to carrying deadly weapon after previous conviction of similar offense or of a felony who had prior convictions of house breaking, grand larceny and receiving stolen property and who had failed to consistently report back to jail in interim between entry of his guilty plea and date of sentencing. H. L. Barnett v. United States (1968, 403 F. 2d 918, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 192).

Sentence of 360 days for carrying pistol without license was not excessive but was legally permissible under statute providing that applicable penalty was fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both. F. R. Gillard v. United States (D.C. App. 1964, 202 A. 2d 776).

A legally permissible sentence is not subject to review or control by District of Columbia Court of Appeals. Id.

§ 22-3215a. Manufacture, transfer, use, possession or transportation of molotov cocktails, or other explosives for unlawful purposes, prohibited—Definitions—Penalties.

(a) No person shall within the District of Columbia manufacture, transfer, use, possess, or transport a molotov cocktail. As used in this subsection, the term "molotov cocktail" means (1) a breakable container containing flammable liquid and having a wick or a similar device capable of being ignited, or (2) any other device designed to explode or produce uncontained combustion upon impact; but such term does not include a device lawfully and commercially manufactured primarily for the purpose of illumination, construction work, or other lawful purpose.

(b) No person shall manufacture, transfer, use, possess, or transport any device, instrument, or object designed to explode or produce uncontained combustion, with the intent that the same may be used unlawfully against any person or property.

(c) No person shall, during a state of emergency in the District of Columbia declared by the Commissioner pursuant to law, or during a situation in the District of Columbia concerning which the President has invoked any provision of chapter 15 of title 10, United States Code, manufacture, transfer, use, possess, or transport any device, instrument, or object designed to explode or produce uncontained combustion, except at his resident or place of business.

(d) Whoever violates this section shall (1) for the first offense, be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than one and not more than five years, (2) for the second offense, be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than three and not more than fifteen years, and (3) for the third or subsequent offense, be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than five years and of any term of years up to life imprisonment. In the case of a person convicted of a third or subsequent violation of this section, chapter 402 of title 18, United States Code (Federal Youth Corrections Act) shall not apply. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 654, ch. 465, § 15A; as added July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, title II, § 209, 84 Stat. 603.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

See note preceding section 11-101.

§ 22-3216. Separability of provisions.

If any part of this chapter is for any reason declared void, such invalidity shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions of this chapter. (July 8, 1932, 47 Stat. 654, ch. 465, § 16.)

§ 22-3217. Dangerous articles—Definition—Taking and destruction—Procedure.

(a) As used in this section, the term "dangerous article" means (1) any weapon such as a pistol, machine gun, sawed-off shotgun, blackjack, slingshot, sandbag, or metal knuckles, or (2) any instrument, attachment, or appliance for causing the firing of any firearms to be silent or intended to lessen or muffle the noise of the firing of any firearms.

(b) A dangerous article unlawfully owned, possessed, or carried is hereby declared to be a nuisance.

(c) When a police officer, in the course of a lawful arrest or lawful search, discovers a dangerous article which he reasonably believes is a nuisance under subsection (b) he shall take it into his possession and surrender it to the property clerk of the Metropolitan Police Department.

(d) (1) Within thirty days after the date of such surrender, any person may file in the office of the property clerk of the Metropolitan Police Department a written claim for possession of such dangerous article. Upon the expiration of such period, the property clerk shall notify each such claimant, by registered mail addressed to the address shown on the claim, of the time and place of a hearing to determine which claimant, if any, is entitled to possession of such dangerous article. Such hearing shall be held within sixty days after the date of such surrender.

(2) At the hearing the property clerk shall hear and receive evidence with respect to the claims filed under paragraph (1). Thereafter he shall determine which claimant, if any, is entitled to possession of such dangerous article and shall reduce his decision to writing. The property clerk shall send a true copy of such written decision to each claimant by registered mail addressed to the last known address of such claimant.

(3) Any claimant may, within thirty days after the day on which the copy of such decision was mailed to such claimant, file an appeal in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. If the claimant files an appeal, he shall at the same time give written notice thereof to the property clerk. If the decision of the property clerk is so appealed, the property clerk shall not dispose of the dangerous article while such appeal is pending and, if the final judgment is entered by such court, he shall dispose of such dangerous article in accordance with the judgment of such court. The Superior Court of the District of Columbia is authorized to determine which claimant, if any, is entitled to possession of the dangerous article and to enter a judgment ordering a disposition of such dangerous article consistent with subsection (f).

(4) If there is no such appeal, or if such appeal is dismissed or withdrawn, the property clerk shall dispose of such dangerous article in accordance with subsection (f).

(5) The property clerk shall make no disposition of a dangerous article under this section, whether in accordance with his own decision or in accordance with the judgment of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, until the United States attorney for the District of Columbia certifies to him that such dangerous article will not be needed as evidence.

(e) A person claiming a dangerous article shall be entitled to its possession only if (1) he shows on satisfactory evidence that he is the owner of the dangerous article or is the accredited representative of the owner, and that the ownership is lawful; and (2) he shows on satisfactory evidence that at the time the dangerous article was taken into possession by a police officer it was not unlawfully owned and was not unlawfully possessed or carried by the claimant or with his knowledge or consent; and (3) the receipt of possession by him will not cause the article to be a nuisance. A representative is accredited if he has a power of attorney from the owner.

(f) If a person claiming a dangerous article is entitled to its possession as determined under subsections (d) and (e), possession of such dangerous article shall be given to such person. If no person so claiming is entitled to its possession as determined under subsections (d) and (e), or if there be no claimant, such dangerous article shall be destroyed. In lieu of such destruction, any such serviceable dangerous article may, upon order of the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, be transferred to and used by any Federal or District Government law-enforcing agency, and the agency receiving same shall establish property responsibility and records of these dangerous articles.

(g) The property clerk shall not be liable in damages for any action performed in good faith under this section. (July 8, 1932, ch. 465, § 18, as added Feb. 20, 1952, 66 Stat. 8, ch. 47, § 1; July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, title I, § 155(a), 84 Stat. 570.)

AMENDMENT

1970—Section 155(a) of Act July 29, 1970, Public Law 91-358 amended section by striking out "municipal court for the District of Columbia" and inserting in lieu thereof "Superior Court of the District of Columbia."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1970 AMENDMENT

See note preceding section 11-101.

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS TO COMMISSIONER

See § 401 of Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, eff. Nov. 3, 1967, set out in the appendix to title 1. See also §§ 301 and 503 of the Plan.

Arrest, search and seizure

Where police officers searched accused's premises under valid search warrant and arrested persons in accused's absence, pistols which were found and which accused had allegedly received as stolen property and which might have affected escape of those lawfully arrested were validly seized, and hence subsequent arrest of accused for receiving stolen property was not invalid as fruit of unlawful search, and narcotics taken from accused's person were admissible in subsequent narcotics prosecution. Palmer v. United States (1953, 203 F. 2d 66, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 103).

Section, acts July 29, 1892, 27 Stat. 323, ch. 320, § 8; July 8, 1898, 30 Stat. 723, ch. 638; Mar. 3, 1909, 35 Stat. 711, ch. 250, defined vagrancy, provided for prosecution and the giving of security and is now covered by section 22-3302 et seq.

The following classes of persons shall be deemed vagrants in the District of Columbia:

(1) Any person known to be a pickpocket, thief, burglar, confidence operator, or felon, either by his own confession or by his having been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of any one of such offenses or of any felony, and having no lawful employment and having no lawful means of support realized from a lawful occupation or source, and not giving a good account of himself when found loitering around in any park, highway, public building, or other public place, store, shop, or reservation, or at any public gathering or assembly.

(2) Repealed. June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 97, ch. 159, § 209.

(3) Any person leading an immoral or profligate life who has no lawful employment and who has no lawful means of support realized from a lawful occupation or source.

(4) Any person who keeps, operates, frequents, lives in, or is employed in any house or other establishment of ill fame, or who (whether married or single) engages in or commits acts of fornication or perversion for hire.

(5) Any person who frequents or loafs, loiters, or idles in or around or is the occupant of or is employed in any gambling establishment or establishment where intoxicating liquor is sold without a license.

(6) Any person wandering abroad and lodging in any grocery or provision establishment, vacant house, or other vacant building, outhouse, market place, shed, barn, garage, gasoline station, parking lot or in the open air, and not giving a good account of himself.

(7) Any person wandering abroad and begging, or who goes about from door to door or places himself in or on any highway, passage, or other public place to beg or receive alms.

(8) Any person who wanders about the streets at late or unusual hours of the night without any visible or lawful business and not giving a good account of himself.

(9) And all persons who by the common law are vagrants, whether embraced in any of the foregoing classifications or not.

(Dec. 17, 1941, 55 Stat. 808, ch. 589, § 1; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 97, ch. 159, § 209 (b).)

AMENDMENT

1953—Act June 29, 1953, repealed par. (2) relating to possession of implements of crime which is now covered by section 22-3601.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 22-3203, 22-3303 to 22-3306, 33-416a.

Authority of police officer

Where defendant set off hotel burglar alarm by leaving through side door and willingly returned inside with employee who called police and defendant confessed to having committed act of prostitution, but element of vagrancy of loitering about public place was lacking, there was no misdemeanor committed in presence of officer and arrest was unlawful. S. A. Curtis v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 222 A. 2d 840).

That, within period of about three weeks, defendant on four occasions at late hours was observed in downtown area many blocks from home, on one occasion was talking to male in dark alley, on another was walking in parking lot, on another was in company of known prostitute, and on another was in company of convicted felon, gave reasonable ground for officer's belief that her presence on streets was not for any legitimate purpose and was sufficient justification for calling upon her to account for her actions and for her arrest where she failed to do so. E. R. Harris v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1963, 192 A. 2d 814).

That defendant was in taxicab when officer stopped her and was not then wandering about streets did not preclude him from stopping her and questioning her, where it could be inferred that hailing and boarding cab were part of effort to avoid questioning by police. Id.

A person found loitering has duty to give a good account of himself. C. H. Kelley v. United States (1961, 298 F. 2d 310, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 396).

Where police officer observed defendant walking along street shortly after noon hour carrying a paper bag and recognized him as a convicted thief and pursued him because officer assumed that defendant was carrying stolen goods, even though he had no information that an offense had been committed, arrest for vagrancy was invalid for lack of any evidence of loitering. Jones v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 158 A. 2d 771).

Officers of the law have no right to compel one to account for his actions merely because that person is on street at an unusual hour. Beall v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 82 A. 2d 765).

Where female defendant was seen wandering around streets time after time in early morning hours, often alone but sometimes in company of a known prostitute, and engaging in conversations with men, with no indication that such course of conduct had any legitimate purpose, arresting officer had reasonable grounds for believing that her use of streets was not for any legitimate purpose and could ask that she account for her actions. Id.

Police officer who saw defendant loitering around bus terminal and mingling with the crowd and recognized him as a professional pickpocket was authorized, under par. (1) of this section, to question defendant, and, upon defendant's failure to give a good account of himself, to place defendant under arrest. Clark v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 711).

Consolidation of trials

Where information charged accused with vagrancy in being employed in house of ill fame, and informations charging other two defendants were similar except that period of time over which alleged vagrancy had continued differed in each case, and only common ground between the acts of all defendants was that they took place at designated address and "divers other places in the District of Columbia," and there was no conspiracy or joint commission of crime alleged, granting consolidation of trials against all defendants was error. Hunt v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1946, 47 A. 2d 783).

Where information charged accused with vagrancy in being a person leading an immoral and profligate life and in being employed in a house of ill fame, and vagrancy informations against two other defendants charged some similar acts, granting consolidations of trials against all defendants was error. District of Columbia v. Hunt (1947, 163 F. 2d 838, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 159).

Constitutionality

Since the term loitering as used in this section failed to supply the necessary statutory criteria by which one could objectively distinguish lawful from unlawful conduct the statute was unconstitutional. H. M. Ricks v. District of Columbia (1968, 414 F. 2d 1097, 134 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

Since under the Narcotics Vagrancy and General Vagrancy Statutes anyone using street for a lawful business in a lawful manner may do so without restriction, statutes are not an unreasonable restriction on freedom of movement in violation of due process clause of Fifth Amendment. H. M. Ricks and J. N. Williams v. United States; H. M. Ricks v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1967, 228 A. 2d 316; rev'd 414 F. 2d 1097, 134 U.S. App. D.C. D.C. 201).

Convictions for violation of Narcotics Vagrancy and General Vagrancy Statutes were not invalid on ground that defendants were being punished solely for their status as vagrants. Id.

Convictions of defendants for violation of Narcotics Vagrancy and General Vagrancy Statutes on proof showing defendants' associations with known narcotics users and prostitutes did not violate Eighth Amendment's prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment despite claim that there was an absence of any overt criminal act. Id.

Statute providing that any person leading "immoral or profligate life" who has no lawful employment and who has no lawful means of support realized from lawful occupation or source is vagrant is not unconstitutional on ground that words "immoral or profligate life" are too vague and uncertain. E. J. Hicks v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1964, 197 A. 2d 154).

Construction

Vagrancy statute, because it defines a crime, must be construed narrowly in favor of defendant. J. Johnson v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1967, 230 A. 2d 483).

When an individual is unable to give a good account to police when wandering at late and unusual hours and is associated with criminals or narcotics addicts and is not lawfully employed, these factors, together with others enumerated in statutes, constitute probable cause for arrest for vagrancy. H. M. Ricks and J. N. Williams v. United States; H. M. Ricks v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1967, 228 A. 2d 316; rev'd 414 F. 2d 1097, 134 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

Vagrancy statutes were not invalid on ground that they were "catch-alls" used when other crimes could not be proven or that they allegedly required a lesser quantum of proof to convict. Id.

Word "loitering" as used in Narcotics Vagrancy and General Vagrancy Statutes was not unconstitutionally vague, particularly where additional conditions were necessary to constitute offense. Id.

Reference to "failure to give a good account" as used in Narcotics Vagrancy and General Vagrancy Statutes restricts rather than enlarges application of statutes and allows suspected vagrant to dissipate probable cause by satisfactorily explaining his conduct, and the arresting officer is not the only one who must evaluate account given by person questioned. Id.

Narcotics Vagrancy and General Vagrancy Statutes delineate with specificity what vagrancy is, and the definitions are neither numerous nor susceptible to widely divergent interpretations. Id.

"Known" is sometimes used in sense of "reputed", but in code section defining vagrancy, Congress clearly and specifically provided that one could come within purview of statute only if he was "known" to be a "pick-pocket, * * * felon" by either conviction or confession. L. R. Ferguson v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1965, 208, A. 2d 96).

Evidence would not sustain vagrancy conviction. Id. The vagrancy statute must be construed narrowly in favor of defendant. Harris v. District of Columbia (1958, 251 F. 2d 913, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 202).

Under this section providing that anyone who wanders about streets at late or unusual hours of the night without visible and lawful business and "not giving a good account of himself" is deemed a vagrant, quoted words mean not giving a good account upon order or demand to explain presence in the street, rather than just in response to casual or bantering questions. Beail v. District of Columbia (1953, 201 F. 2d 176, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Under statute defining vagrant as person who wanders about streets at late and unusual hours of night "without any visible and lawful business" and not giving a good account of himself, quoted phrase does not refer to ordinary vocation of person, but has reference to purpose of being on street, and "business" as specified therein is not to be limited to pursuit of monetary gain. Beail v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 82 A. 2d 765).

Vagrant statute is not to be construed as a curfew law, forbidding persons to be on streets after certain hour of night. Id.

Vagrancy statutes are designed to prevent crime and if officer must wait until crime is committed, preventive purposes of statute wholly fails. Id.

One standing on a platform for the primary purpose of picking a pocket is loitering within the meaning of the statute. Williams v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 924).

This section is in nature of a police regulation to prevent crime, and was enacted for the enforcement of good order and public safety, and must be construed in view of that purpose. Clark v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 711).

This section should not be so construed as to bar from society or intercourse with other human beings, persons who have been convicted of crime and have served the sentence imposed. Id.

Continuance

In prosecution for vagrancy, the continuance of defendant's trial for three days at request of prosecution was a matter in discretion of trial court which was not unreasonably exercised. Burns v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 714).

Defenses

The mere irregularity of trying accused on vagrancy charge after he was validly arrested on a warrant charging disorderly conduct was no defense to the vagrancy charge. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 486).

Degree of proof

In vagrancy prosecution against defendant charged with frequenting houses of ill fame, government was not required to prove that occupants of house previously arrested were duly convicted in court. Fields v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 77 A. 2d 563).

To convict under this section, it must be shown that defendant was found prowling around one of the public places mentioned in this section, and that he was doing so while having no visible and lawful means of support, and that he was a person known to be pickpocket, thief or burglar. Clark v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 711).

Where vagrancy information charged that each defendant was a person who frequented and was employed in a house of ill fame and who engaged in and who committed acts of fornication for hire, statement of intermediate appellate court that government was required to prove that each individual frequented the house and that each engaged in acts of fornication for hire was erroneous. District of Columbia v. Hunt (1947, 163 F. 2d 833, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 159).

Appellant's own admission, not only to the officers but at the trial that she was "living" at the premises which were shown to be a house of ill fame, was sufficient to establish her guilt of "frequenting" such an establishment. Wilson v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 214).

Double jeopardy

Fact that defendant, who allegedly sold liquor in railroad station without a license, was previously prosecuted for disorderly conduct, indecent exposure, solicitation to prostitution, violation of the A. B. C. Laws, and drinking in public, and was convicted of some of such offenses, did not preclude subsequent prosecution for vagrancy, on ground that such prosecution constituted double jeopardy, though testimony and witnesses employed in prior prosecutions were the same as those used in the vagrancy prosecution. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 486).

Entrapment

A woman accused of violation of vagrancy statute which proscribes commission of acts of fornication for hire had no defense of entrapment, where she had "hustled for about 20 years" and police officer had merely afforded her an opportunity to go to a hotel room and offer to engage in prostitution. R. Golden v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1965, 210 A. 2d 2).

Evidence—Generally

Evidence was insufficient to sustain vagrancy conviction. E. R. Harris v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 167 A. 2d 359).

Evidence sustained conviction of being a vagrant. Y. Pinkney v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 168 A. 2d 198).

In prosecution for vagrancy, where defendant was not confronted with an order or demand to explain her presence in the street, her conviction was reversed. Beail v. District of Columbia (1953, 201 F. 2d 176, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

On defendant's motion, at conclusion of government's case, for judgment of acquittal, government's evidence was construed in light most favorable to government and was accepted as true, together with all reasonable inferences to be drawn therefrom. Mitchell v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1955, 113 A. 2d 566).

Contention that trial court erred in basing conviction for act of fornication for hire, when there had been no direct proof, is without merit under the rule of District of Columbia v. Hunt (1947, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 159, 163 F. 2d 833), since government's failure to prove expressly that she engaged in acts of fornication or perversion for hire is not fatal to prosecution so long as proof of the other violation is sufficient to sustain the conviction. Wilson

v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 214).

— Admissibility

Even if admission into evidence of reports by police officer who investigated alleged disorderly house was error, such error was harmless where officer had testified fully as to their contents and no prejudice was shown in fact that reports may have gone to jury. J. J. Killeen and W. H. Fentress v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 224 A. 2d 302).

Defendant's statement to police officers that she had been "hustling for about 20 years" was properly admitted in vagrancy prosecution, absent showing that statement was other than completely voluntary and spontaneous or that it was sought or elicited in response to police interrogation. R. Golden v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1965, 210 A. 2d 2).

Where prosecutions for disorderly conduct and for vagrancy were consolidated for trial, evidence of prior criminal convictions of defendants, though not relevant to charge of disorderly conduct, were required to establish vagrancy under statute. M. A. Riley and J. T. Ruffin v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1965, 207 A. 2d 121).

For purposes of showing a continued course of immorality in vagrancy prosecution, prior acts and admissions of defendant showing defendant's acts to be part of a continuous operation were properly admitted. G. Coley etc. v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 177 A. 2d 889).

Evidence sustained finding of habitually immoral conduct on part of defendant and sustained conviction for vagrancy. Id.

In vagrancy prosecution, testimony of arresting officer regarding character of certain women with whom defendant had been seen was admissible. Rogers v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

Where defendant was arrested for vagrancy on Sunday, July 4, but criminal division of the Municipal Court was in session Monday notwithstanding that Monday was a legal holiday and defendant was not taken into court until Tuesday, defendant's detention was unlawful and testimony of arresting officer in vagrancy prosecution as to admissions made to him by defendant after arrest was improperly admitted. Burns v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 714).

In prosecution for vagrancy, where elements of offense required by this chapter to be established by prosecution were prima facie proven by record of defendant's convictions, and evidence of loitering and circumstantial incidents of defendant's conduct immediately before arrest and any possible deficiency was supplied by defendant's oral testimony, error in admitting testimony of arresting officer as to admissions made to him by defendant after arrest, by reason of defendant's unlawful detention, did not require reversal. Id.

Where defendant was arrested without warrant Friday evening and could have been taken to court for arraignment on Saturday but was not taken into court until Tuesday, the detention was unlawful, and, in prosecution for vagrancy which followed, admission of statements made by defendant to arresting officer was error notwithstanding statements were made at time of arrest and while detention was still lawful. Hayes v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 709).

In vagrancy prosecution based on defendant's acts in railroad station, employees at station were properly permitted to testify for the government, over objection that they were biased. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 486).

Statements made by the operator of house of ill fame, in appellant's presence while they were both under arrest, to the effect that appellant was visiting her and that she was operating a house of ill fame, were hearsay, but since such statements were received without objection, the trial judge had a right to consider them along with defendant's silence. Wilson v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 214).

— Circumstantial

Circumstantial evidence may sustain vagrancy conviction, but inferential proof of ultimate fact may not be based upon mere possibility, speculation or conjecture.

J. Johnson v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1967, 230 A. 2d 483).

— Confession

In prosecution for vagrancy, defendant's admission at trial of accuracy of his criminal record produced by prosecution satisfied burden of prosecution of proving by confession or conviction defendants criminal record. Burns v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 714).

In prosecution for vagrancy, where arresting officer, who was sole witness, testified that defendant was loitering at bus terminal and mingling with the crowd and that officer recognized defendant as a professional pick-pocket and that defendant, after his arrest, admitted that federal bureau of investigation record showing prior convictions was correct, conviction did not depend solely upon an uncorroborated "confession." Clark v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 711).

In vagrancy prosecution, on conflicting evidence regarding whether statement voluntarily given by defendant immediately after her arrest was intended for health department only, trial judge was justified in admitting the statement as a "confession." Rogers v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

— Examination of witnesses

In vagrancy prosecution where defendant's witness testified that defendant had been working for witness, question whether witness carried a number of girls on his pay roll for purpose of showing that they worked for him when in fact they were nothing more than prostitutes constituted proper cross-examination. Rogers v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

— Sufficiency

Evidence, including evidence that female defendant, while sober, well-behaved, and decently attired, was seen flagging down automobiles in early morning hours, was insufficient to sustain conviction for vagrancy. J. Johnson v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1967, 230 A. 2d 483).

Evidence was sufficient to support finding or inference by jury that restaurant proprietors had requisite knowledge of activities occurring on their premises to be chargeable with keeping disorderly house and vagrancy. J. J. Killeen and W. H. Fentress v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 224 A. 2d 302).

In absence of evidence that defendant under either federal or local law would suffer further penalties or disabilities from judgment of conviction or consequences collateral thereto having material effect on present legal rights, conviction for misdemeanor after service of part of sentence imposed and suspension of the balance became moot, and reviewing court had no power to consider appeal upon its merits. E. R. Thompson v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1964, 200 A. 2d 92).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction on charge of vagrancy. F. F. Walker v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1963, 196 A. 2d 92).

Testimony of police officers that defendant was idling in a park at late hour, that he was a known felon and that he wanted to "roll queers" was sufficient to establish elements of charge of vagrancy, and burden then shifted to defendant to establish that he had a lawful employment or a lawful means of support realized from a lawful occupation or source. Id.

Evidence sustained vagrancy conviction. E. R. Harris v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1963, 192 A. 2d 814).

Vagrancy conviction cannot stand without evidence of course of conduct or mode of living or status prejudicial to public welfare. B. Drew v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1963, 187 A. 2d 325).

Evidence did not sustain conviction of vagrancy, absent evidence of course of conduct or mode of living or status prejudicial to public welfare. Id.

Evidence was insufficient to prove elements necessary to support conviction for vagrancy under District of Columbia code denominating as vagrants persons leading immoral life and who have no lawful employment or lawful means of support and persons who operate or who are employed in houses of ill fame. Baker and Fredricksen v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 184 A. 2d 198).

In prosecution for vagrancy under information which charged that defendant was by confession or conviction known to be a pickpocket, thief, burglar, confidence operator or felon, evidence that defendant was a known thief because she had once been convicted of taking and carrying away property of another without right was not sufficient to establish that she was known to be a thief within meaning of this section. Harris v. District of Columbia (1958, 251 F. 2d 913, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 202).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction for being a vagrant. Mitchell v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1955, 113 A. 2d 566).

Evidence sustained defendant's conviction of vagrancy. Beall v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 82 A. 2d 765).

Evidence that defendant had offered girls in railroad station money to commit an immoral act, that he had looked into a window of a girls' dormitory, that he had entered women's restroom, and that he sold liquor in railroad station without a license, was sufficient to establish that he led an "immoral or profligate life" within meaning of par. (3) of this section. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 486).

In prosecution for vagrancy, evidence that defendant was moving about after midnight in a crowd on a loading platform at bus terminal, and that defendant was observed mingling with crowds on loading platform at a second bus terminal on two other occasions on same night, established that defendant was "loitering" and failed to give a good account of himself within this section. Burns v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 714).

In prosecution for vagrancy, in absence of any proof on behalf of defendant of lawful employment or means of support, evidence which was adequate to prove other elements of the offense justified conviction. Clark v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 711).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain conviction on charge of vagrancy. Roger v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

Immorality and profligate

The phrase "leading an immoral and profligate life" as used in this section necessitated so much guesswork as to its coverage as to render statute invalid. H. M. Ricks v. District of Columbia (1968, 414 F. 2d 1097, 134 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

The terms "immorality" and "profligateness" are not terms of art. Id.

Impeachment

Prosecution was not entitled to attempt to impeach testimony of defendant indicted for second-degree murder by referring to thirteen prior convictions of petty offenses of vagrancy, disorderly conduct and soliciting prostitution, inasmuch as, although such offenses were District of Columbia Code offenses, as distinguished from municipal ordinances, none of them was triable by jury. Y. Pinkney v. United States (1966, 363 F. 2d 696, 124 U.S. App. D.C. 209).

Instructions

Jury instruction in prosecution for keeping disorderly house and vagrancy that, inter alia, presumption that every person is presumed to have knowledge of what goes on in his own premises is not conclusive and that it should find defendant restaurant keepers guilty if convinced beyond reasonable doubt that they knew or should have known of unlawful and immoral acts committed on premises was correct statement of law, and giving of instruction was not error. J. J. Killeen and W. H. Fentress v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 224 A. 2d 302).

Instruction in prosecution for keeping disorderly house and vagrancy that evidence of good character can be considered in determining credibility of witnesses and that such evidence, by itself, may be enough to create a reasonable doubt was a proper statement of law, and giving of instruction was not error where defendants neither offered an instruction on that point nor objected to instruction as given. Id.

Defendants in prosecution for keeping disorderly house and vagrancy who at trial neither offered an instruction upon bearing of evidence of good character on credibility of witnesses nor objected to instruction as given were not allowed to raise objection to instruction for first time on appeal. Id.

Jury trial

In vagrancy prosecution, the defendant was not entitled to a jury trial. Rogers v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

Knowledge of acts done on premises

In prosecution for maintaining a disorderly house, it was not necessary to prove defendants' actual knowledge of acts done on premises if it could be shown that defendants should in reason have known what was happening. J. J. Killeen and W. H. Fentress v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 224 A. 2d 302).

Knowledge of happenings in alleged disorderly house requisite to conviction for keeping disorderly house could be proved inferentially, since a proprietor is presumed to have knowledge of that which goes on in his premises. Id.

Lawful means of support

Burden of defendants, charged with vagrancy, or proving lawful means of support does not arise until prosecution has proven other elements of offense. Baker and Fredrickson v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 184 A. 2d 198).

Woman living together with man "common law" has no "lawful" means of support, realized from a "lawful" occupation or source, for purposes of vagrancy statute. Harris v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 132 A. 2d 152).

Nature of vagrancy

"Vagrancy" consists of a continuing course of immorality, a pattern of iniquity, rather than a solitary instance of wrongdoing; absent evidence of a course of conduct or mode of living or status prejudicial to public welfare, a vagrancy conviction cannot stand. R. Golden v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1965, 210 A. 2d 2).

The defendant violated vagrancy statute which proscribes the commission of acts of fornication for hire, where she asked a telephone caller, who identified himself as someone who had "tricked" with her before, to call again because she was busy, met him at a hotel room, offered to engage in prostitution for a fee of $30, accepted $20 and disrobed, and after her arrest admitted that she had "hustled for about 20 years." Id.

"Vagrancy" consists of a continued course of immorality, a pattern in iniquity, rather than a solitary incidence of wrong-doing. G. Coley etc. v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 177 A. 2d 889).

Where defendant was charged and convicted of being a vagrant under this section defining vagrant as person who wanders about streets at late and unusual hours at night without any visible and lawful business and not giving a good account of herself, defendant could be guilty of vagrancy under this section, notwithstanding fact that she might be a person of fixed abode having lawful means of support. Beall v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 82 A. 2d 765).

"Vagrancy" is a status or condition and this section punishes one for being a certain kind of person, not for doing of an overt act, and crime is personal and individual and cannot be committed jointly or in concert, since in essence it is a personal condition arrived at not instantaneously but by a mode of living. Hunt v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1946, 47 A. 2d 783).

This section denounces and makes punishable being in a state of vagrancy rather than the particular conduct enumerated in this section as evidencing or characterizing such condition. District of Columbia v. Hunt (1947, 163 F. 2d 833, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 159).

Statute prescribes as an element of the offense of vagrancy (a) defendant's notoriety as a pickpocket, etc., either by his own confession or by earlier conviction, and (b) his not giving a good account of himself when found loitering and apprehended and when these elements have been established, the statute says that defendant shall have the burden of showing that he has lawful employment or lawful means of support realized from a lawful occupation or source. Williams v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 924).

Not giving a good account of himself

The phrase "not giving a good account of himself" as used in this section was much too loose to satisfy constitutional requirements. H. M. Ricks v. District of Columbia (1968, 414 F. 2d 1097, 134 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

The phrase "a good account" as used in this section was so indefinite as to render statute unconstitutional. Id.

Proscription contained in this section against wandering without any visible or lawful business coupled with requirements that wanderer give "a good account" of himself granted unfettered discretion to administrative and judicial authorities and rendered statute invalid. Id.

Police vagrancy observation practices

Since the ruling of the Court in action for injunctive and declaratory relief from allegedly unconstitutional police vagrancy observation practices is directed only to the procedures used by the police and not the statute itself, suit in nature of class action is not proper and court will only pass on facts of plaintiff's case. M. J. Gomez v. J. Wilson, Chief of Police, et al. (1971, 323 F. Supp. 87).

Where the plaintiff while walking street on May 10, 1967 was stopped by policeman who filled out vagrancy observation form and told plaintiff that they would arrest him for vagrancy if they saw him there again, and on December 13, 1967 plaintiff, who was sober and well-behaved while he was walking in the same geographic locality around 11:00 p.m., was stopped by police officers and questioned regarding homosexuality and use of marijuana and ordered to remove coat and roll up his sleeves, police officers' intrusion on plaintiff's Fourth Amendment rights was not reasonably related to circumstances justifying interference and all police forms would be ordered expunged. Id.

Although three subsections of this section have been declared unconstitutional, since plaintiff's complaint for injunctive and declaratory relief from police vagrancy observation practices sought to have the whole statute declared unconstitutional and since there was no showing that vagrancy reports on plaintiff had been made pursuant to one of subsections declared unconstitutional, case should not have been dismissed by the District Court and full evidentiary hearing must be held. M. J. Gomez v. J. Wilson, Chief of Police, et al. (1970, 430 F. 2d 495, 139 U.S. App. D.C. 122).

Poverty not a crime

Statute providing that any person leading immoral or profligate life who has no lawful employment and who has no lawful means of support realized from lawful occupation or source is vagrant does not make criminal the status or condition of poverty and unemployment. E. J. Hicks v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1964, 197 A. 2d 154).

Prior convictions

One can be found guilty of violating either Narcotics Vagrancy Statute or the General Vagrancy Statute without having been previously convicted. H. M. Ricks and J. N. Williams v. United States; H. M. Ricks v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1967, 228 A. 2d 316; rev'd 414 F. 2d 1097, 134 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

Both the Narcotics Vagrancy Statute and General Vagrancy Statute employ separate paragraphs which disjunctively set up criteria amounting to vagrancy and both require factors, other than prior convictions, which conjunctively amount to violation, so that prior convictions are not essential to all subsections of the statutes. Id.

Prior convictions of accused are admissible in prosecution for violation of vagrancy statutes. Id.

Narcotics Vagrancy and General Vagrancy Statutes do not improperly require presentation and proof of prior convictions, and do not deny due process and fair trial. Id.

Probable cause for arrest

Arrest for vagrancy without warrant was justified under evidence, including testimony of experienced police officers that they had observed defendant in company of known prostitutes and narcotics violators on four occasions during two nights. J. L. Worthy v. United States (1968, 409 F. 2d 1105, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 188).

Prosecutions for continuing offense

The prosecution of a defendant charged with violation of a continuing offense is a bar to a subsequent prosecution for same offense charged to have been committed at any time before institution of first prosecution, but is not a bar to a subsequent prosecution for continuing the offense thereafter, as this is a new violation of the law. Thomas v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 161 A. 2d 52).

Where defendant was charged with vagrancy in three consecutive informations and each information charged vagrancy during a separate period, each information charged a separate crime, not one single continuing one, and trial court could correctly impose consecutive sentences. Id.

Purpose

A course of conduct rather than an overt act is prohibited by the Narcotics Vagrancy and General Vagrancy Statutes. H. M. Ricks and J. N. Williams v. United States; H. M. Ricks v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1967, 228 A. 2d 316; rev'd 414 F. 2d 1097, 134 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

Purpose of Narcotics Vagrancy and General Vagrancy Statutes is to prevent crimes which may likely flow from the vagrant's mode of life. Id.

Purpose of vagrancy statute is to prevent crime likely to flow from vagrant's mode of life, and if officer were precluded from arresting thereunder until crime was committed, its purpose would wholly fail. E. R. Harris v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1963, 192 A. 2d 814).

The purpose of this chapter is to prevent crimes which may likely flow from vagrants mode of life. District of Columbia v. Hunt (1947, 163 F. 2d 833, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 159).

It was not purpose of this section to deprive persons of use of public sidewalks, so long as they are used either for legitimate purpose of pleasure or business; but when course of conduct indicates reasonable belief that use of street is not for legitimate purposes, officer may ask one to account for his actions. Harris v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1957, 132 A. 2d 152).

Resisting unlawful arrest

Where defendant was unlawfully arrested for vagrancy, defendant had right to raise voice in protest and could not properly be arrested for disorderly conduct for making such protest. S. A. Curtis v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 222 A. 2d 840).

Search and seizure

Although it is incident to an arrest for vagrancy the search was not for that reason required to be limited to a frisk. J. L. Worthy v. United States (1968, 409 F. 2d 1105, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 188).

Where defendant's arrest was illegal, search of defendant's pocketbook and seizure of narcotics paraphernalia was unlawful and admission of evidence was reversible error. S. A. Curtis v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 222 A. 2d 840).

Where defendant was a frequenter of an establishment where intoxicating liquor was being illegally sold and by doing so was guilty of a misdemeanor being committed in presence of officers, officers were within their proper duty in arresting defendant without a warrant, and as incident of arrest search of defendant was lawful, and narcotics then and there seized were properly admitted in evidence against him in prosecution for narcotics violations. M. T. Smith, Jr. v. United States (1965, 353 F. 2d 877, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 339).

Severance

Where prosecutions for disorderly conduct and vagrancy were consolidated for trial, and no pretrial objection was presented by defendant to consolidation and no request was made for severance during five months intervening between filing of informations and date of trial, and it was not until prior criminal records of defendants were offered into evidence in support of vagrancy charge that severance was requested on ground of prejudice to right of defendants to fair trial, request was not timely made and would be deemed waived. M. A. Riley and J. T. Ruffin v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1965, 207 A. 2d 121).

Where prosecutions for disorderly conduct and for vagrancy were consolidated for trial, and defendants waived right to severance, and trial was before judge sitting without jury, defendants were not prejudiced by introduction in evidence of prior criminal records in support of vagrancy charge. Id.

Statistics as evidence

Statistical likelihood that a particular societal segment will engage in criminality is not permissible as an all-out substitute for proof of individual guilt. And not even past violation of the criminal law authorizes one's subjection to innately vague statutory specifications of crime H. M. Ricks v. District of Columbia (1968, 414 F. 2d 1097, 134 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

Temporary detention

To justify a temporary detention in police-citizen street encounter, under this section, police officer must be able to point to specific and articulate facts that, taken together with the rational inferences from the facts, reasonably warrant the intrusion, and a mere hunch of criminal activity will not justify the officer in making detention for investigatory purposes. M. J. Gomez v. J. Wilson, Chief of Police, et al. (1971, 323 F. Supp. 87).

Thief

The word "thief" as used in this section does not cover a person who has been guilty only of unauthorized borrowing. Harris v. District of Columbia (1958, 251 F. 2d 913, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 202; rev'g 132 A. 2d 152).

Waiver

In vagrancy prosecution, motion of defendant for dismissal, made at conclusion of Government's case, was "waived" when defendant offered testimony in her own behalf. Rogers v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

In vagrancy prosecution, motion of defendant for a finding of not guilty at conclusion of government's case, apparently denied by trial court, was not error where the record did not show that such a motion was made; and even if made, it was waived when defendant offered testimony in her own behalf. Wilson v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 214).

§ 22-3303. Prosecutions—Burden of proof to show lawful employment.

In all prosecutions under paragraphs 1 or 3 of section 22-3302 the burden of proof shall be upon the defendant to show that he has lawful employment or has lawful means of support realized from a lawful occupation or source. (Dec. 17, 1941, 55 Stat. 809, ch. 589, § 2.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 22-3203, 22-3304 to 22-3306.

Generally

Vagrancy statute places burden of proof upon a defendant charged with its violation to show that he had lawful employment or lawful means of support. Barnard v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 125 A. 2d 514).

In vagrancy prosecutions, the burden was on defendant to establish, and not on the Government to disprove, legitimacy of defendant's employment. Rogers v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

Constitutionality

Provision of this section placing on defendant the burden of proving lawful employment or lawful means of support realized from a lawful occupation or source, after prosecution has first proved, or offered evidence tending to prove, the other elements of the offense, is constitutional. Rogers v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 31 A. 2d 649).

Evidence

In prosecution for vagrancy where government established a prima facie case, defendant's uncontradicted and uncorroborated statement that he had been doing light work on his father-in-law's farm, in absence of testimony as to details of work or compensation or as to when work ceased was insufficient to discharge defendant's burden of proving that he had lawful means of support realized from a lawful occupation or source. Burns v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 714).

Where appellant says he was entitled to an acquittal because he offered evidence to show "lawful employment," when taken with the government's testimony, presented a question of fact, and we cannot say the trial judge decided incorrectly. Williams v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 924).

Government's burden

In prosecution against three defendants for vagrancy for frequenting and being employed in a house of ill-fame, government had burden of proving that each defendant frequented the house and that each engaged in acts of fornication for hire. Hunt v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1946, 47 A. 2d 783).

In vagrancy prosecution, wherein evidence was introduced that defendant sold liquor in railroad station without a license, burden was shifted to defendant to establish, and was not on the government to disprove, legitimacy of employment. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1948, 61 A. 2d 486).

In prosecution for vagrancy, defendant has no burden to prove lawful employment or means of support until government has first proved other elements of offense. Clark v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 34 A. 2d 711).

§ 22-3304. Penalty—Conditions imposed by court.

Any person convicted of vagrancy under the provisions of sections 22-3302 to 22-3306 shall be punished by a fine of not more than $300 or imprisonment for not more than ninety days, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. The court may impose conditions upon any person found guilty under the aforesaid provisions and so long as such person shall comply therewith to the satisfaction of the court the imposition or execution of sentence may be suspended for such period as the court may direct; and the court may at or before the expiration of such period remand such sentence or cause it to be executed. Conditions thus imposed by the court may include submission to medical and mental examination, diagnosis, and treatment by proper public health and welfare authorities, and such other terms and conditions as the court may deem best for the protection of the community and the punishment, control, and rehabilitation of the defendant. The Director of Public Health of the District of Columbia, the Women's Bureau of the Police Department, the Board of Public Welfare, and the probation officers of the court are authorized and directed to perform such duties as may be directed by the court in effectuating compliance with the conditions so imposed upon any defendant. (Dec. 17, 1941, 55 Stat. 809, ch. 589, § 3; Aug. 1, 1950, 64 Stat. 393, ch. 513, § 1.)

CHANGE OF NAME

"Director of Public Health" substituted for "health officer" to conform to act Aug. 1, 1950. See note set out under section 6-101.

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

The Commissioner of the District of Columbia and the Director of the Department of Corrections as successors to the powers and duties of the Board of Public Welfare and the Director of Public Welfare over penal institutions, establishment of a Department of Corrections headed by a Director as successor to former Department of Corrections and abolition of Board of Public Welfare and transfer of specified functions thereof to Department of Public Health and Department of Public Welfare and subsequently to the Director of the Department of Human Resources, see § 24-443; Reorg. Ord. No. 34, dated May 28, 1953, as amended and replaced by Org. Ord. No. 153, dated Feb. 7, 1967, and later amended and redesignated as Org. Ord. No. 7, dated Dec. 26, 1967, as amended; Org. Ord. No. 140, dated Feb. 11, 1964, as amended; Org. Ord. No. 141, dated Feb. 11, 1964, as amended; and Commissioner's Order [Organization Action] No. 69-96, dated Mar. 7, 1969, as amended by Commissioner's Order No. 70-83, dated Mar. 6, 1970. The Orders are set Out in the Appendix to Title 1.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 22-3203, 22-3305, 22-3306.

Impeachment

Prosecution was not entitled to attempt to impeach testimony of defendant indicted for second-degree murder by referring to thirteen prior convictions of petty offenses of vagrancy, disorderly conduct and soliciting prostitution, inasmuch as, although such offenses were District of Columbia Code offenses, as distinguished from municipal ordinances, none of them was triable by jury. Y. Pinkney v. United States (1966, 363 F. 2d 696, 124 U.S. App. D.C. 209).

Indigent prisoners, discharge of

Sentence for violation of District of Columbia vagrancy statute was for violation of "law of United States" within Indigent Prisoners' Act authorizing indigent prisoner, who has been sentenced for violation of any "law of United States," and who has been imprisoned for failure to pay fine, and who has been confined for 30 days, to apply for discharge. D. C. Clemmer, Director, Department of Corrections etc. v. N. H. Alexander (1961, 295 F. 2d 176, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 210).

Municipal Court of District of Columbia is "court established by enactment of Congress" within Indigent Prisoners' Act authorizing indigent prisoner who has been imprisoned by "court established by enactment of Congress" for failure to pay fine, and who has been confined for 30 days, to apply for discharge. Id.

§ 22-3305. Prosecutions.

All prosecutions under sections 22-3302 to 22-3306 shall be in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia in the name of the District of Columbia, by the corporation counsel or any of his assistants. (Dec. 17, 1941, 55 Stat. 810, ch. 589, § 4; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1; July 8, 1963, 77 Stat. 77, Pub. L. 88-60, § 1; July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, title I, § 155(a), 84 Stat. 570.)

AMENDMENT

1970—Section 155(a) of Act July 29, 1970, Public Law 91-358 amended section by striking out "District of Columbia Court of General Sessions" and inserting in lieu thereof "Superior Court of the District of Columbia."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1970 AMENDMENT

See note preceding section 11-101.

Arrest, search and seizure

Even though police officers may have had probable cause to believe that defendant had committed, in his home, a perverted act on a 10- or 11-year-old boy and that defendant was in his home about two hours later when the officers arrived there, their entry, without a warrant, into his unlocked home, after their repeated knocking, to which there was no response, to make a search as a necessary prerequisite to possible arrest was illegal, in absence of any urgency for an arrest. Morrison v. United States (1959, 262 F. 2d 449, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 352).

Where police officers admitted themselves to defendant's unlocked private home and searched for defendant whom officers wished to arrest for having allegedly committed a perverted act on a 10- or 11-year-old boy earlier in the day, and boy showed officers the room in which alleged offense had occurred and pointed out handkerchief which boy said had been used by defendant and which allegedly bore some tangible evidence of the offense, handkerchief was merely evidentiary material and was not instrument or means by which alleged crime was committed, the fruits of a crime, a weapon by which escape might be effected or property the possession of which is a crime, and consequently handkerchief could not be seized legally without any warrant whatsoever and without any arrest of defendant, who was not at home. Id.

Conviction for carnal knowledge and taking indecent liberties

A defendant may not properly be convicted of both carnal knowledge and taking indecent liberties with minor child as result of one incident. United States v. W. D. Heard (1969, 420 F. 2d 628, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Since the defendant was charged with both carnal knowledge and taking indecent liberties with minor child, jury should have been instructed to first consider carnal knowledge offense and, if they found defendant guilty beyond a reasonable doubt, sole verdict should have been guilty of that offense, but if they acquitted defendant of carnal knowledge they should have proceeded to consider whether defendant was guilty or not guilty of the crime of indecent liberties. Id.

Corpus delicti

In prosecution for taking indecent liberties with 11-year-old girl, corpus delicti could not be established by child's uncorroborated testimony on witness stand. Wilson v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 492, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 226).

A requisite element of evidence in prosecution for taking indecent liberties with minor child is establishment of corpus delicti. Jones v. United States (1956, 231 F. 2d 244, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 291).

Counsel—Assistance of

Where trial counsel, in prosecution for taking indecent liberties with a child, did not utilize defense of insanity because counsel thought the evidence did not warrant it and because he felt that, in good conscience, he could not urge it upon the court, defendant was not denied the effective assistance of counsel because of failure to raise defense of insanity, and hence his motion to vacate judgment for such reason would be denied. United States v. Plummer, Jr. (D.C.D.C. 1959, 171 F. Supp. 1).

—Conduct of

Reversal of conviction under this section would not be justified where defendant received a fair trial and conduct of his trial counsel could hardly have affected the result in view of overwhelming evidence of defendant's guilt and trial judge gave careful instructions to jury. Holley v. United States (1959, 267 F. 2d 628, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 351).

Criminal sentencing

Where Chief of Legal Psychiatric Division expressed opinion raising doubt of competency for criminal sentencing for allegedly sexually violating the person of a child five years of age, so as to call for a hearing under the Sexual Psychopath Act, trial judge erred in proceeding to sentence for criminal offense, and Court of Appeals would remand for competency hearing. G. Fuller v. United States (1967, 390 F. 2d 468, 129 U.S. App. D.C. 53).

Disclosure of prior record

Where evidence of identification of defendant as perpetrator of offense involving sexual abuse of a little girl was inconclusive, and trial court had denied defendant's motion to permit defendant to testify without having his prior record exposed, and once defendant's prior record was disclosed to jury it was impossible, on facts of case, to say with assurance that jury would have found defendant guilty beyond reasonable doubt of crime for which he was on trial, new trial was required. R. A. Barber v. United States (1968, 392 F. 2d 517, 129 U.S. App. D.C. 193).

Elements of offense

The elements of the offense of taking indecent liberties with a minor child are taking immoral, improper, or indecent liberties with a child under the age of 16 with the intent of arousing, appealing to, or gratifying the lust, passions, or sexual desires of the child or of the accused. A. Allison v. United States (1969, 409 F. 2d 445, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 159).

Evidence was sufficient to establish all elements of the offense of taking indecent liberties with a minor child. Id.

Words "force" and "assault" are not a necessary element to commission of crime of taking of improper and indecent liberties. Younger, Jr. v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 735, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 51, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1299, 360 U.S. 905, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1257).

Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution for asserted taking of indecent liberties with child and asserted carnal knowledge, where examining physician was out of jurisdiction and unavailable, report of his medical examination was not admissible. Whittaker v. United States (1960, 281 F. 2d 631, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

In prosecution for taking indecent liberties with a female child under 16 years of age, testimony of officer investigating the crime as to what someone told him the child said was prejudicial where there was no other testimony that the child identified the person who molested her. Pinkard v. United States (1957, 240 F. 2d 632, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 394).

In prosecution for taking indecent liberties with a female child under 16 years of age, hearsay statement of officer investigating the incident that witness told officer that two boys, each of whom took the stand, told her that two men had molested the girl was prejudicial notwithstanding it was contradicted by later testimony. Id.

In prosecution for taking indecent liberties with five-year-old girl, incompetent to testify, her mother's testimony as to girl's statement of what defendant did to her was admissible as evidence of spontaneous declaration under exception to hearsay rule. Jones v. United States (1956, 231 F. 2d 244, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 291).

Where alleged offense of taking indecent liberties with female child occurred on a Monday night, and child had earlier opportunity to complain, testimony concerning statement child made on following Thursday morning and in answer to her mother's inquiries, was hearsay, and its admission in prosecution for the alleged offense was, under the circumstances, prejudicial error. Smith v. United States (1954, 215 F. 2d 682, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 320).

—Sufficiency

In this case wherein defendant was charged with four counts of taking indecent liberties with a child, and three counts of sodomy, the evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction except with respect to one indecent liberties count. P. Coltrane v. United States (1969, 418 F. 2d 1131, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 295).

In prosecution for taking indecent liberties with five-year-old girl, incompetent to testify, her mother's testimony as to child's statement of what defendant did to her was insufficient to support verdict of conviction because of failure to establish corpus delicti, in absence of evidency of injury to child. Jones v. United States (1956, 231 F. 2d 244, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 291).

Evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction for taking immoral, improper and indecent liberties with minor children. Hinton v. United States (1952, 196 F. 2d 605, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 13).

Former jeopardy protection

A jury which was specifically prohibited from considering a charge of taking indecent liberties with minor child if defendant were to be found guilty of assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge, and defendant was found guilty of the latter charge, its verdict of not guilty of the former charge was a nullity and did not clothe defendant with former jeopardy protection or preclude reviewing court from directing entry of judgment of guilty on indecent liberties charge upon finding that evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction for assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge. A. Allison v. United States (1969, 409 F. 2d 445, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 159).

Indecent liberties

An assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge on a child is certainly the taking of indecent liberties with a child, but with intent of going beyond the liberties referred to in statute, and intent to commit carnal knowledge is to take indecent liberties plus an intent much more vicious, violent or aggravated. Younger Jr. v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 735, U.S. App. D.C. 51, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1299, 360 U.S. 905, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1257).

Indictment

Count of indictment charging defendant with violating statute punishing one who carnally knows a female child under 16 years of age can be joined with count charging defendant with violation of statute punishing any person who takes, or attempts to take, any immoral, improper, or indecent liberties with any child of either sex, under the age of 16 years to arouse or gratify sexual desires, though latter statute provides that it shall not apply to the offenses covered by the prior statute, if jury is told that it cannot find defendant guilty of both counts and can find him guilty under the second count only if he is found not guilty under the first count. Thompson v. United States (1956, 228 F. 2d 463, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 116).

Insanity

Where significant evidence was introduced on trial of defendant for taking immoral liberties with female child that defendant might have been of unsound mind at time of alleged crime including evidence of delusions and hearing of voices, prosecution had burden of proving sanity beyond a reasonable doubt. Goforth v. United States (1959, 269 F. 2d 778, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 111).

Insanity defense

Failure of government psychiatrist, in testifying in opposition to defendant's insanity defense, to disclose that defendant, at time he was examined by the witness and found to lack symptoms of mental illness, was receiving daily doses of major tranquilizers which could have been expected to abate any symptoms of acute mental disturbance constituted reversible error. United States v. W. Bennett (1972, 460 F. 2d 872, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 364).

Failure of defendant's trial counsel to explore issue as to whether failure of government psychiatrist, in testifying in opposition to defendant's insanity defense, to disclose that defendant, at time he was examined by the witness and found to lack symptoms of mental illness, was receiving daily doses of major tranquilizers which could have been expected to abate any symptoms of acute mental disturbance constituted reversible error, did not preclude review of such issue as defendant or his counsel may have been unaware of the significance of the major tranquilizer medication. Id.

Instructions

The court's instruction that the jury could find defendant guilty of both carnal knowledge and taking indecent liberties with minor child as result of same incident was error. United States v. W. D. Heard (1969, 420 F. 2d 628, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Defendant was convicted of an assault on a female under age of 16 with intent to commit carnal knowledge and with taking immoral, improper and indecent liberties with a female under age of 16, in violation of Miller Act, and the court should have given requested instruction that jury should consider count based on Miller Act only if they acquitted on the other count and, although failure to so instruct did not impair verdict under Miller Act, conviction for other offense must be set aside. H. C. Dozier v. United States (1967, 382 F. 2d 482, 127 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

Failure of court to instruct on simple assault as less offense under count charging taking immoral, improper, and indecent liberties with female under age of 16 furnished no basis for reversal, as jury was instructed on simple assault as less offense under count charging assault on female under age of 16 with intent to commit carnal knowledge. Id.

Giving instruction, in prosecution for taking indecent liberties with child, stating that an element was that defendant "took or attempted to take" indecent liberties was not reversible error, even if instruction referred to separate offenses, where no objection was made, penalty for each offense was the same, defendant's sentence was well within statutory prescription, and evidence of guilt was overwhelming. R. C. King v. United States (1964, 329 F. 2d 257, 117 U.S. App. D.C. 302).

In prosecution on two-count indictment for taking indecent liberties with child and for carnal knowledge, court acted properly at close of government's case when it granted partial judgment of not guilty under second count, stating that there was no evidence to support carnal knowledge charge but submitting to jury lesser included offense of assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge, but court erred in failing to instruct that jury was first to consider included charge of assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge and was only to consider alleged taking of indecent liberties with child if it found defendant not guilty of the former crime. Whittaker v. United States (1960, 281 F. 2d 631, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

In prosecution for taking immoral liberties with female child under 16 years of age wherein significant evidence was introduced that defendant might have been of unsound mind at time of alleged crime including evidence of delusions and hearing of voices, court should have instructed jury on issue of sanity and failure of court to do so required new trial. Goforth v. United States (1959, 269 F. 2d 778, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 111).

Where defendant was charged with offense of assault upon female child with intent to commit carnal knowledge, trial court properly instructed jury that if it found defendant not guilty on count as charged, jury should then consider lesser included offense of taking improper and indecent liberties with a child. Younger, Jr. v. United States (1959, 263 F. 2d 735, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 51, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1299, 360 U.S. 905, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1257).

Lesser included offense

The crime of taking indecent liberties is a lesser included offense of assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge. A. Allison v. United States (1969, 409 F. 2d 445, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 159).

Matters to be considered on remand

Where Court of Appeals remanded case for competency hearing under Sexual Psychopath Act because of psychiatric opinion, district court would be authorized to receive, or to direct prosecutor to file, statement looking toward application of Sexual Psychopath Act, and hearing on remand should also embrace issue of possibility of lack of competency at trial. G. Fuller v. United States (1967, 390 F. 2d 468, 129 U.S. App. D.C. 53).

Where Court of Appeals remanded to District Court case for competency hearing under Sexual Psychopath Act because of psychiatric opinion raising doubt of competency of defendant, inquiry at hearing on remand should embrace mental condition of defendant at time of alleged offense, what kind of judgment or sentence was appropriate, and what kind of disposition should be made of defendant, including a possible civil commitment under the Hospitalization of the Mentally Ill Act. (25-501 et seq.) Id.

New trial

Where conviction for taking indecent liberties with child under age of 16 years, rested almost entirely on testimony of 12-year-old girl, and four days after guilty verdict defendant introduced in support of motion for new trial on ground that interest of justice required granting of new trial, affidavit of girl's mother, who had not testified at trial, and who had seen and talked with girl shortly after alleged offense, contradicting testimony of girl in two respects and giving mother's opinion that nothing happened to girl, trial court erred in denying motion. Benton v. United States (1951, 188 F. 2d 625, 88 U.S. App. D.C. 158).

Prosecutor's statement

Statement of the prosecutor, in his closing argument, that defendant's testimony was a recent fabrication designed to lure jury and hoodwink them, although not a permissible statement, did not warrant reversal of conviction for taking indecent liberties with eleven-year-old boy in view of eminently fair charge in which the district judge sought to compensate indirectly for such an impermissible comment. C. W. Gibson v. United States (1968, 403 F. 2d 569, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 163).

Remedy on appeal

Although defendant who was charged with both carnal knowledge and with taking indecent liberties with minor child did not request that the jury consider indecent liberties charge only after an acquittal of carnal knowledge and jury convicted defendant on both charges after being erroneously instructed that conviction on one charge should not influence verdict on other charge, the proper remedy was to remand case with instruction to vacate judgment of conviction of taking indecent liberties with minor child. United States v. W. D. Heard (1969, 420 F. 2d 628, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 60).

Review

Shortcomings that attended conduct of a preliminary hearing did not, under the circumstances, infect case with error which invalidated judgment of conviction based on valid indictment returned against defendant, nor was the judgment of conviction invalidated by police misbehavior in view of fact conviction was reached entirely apart therefrom. W. L. Gilliam v. United States (1963, 323 F. 2d 615, 116 U.S. App. D.C. 313).

Where defense announced that defenses would be, first, that no crime had been committed by defendant, and, secondly, that if he had committed crime, he was not guilty by reason of insanity, court, in stating that defense would have to take one position or other, as defenses were inconsistent, committed error which reviewing court, under rule, would notice on appeal and for which it would reverse judgment, as there was no inconsistency and as inconsistent defenses could be interposed. Whittaker v. United States (1960, 281 F. 2d 631, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

Reviewing court's authority

Where evidence does not sustain conviction of assault with intent to commit carnal knowledge but was sufficient to establish all elements of taking indecent liberties with minor child, reviewing court in remanding with directions to enter judgment of guilty of taking indecent liberties would accord permission to trial judge to grant new trial if he should deem it to be in the best interest of justice. A. Allison v. United States (1969, 409 F. 2d 445, 133 U.S. App. D.C. 159).

Scope of review

Although Court of Appeals may review sentence given upon plea of guilty, provided there is illegality or impropriety in same, where the defendant made no such claim, and indeed, disposition was favorable to him in its provisions for probation, appeal from sentence is frivolous and would be dismissed. United States v. C. McElyea (1970, 439 F. 2d 548, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 38).

A defendant's voluntary plea of guilty entered after receiving the advice of counsel waives objections to nonjurisdictional defects in his conviction. Id.

Where a defendant claimed error in taking of his plea, the district court will consider whether he should be allowed to withdraw his plea or whether his conviction and sentence should be set aside, but where the defendant does not allege any error in taking of plea, there is no basis for a remand to provide such consideration in district court. Id.

Speedy trial

Where according to government 323 days of total delay in bringing defendant to trial were attributable to government mental hospital, 56 days to courts, 55 to defendant and 23 days for diverse reasons to government while the reason for 99 days of delay was unclear, and according to defendant 499 days of delay were attributable to government and 60 days to defendant, and in three instances case had to be continued for lack of any report from hospital relating to defendant's mental competence and in each instance motion was made for dismissal but ruling was postponed, conviction was reversed on appeal for denial of speedy trial. United States v. L. L. Dunn (1972, 459 F. 2d 1115, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 91).

Witnesses

With children of tender years, it is proper for a trial judge to conduct a preliminary voir dire on issue of testimonial maturity; questioning at such hearing should be handled in a way that is meaningful and not by inquiry that borders on the casual and uses leading questions. United States v. D. W. Schoefeld (1972, 465 F. 2d 560, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 380; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 210, 409 U.S. 881).

Where 12-year-old complainant was student in sixth grade and transcript revealed intelligent comprehension in terms of answering questions, there was no basis for claim that trial judge, who was not requested to conduct preliminary voir dire as to testimonial maturity, was clearly erroneous either in proceedings without a preliminary voir dire or in accepting testimony of complainant and her 13-year-old brother. Id.

§ 22-3502. Sodomy.

(a) Every person who shall be convicted of taking into his or her mouth or anus the sexual organ of any other person or animal, or who shall be convicted of placing his or her sexual organ in the mouth or anus of any other person or animal, or who shall be convicted of having carnal copulation in an opening of the body except sexual parts with another person, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or be imprisoned for a period not exceeding ten years. Any person convicted under this section of committing such act with a person under the age of sixteen years shall be fined not more than $1,000 or be imprisoned for a period not exceeding twenty years. And in any indictment for the commission of any of the acts, hereby declared to be offenses, it shall not be necessary to set forth the particular unnatural or perverted sexual practice with the commission of which the defendant may be charged, nor to set forth the particular manner in which said unnatural or perverted sexual practice was committed, but it shall be sufficient if the indictment set forth that the defendant committed a certain unnatural and perverted sexual practice with a person or animal, as the case may be: Provided, That the accused, on motion, shall be entitled to be furnished with a bill of particulars, setting forth the particular acts which constitute the offense charged.

(b) Any penetration, however slight, is sufficient to complete the crime specified in this section. Proof of emission shall not be necessary. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 347, ch. 428, title I, § 104.)

Arrest, search and seizure

Even though police officers may have had probable cause to believe that defendant had committed, in his home, a perverted act on a 10- or 11-year-old boy and that defendant was in his home about two hours later when the officers arrived there, their entry, without a warrant, into his unlocked home, after their repeated knocking, to which there was no response, to make a search as a necessary prerequisite to possible arrest was illegal, in absence of any urgency for arrest. Morrison v. United States (1959, 262 F. 2d 449, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 352).

Where police officers admitted themselves to defendant's unlocked private home and searched for defendant whom the officers wished to arrest for having allegedly committed a perverted act on a 10- or 11-year-old boy earlier in the day, and boy showed officers the room in which alleged offense had occurred and pointed out handkerchief which boy said had been used by defendant and which allegedly bore some tangible evidence of the offense, handkerchief was merely evidentiary material and was not instrument or means by which alleged crime was committed, the fruits of a crime, a weapon by which escape might be effected or property the possession of which is a crime, and consequently handkerchief could not be seized legally without any warrant whatsoever and without any arrest of defendant, who was at home. Id.

Assignment of error

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's assignment of error in trial court's failure to declare mistrial because of prosecuting attorney's comment, in opening statement to jury, that only one woman survived defense challenge to jurors, was without foundation, in absence of motion by defendant for mistrial or exception to trial court's action in merely telling jury to disregard remark as improper after objection thereto. McGuinn v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 477, 89 U.S. App. D. C. 197).

Attempt to commit sodomy

The government's proof at trial that a completed act of sodomy has taken place will not entitle defendant to an acquittal on the only charge against him, an attempt to commit sodomy. United States v. L. M. Fleming (D.C. App. 1966, 215 A. 2d 836).

The general attempt statute permits one to be convicted of an attempt to commit sodomy. Id.

Bifurcation

Insanity defense of defendant charged with sexual assault on a 13-year-old boy was not so prejudiced by the presentation of details of the crime as to entitle defendant to two separate juries in a bifurcated trial on the merits and his insanity defense where the defense on the merits was slight and its resolution was likely to be rapid. United States v. W. Bennett (1972, 460 F. 2d 872, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 364).

Evidence—Admissibility

In prosecution of two men for sodomy, admission of one defendant's confession of prior acts of sodomy between defendants was proper under exception that evidence of other offenses than that charged is admissible in cases involving sex offenses to show defendants' mental disposition or passion. United States v. Kelly et al. (D.C.D.C. 1954, 119 F. Supp. 217).

— Sufficiency

In this case wherein defendant was charged with four counts of taking indecent liberties with a child, and three counts of sodomy, the evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction except with respect to one indecent liberties count. P. Coltrane v. United States (1969, 418 F. 2d 1131, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 295).

Where evidence in prosecution for sodomy is equally susceptible of construction as showing only attempt to commit sodomy as completion of such crime, conviction of sodomy cannot stand and to sustain conviction of sodomy, there must be substantial evidence of facts consistent with accused's guilt and inconsistent with every reasonable hypothesis of innocence. United States v. Kelly et al. (D.C.D.C. 1954, 119 F. Supp. 217).

Insanity defense

Failure of government psychiatrist, in testifying in opposition to defendant's insanity defense, to disclose that defendant, at time he was examined by the witness and found to lack symptoms of mental illness, was receiving daily doses of major tranquilizers which could have been expected to abate any symptoms of acute mental disturbance constituted reversible error. United States v. W. Bennett (1972, 460 F. 2d 872, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 364).

Failure of defendant's trial counsel to explore issue as to whether failure of government psychiatrist, in testifying in opposition to defendant's insanity defense, to disclose that defendant, at time he was examined by the witness and found to lack symptoms of mental illness, was receiving daily doses of major tranquilizers which could have been expected to abate any symptoms of acute mental disturbance constituted reversible error, did not preclude review of such issue as defendant or his counsel may have been unaware of the significance of the major tranquilizer medication. Id.

Instructions

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, court properly instructed jury that there must be absence of consent by complaining witness to warrant conviction, unless consent was induced by putting her in fear of grave bodily harm or death or by exercise of actual force against her person. McGuinn v. United States (1951, 191 F. 2d 477, 89 U.S. App. D. C. 197).

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's prayers for instructions assuming as fact that complaining witness did not offer opposition should have been denied. Id.

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's prayers for instruction requiring utmost resistance by complaining witness incorrect. Id.

In prosecution for rape and sodomy, defendant's prayer for instruction requiring that complaining witness' fear be mortal to negative her consent was properly denied, as fear of grave bodily harm was sufficient. Id.

Moral turpitude

Consensual sodomy is a "crime of moral turpitude" within scope of statute providing for deportation of an alien who is convicted of a crime involving moral turpitude committed within five years after entry into United States. J. Velez-Lazano v. Immigration and Naturalization Service (1972, 463 F. 2d 1305, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 214).

Review

Record on appeal from sodomy conviction, challenged on grounds of sufficiency of evidence presented by government, revealed no error affecting substantial rights of accused. W. Hehl v. United States (1960, 288 F. 2d 131, 109 U.S. App. D.C. 346).

For the purposes of sections 22-3503 to 22-3511—

(1) The term "sexual psychopath" means a person, not insane, who by a course of repeated misconduct in sexual matters has evidenced such lack of power to control his sexual impulses as to be dangerous to other persons because he is likely to attack or otherwise inflict injury, loss, pain, or other evil on the objects of his desire.

(2) The term "court" means a court in the District of Columbia having jurisdiction of criminal offenses or delinquent acts.

(3) The term "patient" means a person with respect to whom there has been filed with the clerk of any court a statement in writing setting forth facts tending to show that such person is a sexual psychopath.

(4) The term "criminal proceeding" means a proceeding in any court against a person for a criminal offense, and includes all stages of such a proceeding from (A) the time the person is indicted, charged by an information, or charged with a delinquent act, to (B) the entry of judgment, or, if the person is granted probation, the completion of the period of probation.

AMENDMENT

1970—Section 157(c) (1) (A) (B) of Act July 29, 1970, Public Law 91-358 amended section, (A) by amending paragraph (2) to read as follows:

"(2) The term 'court' means a court in the District of Columbia having jurisdiction of criminal offenses or delinquent acts.", and

(B) by striking out "an offense in the juvenile court of the District of Columbia" in paragraph (4) and inserting in lieu thereof "a delinquent act".

See note preceding section 11-101.

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949, substituted "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" for "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia."

Act July 8, 1963, § 1, substituted "District of Columbia Court of General Sessions" for "Municipal Court for the District of Columbia". Said section 1 superseded act Oct. 23, 1962, 76 Stat. 1171, Pub. L. 87-873, § 1, which contained identical provisions.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 22-3505 to 22-3507, 22-3509 to 22-3511.

NOTES TO DECISIONS*Burden of proof

The evidence adduced at habeas corpus proceeding did not support the trial court's finding that petitioner, who had originally been committed under the District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act, was likely to inflict injury, loss, pain or other evil on others by his sexual misconduct if he were released. M. I. Millard v. D. W. Harris, Acting Sup't, etc. (1968, 406 F. 2d 964, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 146; rev'g 373 F. 2d 468).

Habeas corpus petitioner who had been committed under the District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act had the burden to show that his past behavior, examined under the illumination provided by psychiatric evaluation of those actions, did not justify conclusion that he fell within statutory definition of one who was likely to inflict injury on others. Id.

Whether habeas corpus petitioner who was committed under the District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act should be released on habeas corpus would be determined on likelihood that he would, if released, be dangerous to others because of sexual misconduct. Id.

Petitioner who was confined in hospital pursuant to proceeding under District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act had the burden to show by a preponderance of the evidence that his continued confinement as sexual psychopath was not justified. Id.

Conditions justifying commitment

Predictions of dangerousness which would justify commitment under the District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act requires determination of type of conduct of which individual may engage; likelihood or probability that he will indulge in that conduct; and effect that such conduct if engaged in will have on others. M. I. Millard v. D. W. Harris, Acting Sup't, etc. (1968, 406 F. 2d 964, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 146; rev'g 373 F. 2d 468).

In determining what acts may be considered in applying District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act, court must read "sexual" in common meaning of that term. Id.

Constitutionality

The statute defining sexual psychopaths and providing for their commitment to hospital for the insane after a judicial hearing and upon a finding by the court or verdict of a jury, if demanded, is not unconstitutional. Malone v. Overholser (D.C.D.C. 1950, 93 F. Supp. 647).

Construction

The District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act was not repealed by the 1964 Hospitalization of Mentally Ill Act. M. I. Millard v. D. W. Harris, Acting Sup't, etc. (1968, 406 F. 2d 964, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 146; rev'g 373 F. 2d 468).

Court of Appeals would not read into the District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act the procedural protections of the Hospitalization of the Mentally Ill Act. Id.

"Injury" within statute defining sexual psychopath as person who has evidenced such lack of power to control sexual impulses as to be dangerous to persons because he is likely to attack or otherwise inflict injury, loss, pain or other evil, includes injury to feelings and "pain" includes mental suffering. C. W. Carras v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 183 A. 2d 393).

Dangerous conduct

Statute defining sexual psychopath as a person who by repeated sexual misconduct evinces inability to control sexual impulses so as to be likely to be dangerous to others requires that the dangerous conduct be not merely repulsive or repugnant but must have serious effect on the viewer. M. I. Millard v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1966, 373 F. 2d 468, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 383; rev'd and remanded 406 F. 2d 964).

Dues process

Since a proceeding under District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act is closely related to behavior of person rather than to his mental condition considered apart from his behavior, constitutional guarantees implicit in due process of law must come into play. M. I. Millard v. D. W. Harris, Acting Sup't, etc. (1968, 406 F. 2d 964, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 146; rev'g 373 F. 2d 468).

Evidence

Failure of the trial court in habeas corpus proceeding to distinguish between petitioner's sexual and nonsexual misconduct as a reason for his commitment under District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act and trial court's failure to evaluate the likelihood, as opposed to mere possibility, that petitioner would engage in sexual misconduct if released constituted reversible error. M. I. Millard v. D. W. Harris, Acting Sup't, etc. (1968, 406 F. 2d 964, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 146; rev'g 373 F. 2d 468).

Evidence in habeas corpus proceeding established that if released, the petitioner, who had been committed under District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act, would be unlikely to engage in sexual misconduct other than exhibitionism. Id.

Evidence at habeas corpus proceeding established that likelihood of serious injury to a child who might see the petitioner expose himself in public was too remote to justify commitment under District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act. Id.

Evidence at habeas corpus proceeding established that future sexual misconduct of petitioner, if any, was not sufficiently likely to cause kind of harm required by District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act to justify further commitment. Id.

Grounds for commitment

Commitment under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 cannot be based simply on determination that a person is likely to engage in particular acts and court must also determine harm, if any, that is likely to flow from these acts; since mere possibility of injury is insufficient, harm must be likely. T. B. Cross v. D. W. Harris (1969, 418 F. 2d 1095, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

In enacting sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 Congress did not intend to authorize indefinite preventive detention for those who have propensity to behave in way that is merely offensive or obnoxious to others; and threatened harm must be substantial so that before a commitment is required a person must be found likely to engage in sexual misconduct in circumstances where that misconduct will inflict substantial injury upon others. Id.

In determining question of likelihood of harm to ascertain whether a person should be committed under sections 22-3501 to 22-3511 particularly relevant considerations are: seriousness of expected harm; availability of in-patient and out-patient treatment for individual concerned; and expected length of confinement required for in-patient treatment. Id.

Inasmuch as habeas corpus petitioner would continue to suffer adverse consequences as result of commitment under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511, issue of validity of the commitment was not moot even though petitioner had been released. R. Justin v. L. Jacobs (1971, 449 F. 2d 1017, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 355).

Claims of habeas corpus petitioner that he was being given inadequate medical treatment at hospital to which he had been committed as a sexual psychopath and that he was being confined in an improper place were rendered moot by his discharge. Id.

Where the petitioner was in custody in hospital pursuant to commitment as sexual psychopath when he filed his habeas corpus petition, federal habeas corpus court did not lose jurisdiction to decide legality of commitments when the hospital thereafter unconditionally released petitioner. Id.

Inasmuch as habeas corpus petitioner committed to hospital in 1958 as a sexual psychopath had been discharged, mental condition of petitioner at time of his 1967 bid for release is no longer an issue in the case. Id.

Claim that there was insufficient evidence of course of repeated misconduct in sexual matters to justify 1958 commitment as sexual psychopath is not cognizable in habeas corpus proceeding in view of petitioner's failure to appeal from the 1958 commitment hearing. Id.

A habeas corpus petitioner, who was under hospital commitment as a sexual psychopath, was not entitled to be released on the ground that he was not mentally ill, as psychiatric testimony established that the petitioner was still a sexual psychopath who was likely to be of danger to others if permitted to return to society. In re

J. E. Clatterbuck v. D. W. Harris, Superintendent, etc. (1968, 295 F. Supp. 84).

Limitation of applicability of chapter

The protection of the District of Columbia Hospitalization of the Mentally Ill Act is limited to those who are declared insane or of unsound mind pursuant to a court order and does not include any person previously committed under the Sexual Psychopath Act. M. I. Millard v. D. W. Harris, Acting Sup't, etc. (1968, 406 F. 2d 964, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 146; rev'g 373 F. 2d 468).

Nature of proceeding

Proceedings under statute, to determine whether defendant in pending criminal action is sexual psychopath, is a civil one. Miller v. Overholser (1953, 206 F. 2d 415, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Statute providing for commitment of sexual psychopaths to hospital for the insane is not a criminal statute but merely extends the law relating to commitment of persons who are mentally incompetent so as to include persons who are sexual psychopaths as defined in the statute. Malone v. Overholser (D.C.D.C. 1950, 93 F. Supp. 647).

"Not insane" construed

Judicial decision rendered in 1968 interpreting words "not insane" as used in sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 as meaning "not mentally ill" should have been used by the court in ruling on petitioner's 1967 bid for release from hospital to which he had been committed as a sexual psychopath. R. Justin v. L. Jacobs (1971, 449 F. 2d 1017, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 355).

Judicial decision rendered in 1968 defining words "not insane" in sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 as meaning "not mentally ill" would not be retroactively applied to challenge petitioner's 1958 commitment to hospital as a sexual psychopath where petitioner had been released and there was no issue of continuing confinement. Id.

Under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511, term "not insane" must be read to mean "not 'mentally ill'" within meaning of sections 21-501 to 21-591 and sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 apply only to those who are not mentally ill while compulsory treatment of those who are mentally ill is governed by sections 21-501 to 21-591. T. B. Cross v. D. W. Harris (1969, 418 F. 2d 1095, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

The words "not insane" as used in District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath Act means "not mentally ill". M. I. Millard v. D. W. Harris, Acting Sup't, etc. (1968, 406 F. 2d 964, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 146; rev'g 373 F. 2d 468).

When words "not insane" in District of Columbia Sexual Psychopath law is read to mean "not mentally ill" the sole justification for commitment under the act is the patient's dangerousness. Id.

Release of sexual psychopath

Continued detention in mental institution of a mentally ill person, who was committed under the Sexual Psychopath Act, is unwarranted since, by statutory definition, a mentally ill person cannot be a sex psychopath. E. Norwood v. L. Jacobs (1970, 430 F. 2d 903, 139 U.S. App. D.C. 162).

Although an indefinite commitment pursuant to the Sexual Psychopath Law is justifiable only upon a theory of therapeutic treatment, and although the evidence in instant case clearly disclosed that petitioner was not being given therapeutic treatment adequate for his condition, petitioner was not to be released from his confinement as a sexual psychopath, in view of the fact that while treatment was not being given, the fault lay entirely with petitioner who steadfastly refused appropriate and available treatment, namely, psychotherapy. In re J. E. Clatterbuck v. D. W. Harris, Superintendent, etc. (1968, 295 F. Supp. 84).

Repeated misconduct

Word "repeated" within statute defining sexual psychopath as person who by course of repeated misconduct in sexual matters has evidenced such lack of power to control his sexual impulses as to be dangerous to other persons does not mean habitual and does not require establishment of course of habitual sexual misconduct. C. H. Lomax v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1965, 211 A. 2d 772).

Sufficiency of record

Since examining doctors concluded that person committed under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 was not insane but they had no occasion to consider whether he was nonetheless mentally ill, there was no record on the question and habeas corpus petition must be remanded for hearing and findings of fact necessary to determine whether statute was properly applied to petitioner. T. B. Cross v. D. W. Harris (1969, 418 F. 2d 1095, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

§ 22-3504. Filing of statement.

(a) Whenever it shall appear to the United States attorney for the District of Columbia that any person within the District of Columbia, other than a defendant in a criminal proceeding, is a sexual psychopath, such attorney may file with the clerk of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia a statement in writing setting forth the facts tending to show that such a person is a sexual psychopath.

(b) Whenever it shall appear to the United States attorney for the District of Columbia that any defendant in any criminal proceeding prosecuted by such attorney or any of his assistants is a sexual psychopath, such attorney may file with the clerk of the court in which such proceeding is pending a statement in writing setting forth the facts tending to show that such defendant is a sexual psychopath.

(c) Whenever it shall appear to any court that any defendant in any criminal proceeding pending in such court is a sexual psychopath, the court may, if it deems such procedure advisable, direct the officer prosecuting the defendant to file with the clerk of such court a statement in writing setting forth the facts tending to show that such defendant is a sexual psychopath.

(d) Any statement filed in a criminal proceeding pursuant to subsection (b) or (c) may be filed only (1) before trial, (2) after conviction or plea of guilty but before sentencing, or (3) after conviction or plea of guilty but before the completion of probation.

(e) This section shall not apply to an individual in a criminal proceeding who is charged with rape or assault with intent to rape. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 348, ch. 428, title II, § 202; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127; July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, title I, § 157(c) (2), 84 Stat. 574.)

AMENDMENT

1970—Section 157(c) (2) of Act July 29, 1970, Public Law 91-358, amended subsec. (a) by striking out "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" and inserting in lieu thereof "Superior Court of the District of Columbia."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1970 AMENDMENT

See note preceding section 11-101.

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949, substituted "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" for "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia."

This section is referred to in sections 22-3503, 22-3505 to 22-3507, 22-3509 to 22-3511.

NOTES TO DECISIONS*Criminal sentencing

Where Chief of Legal Psychiatric Division expressed opinion raising doubt of competency for criminal sentencing for allegedly sexually violating the person of a child five years of age, so as to call for a hearing under the Sexual Psychopath Act, trial judge erred in proceeding to sentence for criminal offense, and Court of Appeals would remand for competency hearing. G. Fuller v. United States (1967, 390 F. 2d 468, 129 U.S. App. D.C. 53).

Legislative authority

While Congress has the authority to prohibit acts of exhibition even if the acts are unlikely to do serious harm and may punish willful violations of laws forbidding indecent behavior, the test of what anticipated conduct may justify preventive detention is simply whether legislature has power to prohibit such conduct or to attack evil it portends. T. B. Cross v. D. W. Harris (1969, 418 F. 2d 1095, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

Matters to be considered on remand

Where Court of Appeals remanded case for competency hearing under Sexual Psychopath Act because of psychiatric opinion, district court would be authorized to receive, or to direct prosecutor to file, statement looking toward application of Sexual Psychopath Act, and hearing on remand should also embrace issue of possibility of lack of competency at trial. G. Fuller v. United States (1967, 390 F. 2d 468, 129 U.S. App. D.C. 53).

Where Court of Appeals remanded to District Court case for competency hearing under Sexual Psychopath Act because of psychiatric opinion raising doubt of competency of defendant, inquiry at hearing on remand should embrace mental condition of defendant at time of alleged offense, what kind of judgment or sentence was appropriate, and what kind of disposition should be made of defendant, including a possible civil commitment under the Hospitalization of the Mentally Ill Act. (21-501 et seq.) Id.

A patient shall have the right to have the assistance of counsel at every stage of the proceeding under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511. Before the court appoints psychiatrists pursuant to section 22-3506 it shall advise the patient of his right to counsel and shall assign counsel to represent him unless the patient is able to obtain counsel or elects to proceed without counsel. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 348, ch. 428, title II, § 203.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 22-3503, 22-3506, 22-3507, 22-3509 to 22-3511.

(a) When a statement has been filed with the clerk of any court pursuant to section 22-3504, such court shall appoint two qualified psychiatrists to make a personal examination of the patient. The patient shall be required to answer questions asked by the psychiatrists under penalty of contempt of court. Each psychiatrist shall file a written report of the examination, which shall include a statement of his conclusion as to whether the patient is a sexual psychopath.

(b) The counsel for the patient shall have the right to inspect the reports of the examination of the patient. No such report and no evidence resulting from the personal examination of the patient shall be admissible against him in any judicial proceeding except a proceeding under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 to determine whether the patient is a sexual psychopath. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 348, ch. 428, title II, § 204.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 22-3503, 22-3505, 22-3507 to 22-3511.

In general

Nature of crime of sodomy, with which accused was charged, was not sufficient alone, to require the District Court, before accepting guilty plea, to order a mental examination of accused, although court could properly consider nature of crime in that connection, and where there was no indication by prosecuting attorney that accused might be a sexual psychopath, and no request for a mental examination was made by prosecution or accused, convictions could not be set aside in collateral proceeding, such as coram nobis, because of court's failure to order examination on its own motion. Carter v. United States (1960, 283 F. 2d 200, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 405).

Expert testimony

The likelihood of a recurrence of sexual misconduct, likely frequency of such behavior, and magnitude of harm to other persons that is likely to result are three questions of fact on which expert testimony would be relevant in proceeding to commit person under section 22-3501 to 22-3511. T. B. Cross v. D. W. Harris (1969, 418 F. 2d 1095, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

Hearing

Though sexual psychopath statute requires psychiatric report to include a legal conclusion, it also requires a hearing in which psychiatrist can be examined and cross examined. M. I. Millard v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1966, 373 F. 2d 468, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 383; rev'd and remanded 406 F. 2d 964).

Justification for lack of treatment

One involuntarily committed to public hospital as sexual psychopath is entitled to relief upon showing that he was not receiving reasonably suitable and adequate treatment, and lack of such treatment cannot be justified by lack of staff or facilities. M. I. Millard v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1966, 373 F. 2d 468, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 383; rev'd and remanded 406 F. 2d 964).

Psychiatrists report as basis for commitment

Conclusory statement in psychiatrists' report was insufficient for commitment as sexual psychopath, in absence of full hearing, and court's statement that it acted upon "the testimony and evidence adduced" did not provide adequate assurance that statute had been complied with and that an informed judgment had been made. M. I. Millard v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1966, 373 F. 2d 468, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 383; rev'd and remanded 406 F. 2d 964).

§ 22-3507. When hearing is required.

If, in their reports filed pursuant to section 22-3506, both psychiatrists state that the patient is a sexual psychopath, or if both state that they are unable to reach any conclusion by reason of the partial or complete refusal of the patient to submit to thorough examination, or if one states that the patient is a sexual psychopath and the other states that he is unable to reach any conclusion by reason of the partial or complete refusal of the patient to submit to thorough examination, then the court shall conduct a hearing in the manner provided in section 22-3508 to determine whether the patient is a sexual psychopath. If, on the basis of the reports filed, the court is not required to conduct such a hearing, the court shall enter an order dismissing the proceeding under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 to determine whether the patient is a sexual psychopath. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 349, ch. 428, title II, § 205.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 22-3503, 22-3505, 22-3506, 22-3509 to 22-3511.

§ 22-3508. Hearing—Commitment to Saint Elizabeths Hospital.

Upon the evidence introduced at a hearing held for that purpose, the court shall determine whether or not the patient is a sexual psychopath. Such hearing shall be conducted without a jury unless, before such hearing and within fifteen days after the date on which the second report is filed pursuant to section 22-3506, a jury is demanded by the patient or by the officer filing the statement. The rules of evidence applicable in judicial proceedings in the court shall be applicable to hearings pursuant to this section; but, notwithstanding any such rule, evidence of conviction of any number of crimes the commission of which tends to show that the patient is a sexual psychopath and of the punishment inflicted therefor shall be admissible at any such hearing. The patient shall be entitled to an appeal as in other cases. If the patient is determined to be a sexual psychopath, the court shall commit him to Saint Elizabeths Hospital to be confined there until released in accordance with section 22-3509. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 349, ch. 428, title II, § 206.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 22-3503, 22-3505 to 22-3507, 22-3509 to 22-3511.

Generally

Under statute providing for commitment of sexual psychopaths to hospital for the insane, alleged psychopath is entitled to a hearing before the court at which he is entitled to representation by counsel and he may be committed only upon a finding by the court or upon the verdict of a jury. Malone v. Overholser (D.C.D.C. 1950, 93 F. Supp. 647).

Bail

Trial court has power to permit one adjudged sexual psychopath to remain at liberty on bond pending appeal. C. W. Carras v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 183 A. 2d 393).

Question of right of defendant adjudged to be sexual psychopath to bail pending appeal was moot, where case was in reviewing court and ready for disposition adverse to defendant on merits so that no practical relief could be given as to bail. Id.

Basis for indefinite commitment

Indefinite commitment under sexual psychopath law is justifiable only upon a theory of therapeutic treatment. M. I. Millard v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1966, 373 F. 2d 468, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 383; rev'd and remanded 406 F. 2d 964).

Confinement

Notwithstanding psychiatrists' report and testimony of one psychiatrist to effect that defendant, arrested for indecent exposure, would not physically attack any one in any manner, in view of fact defendant had twice before been committed for similar offenses, defendant was properly committed as sexual psychopath. C. W. Carras v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 183 A. 2d 393).

Intent of Sexual Psychopath Act is commitment for remedial treatment, and incarceration of sexual psychopath in place maintained for confinement of violent, criminal, hopeless insane, instead of in place designed and operated for mentally ill who are not insane, is not authorized by statute. Miller v. Overholser (1953, 206 F. 2d 415, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Constitutionality

The statute defining sexual psychopaths and providing for their commitment to hospital for the insane after a judicial hearing and upon a finding by the court or verdict of a jury, if demanded, is not unconstitutional. Malone v. Overholser (D.C.D.C. 1950, 93 F. Supp. 647).

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence sufficiently demonstrated "course of repeated misconduct in sexual matters" within statutory definition of sexual psychopath on part of defendant accused of indecent exposure. C. H. Lomax v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1965, 211 A. 2d 772).

Evidence sustained finding that defendant arrested for indecent exposure was sexual psychopath. C. W. Carras

v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 183 A. 2d 393).

Hearing

Though sexual psychopath statute requires psychiatric report to include a legal conclusion, it also requires a hearing in which psychiatrist can be examined and cross examined. M. I. Millard v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1966, 373 F. 2d 468, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 383; rev'd and remanded 406 F. 2d 964).

Nature of proceeding

Statute providing for commitment of sexual psychopaths to hospital for the insane is not a criminal statute but merely extends the law relating to commitment of persons who are mentally incompetent so as to include persons who are sexual psychopaths as defined in the statute. Malone v. Overholser (D.C.D.C. 1950, 93 F. Supp. 647).

Psychiatrists report as basis for commitment

Conclusory statement in psychiatrists' report was insufficient for commitment as sexual psychopath, in absence of full hearing, and court's statement that it acted upon "the testimony and evidence adduced" did not provide adequate assurance that statute had been complied with and that an informed judgment had been made. M. I. Millard v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1966, 373 F. 2d 468, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 383; rev'd and remanded 406 F. 2d 964).

Release of sexual psychopath

Although an indefinite commitment pursuant to the Sexual Psychopath Law is justifiable only upon a theory of therapeutic treatment, and although the evidence in instant case clearly disclosed that petitioner was not being given therapeutic treatment adequate for his condition, petitioner was not to be released from his confinement as a sexual psychopath, in view of the fact that, while treatment was not being given, the fault lay entirely with petitioner who steadfastly refused appropriate and available treatment, namely, psychotherapy. In re J. E. Clatterbuck v. D. W. Harris, Superintendent, etc. (1968, 295 F. Supp. 84).

Substantial injury

In this case on remand of habeas corpus petition of person committed under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511, if court determines that petitioner was not mentally ill then it must decide whether person, an admitted sexual psychopath under prior construction of these sections, was dangerous to other persons within new construction and a finding of dangerousness must be based on high probability of substantial injury. T. B. Cross v. D. W. Harris (1969, 418 F. 2d 1095, 135 U.S. App. D.C. 259).

§ 22-3509. Parole—Discharge.

Any person committed under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 may be released from confinement when the Superintendent of Saint Elizabeths Hospital finds that he has sufficiently recovered so as to not be dangerous to other persons, provided if the person to be released be one charged with crime or undergoing sentence therefor, the Superintendent of the hospital shall give notice thereof to the judge of the criminal court and deliver him to the court in obedience to proper precept. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 349, ch. 428, title II, § 207.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 22-3503, 22-3505 to 22-3508, 22-3510, 22-3511.

Habeas corpus

Habeas corpus relief would be available to one involuntarily committed to public hospital as sexual psychopath but who is not receiving reasonably suitable and adequate treatment, and lack of such treatment could not be justified by lack of staff or facilities. M. I. Millard v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1966, 373 F. 2d 468, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 383; rev'd and remanded 406 F. 2d 964).

One committed as a sexual psychopath to hospital for the insane may at any time after commitment test by habeas corpus proceeding the question of whether he has recovered. Malone v. Overholser (D.C.D.C. 1950, 93 F. Supp. 647).

Standards for release

Standards provided for release of sexual psychopath from hospital are not so vague as to invalidate Sexual Psychopath Act. Miller v. Overholser (1953, 206 F. 2d 415, 92 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

§ 22-3510. Stay of criminal proceedings.

Any statement filed in a criminal proceeding pursuant to subsection (b) or (c) of section 22-3504 shall stay such criminal proceeding until whichever of the following first occurs:

- (1) The proceeding under sections 22-3503 to 22-3511 to determine whether the patient is a sexual psychopath is dismissed pursuant to section 22-3507 or withdrawn;
- (2) It is determined pursuant to section 22-3508 that the patient is not a sexual psychopath; or
- (3) The patient is discharged from Saint Elizabeths Hospital pursuant to section 22-3509. (June 9, 1948, 62 Stat. 349, ch. 428, title II, § 208.)

§ 22-3601. Possession of implements of crime—Penalty.

Whoever violates this section shall be imprisoned for not more than one year and may be fined not more than $1,000, unless the violation occurs after he has been convicted in the District of a violation of this section or of a felony, either in the District or in another jurisdiction, in which case he shall be imprisoned for not less than one nor more than ten years. (June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 97, ch. 159, § 209(a).)

Appeal and error

Where defendant did not move to suppress narcotics paraphernalia, defendant urged no justification for his failure to move to suppress and he did not attempt to show lack of opportunity to raise motion before trial or lack of awareness of grounds for motion before trial, defendant's contention that paraphernalia was obtained as result of illegal search and seizure would not be considered on appeal. G. W. Brown v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 289 A. 2d 891).

In view of defendant's failure to move to suppress narcotics paraphernalia before trial, absent showing of plain error, admission of narcotics paraphernalia into evidence and denial of motion for judgment of acquittal of possession of narcotics paraphernalia were not errors. Id.

In prosecution for possession of narcotics paraphernalia, allowing the case to go to jury on evidence presented was not manifest error. C. Richardson v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 276 A. 2d 237).

Since the defendant made no motion for judgment of acquittal at trial, contention that evidence was insufficient to support conviction was not before the Court of Appeals. Id.

Arrest

A small crowbar, three pairs of pliers and two screwdrivers, found in automobile at time of its owner's arrest, were not such tools as are usually employed or reasonably may be employed in commission of crime within former provision of section 22-3302 defining as a vagrant one found in possession of such tools without satisfactorily accounting therefor, so that his possession thereof was not a misdemeanor committed in arresting officer's presence, as required to justify arrest without warrant. Green v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1952, 91 A. 2d 712).

Assistance of counsel

Where the essential element of the government's proof was that two defendants, either jointly or severally, were in position to exercise dominion over two-room basement apartment in which narcotic paraphernalia and dangerous drug were found, but counsel representing both defendants jointly made no effort to develop on direct examination testimony, elicited by government on cross-examination, that one defendant's residence in apartment had been of temporary nature and in closing argument failed to comment on that testimony, that defendant was prejudiced by joint representation and was denied the effective assistance of counsel. P. D. McIver v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 280 A. 2d 527).

Where defense counsel, jointly representing defendant and codefendant, elicited testimony that defendant was a resident in two room apartment in which narcotic paraphernalia and dangerous drug were found and defense counsel opened door to testimony that defendant had been seen to use heroin at apartment thereby involving defendant with narcotics in very substantial way, since obviously someone must have had such control at apartment as to give rise to presumption of constructive possession of articles seized, the defendant was prejudiced by joint representation and was denied effective assistance of counsel. Id.

Burden of proof

It was not incumbent on the prosecution, in a case involving possession of implements of crime, wherein possession of a large quantity of narcotic paraphernalia was proved, to show that defendant possessor was unable to satisfactorily account for its possession since that was a matter for the defense. W. J. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 255 A. 2d 494).

Concurrent sentences

Where defendants received concurrent sentences in prosecution for possession of narcotics, possession of implements of crime, unlawful entry and narcotics vagrancy and evidence was sufficient to support conviction of possession of narcotics and possession of implements of crime, District of Columbia Court of Appeals would not pass upon sufficiency of evidence to support other convictions. S. Keith, R. L. Payne and T. J. Walker v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 232 A. 2d 92).

Constitutionality

This section which makes it a crime to have in possession any implement that is usually employed in commission of crime without being able to give satisfactory account is not unconstitutional for vagueness. C. Tompkins v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 272 A. 2d 100).

Since the defendant did not introduce evidence to show that he was addicted to heroin at time of arrest and since the defendant had stated in application for pretrial release that he was not physically addicted to narcotics at that time, question whether statute on possession of implements usually employed in commission of crime is unconstitutional as it applies to possession of items needed by narcotics addict was not reached. Id.

This section prohibiting possession of any instrument, tool, or other implement that is usually employed, or reasonably may be employed, in commission of any crime, in the absence of a satisfactory account, is constitutional as applied to nonmedical person, who, on arrest, was found to be in possession of a case containing a wet needle, needle holder and syringe, but without the cooker, and whose statements of intent to use hypodermic and needle for injection of heroin were sufficiently corroborated. L. F. McKoy v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 263 A. 2d 649).

This section prohibiting possession of any instrument, tool, or other implement that is usually employed, or reasonably may be employed in the commission of any crime, in the absence of a satisfactory account, provides sufficient notice so that persons of ordinary intelligence can ascertain the line separating guilty from innocent acts and therefore is not unconstitutionally vague. L. F. McKoy v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 263 A. 2d 645).

This section prohibiting possession of implements of crime is unconstitutional in its application to crowbars. Washington v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 357, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 100).

This section providing that no person shall have in his possession any instrument, tool or other equipment or other implement which reasonably may be employed in commission of any crime if he is unable satisfactorily to account for possession of the implement places burden of proof of intent upon defendant and is unconstitutional as applied to implements which do not in themselves give rise to sinister implications. Benton v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 341, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 84).

Custodial interrogation

Questions addressed to three defendants by arresting officers seeking an explanation for defendants' being in condemned house were noncoercive and not "custodial interrogation" within rule of Miranda v. State of Arizona. S. Keith, R. L. Payne and T. J. Walker v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 232 A. 2d 92).

Duty to arrest

Elements of offense

Defendant's possession of syringe, needle, and soda bottle top containing traces of heroin is sufficient for a jury as to remaining elements of charged offense of possession of narcotics paraphernalia, i.e., whether implements are usually employed in commission of a crime and whether the defendant intended to use such implements in a crime. C. Richardson v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 276 A. 2d 237).

To convict under this section (prohibiting possession of any instrument, tool, or other implement that is usually employed, or reasonably may be employed, in the commission of any crime, in the absence of a satisfactory account), the government must prove that the implements are usually or reasonably may be employed in the commission of crime, and that defendant intended to use implements for crime; proof of intent may be either by inference from possession of sinister items, or otherwise. L. F. McKoy v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 263 A. 2d 649).

Evidence

Under this section providing that no person shall have in his possession any instrument, tool, or other implement for picking locks or pockets, or that is usually employed or reasonably may be employed in commission of any crime, if he is unable satisfactorily to account for possession of implement, if order or demand was necessary, requirement was satisfied by evidence in prosecution thereunder. Benton v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 341, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 84).

—Admissibility

Admission of testimony by hospital guard as to the defendant's statement that he had three pills which he had put in cooker and had flushed down toilet, and which was not made in response to interrogation but was volunteered in context of request by defendant to be released, was not erroneous for failure to make the defendant, charged with possession of narcotics paraphernalia, aware of his right to have attorney present. C. Tompkins v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 272 A. 2d 100).

Where defendants' arrest for narcotics violations was legal, narcotics paraphernalia seized at time of the arrest was properly admitted in defendants' joint trial for narcotics violations. S. Keith, R. L. Payne and T. J. Walker v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 232 A. 2d 92).

On stating that he kept small crowbar, found on front seat of his automobile, to get starter out of jam and used pliers and screwdrivers, found on floor of automobile, to work on it, in answer to questions asked by police officer before arresting him without warrant on charge of vagrancy in possessing tools usually employed or reasonably employable in commission of crime without satisfactorily accounting therefor, gave legitimate reasons for possession of such tools, in view of evidence that he was a mechanic, so that tools were improperly received in evidence against him in prosecution for such offense. Green v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 91 A. 2d 712).

—Sufficiency

Evidence that narcotics paraphernalia was discovered in room in which was found a notebook containing record in defendant's handwriting of narcotics purchases and amounts purchases would sell for after being cut was sufficient to sustain conviction of defendant on charge of possession of implements of crime. G. Mahoney v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 895).

Evidence that the defendant was in possession of a syringe that contained apparently usable quantity of heroin is sufficient to support conviction for possession of implements of crime. C. Jones, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 282 A. 2d 561).

From facts that the defendant had been present in car immediately before officer noticed narcotics paraphernalia protruding from under seat where defendant had just been seated, that the defendant had been driving car immediately prior to time articles were recovered, that the defendant was owner of the car, that a single needle and syringe were within defendant's reach, and that puncture marks were found on defendant's arm, it was reasonable to infer that the defendant had dominion and control over needle and syringe under his seat, and, viewing evidence in light most favorable to the government, it was adequate to support the jury's finding that defendant had possession of the needle and syringe. T. Crawford, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 278 A. 2d 125).

—Suppression

Granting of motion to suppress evidence, consisting of narcotics instruments taken from handbag of defendant at precinct station where she was being held on a charge of failing or refusing to pay taxi cab fare, was proper since defendant's arrest was unreasonable and premature where defendant at time of her arrest appeared to be attempting to raise the necessary fare by making a telephone call, so that element of scienter was lacking. United States v. M. Brown (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 499).

The denial of a motion to suppress evidence relating to stolen property and to narcotics paraphernalia found on defendants after the arrest for a pedestrian traffic violation was proper. J. R. West et ano. v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 249 A. 2d 740).

Inferences

Since the police officers failed to segregate contents of match box on which defendant's hand allegedly was resting at time of search from other narcotic paraphernalia found on dresser next to defendant and since this tenant or lessee of apartment was present at time of raid, it could not be inferred that defendant ever possessed material subsequently identified as narcotic implements. W. C. Cook v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 272 A. 2d 444).

In the case, the court held that defendant's admission of his intent to use hypodermic and needle for criminal purpose was sufficiently corroborated and statement was sufficiently trustworthy for admission on proof of intent in prosecution for possession of implements of a crime, since although possession of a wet needle, needle holder and syringe but not the cooker, might not be sufficient to establish corpus delicti, it did constitute substantial independent evidence which would tend to establish trustworthiness of admission by defendant, a nonmedical person, to arresting officer. L. F. McKoy v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 263 A. 2d 649).

Intent

Fact that only possible use of complete narcotics "kit", which consisted of a syringe, two needles, a "cooker" and three caps containing traces of heroin, found in defendant's possession was to administer heroin, supplied requisite criminal intent to use such implements in a crime; thus, defendant's conduct fell within proscription of this section prohibiting possession of implements of a crime. L. F. McKoy v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 263 A. 2d 645).

No rational inference of criminal intent can be drawn from mere possession of tools which reasonably may be employed in crime. Benton v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 341, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 84).

Under this section providing that no person shall have in his possession any instrument, tool, or other implement for picking locks or pockets, or that is usually employed or reasonably may be employed in commission of any crime, if he is unable satisfactorily to account for possession of the implement, proof of intent is essential element of government's case. Id.

Narcotics paraphernalia

Proof of possession of a syringe containing liquid with more than traces of heroin is sufficient to sustain conviction for possession of implements of a crime. C. Jones, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 282 A. 2d 561).

Single implement of narcotics paraphernalia, when seized separately, need not compel a finding that it is instrumentality for illegal use of narcotics. Id.

Presence of apparently usable quantity of heroin in a syringe is sufficient to negate possession of syringe for legitimate use. Id.

Each case of possession of narcotics paraphernalia must be governed by its own facts. Id.

Defendant could be convicted of possession of narcotics paraphernalia under this section rendering unlawful a possession of instruments of a crime, even though no criminal statute prohibited use or consumption of narcotics, as statute makes it unlawful for any person to manufacture, possess, or have under his control, sell, prescribe, administer, disburse, or compound any narcotic drug. A. L. Wheeler v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 276 A. 2d 722).

Constitutional prohibition against cruel and unusual punishments did not prevent conviction of defendant for possession of narcotics paraphernalia even though the paraphernalia is used to satisfy his own craving for heroin. Id.

Presumption

Validity of presumption created by statute depends on presence of rational connection between facts proved and ultimate fact presumed and presumption cannot be sustained if inference of one from proof of the other is arbitrary because of lack of connection between the two in common experience. Benton v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 341, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 84).

Probable cause

Where the arresting officers had knowledge that no one had owner's permission to occupy particular vacant apartment, officers observed broken lock, damaged door panel and the opened door of the apartment, through which the defendant and companion could be seen, officers had probable cause to believe that the defendant and his companion had made unlawful entry, officers' entry into apartment without warrant to effect arrest was justified and search of the premises was valid as incident to lawful arrest. C. Jones, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 282 A. 2d 561).

Remand

Where defendant was convicted under first count of unlawful entry and his conviction under second count of possession of implements of crime consisting of crowbars was under statute which is unconstitutional in its application to crowbars, case was remanded with directions either to modify judgment by setting aside verdict on second count and dismissing that count or in the alternative to vacate judgment entirely, set aside verdict on second count, dismiss that count and resentence defendant for unlawful entry, notwithstanding that general sentence was for period less than maximum for unlawful entry. Washington v. United States (1956, 232 F. 2d 357, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 100).

Satisfactory account

A "satisfactory account" within meaning of this section prohibiting possession of any instrument, tool, or other implement that is usually employed, or reasonably may be employed, in the commission of any crime in the absence of a satisfactory account means a lawful purpose for possessing such implement. L. F. McKoy v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 263 A. 2d 645).

The "satisfactory account" clause of this section does not violate the privilege against self-incrimination because of its availability as an affirmative defense. Id.

Search warrant

Where affidavit stated that a police informant had purchased on several occasions from the defendant on defendant's premises a substance that later proved to be hashish, magistrate could reasonably infer that alleged transfers were not made in pursuance of proper order forms, and affidavit supporting government's application for search warrant is not insufficient for failure to allege that informant-purchaser lacked written order forms required of a transferee of marijuana. A. R. Rutledge v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 213).

Subject of search

Under the circumstances of this case, it was not unreasonable for officers to seize pistol which, as convicted felon, defendant was forbidden to possess, incidental to authorized search of his apartment for narcotics, in absence of showing that presence of pistol on premises was attributable to eight-day delay in execution of search warrant. J. E. Curtis v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 263 A. 2d 653).

Verdict

Acceptance of guilty verdict after one juror, during poll of the jury, repeatedly expressed verdict different from that announced by foreman, after repeated "identification" and "interrogation" of such juror, and after rest of jury had been polled without defendant's request is prejudicial error. R. C. Jones v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 273 A. 2d 842).

When a juror being polled dissents from the verdict to which he has agreed in jury room, jury should either be discharged or returned to jury room for further deliberation. Id.

Warning of constitutional rights

The case was remanded to determine whether defendant who was convicted of possession of implements of crime had been warned of his constitutional rights by arresting officers before he made incriminating statements. W. J. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 255 A. 2d 494).

§ 23-101. Conduct of prosecutions

(a) Prosecutions for violations of all police or municipal ordinances or regulations and for violations of all penal statutes in the nature of police or municipal regulations, where the maximum punishment is a fine only, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, shall be conducted in the name of the District of Columbia by the Corporation Counsel for the District of Columbia or his assistants, except as otherwise provided in such ordinance, regulation, or statute, or in this section.

(b) Prosecutions for violations of section 6 of the Act of July 29, 1892 (D.C. Code, sec. 22-1107), relating to disorderly conduct, and for violations of section 9 of that Act (D.C. Code, sec. 22-1112), relating to lewd, indecent, or obscene acts, shall be conducted in the name of the District of Columbia by the Corporation Counsel or his assistants.

(c) All other criminal prosecutions shall be conducted in the name of the United States by the United States attorney for the District of Columbia or his assistants, except as otherwise provided by law.

(d) An indictment or information brought in the name of the United States may include, in addition to offenses prosecutable by the United States, offenses prosecutable by the District of Columbia, and such prosecution may be conducted either solely by the Corporation Counsel or his assistants or solely by the United States attorney or his assistants if the other prosecuting authority consents.

(e) Separate indictments or informations, or both, charging offenses prosecutable by the District of Columbia and by the United States may be joined for trial if the offenses charged therein could have been joined in the same indictment. Such prosecution may be conducted either solely by the Corporation Counsel or his assistants or solely by the United States attorney or his assistants if the other prosecuting authority consents.

(f) If in any case any question shall arise as to whether, under this section, the prosecution should be conducted by the Corporation Counsel or by the United States attorney, the presiding judge shall forthwith, either on his own motion or upon suggestion of the Corporation Counsel or the United States attorney, certify the case to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, which court shall hear and determine the question in a summary way. In every such case the defendant or defendants shall have the right to be heard in the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. The decision of such court shall be final. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 604.)

Duties of corporation counsel, see § 1-301.

NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER PRESENT LAW

United States Attorney

United States, through the United States attorney, and not the District of Columbia, through corporation counsel, is the proper prosecutive authority for alleged violation of section 22-3111 prescribing maximum fine of $500, or imprisonment for not more than six months, or both, for disorderly and unlawful conduct in or about public buildings and public grounds belonging to the United States within the District. District of Columbia v. C. Ackerman (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 24).

Use by the United States attorney of a document entitled "Summons", which notifies the recipient to appear for an interview in office of United States attorney, is an improper usurpation of judicial power since United States attorney does not possess the subpoena power. United States v. C. Thomas (1970, 320 F. Supp. 527).

Advisory opinions on appeal

Where Court of General Sessions of the District of Columbia granted motion to dismiss disorderly conduct charge on several grounds but subsequently vacated dismissal with respect to jurisdictional ground only and question of prosecutorial authority was certified to Court of Appeals, any action Court of Appeals might take on certified question could not alter dismissal of charges and hence certificate was dismissed. District of Columbia v. M. S. Barry et al. (1967, 387 F. 2d 860, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 295).

Certification by judge

Where question as to proper prosecuting authority as between District of Columbia Corporation Counsel and United States Attorney is raised, the court must certify question to Court of Appeals for District of Columbia, and Municipal Court of Appeals was required to reverse action of Municipal Court in dismissing informations brought by Corporation Counsel after ruling that United States Attorney was proper prosecuting authority and the court would remand with instructions to reinstate informations and to certify questions to Court of Appeals.

District of Columbia v. Moody, Hill & Hamilton (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 175 A. 2d 782).

Defendant cannot compel certification to court of appeals. "We think the language used means that whenever the judge or either of the officials named shall entertain a doubt as to who should conduct the prosecution, the question shall be certified to this court, and not otherwise. * * * If it is not so certified it becomes part of his regular defense." Mullowny v. Mowatt (1915, 43 App. D.C. 49).

Corporation Counsel's authority to prosecute

Under statute restricting corporation counsel's authority to cases in which punishment is fine only or imprisonment not to exceed one year, corporation counsel lacked authority to initiate prosecution for disorderly conduct which was punishable by fine of not more than $250 or imprisonment of not more than 90 days, or both. District of Columbia v. Mark Grimes (1968, 404 F. 2d 1337, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 360).

Evidence

A person cannot be convicted of one offense by proof that he committed another. Posey v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A. 2d 300).

Evidence of a separate offense other than one for which accused is on trial is admissible as an exception to the general rule, when the several offenses are so closely connected in time and locality as to be but parts of a single continuing transaction. Id.

Indictment

Indictment was not vitiated by presence of assistant to Attorney-General in grand jury room in oil lease case. United States v. Fall (1940, 10 F. 2d 648, 56 App. D.C. 83). See, also, United States v. Doheny (1940, 10 F. 2d 651, 56 App. D.C. 86).

Prosecution by Corporation Counsel

Informations charging disorderly conduct were properly prosecuted by the Corporation Counsel on behalf of the District of Columbia even though the informations charged an offense punishable by a fine or by imprisonment, or both. Smith v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 219 A. 2d 842).

The making of false statement of lien under oath in application for certificate or duplicate certificate of title for motor vehicle in District of Columbia must be prosecuted by corporation counsel, under Motor Vehicle Lien Law, § 40-714. Shelton v. United States (1948, 165 F. 2d 241, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 32).

All traffic violations should be prosecuted by information filed by corporation counsel. Persham v. United States (1939, 104 F. 2d 249, 70 App. D.C. 116).

Under this section Congress intended that all prosecutions for violations of § 40-608, should be at instance of corporation counsel and in name of District of Columbia. District of Columbia v. Moyer (1938, 93 F. 2d 527, 68 App. D.C. 98).

Prosecutions of street railways under section 16 of the Act of May 23, 1908 (35 Stat. 246) (see §§ 44-202, 44-203, 44-206, 44-207) should be conducted by the corporation counsel in the name of the District of Columbia. United States v. Capital Trac. Co. (1912, 38 App. D.C. 469).

Prosecution by United States Attorney

United States Attorney for District of Columbia rather than corporation counsel for District was the attorney who should prosecute offense of destroying private property in violation of the District of Columbia Code, where the offense was punishable by fine not to exceed $100, or imprisonment not to exceed six months, or both. District of Columbia v. Moody, Hill and Hamilton (1962, 304 F. 2d 943, 113 U.S. App. D.C. 67).

Prosecution for violation of § 22-2701 rendering it unlawful to invite, entice or persuade any person fifteen years of age or over for purposes of prostitution or any other immoral or lewd purpose, should be conducted by United States attorney in name of and for benefit of United States, since offense is punishable by both fine and imprisonment. United States v. Paul Strothers (1956, 228 F. 2d 34, 97 U.S. App. D.C. 63).

Prosecution in District of Columbia for second-degree murder was properly conducted in name of the United States rather than in name of District of Columbia.

Morton v. Welch (C.C.A. Va. 1947, 162 F. 2d 840, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 44, 332 U.S. 779, 92 L. Ed. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1498, 334 U.S. 848, 92 L. Ed. 1771).

Prosecutions for refilling registered containers under 1901 Code § 878c (§ 48-303), should be conducted by the district attorney in the name of the United States. District of Columbia v. Simpson (1913, 40 App. D.C. 498).

Corporation counsel "has no authority to prosecute offenses where the maximum punishment may be both a fine and imprisonment." Id.

Prosecutions of bucket-shops under D.C. Code of 1901 § 869a (§ 22-1509) et seq. should be in the name of the United States. United States v. Cella (1911, 37 App. D.C. 423, certiorari denied 32 S. Ct. 526, 223 U.S. 728, 56 L. Ed. 633).

§ 23-102. Abandonment of prosecution; enlargement of time for taking action

If any person charged with a criminal offense shall have been committed or held to bail to await the action of the grand jury and within nine months thereafter the grand jury shall not have taken action on the case, either by ignoring the charge or by returning an indictment, the prosecution of such charge shall be deemed to have been abandoned and the accused shall be set free or his bail discharged, as the case may be: but, the court having jurisdiction to try the offense for which the person has been committed, when practicable and upon good cause shown in writing and upon due notice to the accused, may from time to time enlarge the time for the taking action in such case by the grand jury. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 605.)

Indictment after 9-month-period

By this section prosecution of the offense is not finally barred so that accused may not be held to answer upon an indictment found after the 9-month period within which the grand jury may act has elapsed. United States v. Cadarr (1905, 25 S. Ct. 487, 197 U.S. 475, 49 L. Ed. 842). See, also, Arnstein v. United States (1924, 296 F. 946, 54 App. D.C. 199, certiorari denied 44 S. Ct. 454, 264 U.S. 595, 68 L. Ed. 867).

Release of prisoners

This is not a statute of limitations. "The result of the failure to prosecute has reference solely to the right in the pending prosecution to be freed, if imprisoned, or released from bail, if under bond." United States v. Cadarr (1905, 25 S. Ct. 487, 197 U.S. 475, 49 L. Ed. 842).

§ 23-103. Statements prior to sentence

Before imposing sentence the court may disclose to the defendant's counsel and to the prosecuting attorney, but not to one and not the other, all or part of any pre-sentencing report submitted to the court in the case. The court also prior to imposing sentence shall afford counsel an opportunity to speak on behalf of the defendant and shall address the defendant personally and ask him if he wishes to make a statement in his own behalf and to present any information in mitigation of punishment. At any time when the defendant or his counsel addresses the court on the sentence to be imposed, the prosecuting attorney shall, if he wishes, have an equivalent opportunity to address the court and to make a recommendation to the court on the sentence to be imposed and to present information in support of his recommendation. Such information as the defendant or his counsel or the prosecuting attorney may present shall at all times be subject to the applicable rules of mutual discovery. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 605.)

§ 23-104. Appeals by United States and District of Columbia

(a) (1) The United States or the District of Columbia may appeal an order, entered before the trial of a person charged with a criminal offense, which directs the return of seized property, suppresses evidence, or otherwise denies the prosecutor the use of evidence at trial, if the United States attorney or the Corporation Counsel conducting the prosecution for such violation certifies to the judge who granted such motion that the appeal is not taken for purpose of delay and the evidence is a substantial proof of the charge pending against the defendant.

(2) A motion for return of seized property or to suppress evidence shall be made before trial unless opportunity therefor did not exist or the defendant was not aware of the grounds for the motion.

(b) The United States or the District of Columbia may appeal a ruling made during the trial of a person charged with a criminal offense which suppresses or otherwise denies the prosecutor the use of evidence on the ground that it was invalidly obtained, if the United States attorney or the Corporation Counsel conducting the prosecution for such violation certifies to the judge who made the ruling that the appeal is not taken for purpose of delay and that the evidence is a substantial proof of the charge being tried against the defendant. The trial court shall adjourn the trial until the appeal shall be resolved; except that, if the decision on appeal has not been rendered within the ninety-six-hour period following the adjournment of the trial, the trial shall resume on the next day of regular court business following the expiration of the ninety-six-hour period, and the appeal shall be deemed void and without effect.

(c) The United States or the District of Columbia may appeal an order dismissing an indictment or information or otherwise terminating a prosecution in favor of a defendant or defendants as to one or more counts thereof, except where there is an acquittal on the merits.

(d) The United States or the District of Columbia may appeal any other ruling made during the trial of a person charged with an offense which the United States attorney or the Corporation Counsel certifies as involving a substantial and recurring question of law which requires appellate resolution. Such an appeal may be taken only during the trial and only with leave of the court. The trial court shall adjourn the trial until the appeal shall be resolved; except that, if the decision on appeal has not been rendered within the ninety-six-hour period following the adjournment of the trial, the trial shall resume on the next day of regular court business following the expiration of the ninety-six-hour period, and the appeal shall be deemed void and without effect.

(e) Any appeal taken pursuant to this section either before or during trial shall be expedited. If an appeal is taken pursuant to subsection (b) or (d) during trial, the appellate court shall hear argument on such appeal within forty-eight hours of the ad-journalment of the trial pursuant to that subsection shall dispense with any requirement of written briefs other than the supporting materials previously submitted to the trial court, shall render its decision within forty-eight hours of argument on appeal, and may dispense with the issuance of a written opinion in rendering its decision. Such appeal and decision shall not affect the right of the defendant, in a subsequent appeal from a judgment of conviction, to claim as error reversal by the trial court on remand of a ruling appealed from during trial.

(f) Pending the prosecution and determination of an appeal taken pursuant to this section, the defendant shall be detained or released in accordance with chapter 13 of this title. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 606.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 11-721.

Appeal and error

Where defendant did not move to suppress narcotics paraphernalia, defendant urged no justification for his failure to move to suppress and he did not attempt to show lack of opportunity to raise motion before trial or lack of awareness of grounds for motion before trial, defendant's contention that paraphernalia was obtained as result of illegal search and seizure would not be considered on appeal. G. W. Brown v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 289 A. 2d 891).

In view of defendant's failure to move to suppress narcotics paraphernalia before trial, absent showing of plain error, admission of narcotics paraphernalia into evidence and denial of motion for judgment of acquittal of possession of narcotics paraphernalia were not errors. Id.

Construction

Objective of 1970 amendment granting government right to appeal orders entered prior to trial suppressing evidence is to accord conclusiveness at trial level to pretrial rulings of motion to suppress by equating such rulings with final orders for purposes of appeal, and unless appealed disposition of pretrial motion on suppression issue would seem necessarily binding on trial judge should motion be renewed subsequently. United States v. M. E. Dockery (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 158).

Evidence—Suppression

Although citizen refused to give his name when he told police officers that named person was sitting on porch in certain block, was wearing black shirt, blue knit hat, had artificial leg and had gun in his waistband, officers who found on porch in the described block a sleeping man wearing described clothing and who determined the man had artificial leg, had right to question man and, before questioning, had right to make limited search or frisk to ascertain if he was armed; thus pistol found in his waistband was legally seized and should not have been suppressed. United States v. W. A. Walker (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 376).

Actions of police officer, who had observed the defendant acting somewhat suspiciously while standing among group of people at corner bus stop, in placing his hand on defendant's elbow and saying, "Hold it, sir, could I speak with you a second?", to which defendant's instantaneous reply was, "It's registered, its registered.", following which remark officer asked what was registered and received answer that defendant's pistol was registered, and then conducted search for pistol that he recovered from defendant's person did not amount to an unconstitutional intrusion on defendant's rights against arrest without probable cause. United States v. J. L. Burrell (D.C. App. 1972, 286 A. 2d 845; petition for rehearing en banc denied 288 A. 2d 248).

Heroin found in the defendant's pocket during search incident to an arrest for grand larceny should not have been suppressed on theory that the search which brought heroin to light infringed Fourth Amendment rights.

United States v. C. E. Bynum (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 649).

Jencks Act

Under Jencks Act providing that when witness has testified on direct examination in trial of case defense may obtain from Government any statement or report from such witness which is relevant to subject matter of testimony of that witness, after Government witness had testified on direct examination in hearing on motion to suppress evidence, Government is required to furnish the statement or report made by such witness in accordance with defense demand with names and addresses of Government witnesses not testifying at hearing excised or suffer the striking of the testimony of the witness. United States v. M. E. Dockery (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 158).

Motion to suppress evidence

Fact that defendant's conviction of carrying a pistol without a license was void because of failure to obtain his personal waiver of right to trial by jury did not entitle defendant to another hearing on his pretrial motion to suppress. F. Payne, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 292 A. 2d 800).

Addition of provision to rule for motion to suppress evidence obtained by unlawful search and seizure requiring that motion be made before trial unless opportunity therefore did not exist or the defendant was not aware of grounds for the motion is intended to place further restriction upon manner in which search and seizure issues can be raised. J. L. Young v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 284 A. 2d 671).

Admission into evidence of two coats that were in paper bag defendant had handed to woman companion when police officers asked defendant to come over to police car was not "plain error" such as would provide ground for reversal in absence of motion to exclude the evidence in trial court. Id.

Inasmuch as defense counsel might have concluded that evidence to support motion to suppress was lacking, counsel was not negligent in failing to raise wrongful seizure issue with respect to stolen property taken from the defendant prior to his arrest. Id.

When a pretrial motion to suppress has been heard and decided, that decision becomes the law of the case and only if new grounds, including new facts, are advanced that the defendant could not reasonably have been aware of may a trial judge entertain a renewed motion to suppress. L. A. Jenkins v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 284 A. 2d 460).

Where the arresting officers had knowledge that no one had owner's permission to occupy particular vacant apartment, officers observed broken lock, damaged door panel and the opened door of the apartment, through which the defendant and companion could be seen, officers had probable cause to believe that the defendant and his companion had made unlawful entry, officers' entry into apartment without warrant to effect arrest was justified and search of the premises was valid as incident to lawful arrest. C. Jones, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 282 A. 2d 561).

Motions to suppress evidence should be heard during trial only in the most exceptional cases. J. Bailey v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 279 A. 2d 508).

Appeal by United States

Once weapon was seen, police had no alternative but to seize it for their protection, and validity of the seizure does not depend on failure to find or seize property described in warrant or failure to specify pistol in warrant or failure to make subsequent inventory and return on warrant. United States v. D. E. Yates (D.C. App. 1971, 279 A. 2d 516).

Since the trial court granted motion to suppress narcotics seized in course of on-the-street encounter before all the evidence had been presented, and testimony of police officer who approached passenger side of automobile where defendant was sitting was not taken, and during cross-examination of officer who did testify court interrupted with comments and leading questions, the government was deprived of fair hearing. United States v. J. F. Crickenberger (D.C. App. 1971, 275 A. 2d 232).

An appeal by the United States from an order granting motion to suppress a pistol, the Court reversed and held that where the defendant was acting in a suspicious manner outside store, officers who were at store to investigate earlier robbery acted reasonably in asking defendant for identification and in seizing pistol as defendant disclosed its presence in the form of a bulge under his waistband while pulling his coat aside in an apparent effort to reach toward his rear pocket and, therefore, the pistol was admissible in prosecution for carrying a pistol without a license. United States v. L. T. Lee (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 566).

In District of Columbia criminal appeals, the government is restricted as is the defendant, though this does not mean that United States cannot appeal from final decision unless opposite decision would also have been final; and government may appeal only from an order against it which terminates a prosecution or makes a decision whose distinct or plenary character meets the standards of precedents applicable to finality problems in all federal courts. Carroll v. United States (1957, 77 S. Ct. 1332, 354 U.S. 394, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1442).

In view of this section giving government same right of appeal in criminal prosecution as is given to defendant, government's right of appeal is determined by 18 U.S.C. § 3731 giving Courts of Appeals jurisdiction of appeals from all "final" decisions of district courts of United States. United States v. Cefaratti (1953, 202 F. 2d 13, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 297, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 646, 345 U.S. 907, 97 L. Ed. 1343).

An order that does not terminate an action but is, on the contrary, made in the course of an action, has the finality that is required for appeal under 28 U.S.C. § 1291 governing appellate jurisdiction of Courts of Appeals, if (1) it has a final and irreparable effect on the rights of the parties, being a final disposition of a claimed right; (2) it is too important to be denied review; and (3) claimed right is not an ingredient of cause of action and does not require consideration with it. Id.

United States may appeal cases and it need not be taken directly to the Supreme Court. United States v. Burroughs (1933, 65 F. 2d 796, 62 App. D.C. 163, affirmed in part 54 S. Ct. 287, 290 U.S. 534, 78 L. Ed. 484).

Appeal to circuit court

Where the trial court's decision is one arresting a judgment of conviction in a criminal case, it is not appealable unless such decision is for insufficiency of the indictment and based upon the invalidity or construction of the statutes, in which event, the appeal is taken directly to the Supreme Court. Accordingly, the Government should have appealed this case to the Supreme Court and we must certify the case to that court. United States v. Waters (1949, 175 F. 2d 340, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 127).

Arrest of judgment of conviction

Where the trial court's decision was one arresting a judgment of conviction in a criminal case, it is not appealable unless such decision was for insufficiency of the indictment and based upon the invalidity or construction of the statutes, in which event, the appeal is taken directly to the Supreme Court. Accordingly, the Government should have appealed this case to the Supreme Court and the case must be certified to that court. United States v. Waters (1949, 175 F. 2d 340, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 127).

Certification to Supreme Court

In this case the Supreme Court held that certification to it under the Federal Criminal Appeals Act (18 U.S.C. 3731) was not proper since (1) the Government's appeal to the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia circuit from dismissal of indictment by a District Court in the District of Columbia was not pursuant to that Act but rather expressly pursuant to this section, which contains no provision allowing transfer to the Supreme Court, and (2) the Court of Appeals made no determination that it lacked jurisdiction to hear the Government's appeal under this section; and returned the case to the Court of Appeals for further proceedings. United States v. P. E. Sweet (1970, 90 S. Ct. 1958, 399 U.S. 517).

Direct appeal to Supreme Court

Once an appeal is properly before the Supreme Court under the Criminal Appeals Act (18 U.S.C. 3731), the Court will not refuse to consider it, despite contention that it should do so as matter of sound judicial administration, even if appeal might have been taken to another court. United States v. M. Vuitch (1971, 91 S. Ct. 1294, 402 U.S. 62).

Double jeopardy

Dismissal of embezzlement prosecution for "want of prosecution" was not equivalent to a finding that defendant had been denied his constitutional right to speedy trial. J. P. Mann v. United States (1962, 304 F. 2d 394, 113 U.S. App. D.C. 27).

Where guilt of defendant, as a matter of law and fact, is submitted to Municipal Court of the District of Columbia, an appeal by the United States is not permitted, since defendant cannot be retried for the same offense, and therefore, even if the ruling of the trial court were found to be erroneous, the judgment could not be vacated and a new trial ordered. United States v. Martin (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 651).

Evidence—Admissibility

Since the police officers had what they believed was credible information that defendant who fit description given officers had a gun in his pocket, since defendant was reluctant to remove his hand from his pocket, and since there was obvious large bulge in pocket when he did remove his hand, officers were justified in conducting a limited protective search for weapons, and removal of currency and numbers slips by officer who claimed to have found gun was reasonable and fact numbers slips and money rather than gun were removed from pocket did not render those items inadmissible. United States v. M. Dowling (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 406).

Finality of decisions

The underlying concepts of finality of decisions as prerequisite to appeal are the same under 28 U.S.C. § 1291, defining appellate jurisdiction of Courts of Appeals, as the successor to applicable provision of 1901 District of Columbia Code, as to such section as successor to the nationally applicable appeal provisions of the Judicial Code. Carroll v. United States (1957, 77 S. Ct. 1332, 354, 1 L. Ed. 2d 1442).

In District of Columbia criminal cases, the government is not permitted to appeal where decision against it may have some characteristics of finality, yet does not either terminate the prosecution or pertaining to an independent peripheral matter such as would be appealable in other federal courts. Id.

An order entered after indictment and before trial, granting motion to suppress the only substantial evidence in support of counts charging purchase and concealment of narcotics, was an appealable "final decision". United States v. Cefaratti (1953, 202 F. 2d 13, 91 U.S. App. D.C. 297, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 646, 345 U.S. 907, 97 L. Ed. 1343).

Judgment of acquittal

Where it was clear from repeated statements of trial judge in prosecution for having possession of a dangerous weapon, that the trial judge was not ruling on the information as such but on the ultimate guilt of the defendant under agreed statement of facts, and trial judge made an entry granting motion of defendant to dismiss and discharging defendant, such action was equivalent to the granting of a motion for judgment of acquittal, and therefore the United States had no right of appeal to Municipal Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia. United States v. Martin (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 651).

Jurisdiction of court of appeals

The appellate jurisdiction of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in criminal cases is not affected by the act of 1907. United States v. Burroughs (1933, 53 S. Ct. 574, 289 U.S. 159, 77 L. Ed. 1096).

Order quashing indictment

Government may appeal from order quashing indictment and discharging defendant without day. United States v. Cadarr (1904, 24 App. D.C. 143 reversed on other grounds 197 U.S. 478, 49 L. Ed. 842).

Order quashing warrant of arrest

Under § 11-772 [now § 17-301] providing that any party aggrieved by any final order or judgment of the Municipal Court for the District of Columbia may appeal to the Municipal Court of Appeals, such court has jurisdiction of government's appeal from an order of the municipal court for such district quashing a warrant of arrest in a disorderly house case, in view of this section entitling the government to appeal in criminal prosecutions. United States v. Basiliko (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 35 A. 2d 185).

An order quashing a warrant of arrest in a disorderly house case was appealable. Id.

Order sustaining demurrer

Government may appeal from order sustaining demurrer to indictment for violation of 1901 code, § 869a et seq. (§ 22-1509). United States v. Cella (1911, 37 App. D.C. 423, certiorari denied 32 S. Ct. 526, 233 U.S. 728, 56 L. Ed. 633).

Quashed information

The United States may appeal from an order of the Municipal Court for the District of Columbia quashing an information for failure to state a crime, and discharging the defendant. United States v. Martin (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 81 A. 2d 651).

Verdicts

This section does not authorize an appeal by the government from a verdict of not guilty in a criminal case, because only the determination of a moot question is involved, which is not a judicial function and cannot be required by Congress of a federal court. United States v. Evans (1907, 30 App. D.C. 58, certiorari quashed 29 S. Ct. 58, 213 U.S. 297, 53 L. Ed. 803).

Court of appeals has no power to review by writ or error a judgment of not guilty rendered by the police court. District of Columbia v. Burns (1908, 32 App. D.C. 203).

This section provided that in criminal prosecutions the United States or the District should have the same right of appeal as the defendant had, including a bill of exceptions, but provided that if there was error in the rulings of the court during the trial, a verdict for defendant should not be set aside. District of Columbia v. Kendall (1927, 20 F. 2d 287, 57 App. D. C. 271).

§ 23-105. Challenges to jurors

(a) In a trial for an offense punishable by death, each side is entitled to twenty peremptory challenges. In a trial for an offense punishable by imprisonment for more than one year, each side is entitled to ten peremptory challenges. In all other criminal cases, each side is entitled to three peremptory challenges. If there is more than one defendant, or if a case is prosecuted both by the United States and by the District of Columbia, the court may allow additional peremptory challenges and permit them to be exercised separately or jointly, but in no event shall one side be entitled to more peremptory challenges than the other.

(b) The court may direct that jurors in addition to the regular jury be called and impaneled to sit as alternate jurors. In addition to those otherwise allowed, each side is entitled to one peremptory challenge if one or two alternate jurors are to be impaneled, to two peremptory challenges if three or four alternate jurors are to be impaneled, and to three peremptory challenges if five or six alternate jurors are to be impaneled.

(c) Any juror or alternate juror may be challenged for cause.

(d) No verdict shall be set aside for any cause which might be alleged as ground for challenge of a juror before the jury is sworn, except when the objection to the juror is that he had a bias against the defendant such as would have disqualified him, such disqualification was not known to or suspected by the defendant or his counsel before the juror was sworn, and the basis for such disqualification was the subject of examination or request for examination of the prospective jurors by or on request of the defendant. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210 (a), title II, 84 Stat. 607.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW*Action by defendant

Action required to be taken by a "defendant" under provisions of District of Columbia Code relating to criminal procedure, where an accused has counsel, is to be taken by the counsel rather than by the accused personally. Hensley v. United States (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 605, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 242).

Cases consolidated for trial

When cases are consolidated for trial under U. S. R. S. § 1024, defendant is entitled, in cases of felony, to 10 peremptory challenges only Miller v. United States (38 App. D.C. 361, 40 L.R.A., N.S., 973). See, also, Nestlerode v. United States (1941, 122 F. 2d 56, 74 App. D.C. 276).

Constitutional law

There is nothing in the Constitution which requires the Congress to grant peremptory challenges to defendants in criminal cases, and regulations are left to common law or enactments of Congress. United States v. Wood (1936, 57 S. Ct. 177, 299 U.S. 123, 81 L. Ed. 78, rehearing denied 57 S. Ct. 319, 299 U.S. 624, 81 L. Ed. 459).

While accused has a constitutional right to a speedy trial by an impartial jury, it does not follow that the rejection of qualified persons for insufficient cause would deprive appellant of that right. It is significant in this respect that although appellant was entitled to ten peremptory challenges he had not used any of them. Shettel v. United States (1940, 118 F. 2d 34, 72 App. D.C. 250).

Exclusion of Negroes

Fact that 19 members of jury panel selected in prosecution of three Negroes jointly indicted on charge of murder in perpetration of robbery were members of Negro race indicated that Negroes had not been systematically excluded from panel in violation of Fifth Amendment, and defendants could not complain that thereafter Government peremptorily challenged every Negro juror who had been called to sit in the panel. Hall v. United States (1948, 168 F. 2d 161, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 166, 4 A.L.R. 2d 1193, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1509, 334 U.S. 853, 92 L. Ed. 1775, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 9, 335 U.S. 839, 93 L. Ed. 391).

Joint defendants

Defendant was not entitled to three peremptory challenges in selecting jury, in addition to those allowed codefendant; the defendants were properly treated as one defendant in allowance and exercise of challenges. S. Yankowitz v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 182 A. 2d 889).

Five defendants jointly indicted for conspiracy are entitled to only 10 peremptory challenges to be shared between them. Lorenz v. United States (1904, 24 App. D.C. 337, certiorari denied 25 S. Ct. 796, 196 U.S. 640, 49 L. Ed. 631).

New trial

This section "gives no new right to the defendant, and adds nothing to the discretionary powers which the courts have always exercised in such cases. If not declaratory merely of a long-existing rule of practice, it would seem rather a limitation, than otherwise, of the ordinary discretionary power of the courts to grant new trials." Paolucci v. United States (1907, 30 App. D.C. 217, 12 Ann.

Cas. 920, certiorari denied 28 S. Ct. 568, 208 U.S. 617, 52 L. Ed. 646).

A challenge to the jury panel because it contains names of women, made for first time on motion for new trial, will not be reviewed. Nelson v. United States (1932, 53 F.2d 935, 60 App. D.C. 323).

Purpose

"Peremptory challenges" are exercised by party in rejection, and not in selection of jurors, and is not aimed at disqualification but is exercised upon qualified jurors as a matter of favor to challenger. Hall v. United States (1948, 168 F.2d 161, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 166, 4 A.L.R. 2d 1193, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 1509, 334 U.S. 853, 92 L. Ed. 1775, rehearing denied 69 S. Ct. 9, 335 U.S. 839, 93 L. Ed. 391).

Right to new panel

Defendant charged with adultery is entitled to a new jury panel when it appears that 12 members of the current panel acted as jurors in another case involving the keeping of a disorderly house, in which case it was shown that the defendant frequented that house for immoral purposes. Kleindienst v. United States (1918, 48 App. D.C. 190).

A failure to exhaust the peremptory challenges and to examine the jurors on the voir dire is no waiver of defendant's right to a new panel when such right exists Id.

§ 23-106. Witnesses for defense; fees

The court shall order at any time that a subpoena be issued for service upon a named witness on behalf of a defendant if the defendant makes an application for such an order and makes a satisfactory showing that he is financially unable to pay the fees of the witness and that the presence of the witness is necessary to an adequate defense. If the court orders the subpoena to be issued the costs incurred by the process and the fees of the witness so subpoenaed shall be paid in the same manner in which similar costs and fees are paid in case of a witness subpoenaed in behalf of the prosecuting authority. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 607.)

§ 23-107. Discharge or acquittal of joint defendant during trial in order to be witness

(a) When two or more persons are jointly indicted or charged by information, or charged by separate indictments or informations which have been joined for trial, the court may, with the consent of the prosecuting authority, direct that a defendant who has not gone into his defense be discharged so that he may be a witness for the prosecution.

(b) When two or more persons are jointly tried, a person desiring that another defendant testify on his behalf may request a judgment of acquittal on behalf of such defendant, which the court shall consider in the same manner as a motion made by such defendant.

(c) At the request of a defendant who wishes to testify on behalf of another person with whom he is jointly tried, if the evidence against such defendant is sufficient to be submitted to the jury and if such other person consents, the court may submit the case concerning such defendant to the jury separately so that his testimony may not be considered against him by such jury.

(d) A discharge granted pursuant to subsection (a), or an acquittal secured pursuant to subsection (b) or (c), shall be a bar to another prosecution for the same offense of the defendant so discharged or acquitted. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 607.)

Construction

This section, authorizing court to discharge defendant desiring to become witness for government, is not source of trial judge's authority to dismiss defendant so that he may be witness against his former codefendants, but is an immunity statute enacted for benefit and protection of defendant who is discharged for that purpose before he has been in jeopardy. Carrado v. United States (1954, 210 F.2d 712, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 183, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 874, 347 U.S. 1018, 98 L. Ed. 1140)

As used in this section granting immunity to defendant discharged, before he has "gone into his defense", for purpose of becoming government witness, quoted words mean "before he has been put in jeopardy", and statute's draftsman intended it to provide immunity from second prosecution for defendant who would not otherwise be entitled to it because he had not been in jeopardy. Id.

Order of discharge

Order of discharge of codefendant in narcotics prosecution upon his entering plea of guilty to another narcotics count was not discharge for purpose of allowing him to give evidence for other parties accused with him such as would have entitled defendant to demand that codefendant be granted immunity and required to testify. J. V. Earl v. United States (1966, 361 F.2d 531, 124 U.S. App. 77).

Although government might have granted discharged codefendant immunity and required him to testify, government's refusal to do so did not deny defendant fair trial. Id.

§ 23-108. Depositions

(a) If a material witness for either the prosecution or the defendant resides more than twenty-five miles from the place of holding court, is sick or infirm, or is about to leave the District of Columbia, and the prosecution or the defendant applies in writing to the court for a commission to examine such witness, the court may grant the commission, and enter an order stating for what length of time notice shall be given to the other party before such witness shall be examined. At or before the time fixed in the notice, when the examination is upon written interrogatories, the other party may file cross-interrogatories. When the examination is conducted orally, the other party may cross-examine the deponent. If the other party fails to file written interrogatories or fails to attend an oral examination, the clerk shall file the following interrogatories:

"(1) Are all your statements in the foregoing answers made from your own personal knowledge? If not, show what is stated upon information and give its source.

"(2) State everything you know in addition to what is stated in your above answers concerning this case favorable to either the prosecution or the defendant."

(b) The court may order in any case that the examination be conducted orally.

(c) The commission shall issue from the clerk's office, the examination of the witnesses shall be made and certified, and the return thereof made in the same manner as in civil cases, and unimportant irregularities or errors in the proceedings under the commission shall not cause the deposition to be excluded where no substantial prejudice can be wrought to the prosecution or the defendant by such irregularities or errors.

(d) Copies of the depositions or answers to interrogatories shall be made available to all of the parties upon the completion of the examination. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 608.)

In general

Action required to be taken by a "defendant" under provisions of District of Columbia Code relating to criminal procedure, where an accused has counsel, is to be taken by the counsel rather than by the accused personally. Hensley v. United States (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 605, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 242).

§ 23-109. Powers of investigators assigned to United States attorney

Any special investigator appointed by the Attorney General and assigned to the United States attorney for the District shall have authority to execute all lawful writs, process, and orders issued under authority of the United States, and command all necessary assistance to execute his duties, and shall have the same powers to make arrests as are possessed by members of the Metropolitan Police Department of the District of Columbia. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 608.)

§ 23-110. Remedies on motion attacking sentence

(a) A prisoner in custody under sentence of the Superior Court claiming the right to be released upon the ground that (1) the sentence was imposed in violation of the Constitution of the United States or the laws of the District of Columbia, (2) the court was without jurisdiction to impose the sentence, (3) the sentence was in excess of the maximum authorized by law, (4) the sentence is otherwise subject to collateral attack, may move the court to vacate, set aside, or correct the sentence.

(b) A motion for such relief may be made at any time.

(c) Unless the motion and files and records of the case conclusively show that the prisoner is entitled to no relief, the court shall cause notice thereof to be served upon the prosecuting authority, grant a prompt hearing thereon, determine the issues, and make findings of fact and conclusions of law with respect thereto. If the court finds that (1) the judgment was rendered without jurisdiction, (2) the sentence imposed was not authorized by law or is otherwise open to collateral attack, (3) there has been such a denial or infringement of the constitutional rights of the prisoner as to render the judgment vulnerable to collateral attack, the court shall vacate and set the judgment aside and shall discharge the prisoner, resentence him, grant a new trial, or correct the sentence, as may appear appropriate.

(d) A court may entertain and determine the motion without requiring the production of the prisoner at the hearing.

(e) The court shall not be required to entertain a second or successive motion for similar relief on behalf of the same prisoner.

(f) An appeal may be taken to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals from the order entered on the motion as from a final judgment on application for a writ of habeas corpus.

(g) An application for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of a prisoner who is authorized to apply for relief by motion pursuant to this section shall not be entertained by the Superior Court or by any Federal or State court if it appears that the applicant has failed to make a motion for relief under this section or that the Superior Court has denied him relief, unless it also appears that the remedy by motion is inadequate or ineffective to test the legality of his detention. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 608.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Overriding intent of Congress in enacting the District of Columbia Court Reform and Criminal Procedure Act of 1970 is to create largely independent local court system. J. Bland v. C. M. Rodgers (1971, 332 F. Supp. 989).

The District of Columbia Court Reform and Criminal Procedure Act of 1970 extinguishes the traditional authority of federal court to review local judicial actions in the District of Columbia by the issuance of writs of habeas corpus. Id.

Record on appeal

It would not be appropriate for the Court of Appeals to treat contention, based on material outside the record on appeal, that erroneous information was given at sentencing proceeding by the prosecution; such matter would be appropriate for motion to vacate or to reduce sentence, which could be filed in the trial court presently or after disposition of the appeal. J. Terrell v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 860; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1398, 410 U.S. 938).

Timeliness

Motion for new trial in interest of justice filed more than five days after verdict was untimely. J. Williams v. United States (1972, 295 A. 2d 503).

§ 23-111. Proceedings to establish previous convictions

(a) (1) No person who stands convicted of an offense under the laws of the District of Columbia shall be sentenced to increased punishment by reason of one or more previous convictions, unless prior to trial or before entry of a plea of guilty, the United States attorney or the Corporation Counsel, as the case may be, files an information with the clerk of the court, and serves a copy of such information on the person or counsel for the person, stating in writing the previous convictions to be relied upon. Upon a showing by the Government that facts regarding previous convictions could not with due diligence be obtained prior to trial or before entry of a plea of guilty, the court may postpone the trial or the taking of the plea of guilty for a reasonable period for the purpose of obtaining such facts. Clerical mistakes in the information may be amended at any time prior to the pronouncement of sentence.

(2) An information may not be filed under this section if the increased punishment which may be imposed is imprisonment for a term in excess of three years, unless the person either waived or was afforded prosecution by indictment for the offense for which such increased punishment may be imposed.

(b) If the prosecutor files an information under this section, the court shall, after conviction but before pronouncement of sentence, inquire of the person with respect to whom the information was filed whether he affirms or denies that he has been previously convicted as alleged in the information, and shall inform him that any challenge to a previous conviction which is not made before sentence is imposed may not thereafter be raised to attack the sentence.

(c) (1) If the person denies any allegation of the information of previous conviction, or claims that any conviction alleged is invalid, he shall file a written response to the information. A copy of the response shall be served upon the prosecutor. The court shall hold a hearing to determine any issues raised by the response which would except the person from increased punishment. The failure of the Government to include in the information the complete criminal record of the person or any facts in addition to the convictions to be relied upon shall not constitute grounds for invalidating the notice given in the information required by subsection (a) (1). The hearing shall be before the court without a jury and either party may introduce evidence. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (2) of this subsection, the prosecuting authority shall have the burden of proof beyond a reasonable doubt on any issue of fact. At the request of either party, the court shall enter findings of fact and conclusions of law.

(2) A person claiming that a conviction alleged in the information was obtained in violation of the Constitution of the United States shall set forth his claim, and the factual basis therefor, with particularity in his response to the information. The person shall have the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence on any issue of fact raised by the response. Any challenge to a previous conviction, not raised by response to the information before an increased sentence is imposed in reliance thereon, shall be waived unless good cause be shown for failure to make a timely challenge.

(d) (1) If the person files no response to the information, or if the court determines, after hearing, that the person is subject to increased punishment by reason of previous convictions, the court shall proceed to impose sentence upon him as provided by law.

(2) If the court determines that the person has not been convicted as alleged in the information, that a conviction alleged in the information is invalid, or that the person is otherwise not subject to an increased sentence as a matter of law, the court shall, at the request of the prosecutor, postpone sentence to allow an appeal from that determination. If no such request is made, the court shall impose sentence as provided by law. The person may appeal from an order postponing sentence as if sentence had been pronounced and a final judgment of conviction entered. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210 (a), title II, 84 Stat. 609.)

Construction

In imposing a more severe sentence on conviction of carrying a pistol without a license where defendant has suffered a prior similar conviction or a prior felony conviction, the mandatory statutory procedure must be followed. C. D. Coleman v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 896).

§ 23-112. Consecutive and concurrent sentences

A sentence imposed on a person for conviction of an offense shall, unless the court imposing such sentence expressly provides otherwise, run consecutively to any other sentence imposed on such person for conviction of an offense, whether or not the offense (1) arises out of another transaction, or (2) arises out of the same transaction and requires proof of a fact which the other does not. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 610.)

SUBCHAPTER I.—GENERAL PROVISIONS

§ 23-301. Prosecution by indictment or information

An offense prosecuted in the Superior Court which may be punished by death shall be prosecuted by indictment returned by a grand jury. An offense which may be punished by imprisonment for a term exceeding one year shall be prosecuted by indictment, but it may be prosecuted by information if the defendant, after he has been advised of the nature of the charge and of his rights, waives in open court prosecution by indictment. Any other offense may be prosecuted by indictment or by information. An information subscribed by the proper prosecuting officer may be filed without leave of court. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 611.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

See note preceding section 23-101.

SUBCHAPTER II.—JOINDER

§ 23-311. Joinder of offenses and of defendants

(a) Two or more offenses may be charged in the same indictment or information in a separate count for each offense if the offenses charged, whether felonies or misdemeanors or both, are of the same or similar character or are based on the same act or transaction or on two or more acts or transactions connected together or constituting parts of a common scheme or plan.

(b) Two or more offenses may be charged in the same indictment or information as provided in subsection (a) even though one or more is in violation of the laws of the United States and another is in violation of the laws applicable exclusively to the District of Columbia and may be prosecuted as provided in section 11-502(3).

(c) Two or more defendants may be charged in the same indictment or information if they are alleged to have participated in the same act or transaction or in the same series of acts or transactions constituting an offense or offenses. Such defendants may be charged in one or more counts together or separately and all of the defendants need not be charged in each count. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 611.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

See note preceding section 23-101.

Joinder of offenses

Joinder of charges arising from three separate armed robberies was proper where the evidence for each of the crimes was relevant to establish common scheme and plan and went to issue of identity, the evidence as to each crime was clearly separable and distinct and not likely to cause confusion, and there was no showing that any prejudice resulted from refusing to grant severance. United States v. D. O. Miller (1971, 449 F. 2d 974, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 312).

§ 23-312. Joinder of indictments or informations for trial

The court may order two or more indictments or informations or both to be tried together if the offenses, and the defendants if there is more than one, could have been joined in a single indictment or information. The procedure shall be the same as if the prosecution were under such single indictment or information. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 611.)

§ 23-313. Relief from prejudicial joinder

If it appears that a defendant or the government is prejudiced by a joinder of offenses or of defendants in an indictment or information or by such joinder for trial together, the court may order an election or separate trials of counts, grant a severance of defendants, or provide whatever other relief justice requires. In ruling on a motion by a defendant for severance the court may order the attorney for the government to deliver to the court for inspection in camera any statements or confessions made by the defendants which the government intends to introduce in evidence at the trial. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 611.)

§ 23-314. Joinder of inconsistent offenses concerning the same property

An indictment or information may contain a count for larceny, a count for obtaining the same property by false pretenses, a count for embezzlement thereof, and a count for receiving or concealing the same property, knowing it to be stolen or embezzled, or any of such counts, and the jury may convict of any of such offenses, and may find any or all of the persons indicted guilty of any of said offenses. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 611.)

False pretenses and embezzlement

A general verdict of guilty on an indictment containing counts for false pretenses and embezzlement is inconsistent, and the rule "to the effect that in a criminal case a general judgment * * * of guilty on each count, cannot be reversed on error if any count is good and is sufficient to support the judgment does not apply." Davis v. United States (1911, 37 App. D.C. 126). See, also, Fulton v. United States (1916, 45 App. D.C. 27).

Larceny and embezzlement

It is not error to refuse to require the government to elect between larceny and embezzlement counts where the same evidence is relied on to support both counts. Means v. United States (1933, 65 F. 2d 206, 62 App. D.C. 118).

SUBCHAPTER III.—SUFFICIENCY

§ 23-321. Description of money

In every indictment or information, except for forgery, in which it is necessary to make an averment as to any money or bank bill or notes, United States Treasury notes, postal and fractional currency, or other bills, bonds, or notes, issued by lawful authority and intended to pass and circulate as money, it shall be sufficient to describe such money, bills, notes, currency, or bonds simply as money, without specifying any particular coin, note, bill, or bond; and such allegation shall be sustained by proof that the accused has stolen or embezzled any amount of coin, or any such note, bill, currency, or bond, although the particular amount or species of such coin, note, bill, currency, or bond be not proved. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 612.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

See note preceding section 23-101.

Purpose

The purpose of this section was to relieve the Government from the necessity of detailed particularization in either allegations or proof of money taken. Neufield v. United States (1941, 118 F. 2d 375, 73 App. D.C. 174, certiorari denied 62 S. Ct. 580, 315 U.S. 798, 86 L. Ed. 1199).

§ 23-322. Intent to defraud

In an indictment or information in which it is necessary to allege an intent to defraud, it shall be sufficient to allege that the party accused did the act complained of with intent to defraud, without alleging an intent to defraud any particular person or body corporate. On the trial of such an indictment or information it shall not be necessary to prove an intent to defraud any particular person, but it shall be sufficient to prove a general intent to defraud. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 612.)

Forgery

Forgery of checks was done with intent to defraud. Easterday v. United States (1923, 292 F. 664, 53 App. D.C. 387, certiorari denied 44 S. Ct. 181, U.S. 719, 68 L. Ed. 523).

§ 23-323. Perjury

In every information or indictment for perjury, it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offense charged upon the defendant, and by what court, or before whom the oath was taken (averring such court, or person or persons, to have a competent authority to administer the same) together with the proper averment or averments to falsify the matter or matters wherein the perjury or perjuries is or are assigned; without setting forth the bill, answer, information, indictment, declaration, or any part of any record of proceeding either in law or equity, other than as aforesaid; and without setting forth the commission or authority of the court, or person or persons before whom the perjury was committed; any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 612.)

Constitutional guarantees

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, count charging that witness perjured himself when he stated that he, while editor of magazine, had not published articles by persons, other than Russians, whom he knew to be Communists violated the First Amendment to the Federal Constitution providing that Congress shall make no law abridging freedom of speech or of the press, and the Sixth Amendment protecting an accused in the right to be informed of nature and cause of the accusation against him. United States v. Lattimore (D.C.D.C. 1953, 112 F. Supp. 507).

Federal rules of criminal procedure

In prosecution for perjury allegedly committed by witness before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee, count of indictment charging that witness lied in denying that he had ever been a sympathizer or promoter of communism or Communist interests, was fatally defective because it did not meet requirements of Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 7, 18 U.S.C. App., requiring that indictment shall be plain, concise and definite written statement of essential acts constituting offense charged. United States v. Lattimore (D.C.D.C. 1953, 112 F. Supp. 507).

Under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 7, 18 U.S.C. App., a general allegation of materiality is sufficient in an indictment for perjury or subornation of perjury without setting forth in detail how and why the particular question addressed to the witness was material. United States v. Meyers (D.C.D.C. 1948, 75 F. Supp. 486, affirmed 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.L.R. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U.S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

Materiality

Indictment charging witness with perjury allegedly committed before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee was not invalid in its entirety because it failed to plead the particulars of materiality of testimony given by witness before committee. United States v. Lattimore (D.C.D.C. 1953, 112 F. Supp. 507).

Perjury indictment setting out in each count a statement allegedly made by defendant in course of testimony before congressional subcommittee, alleging that such statement was false and setting forth what the true facts were and alleging generally that testimony sought to be elicited from defendant was material to the inquiry, was sufficient as against motion to dismiss. United States v. Meyers (D.C.D.C. 1948, 75 F. Supp. 486, affirmed 171 F. 2d 800, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 101, 11 A.L.R. 2d 1, certiorari denied 69 S. Ct. 602, 336 U.S. 912, 93 L. Ed. 1076).

Oath

Failure to set forth person before whom oath was taken together with his authority to administer same was not fatal to perjury indictment, especially in view of rule requiring merely that indictment be plain, concise, and definite written statement of essential facts constituting offense charged and providing that it need not contain any other matter not necessary to such statement. United States v. Young (D.C.D.C. 1953, 113 F. Supp. 20).

Indictment charging alleged perjury by witness before Senate Internal Security Subcommittee was not invalid because it failed to allege name of Senator administering oath to witness. United States v. Lattimore (D.C.D.C. 1953, 112 F. Supp. 507).

In every information or indictment for subornation of perjury, or for corrupt bargaining or contracting with others to commit perjury, it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offense charged upon the defendant, without setting forth the bill, answer, information, indictment, declaration, or any part of any record or proceeding either in law or equity, and without setting forth the commission or authority of the court, or person or persons before whom the perjury was committed, or was agreed or promised to be committed, any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 612.)

SUBCHAPTER II.—SEARCH WARRANTS

SUBCHAPTER REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This subchapter is referred to in sections 23-501, 23-591.

§ 23-521. Nature and issuance of search warrants

(a) Under circumstances described in this subchapter, a judicial officer may issue a search warrant upon application of a law enforcement officer or prosecutor. A warrant may authorize a search to be conducted anywhere in the District of Columbia and may be executed pursuant to its terms.

(b) A search warrant may direct a search of any or all of the following:

- (1) one or more designated or described places or premises;
- (2) one or more designated or described vehicles;
- (3) one or more designated or described physical objects; or
- (4) designated persons.

(c) A search warrant may direct the seizure of designated property or kinds of property, and the seizure may include, to such extent as is reasonable under all the circumstances, taking physical or other impressions, or performing chemical, scientific, or other tests or experiments of, from, or upon designated premises, vehicles, or objects.

(d) Property is subject to seizure pursuant to a search warrant if there is probable cause to believe that it—

- (1) is stolen or embezzled;
- (2) is contraband or otherwise illegally possessed;
- (3) has been used or is possessed for the purpose of being used, or is designed or intended to be used, to commit or conceal the commission of a criminal offense; or
- (4) constitutes evidence of or tends to demonstrate the commission of an offense or the identity of a person participating in the commission of an offense.

(e) A search warrant may be addressed to a specific law enforcement officer or to any classification of officers of the Metropolitan Police Department of the District of Columbia or other agency authorized to make arrests or execute process in the District of Columbia.

(f) A search warrant shall contain—

(1) the name of the issuing court, the name and signature of the issuing judicial officer, and the date of issuance;

(2) if the warrant is addressed to a specific officer, the name of that officer, otherwise, the classifications of officers to whom the warrant is addressed;

(3) a designation of the premises, vehicles, objects, or persons to be searched, sufficient for certainty of identification;

(4) a description of the property whose seizure is the object of the warrant;

(5) a direction that the warrant be executed during the hours of daylight or, where the judicial officer has found cause therefor, including one of the grounds set forth in section 23-522(c) (1), an authorization for execution at any time of day or night;

(6) where the judicial officer has found cause therefor, including one of the grounds set forth in subparagraph (A), (B), or (D) of section 23-591(c) (2), an authorization that the executing officer may break and enter the dwelling house or other building or vehicles to be searched without giving notice of his identity and purpose; and

(7) a direction that the warrant and an inventory of any property seized pursuant thereto be returned to the court on the next court day after its execution.

Affidavit—Sufficiency

Failure of search warrant affidavit to set forth factual circumstances from which magistrate could appraise informant's credibility and to state circumstances upon which informant based his conclusion was not fatal where, according to affidavits, information triggered investigation by officers who set out details and results of their investigation of gambling and lottery law violations. United States v. S. A. Berry (1972, 463 F. 2d 1278, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 187).

Search warrant affidavit reciting uncorroborated tip that first person was picking up numbers and taking them to address of second person, a well-known gambler, together with investigative officers' observations of comings and goings and delivery of "small package," all in accordance with officers' knowledge as to operation of numbers game, was sufficient to support warrant for search, leading to lottery and gambling charges, where affidavit recited that participants had gambling law convictions and that premises had been established by police records to have recently housed gambling operation, although it would have been helpful had officers elaborated on modus operandi of numbers operation. Id.

Construction

The laws dealing with narcotics and drug problems are controlling over the general search warrant provisions of the United States and District of Columbia Codes. United States v. C. Thomas et al. (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 164; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 341, 448, 409 U.S. 992).

District of Columbia narcotics statute (section 33-414) providing that "the judge or commissioner shall insert a direction in the warrant that it may be served at any time in the day or night," qualifies sections 23-521 to 23-523 permitting a nighttime execution of the search warrant if, and only if, there is an express authorization therefore pursuant to statute; the latter sections are applicable to nonnarcotic cases only. United States v. H. Green (1971, 331 F. Supp. 44).

The search warrant provisions of this section are not inapplicable to search warrants issued in connection with Federal offenses. United States v. L. Gooding (1971, 328 F. Supp. 1005).

Evidence—Suppression

Where none of the grounds set forth in § 23-522 for search warrant authorizing execution at night were included in either application or warrant, search made pursuant to warrant well after ending of daylight hours is invalid and evidence seized is subject to suppression, though warrant was issued in connection with alleged violations of federal narcotics laws. United States v. L. Gooding (1971, 328 F. Supp. 1005).

Nighttime searches

Even though search warrant and supporting affidavit did not comply with the specific provisions of the District of Columbia Code relating to nighttime searches, search warrant, which was issued pursuant to Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act on basis that there was reason to believe premises contained contraband and which permitted day or nighttime execution was valid. United States v. C. Thomas et al. (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 164; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 341, 448, 409 U.S. 992).

Seizure—validity

Once weapon was seen, police had no alternative but to seize it for their protection, and validity of the seizure does not depend on failure to find or seize property described in warrant or failure to specify pistol in warrant or failure to make subsequent inventory and return on warrant. United States v. D. E. Yates (D.C. App. 1971, 279 A. 2d 516).

Sufficiency of affidavit

Averment in affidavit that on two occasions defendant looked about, as if to see "if he was being watched," is entirely conclusory and insufficient to support a probability that defendant was engaged in some sort of illegal conduct. United States v. L. Long (1971, 439 F. 2d 628, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 118).

Affidavit that asserted that two unnamed informants had personal knowledge that defendant was engaged in a numbers operation in apartment of a third party, together with a statement of results of observations of defendant's movements when entering and leaving the apartment, does not contain sufficient corroborative facts, either from informants or from the FBI, to subject defendants to a lawful search, even though there is no dispute as to reliability of the informants. Id.

Sufficiency of warrant

Affidavit which was attached to search warrant and which provided the requisite specificity that the warrant (whose description of subject premises embraced not only the apartment where defendants lived but also another apartment for which there was no probable cause) otherwise lacked was incorporated in the warrant by reference, though the warrant contained no words of incorporation, since statute at the time provided that the "warrant shall have annexed to it, or inserted therein, a copy of the affidavit upon which it is issued." S. H. Moore v. United States (1972, 461 F. 2d 1236, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 150; aff'g 263 A. 2d 652).

In order to determine whether a search warrant was properly issued, only the information submitted to the magistrate may be considered, since it is sufficient that affidavit showed probable cause at time the warrant was issued. United States v. C. E. Ketterman et al (D.C. App. 1971, 276 A. 2d 243).

A search warrant need only identify property with reasonable particularity, and, as to narcotics, a detailed description, such as chemical composition, is unnecessary since a more general description is sufficient to describe and thus limit what the executing officer may seize. Id.

Since the affidavit in support of search warrant stated that reliable informant had been in specified apartment within past 36 hours and had seen narcotics and pistol with specified serial number known to have been stolen, that check with national crime investigating center revealed that described pistol was stolen, and that informant had earlier provided information on narcotics and gun violations which had proven true and reliable, search warrant describing ".38 caliber special pistol and narcotics * * * as set forth in affidavit attached" was sufficiently particular, notwithstanding that warrant, in addition referred to "any other instrumentalities of the crime of Narcotics & Receiving Stolen Property and any other proceeds of the crime of Narcotics & Receiving Stolen Property and property constituting evidence of such crime." Id.

It was not in the interests of justice that Court of Appeals entertain for the first time on appeal objection that warrant authorizing search for and seizure of described clothing worn by defendant at the time of alleged crime did not comply with requirements of a federal rule specifying property for which a search warrant may be issued. W. H. Fuller v. United States (1968, 407 F. 2d 1199, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 264; cert. denied 89 S. Ct. 999, 393 U.S. 1120).

§ 23-522. Applications for search warrants

(a) Each application for a search warrant shall be made in writing upon oath or affirmation to a judicial officer.

(b) Each application shall include—

- (1) the name and title of the applicant;
- (2) a statement that there is probable cause to believe that property of a kind or character described in section 23-521(d) is likely to be found in a designated premise, in a designated vehicle or object, or upon designated persons;

(3) allegations of fact supporting such statement; and

(4) a request that the judicial officer issue a search warrant directing a search for and seizure of the property in question.

The applicant may also submit depositions or affidavits of other persons containing allegations of fact supporting or tending to support those contained in the application.

(c) The application may also contain—

(1) a request that the search warrant be made executable at any hour of the day or night, upon the ground that there is probable cause to believe that (A) it cannot be executed during the hours of daylight, (B) the property sought is likely to be removed or destroyed if not seized forthwith, or (C) the property sought is not likely to be found except at certain times or in certain circumstances; and

(2) a request that the search warrant authorize the executing officer to break and enter dwelling houses or other buildings or vehicles to be searched without giving notice of his identity and purpose, upon probable cause to believe that one of the conditions set forth in subparagraph (A), (B), or (D) of section 23-591(c)(2) is likely to exist at the time and place at which such warrant is to be executed.

Any request made pursuant to this subsection must be accompanied and supported by allegations of fact supporting such request. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 615.)

Compliance with federal rules of criminal procedure

Statute of the District of Columbia dealing with issuance of search warrants on complaint under oath need not be complied with when Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 41, 18 U.S.C. App., dealing with search and seizure has been complied with. Shay v. United States (1954, 212 F. 2d 809, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 379, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 865, 347 U.S. 1012, 98 L. Ed. 1136).

Search warrant, which had been executed in accordance with Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 41, 18 U.S.C. App., was valid even though it did not comply with this section authorizing issuance of search warrants. Ledbetter v. United States (1954, 211 F. 2d 628, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 155, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 789, 347 U.S. 977, 98 L. Ed. 1116).

Description of premises

Search warrant which described premises as "The Humidor" is sufficient to search entire four-story building. Irwin v. United States (1937, 89 F. 2d 678, 67 App. D.C. 41).

Espionage Act

There is nothing in the Espionage Act which makes it inapplicable in the District of Columbia and search warrant may be issued where property is used as means of committing felony. Nuckols v. United States (1938, 99 F. 2d 353, 69 App. D.C. 120, certiorari denied 59 S. Ct. 89, 305, U.S. 626, 83 L. Ed. 401).

Search warrant conforms in every respect to the requirements of the Espionage Act and does not infringe the rights of appellant under the Fourth Amendment. Hysler v. United States (C.C.A. Fla. 1937, 86 F. 2d 918).

Evidence as admissible

Once accused is under arrest and in custody, search made at another place, without warrant, is not incident to arrest and article discovered through search is inadmissible. H. Bowling v. United States (1965, 350 F. 2d 1002, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 25).

Where search was illegal, revolver found in search should not have been admitted in evidence in robbery prosecution. Id.

Where search bears a reasonable relation to the arrest, evidence secured during the search is admissible. Collins v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A. 2d 515).

In prosecution under indictment for housebreaking and grand larceny, admission of stolen article allegedly obtained by illegal search of defendant's room was not error in view of testimony that defendant agreed to the search and even pointed out stolen articles. Alderman v. United States (1948, 165 F. 2d 622, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 48).

Hotels

A hotel is a public place and search thereof is not so rigidly restricted as search of a private home. Collins v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A. 2d 515).

Illegal search, legalization

Under rule that officers should not be encouraged to proceed in an irregular manner on chance that all will end well, an illegal search cannot be legalized by what it brings to light. Darnall v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A. 2d 734).

Person aggrieved

In order to qualify as a "person aggrieved by an unlawful search and seizure" within Rule 41(e) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, 18 U.S.C. App., authorizing such a person to move the court for district in which property was seized for return of the property and to suppress for use as evidence anything so obtained, one must have been a victim of a search or seizure, one against whom the search was directed, as distinguished from one who claims prejudice only through use of evidence gathered as a consequence of a search or seizure directed at someone else. Jones v. United States (1960, 80 S. Ct. 725, 362 U.S. 257, 4 L. Ed. 2d 697).

A defendant charged with violation of narcotics laws had standing to contend that entry and subsequent seizure were unlawful notwithstanding he testified that property seized was not his and that place of arrest was not his home, where to hold that defendant's failure to acknowledge interest in narcotics or premises prevented his attack upon search, would be to permit the Government to have advantage of contradictory positions as basis for conviction, since conviction flowed from defendant's possession of narcotics at time of search, yet fruits of that search, upon which conviction depended, were admitted into evidence on ground that defendant did not have possession of narcotics at that time, so that prosecution subjected defendant to penalties meted out to one in lawless possession while refusing him remedies designated for one in that situation. Id.

Probable cause

Affidavit, reciting that informants, who had previously been found reliable, had told police that defendant was selling narcotics from his apartment and describing in great detail a sale to one of informants made by defendant and witnessed by police and recounting corroborating details, was sufficient to support issuance of search warrant. Hagan v. United States (1966, 364 F. 2d 669, 124 U.S. App. D.C. 276).

Affidavit reciting that confidential informant whose reliability had been proven told narcotics agents that defendant was selling heroin in his apartment, that agents furnished him with funds to purchase narcotics, and that informant was observed to enter the apartment building and then emerge, surrendering to agents a narcotic substance purchased from defendant, disclosed probable cause for issuance of the warrant. Jones v. United States, (1965, 353 F. 2d 908, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 370).

Personal observations of suspicious conduct of defendant, charged with violations of gambling laws, during careful investigation, together with information received, gave probable cause for issuance of search warrant and warrant for arrest. J. Minowitz v. United States (1962, 298 F. 2d 682, 112 U.S. App. D.C. 21).

Allegations in affidavits upon basis of which a search warrant was issued, to the effect, among other things that certain drugs were delivered to a certain person in a certain apartment, were sufficient to create probable cause and justify issuance of search warrant for items described. G. C. Hunt v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 171 A. 2d 515).

Affidavits before Commissioner were sufficient to satisfy requisite of probable cause for issuance both of arrest warrants of persons who were subsequently convicted of illegal gambling on evidence showing that they maintained betting office and issuance of search warrants for search of premises which contained such office. Silverman et al. v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 173, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 144, certiorari granted 80 S. Ct. 1237, 363 U.S. 801, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1145).

"Probable cause" exists for a search warrant if affiant has reasonable grounds at the time of his affidavit and the issuance of the warrant for the belief that the law was being violated on the premises to be searched, and if the apparent facts set out in the affidavit are such that a reasonably discreet and prudent man would be led to believe there was a commission of the offense charged. Herson v. United States (1936, 80 F. 2d 529, 65 App. D.C. 86).

Probable cause to justify a search must be determined by existence of facts known to officer before, not after, the search. Darnall v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 33 A. 2d 734).

Remand

Since Court of Appeals, sua sponte, determined that government had not shown sufficient probable cause for a search or an arrest without a warrant and it was possible that government had additional evidence on question of probable cause which it did not bring forth since defense had not challenged introduction of evidence, case would be remanded for further proceedings. Townsley v. United States, (D.C. App. 1965, 215 A. 2d 482).

Search—Reasonableness

In testing the reasonableness of a search at time of arrest, all circumstances must be considered. Collins v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A. 2d 515).

Where police department had made a long, careful, and thorough investigation which indicated that hotel was being used for disorderly purposes and that misdemeanors were being committed therein continually, those in charge of the arrest were justified in organizing a raiding squad sufficiently large to make all necessary and proper arrests, and officers were properly permitted to testify as to what they saw while making search even though a search warrant had not been obtained. Id.

— Validity

Where arrest which led to search was made without probable cause or warrant, search was illegal. H. Bowling v. United States (1965, 350 F. 2d 1002, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 25).

An automobile, including its trunk, may be searched without a warrant at time and place its occupants are placed under lawful arrest. United States v. J. S. Washington (D.C.D.C. 1965, 249 F. Supp. 40).

Search without a warrant is permitted only where search is incident to a valid arrest or where exceptional circumstances are present. Townsley v. United States (D.C. App. 1965, 215 A. 2d 482).

Defendant, allegedly a known felon, was under unlawful arrest when he answered officers' call to come out of restaurant although he had been committing no offense, not even loitering, and evidence then produced on demand that he reveal content of pocket was unlawfully seized. C. H. Kelley v. United States (1961, 298 F. 2d 310, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 396).

Items not described in a search warrant but discovered in course of search made pursuant to such warrant were admissible in evidence. G. C. Hunt v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 171 A. 2d 515).

When a lawful search is executed pursuant to a lawful search warrant, contraband may be seized although not specifically described in the warrant. Id.

Premises under control of a person arrested may be searched contemporaneously as an incident to the arrest, and material seized as a result of such search may be introduced in evidence, even though not described in a search warrant. Id.

Where two plain-clothes men and complaining witness went to defendant's home with intention of making a search, if possible, for stolen goods and not to talk with him about reports of his possible involvement in three robberies, seizure of stolen property found in apartment was not incident to lawful arrest and was unlawful and could not be justified by exceptional circumstances and fruits of search were inadmissible in criminal prosecution. United States v. E. E. Evans (1961, 194 F. Supp. 90).

Defendant's invitation to "come on in" made to two plain-clothes men and complaining witnesses did not constitute a consent to search of apartment, and defendant did not waive any right to complain that search violated the Fourth Amendment. Id.

Action of officers who, with permission of owners, entered vacant row house adjoining that in which they suspected defendants were maintaining unlawful betting office, in inserting antenna spike under baseboard and into party wall and connecting ear phones so that they were then able to overhear defendants conduct their betting business by telephone, did not constitute such an unlawful "search and seizure" as is proscribed by the betting business by telephone, did not constitute such Fourth Amendment to the federal Constitution and such actions did not constitute an interference with any communications system in violation of the Communications Act of 1934. Silverman et al. v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 173, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 144, certiorari granted 80 S. Ct. 1237, 363 U.S. 801, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1145).

A search may be made only under a valid search warrant or as an incident to a lawful arrest. Collins v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1945, 41 A. 2d 515).

Even in connection with a valid arrest, a search is unlawful if it is merely exploratory and general and made solely to find evidence of defendant's guilt. Id.

— Waiver of consent

Waiver of consent to search must be proved by clear and positive testimony, and it must be established that there was no duress or coercion, actual or implied. United States v. Willis (D.C.D.C. 1965, 248 F. Supp. 265).

Sufficiency of copy

Where defendants although present at time when premises were searched pursuant to warrant, made no claim to property when inquiry was made in that respect by searching officers, and defendants disavowed any interest in premises, they were without right to have been served with a copy of search warrant, and could not claim that copy left on premises was defective. Shaw v. United States (1954, 209 F. 2d 298, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 90, certiorari denied 74 S. Ct. 430, 347 U.S. 905, 98 L. Ed. 1063).

§ 23-523. Time of execution of search warrants

(a) A search warrant shall not be executed more than ten days after the date of issuance and shall be returned to the court after its execution or expiration in accordance with section 23-521(f) (7).

(b) A search warrant may be executed on any day of the week and, in the absence of express authorization in the warrant pursuant to section 23-521(f) (5), shall be executed only during the hours of daylight. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 615.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

The laws dealing with narcotics and drug problems are controlling over the general search warrant provisions of the United States and District of Columbia Codes. United States v. C. Thomas et al. (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 164; cert. denied 93 S.Ct. 341, 448, 409 U.S. 992).

District of Columbia narcotics statute (section 33-414) providing that "the judge or commissioner shall insert a direction in the warrant that it may be served at any time in the day or night.", qualifies sections 23-521 to 23-523 permitting a nighttime execution of the search warrant, if and only if, there is an express authorization therefore pursuant to statute; the latter sections are applicable to nonnarcotic cases only. United States v. H. Green (1971, 331 F. Supp. 44).

This section providing that search warrant, absent express authorization in warrant pursuant to § 23-521, should be executed only during hours of daylight is, as special or local statute, qualification upon prior general federal statute providing that search warrant relating to offenses involving controlled substances may be served at any time of day or night if judge or United States magistrate is satisfied that there is probable cause to believe that grounds exist for warrant and its service at such time. United States v. L. Gooding (1971, 328 F. Supp. 1005).

Execution at night

Even though search warrant and supporting affidavit did not comply with the specific provisions of the District of Columbia Code relating to nighttime searches, search warrant, which was issued pursuant to Comprehensive Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act on basis that there was reason to believe premises contained contraband and which permitted day or nighttime execution was valid. United States v. C. Thomas et al. (D.C. App. 1972, 294 A. 2d 164; cert. denied 93 S.Ct. 341, 448, 409 U.S. 992).

Search warrant and its execution during the nighttime hours is proper in narcotics case where there is a showing of probable cause both as to its existence for its service at such time, and where it is accompanied by a supporting affidavit as well as by an insertion within the warrant as to when it could be served. United States v. H. Green (1971, 331 F. Supp. 44).

Where none of the grounds set forth in § 23-522 for search warrant authorizing execution at night were included in either application or warrant, search made pursuant to warrant well after ending of daylight hours is invalid and evidence seized is subject to suppression, though warrant was issued in connection with alleged violations of federal narcotics laws. United States v. L. Gooding (1971, 328 F. Supp. 1005).

§ 23-524. Execution of search warrants

(a) An officer executing a warrant directing a search of a dwelling house or other building or a vehicle shall execute such warrant in accordance with section 23-591.

(b) An officer executing a warrant directing a search of a person shall give, or make reasonable effort to give, notice of his identity and purpose to the person, and, if such person thereafter resists or refuses to permit the search, such person shall be subject to arrest by such officer pursuant to section 23-581(a) for violation of section 432 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the District of Columbia (D.C. Code, sec. 22-505) (resisting a police officer) or other applicable provision of law.

(c) (1) An officer or agent executing a search warrant shall write and subscribe an inventory setting forth the time of the execution of the search warrant and the property seized under it.

(2) If the search is of a person, a copy of the warrant and of the return shall be given to that person.

(3) If the search is of a place, vehicle, or object, a copy of the warrant and of the return shall be given to the owner thereof if he is present, or if he is not, to an occupant, custodian, or other person present; or if no person is present, the officer shall post a copy of the warrant and of the return upon the premises, vehicle, or object searched.

(d) A copy of the warrant shall be filed with the court whose judge or magistrate authorized its issuance on the next court day after its execution, together with a copy of the return.

(e) An officer or agent executing a search warrant may seize any property discovered in the course of the lawful execution of such warrant if he has probable cause to believe that such property is subject to seizure under section 23-521(d), even if the property is not enumerated in the warrant or the application therefor, and no additional warrant shall be required to authorize such seizure, if the property is fully set forth in the return. Such seizure may include taking physical or other impressions or performing chemical, scientific, or other tests or experiments.

(f) An officer or agent executing a search warrant may take photographs and measurements during the execution.

(g) An officer executing a warrant directing a search of premises or a vehicle may search any person therein (1) to the extent reasonably necessary to protect himself or others from the use of any weapon which may be concealed upon the person, or (2) to the extent reasonably necessary to find property enumerated in the warrant which may be concealed upon the person. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 615.)

Federal search

Search under state warrant but conducted by District of Columbia police, producing evidence examined by federal experts who later testified at federal trial, was a "federal search" subject to federal rule. United States v. R. Haywood (1972, 464 F. 2d 756, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 247).

Claim that federal search under state warrant did not comply with federal rule was not cognizable, separate from constitutional objection, where no objection was raised at trial or until 28 U.S.C. 2255 motion was filed. Id.

§ 23-525. Disposition of property

An officer or agent who seizes property in the execution of a search warrant shall cause it to be safely kept for use as evidence. No property seized shall be released or destroyed except in accordance with law and upon order of a court or of the United States attorney or Corporation Counsel for the District of Columbia or one of their assistants. #### NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW

Admissibility of evidence

Failure to strictly adhere to ordinance in ministerial matters in delivering property to county police officers who returned it to rightful owner rather than delivering it to marshal in accordance with District of Columbia code requirements did not render testimony concerning such inadmissible. A. A. Brooks, Jr. v. State of Maryland (Maryland Ct. of App. 1964, 200 A. 2d 177).

(July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 618.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 23-544, 23-556.

§ 23-544. Confiscation of wire or oral communication intercepting devices

Any intercepting device in the District of Columbia—

- (1) possessed;
- (2) used;
- (3) sold;
- (4) distributed; or
- (5) manufactured or assembled;

in violation of section 23-542 or 23-543 may be seized and forfeited to the District of Columbia. "(a) Whenever a witness refuses, on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination, to testify or provide other information in a proceeding before a court or grand jury in the District of Columbia involving any violation of this subchapter and the person presiding over the proceeding communicates to the witness an order issued under this section, the witness may not refuse to comply with the order on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination. But no testimony or other information compelled under the order issued under subsection (b) of this section, or any information obtained by the exploitation of such testimony or other information, may be used against the witness in any criminal case, except a prosecution for perjury, giving a false statement, or otherwise failing to comply with the order.

"(b) In the case of any individual who has been or may be called to testify or provide other information at any proceeding before a court or grand jury in the District of Columbia, the court before which the proceeding is or may be held shall issue, upon the request of the United States attorney, an order requiring such individual to give any testimony or provide any other information which he refuses to give or provide on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination.

"(c) The United States attorney may, with the approval of the Attorney General or the Deputy Attorney General, or any Assistant Attorney General designated by the Attorney General, request an order under subsection (b) when in the judgment of the United States attorney—

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 23-556.

§ 23-546. Applications for authorization or approval of interception of wire or oral communications

(a) The United States attorney may authorize, in writing, any investigative or law enforcement officer to make application to a court for an order authorizing the interception of wire or oral communications.

(b) The United States attorney may authorize, in writing, any investigative or law enforcement officer to make application to a court for an order of approval of the previous interception of any wire or oral communication, when the contents of such communication—

(1) relate to an offense other than that specified in an order of authorization;

(2) were intercepted in an emergency situation; or

(3) were intercepted in an emergency situation and relate to an offense other than that contemplated at the time the interception was made.

(c) An application for an order of authorization (as provided in subsection (a) of this section) or of approval (as provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (b) of this section) may be authorized only when the interception of wire or oral communications may provide or has provided evidence of the commission of or a conspiracy to commit any of the following offenses:

(1) Any of the offenses specified in the Act entitled "An Act to establish a code of law for the District of Columbia", approved March 3, 1901, and listed in the following table:

Offense:	Specified in—
Arson-----	sections 820, 821 (D.C. Code, secs. 22-401, 22-402).
Blackmail-----	section 819 (D.C. Code, sec. 22-2305).
Bribery-----	section 861 (D.C. Code, sec. 22-701).

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 23-547, 23-556.

§ 23-547. Procedure for authorization or approval of interception of wire or oral communications

(a) Each application for an order authorizing or approving the interception of a wire or oral communication shall be made in writing upon oath or affirmation to a judge and shall state the applicant's authority to make the application. Each application shall include—

(1) the identity of the investigative or law enforcement officer making the application, and the officer authorizing the application;

(2) a full and complete statement of the facts and circumstances relied upon by the applicant to justify his belief that an order should be issued, including (A) details as to the particular offense that has been, is being, or is about to be committed, (B) a particular description of the nature and location of the facilities from which or the place where the communication is to be or was intercepted, (C) a particular description of the type of communications sought to be or which were intercepted, and (D) the identity of the person, if known, who committed, is committing, or is about to commit the offense and whose communications are to be or were intercepted;

(3) a full and complete statement as to whether or not other investigative procedures have been tried and failed or why they reasonably appear or appeared to be unlikely to succeed if tried or to be too dangerous;

(4) a statement of the period of time for which the interception is or was required to be maintained, and if the nature of the investigation is or was such that the authorization for interception should not automatically terminate or should not have automatically terminated when the described type of communication has been or was first obtained, a particular description of facts establishing probable cause to believe that additional communications of the same type will or would occur thereafter;

(5) a full and complete statement of the facts concerning all previous applications, known to the individual authorizing or making the application, made to any judge for authorization to intercept, or for approval of interceptions of, wire or oral communications involving any of the same persons, facilities, or places specified in the application, and the action taken by the judge on each such application; and

(6) where the application is for the extension of an order, a statement setting forth the results thus far obtained from the interception, or a reasonable explanation of the failure to obtain results.

(b) The judge may require the applicant to furnish additional testimony or documentary evidence in support of the application.

(c) Upon application the judge may enter an ex parte order, as requested or as modified, authorizing or approving interception of wire or oral communications within the District of Columbia, if the judge determines on the basis of the facts submitted by the applicant that—

(1) there is or was probable cause for belief that the person whose communication is to be or was intercepted is or was committing, has committed, or is about to commit a particular offense enumerated in section 23-546;

(2) there is or was probable cause for belief that particular communications concerning that offense will or would be obtained through the interception;

(3) normal investigative procedures have or would have been tried and have or had failed or reasonably appear or appeared to be unlikely to succeed if tried or to be too dangerous; and

(4) there is or was probable cause for belief that the facilities from which, or the place where, the wire or oral communications are to be or were intercepted were used, are being used, or are about to be used, in connection with the commission of the offense, or are or were leased to, listed in the name of, or commonly used by the person referred to in paragraph (1).

(d) If the facilities from which a wire communication is to be or was intercepted are or were being used by, are or were about to be used by, or are or were leased to, listed in the name of, or commonly used by, a licensed physician, a licensed attorney, or practicing clergyman, or if the place where an oral communication is to be or was intercepted is or was a place used primarily for habitation by a husband and wife or primarily by a licensed physician, licensed attorney, or practicing clergyman for his own professional purposes, no order authorizing or approving such interception may be issued unless the court, in addition to the matters provided in subsection (c) of this section, determines that—

(1) such facilities or place are or were being used or are or were about to be used in connection with conspiratorial activities characteristic of organized crime; and

(2) such interceptions will be so conducted as to minimize or eliminate the number of interceptions of privileged wire or oral communications between licensed physicians and patients, licensed attorneys and clients, practicing clergymen and confidants, and husbands and wives.

No otherwise privileged wire or oral communication intercepted in accordance with, or in violation of, the provisions of this subchapter shall lose its privileged character.

(e) Each order authorizing or approving the interception of any wire or oral communication shall specify—

(1) the identity of the person, if known, or otherwise a particular description of the person, if known, whose communications are to be or were intercepted;

(2) the nature and location of the communication facilities as to which, or the place where, authority to intercept or any approval of interception is or was granted;

(3) a particular description of the type of communication sought to be or which was intercepted, and a statement of the particular offense to which it relates;

(4) the identity of the agency authorized to intercept or whose interception is approved, and of the person authorizing the application; and

(5) the period of time during or for which the interception is authorized or approved, including a statement as to whether or not the interception shall automatically terminate when the described communication has been first obtained.

(f) An order authorizing the interception of a wire or oral communication shall, upon request of the applicant, direct that a communication common carrier, landlord, custodian, or other person shall furnish the applicant forthwith all information, facilities, or technical assistance necessary to accomplish the interception unobtrusively and with a minimum of interference with the services that such carrier, landlord, custodian, or person is according to the person whose communications are to be intercepted. Any communication common carrier, landlord, custodian, or other person furnishing such facilities or technical assistance shall be compensated therefore by the applicant at the prevailing rates.

(g) No order entered under this section may authorize or approve the interception of any wire or oral communication for any period longer than is necessary to achieve the objective of the authorization, nor in any event longer than thirty days. Extensions of an order may be granted, but only upon application for an extension made in accordance with subsection (a) of this section and the court making the findings required by subsection (c) of this section. The period of extension shall be no longer than the authorizing judge deems necessary to achieve the purposes for which it was granted and in no event for longer than thirty days. Every order and extension thereof shall contain a provision that the authorization to intercept shall be executed as soon as practicable, shall be conducted in such a way as to minimize or eliminate the interception of communications not otherwise subject to interception under this subchapter, and must terminate upon attainment of the authorized objective, or in any event in thirty days.

(h) Whenever an order authorizing interception is entered pursuant to this subchapter, the order may require reports to be made to the judge who issued the order showing what progress has been made toward achievement of the authorized objective and the need for continued interception. Reports shall be made at such intervals as the judge may require. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 621.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 23-551, 23-555, 23-556.

§ 23-548. Additional procedure for approval of interception of wire or oral communications

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subchapter, any investigative or law enforcement officer, specially designated by the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, who reasonably determines that—

(1) an emergency situation exists with respect to conspiratorial activities characteristic of organized crime that requires a wire or oral communication to be intercepted before an order authorizing the interception can with due diligence be obtained, and

(2) there are grounds upon which an order could be entered under this subchapter to authorize interception, may intercept the wire or oral communication if an application for an order approving the interception is initiated in accordance with this section within twelve hours and is completed within seventy-two hours after the interception has occurred, or begins to occur. In the absence of an order, the interception shall immediately terminate when the communication sought is obtained or when the application for the order is denied, whichever is earlier. In the event the application for approval is denied, or in any other case where the interception is terminated without an order having been issued, the contents of any wire or oral communication intercepted shall be treated as having been obtained in violation of this subchapter, and an inventory shall be served as provided for in section 23-550 on the person named in the application.

(b) When an investigative or law enforcement officer, while engaged in intercepting wire or oral communications in the manner authorized by this subchapter, intercepts wire or oral communications relating either to offenses other than those specified in the order of authorization or to offenses other than those offenses for which interception was made pursuant to subsection (a) of this section, he shall make an application to a judge as soon as practicable for approval for disclosure and use, in accordance with section 23-553, of the information intercepted. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 623.)

§ 23-549. Maintenance and custody of records

(a) The contents of any wire or oral communication intercepted by any means authorized by this subchapter shall, if possible, be recorded on tape or wire or other comparable device. The recording of the contents of any wire or oral communication under this subchapter shall be done in such way as will protect the recording from editing or other alterations. Immediately upon the expiration of the period of the order, or extensions thereof, the recordings shall be made available to the judge issuing the order and sealed under his directions. Custody of the recordings shall be wherever the judge orders. They shall not be destroyed except upon an order of the issuing or denying judge and in any event shall be kept for ten years. Duplicate recordings may be made for use or disclosure pursuant to the provisions of subsection (a) of section 23-553, for investigations. The presence of the seal provided for by this subsection, or a satisfactory explanation for the absence thereof, shall be a prerequisite for the use or disclosure of the contents of any wire or oral communication or evidence derived therefrom under subsection (b) of section 23-553.

(b) Applications made and orders granted under this subchapter shall be sealed by the judge. Custody of the applications and orders shall be wherever the judge directs. The applications and orders shall be disclosed only upon a showing of good cause before a judge of competent jurisdiction and shall not be destroyed except on order of the issuing or denying judge, and in any event shall be kept for ten years.

(c) Any violation of the provisions of this subsection may be punished as contempt of court. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 624.)

(a) Within a reasonable time but not later than ninety days after the filing of an application for an order of approval under section 23-548 which is denied, or the termination of the period of any order or extensions thereof, the issuing or denying judge shall cause to be served, on the persons named in the order or the application, and such other parties to intercepted communications as the judge may determine, in his discretion, are necessary in the interest of justice, an inventory which shall include notice of—

(1) the fact of the entry of the order or the application for an order of approval which was denied;

(2) the date of the entry of the order or the denial of the application for an order of approval;

(3) The period of authorized, approved, or disapproved interception; and

(4) whether during the period wire or oral communications were intercepted.

The judge, upon the filing of a motion, may in his discretion make available to the person or his counsel for inspection such portions of the intercepted communications, applications, and orders as the judge determines to be in the interest of justice. § 23-551. Procedure for disclosure and suppression of intercepted wire or oral communications

(a) The contents of any intercepted wire or oral communication or evidence derived therefrom shall not be received in evidence or otherwise disclosed in any trial, hearing, or other proceeding in or before any court, department, officer, agency, regulatory body, or other authority of the United States or the District of Columbia unless not less than ten days before the trial, hearing, or proceeding—

(1) the inventory as provided in section 23-550 has been served; and

This ten-day period may be waived by court order where a court finds that it was not possible to furnish the party with the above information ten days before the trial, hearing, or proceeding and that the party will not be prejudiced by the delay in receiving the information.

(b) Any aggrieved person in any trial, hearing, or proceeding in or before any court, department, officer, agency, regulatory body, or other authority of the United States or the District of Columbia, may move to suppress the contents of any intercepted wire or oral communication, or evidence derived therefrom, on the grounds that—

(4) service was not made as provided in section 23-547; or

(5) the seal prescribed by section 23-549(a) is not present and there is no satisfactory explanation for its absence.

The motion shall be made before the trial, hearing or proceeding unless there was no opportunity to make the motion or the person was not aware of the grounds of the motion. If the motion is granted, the contents of the intercepted wire or oral communication, or evidence derived therefrom, shall be treated as having been obtained in violation of this subchapter and shall not be received in evidence in the trial, hearing, or proceeding. The judge, upon the filing of the motion by the aggrieved person, may in his discretion make available to the aggrieved person or his counsel for inspection such portions of the intercepted communication or evidence derived therefrom as the judge determines to be in the interests of justice. ### SUBCHAPTER IV.—ARREST WARRANT AND SUMMONS

SUBCHAPTER REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This subchapter is referred to in sections 23-501, 23-591.

§ 23-561. Issuance, form, and contents

(a) (1) A judicial officer may issue a warrant for the arrest of any person upon a sworn complaint which states facts constituting an offense over which the judicial officer has jurisdiction for trial or preliminary examination, and establishing probable cause to believe that the person committed the offense. More than one warrant may issue on the same complaint.

(2) Upon request of the prosecutor, a summons shall issue instead of an arrest warrant. More than one summons may issue on the same complaint. If a person fails to appear in response to a summons, a warrant shall issue for his arrest.

(b) (1) An arrest warrant shall be signed by the judicial officer and shall state or contain the name of the issuing court, the date of issuance of the warrant, a description of the offense charged, and the name of the person to be arrested or, if his name is unknown, any name or description by which he can be identified with reasonable certainty. It shall command that the person be arrested and brought before the issuing court or officer. If the complaint establishes probable cause to believe that one of the conditions set out in subparagraphs (A) through (D) of section 23-591(c) (2) is likely to exist at the time and place at which such warrant is to be executed, the warrant may contain an authorization that it be executed as provided in section 23-591.

(2) A summons shall be in the same form as an arrest warrant except that it shall summon the person named to appear before the issuing court or officer at a stated time and place.

(c) An arrest warrant may be directed to a specific law enforcement officer or to any classifications of officers of the Metropolitan Police of the District of Columbia or other agency authorized to make arrests or execute process.

(d) Each complaint shall be made in writing upon oath or affirmation. Except for good cause shown, no warrant shall be issued unless the complaint has been approved by an appropriate prosecutor. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 627.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

See note preceding section 23-101.

§ 23-562. Execution and return

(a) (1) A warrant issued pursuant to this subchapter shall be executed by the arrest of the person named. The officer need not have the warrant in his possession at the time of the arrest, but upon request he shall show the warrant to the person as soon as possible. If the officer does not have the warrant in his possession at the time of the arrest, he shall inform the person of the offense charged and of the fact that a warrant has been issued.

(2) A summons shall be served upon a person by delivering a copy to him personally, by leaving it at his dwelling house or usual place of abode with some person of suitable age and discretion then residing therein, or by mailing it to the person's last known address.

(b) (1) The officer executing a warrant shall make return thereof to the judicial officer before whom the person is brought for preliminary examination. At the request of the appropriate prosecutor, any unexecuted and unexpired warrant shall be returned to the issuing court or judicial officer and shall be canceled.

(2) On or before the return day the person to whom a summons was delivered for service shall make return thereof to the court or officer before whom the summons is returnable.

(3) At the request of the appropriate prosecutor made at any time while the complaint is pending, a warrant returned unexecuted and not canceled or expired or a summons returned unserved or a duplicate thereof may be delivered by the judicial officer to the marshal or other authorized person for execution or service.

(c) (1) A law enforcement officer within the District of Columbia making an arrest under a warrant issued pursuant to this subchapter, making an arrest without a warrant, or receiving a person arrested by a special policeman or other person pursuant to section 23-582, shall take the arrested person without unnecessary delay before the court or other judicial officer empowered to commit persons charged with the offense for which the arrest was made. This subsection, however, shall not be construed to conflict with or otherwise supersede section 3501 of title 18, United States Code. When a person arrested without a warrant is brought before a judicial officer, a complaint or information shall be filed forthwith.

(2) Before taking an arrested person to a judicial officer, a law enforcement officer may perform any recording, fingerprinting, photographing, or other preliminary police duties required in the particular case, and if such duties are performed with reasonable promptness, the period of time required therefor shall not constitute a delay within the meaning of this section. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 628.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Execution of warrants by police force, see § 4-138.

Probable cause

Where police officers, in attempting to execute warrant for arrest of usually armed suspect who was involved in narcotics and wanted for murder, saw two men enter apartment building of suspect's "number one girl friend" with a private key about 11:30 P.M., saw lights in area of girl friend's apartment light up, waited from 11:00 P.M. to 5:00 A.M. in order to avoid armed resistance and then announced their presence three times, one of which informed the girl friend that they had a warrant for the suspect, before girl friend opened her door, such officers had probable cause to enter the apartment and search for the suspect and to require girl friend to open the door even without their having a search warrant, and constitutionally protected interest of privacy was not unreasonably impaired. United States v. R. W. Brown (1972, 467 F. 2d 419, 151 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

Arrest warrant, issued under rule governing execution of arrest warrants, provides authority to enter any premises for purpose of enforcing warrant, if police officer has probable cause to believe that subject is located therein. Id.

Standards

Standards to be applied for execution of an arrest warrant at a residence of a third party not named in the warrant is reasonable belief of police officer that person named in the warrant is present in the third party's residence. United States v. R. W. Brown (1972, 467 F. 2d 419, 151 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

§ 23-563. Territorial and other limits

(a) A warrant or summons for an offense punishable by imprisonment for more than one year issued by the Superior Court of the District of Columbia may be served at any place within the jurisdiction of the United States.

(b) A warrant or summons issued by the Superior Court of the District of Columbia for an offense punishable by imprisonment for not more than one year, or by a fine only, or by such imprisonment and a fine, may be served in any place in the District of Columbia but may not be executed more than one year after the date of issuance.

(c) A person arrested outside the District of Columbia on a warrant issued by the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall be taken before a judge, commissioner, or magistrate, and held to answer in the Superior Court pursuant to the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure as if the warrant had been issued by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia.

(d) When an application alleges that (1) an act which would constitute a felony if committed by an adult has been committed by a child, (2) the child may not with due diligence be found within the District of Columbia, and (3) if the District of Columbia is a party to article XVII of the Interstate Compact on Juveniles, the child is not known to be in a jurisdiction which is a party to such article, a juvenile officer may secure a warrant for the arrest of the child as if he were an adult. When the child is brought before the issuing court or officer pursuant to the warrant he shall be ordered transferred to the Family Division of the Superior Court pursuant to section 16-2302. If the child is found in a jurisdiction which is a party to such article and if the District of Columbia is a party to such article, he shall be returned as provided in that article and the warrant shall be null and void. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 628.)

SUBCHAPTER V.—ARREST WITHOUT WARRANT

SUBCHAPTER REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This subchapter is referred to in section 23-501.

§ 23-581. Arrests without warrant by law enforcement officers

(a)(1) A law enforcement officer may arrest, without a warrant having previously been issued therefor—

(A) a person whom he has probable cause to believe has committed or is committing a felony;

(B) a person whom he has probable cause to believe has committed or is committing an offense in his presence;

(C) a person whom he has probable cause to believe has committed or is about to commit any offense listed in paragraph (2) and, unless immediately arrested, may not be apprehended, may cause injury to others, or may tamper with, dispose of, or destroy evidence.

(2) The offenses referred to in subparagraph (C) of paragraph (1) are the following:

(A) The following offenses specified in the Act entitled "An Act to establish a code of law for the District of Columbia", approved March 3, 1901, and listed in the following table:

Offense:	Specified in—
Assault -----	section 806 (D.C. Code, sec. 22-504).
Petit larceny-----	section 827 (D.C. Code, sec. 22-2202).
Receiving stolen goods--	section 829 (D.C. Code, sec. 22-2205).
Unlawful entry-----	section 824 (D.C. Code, sec. 22-3102).

(B) Attempts to commit the following offenses specified in such Act and listed in the following table:

Offense:	Specified in—
Burglary -----	section 823 (D.C. Code, sec. 22-1801).
Grand larceny-----	section 826 (D.C. Code, sec. 22-2201).
Unauthorized use of vehicles.	section 826b (D.C. Code, sec. 22-2204).

(b) A law enforcement officer may, even if his jurisdiction does not extend beyond the District of Columbia, continue beyond the District, if necessary, a pursuit commenced within the District of a person who has committed an offense or whom he has probable cause to believe has committed or is committing a felony, and may arrest that person in any State the laws of which contain provisions equivalent to those of section 23-901. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 629.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 23-524, 23-582.

1970 AMENDMENT OF FORMER SECTION 23-306

Section 2 of Act Oct. 22, 1970, Pub. L. 91-497, 84 Stat. 1093, provided:

Subsection (b) of section 207 of the Act entitled "An Act to provide for the more effective prevention, detection, and punishment of crime in the District of Columbia", approved June 29, 1953 (D.C. Code, 23-306(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking out "section 863(a)" and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 863(a) and 842 (b) and (c)"; and

(2) by inserting immediately before the period at the end the following: "(failure to pay for lodging or food; D.C. Code, sec. 22-1301)".

As so amended, former section 23-306 read:

§ 23-306. Arrests without warrant for unlawful possession of implements of crime—Burglar tools—Weapons—Lottery tickets—Stolen property.

(a) Arrests without a warrant, and searches of the person and seizures pursuant thereto, may be made for violation of any section listed in subsection (b), by police officers, as in the case of a felony, upon probable cause that the person arrested is violating the section involved at the time of arrest.

(b) Subsection (a) shall apply with respect to section 22-3601 (possession of implements of crime), sections 22-3203, 22-3204, and 22-3214, providing for the control of dangerous weapons in the District, section 22-1502 (possession of lottery tickets), and section 22-1301(b) and (c) (failure to pay for food and lodging).

(c) Arrests without a warrant, and searches of the person and seizures pursuant thereto, may be made for violation of section 22-2202 (petit larceny), by police officers, as in the case of a felony, upon probable cause that the person arrested has in his possession at the time of the arrest, property taken in violation of that section.

(d) No evidence discovered in the course of any arrest, search, or seizure authorized by this section shall be admissible in any criminal proceeding against the person arrested unless at the time of such arrest he was violating one of the sections referred to in subsection (b) or had in his possession property taken in violation of the section referred to in subsection (c).

[Title 23 was enacted into law by section 210(a) of Pub. L. 91-358, eff. Feb. 1, 1971. As of that date, section 207 of the Act of June 29, 1953 (former section 23-306) was repealed by section 210(b) (10) of Pub. L. 91-358.]

NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER PRESENT LAW

Probable cause

Where police officer, who was on routine patrol looking for burglary suspects or people breaking into automobiles, observed defendant and an unidentified companion walking on street and looking into parked automobiles, where his observation of the two continued for more than an hour until he and a fellow officer lost them in grounds of zoo, where the officers later observed them coming out of zoo with defendant carrying a brown paper bag that he had not had when he went into the zoo, and where defendant's companion ran when he saw the officers, the police had reasonable grounds to believe that the bag contained the proceeds of a crime, to stop defendant and to ask him to put down the bag, which then opened a bit and revealed what appeared to be a tape deck. M. J. Smith v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 64; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1932, — U.S. —).

Where police officers who had observed the defendant peering into automobiles later observed defendant holding some object under his coat and when defendant refused to remove his hands from his pockets search for weapons was made disclosing that defendant was concealing beneath his coat a tape player, the connecting wires of which had been broken, action of police in confronting defendant on street was reasonable and disclosure of the tape player gave officers probable cause for arrest even though no victim had reported a loss, and pistol seized two days later during execution of arrest warrant was not the fruit of an unlawful arrest. L. A. Jenkins v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 284 A. 2d 460).

Fact that only one of the two police officers who confronted defendant on public street saw tape player that defendant was concealing under his coat did not render officers' testimony incredible. Id.

Stop and frisk

In justifying particular intrusion, police officer must be able to point to specific and articulable facts which, taken together with rational inferences from those facts, reasonably warrant that intrusion. J. S. Stephenson v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 296 A. 2d 606; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 1535, 411 U.S. 907).

Fourth Amendment does not require policeman who lacks precise level of information necessary for probable cause to arrest to simply shrug his shoulders and allow crime to occur or criminal to escape. Id.

Where two police officers observed defendant and companion running down street in downtown area at 4:30 a.m., where defendant and companion slowed to a walk when they spotted officers, where one officer had knowledge of prior recent crimes in that area, officers were justified in stopping defendant and companion to question them as to their prior whereabouts. Id.

Arrest

"Arrest" occurred when police officer waved motorist to a halt and restricted his liberty of movement pursuant to traffic violation, notwithstanding officer's testimony that he did not place motorist under arrest until after glove compartment had been opened and numbers slips discovered, when officer formally arrested him for both traffic violation and lottery violation. United States v. J. S. Washington (D.C.D.C. 1965, 249 F. Supp. 40).

A man is under "arrest" at that point when officer has effectively restrained him and he is cognizant of that restraint, not necessarily when officer formally proclaims that he is being taken into custody. Id.

Cause for arrest

Where a police officer had a conversation with the victim of an assault and petit larceny and proceeded in patrol car in search of the assailants, and the stolen articles were in plain view of officer in defendant's hand and at his feet in the gutter, an arrest was authorized when the officer saw the stolen articles. R. L. Thompkins v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 251 A. 2d 636).

Where in making an initial stop of the defendant, the officer was engaged in routine on-the-street investigation in nearby area of a crime minutes after it occurred in an early hour of the morning in his effort to find perpetrator while the trail was still warm, and under these circumstances the initial stop of defendant was neither an arrest nor an arbitrary detention, but arrest occurred after officer saw the articles which fit description of stolen property, which gave sufficient cause to arrest, and seizure was not invalid. Id.

Evidence

Where police officer, after making informal arrest for traffic violation, searched glove compartment of automobile for driver's registration card, discovering numbers slips, and then formally arrested driver for both traffic violation and lottery violation, and made further search of automobile for lottery evidence, the lottery evidence was not subject to suppression. United States v. J. S. Washington (D.C.D.C. 1965, 249 F. Supp. 40).

— Sufficiency

Officer's independent testimony with respect to defendant's possession of gun to which no objection was made was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for carrying pistol without a license. L. G. Lee v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 242 A. 2d 212).

Probable cause

Arrests without warrant and searches and seizures pursuant thereto may be made for a misdemeanor upon probable cause that the person arrested has in his possession at the time of arrest property taken in violation of section 22-2202. F. C. Clemm, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 260 A. 2d 687).

Police officer, who was told by taxicab driver who pointed toward three men walking on street that driver had seen person up the street tuck gun under his belt, had probable cause to stop and search the only three men who were present on street even though taxicab driver did not say which of the men he had seen with gun, and gun found on person of defendant in such search was admissible. H. L. Gaskins v. United States (D.C. App. 1970, 262 A. 2d 810).

Viewing by officers of the inside of the automobile in which defendant was sitting on parking lot of restaurant at 4:30 a.m. did not constitute a search and was merely a customary check of premises and when they saw two other persons lying down in automobile and observed what appeared to be a .38 caliber cartridge on the floor they had probable cause to believe that there was a dangerous weapon in the automobile and were justified in arresting defendant, and revolver which was in plain sight when officers opened door to make arrest was admissible. J. E. Lucas v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 256 A. 2d 574).

Standard to be applied in determining probable cause for arrest is that of a reasonable, cautious and prudent police officer and must be judged in the light of his experience and training, and bases for finding of probable cause must be those factual and practical considerations of everyday life on which reasonable and prudent men, not legal technicians, act. B. Wright, Jr. v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 242 A. 2d 833).

Arrest without a warrant for carrying a dangerous or deadly weapon may be made on probable cause. L. G. Lee v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 242 A. 2d 212).

Police officer is not privileged to ignore facts which would give him reasonable cause to believe that a person is carrying a dangerous or deadly weapon. Id.

Where officer at early hour in morning saw defendant and another man talking to manager of motel and when officer approached they hurriedly moved away from door and officer received inconsistent answers to his inquiries to the men and officer noted that defendant was carrying bag containing large heavy object and when officer asked if there was gun in the bag, defendant started backing off and did not answer, officer had probable cause to arrest defendant for carrying pistol and to seize the gun. Id.

Evidence established that police officers saw gun handle sticking out of defendant's pocket and had probable cause to believe that defendant was carrying dangerous weapon in violation of law. United States v. P. Jenkins, Jr. (1967, 276 F. Supp. 958).

Police officers may arrest without warrant when there is probable cause to believe that felony has been committed and that arrested person committed it, or when misdemeanor has been committed in their presence or view, and may also arrest for certain misdemeanors, including petit larceny, using probable cause standard. E. C. Singleton v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 225 A. 2d 315).

Sales clerk may report shoplifting incident to special policeman who can then arrest suspect on probable cause. Id.

Probable cause for arrest

Police officers who saw parked automobile resting on its axles and three tires scattered nearby when they came upon scene at which two security officers from nearby apartment building had stopped the defendant, observed by security officers walking away from vicinity of vehicle carrying jumper cables and a jack plate, for questioning during which neighbor called out from window to say that defendant was one of the men who had been "messing" with stripped vehicle had probable cause to arrest for petit larceny notwithstanding arresting officers did not actually see the defendant remove or carry away tires from vehicle. United States v. C. E. Bynum (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 649).

A police officer in the District of Columbia has the power to make a warrantless arrest of a citizen when he has a probable cause to believe that the citizen has committed felony or certain misdemeanors designated by statute, and the classic test for probable cause is whether the officer had knowledge of facts and circumstances which would warrant a prudent man in believing that an offense had been committed. A. B. Clarke v. United States (D.C. App. 1969, 256 A. 2d 782).

Officers who, in responding to radio report of possible robbery, found defendant being restrained outside dwelling, who observed one victim still handcuffed to stair rail, and who were informed by men restraining defendant that they had observed him fleeing from house, had probable cause to believe that defendant had committed crime and thus had probable cause for arrest. Kennedy v. United States (1965, 353 F. 2d 462 122 U.S. App. D.C. 291).

The evidence, including police officer's testimony that when he looked through partially opened window of parked automobile he recognized operator of automobile as meeting the description given in police broadcast, disclosed that the on-the-spot arrest of operator was made with probable cause. Smith v. United States (1965, 353 F. 2d 838, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 300).

Evidence discovered subsequent to time of arrest may not be considered in determining probable cause. Id.

Validity of arrest without a warrant depended on whether officers had probable cause to believe that offense had been or was being committed. Townsley v. United States (D.C. App. 1965, 215 A. 2d 482).

Probable cause needed for an arrest without a warrant must be as great or greater than that required to be shown in order to obtain a warrant. Id.

Police officer who saw parked automobile bearing temporary District of Columbia tags and a Virginia inspection sticker was authorized to make initial inquiry about ownership of automobile and, in course thereof, to make arrest for illegal possession of blackjack which he saw on floor of automobile. H. Jefferson and R. Cooper v. United States (1965, 349 F. 2d 714, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 279).

Where, over a period of two and a half months, officers had placed numbers bets on fifteen separate occasions at one location, and, on ten separate occasions, had observed a suspect depart from that location with bulging pockets and enter other premises, from which he subsequently departed "without the bulge," officers had reasonable grounds to believe that latter premises were being used in lottery operations, and that defendant, who at time such premises were searched pursuant to a search warrant was the only male present and was leaving "hastily," was participating therein, justifying arrest of defendant without an arrest warrant and seizure and use of incriminating evidence found in course of search of defendant made in connection with such arrest. Stephens v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 832, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 249).

Police officers who were on routine investigation of report that heroin was being "capped" at rooming house and who saw paraphernalia used by narcotics addicts in room from public hallway to which they had been properly admitted had probable cause to enter the room to arrest defendant, and having done so, properly seized heroin found in envelope and the paraphernalia. Jennings v. United States (1957, 247 F. 2d 784, 101 U.S. App. D.C. 198).

Where police officer observed defendant and another, both of whom he recognized as having prior convictions for larceny, carrying a console-type record player and followed them into a liquor store, saw that the record player was new and questioned them about the machine and defendant gave improbable and unbelievable answers, officer had probable cause to arrest defendant for petit larceny, and refusal of trial court to suppress the evidence seized at time of arrest was not erroneous. Brooks v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1960, 159 A. 2d 876).

Probable cause to justify arrest without warrant means more than a bare suspicion, and it exists where the facts and circumstances within officers' knowledge are sufficient in themselves to warrant a reasonable belief that an offense has been or is being committed. Cormier v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 137 A. 2d 212).

Where officers were told during nighttime, by a young girl, that a man fitting general description had chased girl out of house with a gun, officers had probable cause to arrest defendant without warrant. Id.

Where officers had probable cause to arrest defendant without warrant, ensuing search was legal and unregistered guns discovered thereby were admissible in evidence. Id.

Where officer observed person on street at 5:19 a.m., and, when asked what he was doing on street at such hour, person answered evasively, and when turning to leave, officer's elbow bumped solid unseen object on person's stomach, officer had probable cause for arrest and search which revealed concealed loaded pistol. Dickerson v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1956, 120 A. 2d 588).

In determining whether police officer had probable cause for arrest and search of person, which revealed concealed pistol, question was not whether person was proved guilty beyond reasonable doubt, but whether as practical matter, man of ordinary and reasonable caution would have reason to believe that person was carrying a gun. Id.

Where first defendant had once informed arresting officer that defendant was engaged in numbers business, and first defendant was known to have police record as numbers violator and had been acting suspiciously, and officer, while going to inform second defendant of parking violation, saw second defendant pass to first defendant, in manner and at time that number slips are usually passed, an envelope, officer could, without warrant, seize envelope and arrest defendants. Price et ano., v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1956, 119 A. 2d 718).

Remand

Since Court of Appeals, sua sponte, determined that government had not shown sufficient probable cause for a search or an arrest without a warrant and it was possible that government had additional evidence on question of probable cause which it did not bring forth since defense had not challenged introduction of evidence, case would be remanded for further proceedings. Townesley v. United States (D.C. App. 1965, 215 A. 2d 482).

Search and seizure

In District of Columbia principle that police may make arrest and incidental search in public place without warrant upon probable cause is applicable to suspected violations of statute prohibiting carrying concealed weapons. United States v. A. Huff et ano. (1967, 279 F. Supp. 143).

Where defendants were lawfully stopped originally pursuant to police officer's power to check for traffic violations and when officer asked driver to check glove compartment for registration card, officer thought he saw a revolver in the compartment, sufficient information existed to warrant officer in believing that an offense had been committed and there was probable cause for search without warrant, and that did not evaporate when no gun was found in glove compartment. Id.

Once cause existed to search automobile for prohibited weapon, likely places within automobile could be inspected. Id.

Police officer's limited inspection of glove compartment in automobile, where motorist had indicated his registration card was located, was incident to arrest for traffic violation and reasonable, though officer was allegedly also concerned with protecting himself by searching for weapon in glove compartment. United States v. J. S. Washington (D.C.D.C. 1965, 249 F. Supp. 40).

Where informal traffic arrest preceded officer's search in glove compartment for driver's registration card, opening of such compartment and subsequent uncovering of envelopes showing lottery violation was not subject to objection that search took place prior to arrest. Id.

Where officer was authorized to make arrest of automobile occupants for illegal possession of blackjack which lay on floor of automobile, his ensuing search of automobile at same place was authorized as incidental to arrest. H. Jefferson and R. Cooper v. United States (1965, 349 F. 2d 714, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 279).

Special policeman as "police officer"

Special policeman, while on duty and in his prescribed area of authority, is a "police officer" within arrest statute, and may arrest when he has probable cause to believe that arrested person has perpetrated crime of petit larceny on merchandise of his employer. E. C. Singleton v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 225 A. 2d 315).

Special policeman, who observed defendant's suspicious actions within department store and followed him to another store where defendant produced merchandise from underneath his coat, was authorized to make arrest on basis of probable cause for belief that defendant had committed petit larceny in department store. Id.

Validity of arrest

A defendant's arrest on a charge of petit larceny was lawful depending upon whether arresting officer had probable cause to believe that they had in their possession "fruits of the crime." S. Smith and W. Jeffries v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 247 A. 2d 293).

§ 23-582. Arrests without warrant by other persons

(a) A special policeman shall have the same powers as a law enforcement officer to arrest without warrant for offenses committed within premises to which his jurisdiction extends, and may arrest outside the premises on fresh pursuit for offenses committed on the premises.

(b) A private person may arrest another—

(1) whom he has probable cause to believe is committing in his presence—

(A) a felony, or

(B) an offense enumerated in section 23-581

(a) (2); or

(2) in aid of a law enforcement officer or special policeman, or other person authorized by law to make an arrest.

(c) Any person making an arrest pursuant to this section shall deliver the person arrested to a law enforcement officer without unreasonable delay. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 630.)

SUBCHAPTER VI.—AUTHORITY TO BREAK AND ENTER UNDER CERTAIN CONDITIONS

§ 23-591. Authority to break and enter under certain conditions

(a) Any officer authorized by law to make arrests, or to execute search warrants, or any person aiding such an officer, may break and enter any premises, any outer or inner door or window of a dwelling house or other building, or any part thereof, any vehicle, or anything within such dwelling house, building, or vehicle, or otherwise enter to execute search or arrest warrants, to make an arrest where authorized by law without a warrant, or where necessary to liberate himself or a person aiding him in the execution of such warrant or in making such arrest.

(b) Breaking and entry shall not be made until after such officer or person makes an announcement of his identity and purpose and the officer reasonably believes that admittance to the dwelling house or other building or vehicle is being denied or unreasonably delayed.

(c) An announcement of identity and purpose shall not be required prior to such breaking and entry—

(1) if the warrant expressly authorizes breaking and entry without such a prior announcement, or

(2) if circumstances known to such officer or person at the time of breaking and entry, but, in the case of the execution of a warrant, unknown to the applicant when applying for such warrant, give him probable cause to believe that—

(A) such notice is likely to result in the evidence subject to seizure being easily and quickly destroyed or disposed of,

(B) such notice is likely to endanger the life or safety of the officer or another person,

(C) such notice is likely to enable the party to be arrested to escape, or

(D) such notice would be a useless gesture.

(d) Whoever, after notice is given under subsection (b) or after entry where such notice is unnecessary under subsection (c), destroys, conceals, disposes of, or attempts to destroy, conceal, or dispose of, or otherwise prevents or attempts to prevent the seizure of, evidence subject to seizure shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than 5 years, or both.

(e) As used in this section and in subchapters II and IV, the terms "break and enter" and "breaking and entering" include any use of physical force or violence or other unauthorized entry but do not include entry obtained by trick or stratagem. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 630.)

§ 23-701. Warrants for the arrest of fugitives from justice

Whenever any person who is (1) within the District of Columbia, (2) charged with any offense committed in any State, and (3) liable by the Constitution and laws of the United States to be delivered over upon the demand of the Governor of that State, any judge of the Superior Court may, upon complaint on oath or affirmation of any credible witness, setting forth the offense, that the person is a fugitive from justice, and such other matters as are necessary to bring the case within the provisions of law, issue a warrant to bring the person so charged before the Superior Court, to answer the complaint. #### NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER PRIOR LAW

Detention pending requisition

Where state circuit court granted writ of habeas corpus discharging petitioner, who had been ordered recommitted for violation of conditional pardon, on ground that state statute was unconstitutional and after state court of last resort had reversed the decision petitioner was arrested in District of Columbia on a fugitive warrant, detention of petitioner pending receipt of requisition from Governor of the state was authorized. Herzog v. Colpoys (1944, 143 F. 2d 137, 79 U. S. App. D. C. 81).

Original jurisdiction

The Chief Judge of District Court in District of Columbia exercises an executive function by presiding at extradition hearings and General Sessions Court exercises a judicial function by issuing detention warrant and setting bail, thus there is no court having original jurisdiction over offense within appeal provisions of Bail Reform Act, and appeal from an order of detention is, therefore, properly directed to District of Columbia Court of Appeals. J. T. Hoffman v. United States (1968, 403 F. 2d 927, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

§ 23-702. Procedure on arrest of fugitives

(a) Any person arrested upon a warrant issued pursuant to section 23-701, or arrested within the District of Columbia as a fugitive from justice without a warrant having been issued, shall be taken before the Criminal Division of the Superior Court for preliminary examination on a complaint charging him as a fugitive.

(b) If, upon the examination of the person charged, it shall appear to the court that there is reasonable cause to believe that the complaint is true and that the person may be lawfully demanded of the chief judge, the person shall be detained or released according to law, in like manner as if the offense had been committed in the District of Columbia, to appear before the court at a future date, allowing thirty days to obtain a requisition from the Governor of the State from which the person is a fugitive. The complaint of fugitivity from another jurisdiction shall create a presumption that the person is unlikely to appear if released, which may be overcome only by clear and convincing proof.

(c) If the person so released or detained shall appear before the court upon the day ordered, he shall be discharged, unless he shall be demanded by requisition, pursuant to subsection (g) of this section or section 23-704, or unless the court shall find cause to detain or to release him as provided by subsection (b) until a later day; but regardless of whether the person shall be detained or released as provided in subsection (b) or discharged, his delivery to any person authorized by the warrant of the Governor shall be a discharge of any bond or obligation.

(d) The Chief of Police of the Metropolitan Police Department shall give notice to the police official or sheriff of the city or county from which the person is a fugitive that the person is so held in the District of Columbia.

(e) A person detained as provided by this section shall not be detained in jail longer than to allow a reasonable time for the person receiving the notice required by subsection (d) to apply for and obtain a proper requisition for the person detained according to the circumstances of the case and the distance of the place where the offense is alleged to have been committed.

(f) (1) At any time prior to the filing of a requisition, a person arrested pursuant to this section may in open court waive further proceedings pursuant to this chapter.

(2) Following waiver, a judge of the Superior Court may, in his discretion, if the United States attorney consents, release the person upon such conditions as the judge shall deem necessary to insure his appearance before the proper official in the State from which he is a fugitive, and shall otherwise order his return to the jurisdiction of that State in the custody of a proper official.

(3) Following waiver, a person not released pursuant to paragraph (2) of this subsection shall be ordered to return to the jurisdiction from which he is a fugitive in the custody of a proper official, and may be detained to await return.

(4) A person detained pursuant to paragraph (3) for more than three days (not including Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays) shall be returned to the court and shall thereupon be released pursuant to paragraph (2), unless the court shall find good reason to extend his detention for an additional three days to obtain the attendance of a proper official of the demanding jurisdiction.

(g) If a person has not waived further proceedings pursuant to subsection (f), and a requisition from the Governor of the jurisdiction from which the person is a fugitive is presented to the court, the court shall order the requisition to be filed and referred to the chief judge for extradition proceedings pursuant to section 23-704, and shall order the person committed pending those proceedings. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 631.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 23-703, 23-902.

Original jurisdiction

The Chief Judge of District Court in District of Columbia exercises an executive function by presiding at extradition hearings and General Sessions Court exercises a judicial function by issuing detention warrant and setting bail, thus there is no court having original jurisdiction over offense within appeal provisions of Bail Reform Act, and appeal from an order of detention is, therefore, properly directed to District of Columbia Court of Appeals. J. T. Hoffman v. United States (1968, 403 F. 2d 927, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

§ 23-703. Failure to appear

Any person released pursuant to section 23-702 who fails to appear as required shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 632.)

§ 23-704. Extradition

(a) In all cases where the laws of the United States provide that fugitives from justice shall be delivered up, the chief judge of the Superior Court shall cause to be apprehended and delivered up fugitives from justice who shall be found within the District of Columbia, in the same manner and under the same regulations as the executive authority of a State is required to do by the provisions of chapter 209 of title 18, United States Code, and all executive and judicial officers are required to obey the lawful precepts or other process issued for that purpose, and to aid and assist in that delivery.

(b) The chief judge of the Superior Court may also surrender, on demand of the Governor of any State, any person in the District of Columbia charged in that State in the manner provided in subsection (a) of this section with committing an act in the District of Columbia, or in another State, intentionally resulting in a crime in the State whose executive authority is making the demand, even though the accused was not in that State at the time of the commission of the crime, and has not fled therefrom.

(c) No person apprehended in accordance with the provisions of subsections (a) and (b) of this section shall be delivered over to the agent whom the executive authority demanding him shall have appointed to receive him unless he shall first be taken before the chief judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia who shall inform him of the demand made for his surrender, and of the crime with which he is charged, and that he has the right to demand and procure legal counsel.

(d) If the person or his counsel shall state that he desires to test the legality of the person's arrest, the chief judge shall hold a hearing to determine whether the person shall be delivered over as demanded. At the hearing, the person shall have the same rights to challenge his detention and extradition as if the hearing were upon a writ of habeas corpus.

(e) If the chief judge shall order the person delivered over, he may appeal, within twenty-four hours, from that order to the District of Columbia Court of Appeals if the chief judge who rendered the order, or a judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, issues a certificate of probable cause. The appeal shall be expedited by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. An application for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of a person who is authorized to demand a hearing pursuant to this subsection shall not be entertained if it appears that the applicant has failed to demand such a hearing or that the chief judge, after hearing, has ordered him delivered over, unless it also appears that the remedy by hearing is inadequate or ineffective to test the legality of his detention.

(f) Nothing contained in this subsection shall prevent a person from waiving his right to appear before the chief judge of the Superior Court and voluntarily returning in custody of a proper official to the jurisdiction of the State which is demanding him.

(g) No person demanded by the Governor of a State pursuant to this section shall be released upon bond or other obligation except pursuant to an order of a court of the demanding State.

(h) Any associate judge designated by the chief judge or acting chief judge shall have the same power to act pursuant to this section as the chief judge. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 632.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 23-702, 23-706.

Conditions for granting extradition

To support a rendition of accused by asylum state to demanding state, it must be shown that he is the individual named in the writ of extradition, he is substantially charged with a crime in demanding state and he is a fugitive, which is to say he was in demanding state when crime was committed, and asylum state is to consider no other issues. J. Martin v. State of Maryland (D.C. App. 1972, 287 A.2d 823).

In extradition proceeding, courts in asylum state will not judge adequacy of demanding state's indictment or consider issues that may appropriately be raised at trial. Id.

Issues surrounding person's previous arrest and possible suppression of evidence there seized are not proper subject of consideration at extradition proceeding. Id.

Hearing

Even if evidence forwarded to demanding state had been seized in course of illegal arrest in District of Columbia, chief judge of the Superior Court, before ordering extradition, is not required to hold hearing on issue of whether there had been probable cause for the arrest in District of Columbia, whether evidence had been illegally seized or whether the demanding state's indictment was fruit of the illegal arrest. J. Martin v. State of Maryland (D.C. App. 1972, 287 A. 2d 823).

In conducting extradition hearing, chief judge of superior court should give detainee same rights to challenge his detention and extradition as on writ of habeas corpus. Id.

Nature of proceeding

Extradition proceeding is not a criminal trial but is civil in nature. J. Martin v. State of Maryland (D.C. App. 1972, 287 A. 2d 823).

In performing his duties of extradition pursuant to statute, chief judge is carrying out functions of executive. Id.

Affidavit—Sufficiency

Affidavit for interstate rendition of an accused which is framed in the conclusory statutory language and which lacks any identification of sources does not show probable cause under the Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution. O. L. Kirkland and E. Smith v. P. H. Preston and L. Moore (1967, 385 F. 2d 670, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 148).

Where affidavit submitted by Florida authorities in support of extradition alleged in conclusory statutory language that accuseds were guilty of second-degree arson, affidavit was insufficient to show probable cause for extradition and accuseds were entitled to writ of habeas corpus releasing them from custody of asylum jurisdiction. Id.

Arrest in different State

Defendant indicted in State of Pennsylvania for obtaining money under false pretenses, arrested in District of Columbia upon warrant issued under this section on requisition of Governor of Pennsylvania, was remanded to custody of the agent of the State of Pennsylvania. Barrett v. Bigger (1927, 17 F. 2d 669, 57 App. D.C. 81, certiorari denied 47 S. Ct. 765, 274 U.S. 752, 71 L. Ed. 1332).

Burden of proof

If the extradition papers make out a prima facie case, the burden of proving absence from the State is on petitioner. Levy v. Splain (1920, 267 F. 333, 50 App. D.C. 31). See, also, Ellison v. Splain (1920, 267 F. 247, 49 App. D.C. 99).

Conditions for granting extradition

Interstate extradition under Federal Constitution and implementing statutes is conditioned on requirements that person demanded must be substantially charged with a crime and must be a fugitive. J. Moncrief v. S. A. Anderson (1964, 342 F. 2d 902, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Criminal arrest

Apprehension of a fugitive for purpose of extradition is a "criminal arrest" since it deprives fugitive of his liberty for purposes of insuring his presence at criminal trial. O. L. Kirkland and E. Smith v. P. H. Preston and L. Moore (1967, 385 F. 2d 670, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 148).

Cruel and unusual punishment

Even if mental condition of alleged convict, who had allegedly escaped from custody in North Carolina, were such that, after extradition order had been properly entered, convict was in fact psychotic and could not assist counsel who had promptly filed habeas corpus petition after entry of the extradition order, return of convict to North Carolina would not be cruel and unusual punishment. Lathan v. Reid (1960, 280 F. 2d 66, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 58, certiorari denied 81 S. Ct. 107, 364 U.S. 865, 5 L. Ed. 2d 86).

Detention of accused person

"An accused person may be held a reasonable time to await the preparation and transmission of extradition papers from the demanding State." Stallings v. Splain (1919, 258 F. 510, 49 App. D.C. 38, affirmed 40 S. Ct. 537, 253 U.S. 339, 64 L. Ed. 940).

Duty and authority of chief judge

The Chief Judge of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia has executive authority similar to that of State governors in requisition proceedings.

Maktos v. Matthews (1952, 194 F. 2d 354, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 183).

This section expressly confers upon the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court (District Court of the United States) of the District authority to act in requisition proceedings. Hill v. Dorsey (1928, 22 F. 2d 1003, 57 App. D.C. 305).

Chief Justice acts in extradition matters in an executive capacity. Reed v. Colpoys (1938, 99 F. 2d 396, 69 App. D.C. 163, certiorari denied 59 S. Ct. 97, 305 U.S. 598, 83 L. Ed. 379). See, also, Lee Won Sing v. Cottone (1941, 123 F. 2d 169, 74 App. D.C. 374).

Evidence

Where uncontradicted testimony showed that defendant was in Baltimore, Maryland, on day that Maryland indictment charged that he unlawfully deserted his wife and no evidence was offered by defendant to rebut presumption of fugitivity created by recitals of indictment, that issue was closed and there was ample basis for the requisition made by Governor of Maryland. Brown Sr. v. Ward, U.S. Marshal etc. (1960, 275 F. 2d 884, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 220).

Relator, held for extradition, could not complain that his petition for habeas corpus was denied on basis of evidence received at requisition hearing where his counsel made no request at any stage that relator be put on stand and no proffer at all of any evidence contradicting what was established at the requisition hearing. Id.

To justify commitment for extradition there must be evidence to prove guilt of the accused. Foster v. Goldsoll (1919, 48 App. D.C. 505, certiorari denied 39 S. Ct. 495, 250 U.S. 647, 63 L. Ed. 1188).

False imprisonment

Where after District of Columbia judge had issued executive order, in compliance with requisition proceedings from Pennsylvania, ordering the petitioner, arrested in District, be delivered to Pennsylvania authority, petitioner instituted habeas corpus proceedings, trial court denied writ, but did not order any stay of requisition proceedings, and while appeal of habeas corpus proceeding was pending, District Marshal delivered petitioner to Pennsylvania detective, detective was protected by his warrant and executive order of judge from liability to petitioner for false imprisonment when he received him and returned him to Pennsylvania. Robinson Jr. v. Harris, District Attorney (D.C.D.C. 1955, 135 F. Supp. 239).

Finding of trial judge

If evidence is conflicting as to presence of defendant in demanding state, the finding of the trial judge will not be disturbed on appeal. Jackson v. Snyder (1924, 293 F. 842, 54 App. D.C. 23).

Fourth Amendment standards

Affidavit submitted by demanding state to chief executive of asylum state for extradition of fugitive must present facts sufficient to establish a showing of probable cause under Fourth Amendment standards. O. L. Kirkland and E. Smith v. P. H. Preston and L. Moore (1967, 385 F. 2d 670, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 148).

The Fourth Amendment, which governs arrests, governs extradition arrests. Id.

To be valid under the Fourth Amendment, an arrest must be preceded by a finding of probable cause. Id.

Fugitive from justice

"Fugitivity," which will justify extradition, means presence in demanding state when crime was allegedly committed. J. Moncrief v. S. A. Anderson (1964, 342 F. 2d 902, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Fugitivity question in extradition proceeding is one of fact to be determined in first instance by governor of asylum state or in District of Columbia by Chief Judge of the District Court sitting in an executive capacity. Id.

Under 18 U.S.C. § 3182, implementing U.S. Const. Art. 4, § 2, concerning interstate extradition, the governor of the asylum state has for decision the legal question whether the demanded person has been substantially charged with a crime, and the factual question whether he is a fugitive from justice. Bruzaud v. Matthews (1953, 207 F. 2d 25, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 47).

If petitioner offers proof showing with precision that he left the demanding state before the commission of the alleged crime "It would then devolve upon the person detaining him 'to show that he was a fugitive from justice by producing evidence that he was in the state at the time charged in the indictment, or to prove that said date had been erroneously charged and could be carried back to the necessary time.'" Levy v. Splain (1920, 267 F. 333, 50 App. D.C. 31).

"To be a fugitive from justice, in the sense of the act of Congress regulating the subject under consideration. It is not necessary that the party charged should have left the state in which the crime is alleged to have been committed, after an indictment found, or for the purpose of avoiding a prosecution anticipated or begun, but simply that, having within a State committed that which by its laws constitutes a crime, when he is sought to be subjected to its criminal process to answer for his offense he has left its jurisdiction and is found within the territory of another." DePoilly v. Palmer (1906, 28 App. D.C. 324).

The issues to be decided in habeas corpus case commenced when chief judge signed extradition papers were (1) whether identity of remanded person was established, (2) whether he was substantially charged with a crime in demanding state, and (3) whether he was a "fugitive from justice," that is to say, was he present in the demanding state when a crime was allegedly committed. Kyles v. Preston (D.C.D.C. 1966, 253 F. Supp. 628).

Where order for extradition of alleged convict from District of Columbia was properly entered, even if, at time of hearing on habeas corpus petition, which had been filed promptly by convict after extradition order had been entered, convict was psychotic and could not assist counsel, convict was not entitled to habeas corpus, and extradition would not be delayed until restoration of convict to competency. Lathan v. Reid (1960, 280 F. 2d 66, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 58, certiorari denied 81 S. Ct. 107, 364 U.S. 865, 5 L. Ed. 2d 86).

In habeas corpus proceeding brought by relator held for extradition, hearing court will not consider guilt or innocence of accused, will not try any issues in the criminal case, will not construe any statutes of requisitioning state and will not inquire into validity of the indictment. Brown Sr., v. Ward, U.S. Marshal, etc. (1960, 275 F. 2d 884, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 220).

On habeas corpus, where there is no claim that the extradition papers are not regular on their face, there is but one question open for investigation, namely, whether petitioner was in demanding state at the time the crime charged was committed. Levy v. Splain (1920, 267 F. 333, 50 App. D.C. 31). See, also, Watts v. Splain (1922, 277 F. 335, 51 App. D.C. 129).

When indictment charged conspiracy on a certain day without a continuando, the accused in extradition proceeding should be discharged on habeas corpus when he proved he was not in the state when the offense was charged to have been committed. Levy v. Splain (1920, 267 F. 333, 50 App. D.C. 31).

On habeas corpus review in court of asylum state of an extradition order of governor, the inquiry of the court is limited to the two questions which were before governor, namely, whether demanded person has been substantially charged with crime, and factual question whether he is a fugitive from justice. Bruzard v. Matthews (1953, 207 F. 2d 25, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 47).

Where indictment involved in extradition proceeding charged commission of crime within Virginia, this section permitting extradition from the district without showing of fugitivity of person charged with committing, outside the demanding state, an act which intentionally resulted in a crime in the demanding State was not applicable. In re Gibson (D.C.D.C. 1956, 147 F. Supp. 591).

Where extradition is sought for commission of crime within demanding state, it is jurisdictional that person sought to be extradited was in demanding state at time the alleged offense was committed, and, in absence of allegation as to date of offense in the indictment or papers accompanying request for requisition or of testimony as to such date at the requisition or habeas corpus proceeding, there is no prima facie case of fugitivity made by the warrant itself, and the usual presumption of fugitivity cannot arise. Id.

Indictment

Presence of demanding state's indictment alone in extradition proceeding is not necessarily conclusive evidence that person sought to be extradited is a fugitive from demanding state, but it raises presumption of fugitivity, which may be overcome, but which will not be disturbed except on clear and convincing proof to contrary. J. Moncrief v. S. A. Anderson (1964, 342 F. 2d 902, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Title 18 U.S.C. § 3182, does not permit a requisition to be based upon a warrant of arrest, but requires demanding governor to produce copy of an indictment or copy of an accusatory affidavit, and when an indictment had been returned and copy of it attached to requisition, no purpose was served by also attaching a copy of an earlier affidavit made by complaining witness, but affidavit was mere surplusage. Bruzard v. Matthews (1953, 207 F. 2d 25, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 47).

"It is only in cases when it is apparent that the indictment does not charge an offense at all, that another court will pass on it." Wheeler v. Palmer (1914, 42 App. D.C. 395).

Indictment need only show that accused was substantially charged with a crime under the law of the demanding state. The legal sufficiency of the indictment as a pleading must be tested in the courts of the demanding state. Webster v. Splain (1917, 45 App. D.C. 567). See, also, Wheeler v. Palmer (1914, 42 App. D.C. 395); Farr v. Palmer (1904, 24 App. D.C. 234); DePoilly v. Palmer (1906, 28 App. D.C. 324); Goodale v. Splain (1914, 42 App. D.C. 235).

Formal defects in indictment will not prevent removal of petitioners to another district for trial but "if indictment were a mere information, or upon inspection, set forth no crime against United States, or a wholly different crime from that alleged as the basis for proceedings, or if such crime be charged to have been committed in another district from that to which the extradition is sought, the commissioner could not properly consider it as ground for removal." Whitaker v. Hitt (1923, 285 F. 797, 52 App. D.C. 149, 27 A.L.R. 951).

When an extradition demand is accompanied by an indictment, that document embodies a grand jury's judgment that constitutional probable cause exists. O. L. Kirkland and E. Smith v. P. H. Preston and L. Moore (1967, 385 F. 2d 670, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 148).

Mental competency

In hearing to determine whether to extradite from District of Columbia one who had allegedly escaped from custody in North Carolina, evidence supported finding that alleged fugitive was mentally competent for purposes of the hearing. Lathan v. Reid (1960, 280 F. 2d 66, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 58, certiorari denied 81 S. Ct. 107, 364 U.S. 865, 5 L. Ed. 2d 86).

Where alleged fugitive was competent for purposes of hearing to determine whether to extradite him from District of Columbia, and the government's evidence as to identity, fugitivity, and charge of criminality was clear and complete, extradition order was valid. Id.

Original jurisdiction

The Chief Judge of District Court in District of Columbia exercises an executive function by presiding at extradition hearings and General Sessions Court exercises a judicial function by issuing detention warrant and setting bail, thus there is no court having original jurisdiction over offense within appeal provisions of Bail Reform Act, and appeal from an order of detention is, therefore, properly directed to District of Columbia Court of Appeals. J. T. Hoffman v. United States (1968, 403 F. 2d 927, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

Question of law

Question whether person demanded in extradition proceeding is substantially charged with crime in demanding state is question of law and can be determined from extradition papers. J. Moncrief v. S. A. Anderson (1964, 342 F. 2d 902, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Review

In light of newly presented allegations, which raised question in regard to element requisite to lawful extradition of petitioner, Court of Appeals would grant petition to petitioner for leave to appeal without prepayment of costs from order of District Court dismissing habeas corpus petition without hearing, would vacate order of dismissal, and would remand for reconsideration in light of evidence subsequently presented at extradition hearing that petitioner was not in demanding state on date of alleged offense. J. Moncrief v. S. A. Anderson (1964, 342 F. 2d 902, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Factual decision in extradition proceeding that person demanded is a fugitive from demanding state is reviewable by way of habeas corpus, but should not be disturbed if there is evidence pro and con on question or if there is some evidence sustaining the finding. Id.

Sheriff's application

It is immaterial when sheriff used the wrong gender of prisoner in application to the governor for a requisition on the authorities of the District of Columbia. John v. Splain (1921, 269 F. 717, 50 App. D.C. 201).

§ 23-705. Removal proceedings and returns to foreign countries not affected

Nothing contained in this chapter shall repeal, modify, or in any way affect existing law concerning the procedure for the return of any person apprehended in the District of Columbia to a Federal judicial district to answer a Federal charge, or repeal, modify, or affect existing law or treaty concerning the return to a foreign country of a person apprehended or detained in the District of Columbia as a fugitive from a foreign country. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 633.)

§ 23-706. Confinement

(a) The agent of the demanding State to whom the prisoner may have been delivered in accordance with the provisions of section 23-704, may, when necessary, confine the prisoner in a facility of the District of Columbia Department of Corrections, and the Department of Corrections must receive and safely keep the prisoner for such reasonable time as will enable the officer or person having charge of him to proceed on his route, such officer or person being chargeable with the expense of keeping.

(b) The officer or agent of a demanding State to whom a prisoner may have been delivered following extradition proceedings in another State, or to whom a prisoner may have been delivered after waiving extradition in the other State, and who is passing through the District of Columbia with a prisoner for the purpose of immediately returning the prisoner to the demanding State, may, when necessary, confine the prisoner in a facility of the Department of Corrections. The Department of Corrections must receive and safely keep the prisoner for such reasonable time as will enable the officer or agent to proceed on his route, such officer or agent being chargeable with the expense of keeping. That officer or agent shall produce and show to the Department of Corrections satisfactory written evidence of the fact that he is actually transporting the prisoner to the demanding State after a requisition by the executive authority of the demanding State. The prisoner shall not be entitled to demand a new requisition while in the District of Columbia. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 633.)

§ 23-707. Definitions

For purposes of this chapter—

(1) the term "State" includes any territory or possession of the United States; and

(2) the term "Governor" means the executive authority of a State.

Chapter 9.—FRESH PURSUIT

Sec.

23-901. Arrests in the District of Columbia by officers of other States.

23-902. Hearing; commitment; discharge.

23-903. "Fresh pursuit" defined.

§ 23-901. Arrests in the District of Columbia by officers of other States

Any member of a duly organized peace unit of any State (or county or municipality thereof) of the United States who enters the District of Columbia in fresh pursuit and continues within the District of Columbia in fresh pursuit of a person in order to arrest him on the ground that he is believed to have committed a felony in such State shall have the same authority to arrest and hold that person in custody as has any member of any duly organized peace unit of the District of Columbia to arrest and hold in custody a person on the ground that he is believed to have committed a felony in the District of Columbia. This section shall not be construed so as to make unlawful any arrest in the District of Columbia which would otherwise be lawful. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 634.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

See note preceding section 23-101.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 23-581, 23-902.

Authority

Only authority for Maryland state police officer to arrest person within District of Columbia exists by virtue of Uniform Act on Fresh Pursuit which grants peace officer of another state who enters District of Columbia in fresh pursuit of person believed to have committed felony same authority to arrest as District of Columbia peace officers. District of Columbia v. Perry, (D.C. App. 1966, 215 A. 2d 845).

Arrest of defendant by Maryland state police officer within District of Columbia for speeding, a misdemeanor in Maryland was unauthorized by Uniform Act on Fresh Pursuit. Id.

Compliance with laws of neighboring jurisdiction

Defendants who were observed by Maryland officers parking in an alley and attempting to gain admission to motel located near boundary between Maryland and District of Columbia, Maryland officer's failure to comply with District of Columbia Fresh Pursuit Statute did not vitiate defendants' arrests which took place just beyond dividing line. C. L. Boddie et al. v. State of Maryland (Md. App. 1969, 252 A. 2d 290).

Maryland officers who are making arrest in District of Columbia may not with impunity ignore District of Columbia's Fresh Pursuit Statute. Id.

Probable cause for arrest

An arresting officer observing defendants park automobile in an alley alongside a motel and attempt to enter motel at 4:36 a.m. and who knew of prior motel holdups including one that night had probable cause to believe that defendants had committed felony. C. L. Boddie et al. v. State of Maryland (Md. App. 1969, 252 A. 2d 290).

Probable cause for an arrest exists when facts and circumstances within the knowledge of arresting officer, or of which he has reasonably trustworthy information, are sufficient to warrant reasonably cautious person to believe that felony has been committed by person arrested. Id.

Only a probability, and not prima facie showing, of criminal activity is the standard of probable cause for arrest. Id.

The rule of probable cause for an arrest is nontechnical conception of reasonable ground for belief of guilt, requiring less evidence for such belief than would justify conviction, but more evidence than that which would arouse mere suspicion. Id.

The fact that officer, who had probable cause to arrest defendants on a charge of assault with intent to murder, did not arrest defendants on that offense, or that defendants were subsequently acquitted of such offense, did not mean that arresting officer did not have probable cause to arrest. Id.

Legality of arrest is measured by existence of probable cause at time of arrest. Id.

§ 23-902. Hearing; commitment; discharge

If an arrest is made in the District of Columbia by an officer of another State in accordance with the provisions of section 23-901, he shall without unnecessary delay take the person arrested before a judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, who shall conduct a hearing for the purpose of determining the lawfulness of the arrest. If the judge determines that the arrest was lawful, he shall order the release or detention of the person arrested, pursuant to section 23-702, to await for a reasonable time a requisition from the Governor of the State demanding the extradition of the person arrested. If the judge determines that the arrest was unlawful he shall order the person discharged. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 634.)

§ 23-903. "Fresh pursuit" defined

For purposes of this chapter, the term "fresh pursuit" shall include fresh pursuit as defined by the common law, also the pursuit of a person who has committed a felony or one whom the pursuing officer has reasonable grounds to believe has committed a felony. It shall also include the pursuit of a person whom the pursuing officer has reasonable grounds to believe has committed a felony, although no felony has actually been committed, if there is reasonable ground for believing that a felony has been committed. Such term shall not necessarily imply an instant pursuit, but pursuit without unreasonable delay. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 634.)

Compliance with laws of neighboring jurisdiction

Defendants who were observed by Maryland officers parking in an alley and attempting to gain admission to motel located near boundary between Maryland and District of Columbia, Maryland officer's failure to comply with District of Columbia Fresh Pursuit Statute did not vitiate defendants' arrests which took place just beyond dividing line. C. L. Boddie et al. v. State of Maryland (Md. App. 1969, 252 A. 2d 290).

Maryland officers who are making arrest in District of Columbia may not with impunity ignore District of Columbia's Fresh Pursuit Statute. Id.

District of Columbia. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 635.)

§ 23-1104. Attorneys procuring employment through official or bondsman for a consideration prohibited

It shall be unlawful for any attorney at law, either directly or indirectly, to give, loan, donate, contribute, or to promise to give, loan, donate, or contribute any money, property, entertainment, or other thing of value whatsoever to, or to split or divide any fee or commission with, any bondsman, police officer, deputy United States marshal, probation officer, bailiff, clerk, or other attaché of any criminal court for causing or procuring or assisting in causing or procuring a person to employ the attorney to represent him in a criminal case in the District of Columbia. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 635.)

§ 23-1105. Receiving other than regular fee for bonding prohibited; bondsmen prohibited from endeavoring to secure dismissal or settlement

It shall be lawful to charge for executing a bond in a criminal case in the District of Columbia, but it shall be unlawful for a bondsman, either directly or indirectly, to charge, accept, or receive a sum of money, or other thing of value, other than the regular fee for bonding, from a person for whom he has executed bond, for any other service whatever performed in connection with any indictment, information, or charge upon which the person is bailed or held in the District of Columbia. It also shall be unlawful for any bondsman to settle, or attempt to settle, or to procure or attempt to procure the dismissal of any indictment, information, or charge against any person in custody or held upon bond in the District of Columbia, with a court, or with the prosecuting attorney in a court in the District of Columbia. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 636.)

§ 23-1106. Posting names of authorized bondsmen; list to be furnished prisoners; prisoners may communicate with bondsmen; record to be kept by police

A typewritten or printed list alphabetically arranged of all persons engaged under the authority of any of the courts of criminal jurisdiction in the District of Columbia in the business of becoming surety upon bonds for compensation in criminal cases shall be posted in a conspicuous place in each police precinct, jail, prisoner's dock, house of detention, and every other place in the District of Columbia in which persons in custody of the law are detained, and one or more copies thereof kept on hand; and when a person who is detained in custody in a place of detention shall request a person in charge thereof to furnish him the name of a bondsman, or to put him in communication with a bondsman, the list shall be furnished to the person in charge of the place of detention within a reasonable time to put the person detained in communication with the bondsman selected, and the person in charge of the place of detention shall contemporaneously with that transaction make in the blotter or book of record kept in the place of detention, a record showing the name of the person requesting the bondsman, the offense with which the person is charged, the time at which the request was made, the bondsman requested, and the person by whom the bondsman was called, and preserve that as a permanent record in the book or blotter in which entered. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 636.)

§ 23-1107. Bondsmen prohibited from entering place of detention unless requested by prisoner; record of visit to be kept

It shall be unlawful for a bondsman to enter a police precinct, jail, prisoner's dock, house of detention, or other place where persons in the custody of the law are detained in the District of Columbia for the purpose of obtaining employment as a bondsman, without having been previously called by a person, detained or by some relative or other authorized person acting for or on behalf of the person detained. Whenever a bondsman enters a police precinct, jail, prisoner's dock, house of detention, or other place where persons in the custody of the law are detained in the District of Columbia, he shall forthwith give to the person in charge thereof his mission there and the name of the person calling him and requesting him to come to such place. That information shall be recorded by the person in charge of the place of detention and preserved as a public record, and the failure of the bondsman to give that information, or the failure of the person in charge of the place of detention to make and preserve a record of that information, shall constitute a violation of this chapter. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 636.)

§ 23-1108. Qualifications of bondsmen; rules to be prescribed by courts; list of agents to be furnished; renewal of authority to act; detailed records to be kept; penalties and disqualifications

(a) It shall be the duty of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia and the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, each, to provide, under reasonable rules and regulations, the qualifications of persons and corporations applying for authority to engage in the bonding business in criminal cases in the District of Columbia, and the terms and conditions upon which the business shall be carried on, and no person or corporation shall, either as principal, or as agent, clerk, or representative of another, engage in the bonding business in either court until he shall, by order of the court, be authorized to do so. The courts, in making these rules and regulations, and in granting authority to persons to engage in the bonding business, shall take into consideration both the financial responsibility and the moral qualities of the person so applying, and no person shall be permitted to engage, either as principal or agent, in the bonding business, who has ever been convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude, or who is not known to be a person of good moral character. It shall be the duty of each of the courts to require every person qualifying to engage in the bonding business as principal to file with the court a list showing the name, age, and residence of each person employed by the bondsman as agent, clerk, or representative in the bonding business, and require an affidavit from each of these persons stating that he will abide by the terms and provisions of this chapter. Each of the courts shall require the authority of each of those persons to be renewed from time to time at such periods as the court may by rule provide, and before the authority shall be renewed the court shall require from each of those persons an affidavit that since his previous qualification to engage in the bonding business he has abided by the provisions of this chapter, and any person swearing falsely in any of the affidavits shall be guilty of perjury.

(b) Each court shall prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to insure that whenever a bondsman becomes surety for compensation upon a bond in a criminal case before the court, the bondsman shall make a record, which shall be accurate to the best of the maker's knowledge and belief and shall thereafter be open for inspection by the court or its designated representative, and by the designated representative of other law enforcement agencies of the District of Columbia, of the following matters:

- (1) the full name and address of the person for whom the bond is executed (referred to in this subsection as the "defendant") and the full name and address of his employer, if any;
- (2) the offense with which the defendant is charged;
- (3) the name of the court or officer authorizing the defendant's admission to bail;
- (4) the amount of the bond;
- (5) the name of the person who called the bondsman, if other than the defendant;
- (6) the amount of the bondsman's charge for executing the bond;
- (7) the full name and address of the person to whom the bondsman presented his bill for the charge;
- (8) the full name and address of the person paying the charge; and
- (9) the manner of payment of the charge.

Whoever violates any rule or regulation prescribed under this subsection shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than six months, or both, and if he is a bondsman shall be disqualified from thereafter engaging in any manner in the bonding business for such period of time as the trial judge shall order. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 637.)

Evidence

Evidence was insufficient to sustain finding that bondsman was guilty of infraction of court rule providing that any bondsman who procures or assists in procuring or attempts to procure retention or employment of any attorney to represent any person charged with offense cognizable in Municipal Court for the District of Columbia, or solicits or receives or enters into any agreement to receive any fee, commission money, or property or things of value for procuring or assisting or attempting to procure retention or employment of any attorney to represent any person charged with offense cognizable in Municipal Court, shall be suspended. Matter of Leon B. Greene (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 130 A. 2d 593).

Grounds for renewal of license

Order of District Court denying application of a professional bondsman for renewal of his license to engage in bonding business on ground that applicant lacked qualifications for a bondsman was set aside. In re Carter (1951, 192 F. 2d 15, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 310, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 89, 342 U.S. 862, 96 L. Ed. 648, rehearing denied 72 S. Ct. 173, 342 U.S. 889, 96 L. Ed. 667).

Moral turpitude

"Moral turpitude", within statute precluding licensing as a bondsman a person convicted of any offense involving moral turpitude, includes crimes in which fraud was an ingredient. In the Matter of Nathaniel Madden (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 184 A. 2d 204).

Conviction of an offense involving moral turpitude precludes qualification for licensing of a bondsman, and courts have no latitude or discretion in the matter. Id.

Conviction for fraudulent filing of Federal income tax returns was conviction of an offense involving "moral turpitude," within statute precluding licensing as a bondsman a person convicted of an offense involving moral turpitude. Id.

Nature of license

License to engage in bonding business, once granted, becomes a right, which ought not to be taken away on the strength of vague, indefinite, and uncorroborated testimony. Matter of Leon B. Greene (D. C. Mun. App. 1957, 130 A. 2d 593).

Revocation of license

When an authorization to engage in the bonding business has been approved by the district court and is outstanding, it can be revoked, prior to the expiration of the term, only upon a proceeding which contains the elements of due process of law, i. e., a hearing and revelation of all matter upon which a decision is to be based. In re Carter (1949, 177 F. 2d 75, 85 U.S. App. D.C. 229, certiorari denied 70 S. Ct. 250, 338 U.S. 900, 94 L. Ed. 554).

§ 23-1109. Giving advance information of proposed raid prohibited

It shall be unlawful for any police officer or other public official, in advance of any raid by police or other peace officers or public officials or the execution of any search warrant or warrant of arrest, to give or furnish, either directly or indirectly, any information concerning the proposed raid or arrest to any person engaged in any manner in the bonding business, or to any attorney at law; but it shall not be unlawful for any police or other peace officer, in conducting any raid or in executing any search warrant or warrant of arrest, to communicate to any attorney at law or person engaged in the bonding business, any fact necessary to enable the officer to obtain from the attorney at law or person engaged in the bonding business information necessary to enable the officer to carry out the raid or execute the process. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 638.)

§ 23-1110. Designation of official to take bail or collateral when court is not in session; issuance of citations

(a) The judges of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia shall have the authority to appoint some official of the Metropolitan Police Department to act as a clerk of the court with authority to take bail or collateral from persons charged with offenses triable in the Superior Court at all times when the court is not open and its clerks accessible. The official so appointed shall have the same authority at those times with reference to taking bonds or collateral as the clerk of the Municipal Court had on March 3, 1933; shall receive no compensation for these services other than his regular salary; shall be subject to the orders and rules of the Superior Court in discharge of his duties, and may be removed as the clerk at any time by the judges of the court. The United States District Court for the District of Columbia shall have power to authorize the official appointed by the Superior Court to take bond of persons arrested upon writs and process from that court in criminal cases between 4 o'clock post-meridian and 9 o'clock antemeridian and upon Sundays and holidays, and shall have power at any time to revoke the authority granted by it.

(b) (1) An officer or member of the Metropolitan Police Department who arrests without a warrant a person for committing a misdemeanor may, instead of taking him into custody, issue a citation requiring the person to appear before an official of the Metropolitan Police Department designated under subsection (a) of this section to act as a clerk of the Superior Court.

(2) Whenever a person is arrested without a warrant for committing a misdemeanor and is booked and processed pursuant to law, an official of the Metropolitan Police Department designated under subsection (a) of this section to act as a clerk of the Superior Court may issue a citation to him for an appearance in court or at some other designated place, and release him from custody.

(3) No citation may be issued under paragraph (1) or (2) unless the person authorized to issue the citation has reason to believe that the arrested person will not cause injury to persons or damage to property and that he will make an appearance in answer to the citation.

(4) Whoever willfully fails to appear as required in a citation, shall be fined not more than the maximum provided for the misdemeanor for which such citation was issued or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both. Prosecution under this paragraph shall be by the prosecuting officer responsible for prosecuting the offense for which the citation is issued. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 638.)

Jurisdiction to expunge arrest record

Jurisdiction of trial court over graduate student who had been arrested in connection with civil disturbance at which he was innocently and unavoidably present, had posted collateral with police officer designated to act as clerk of court but had not been prosecuted due to lack of evidence and who sought to have arrest record expunged is provided by statute which allows police officers to be designated to act as clerk of court to accept collateral. T. Irani v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1971, 272 A. 2d 849).

Fact that graduate student, arrested for parading without permit, established without contradiction that he had been arrested in connection with civil disturbance at which he was innocently and unavoidably present, having just left cancelled class at local university where disturbance was in process, justified some relief, in action by the student to have the arrest record expunged. Id.

Preservation of records

Section 4-137 governing preservation and destruction of metropolitan police force records relates to records required to be kept under section 4-134 requiring keeping, inter alia, of arrest books and to central criminal records required under section 4-134a, as well as to records under this section of receipt and disbursement of money posted by arrested persons as collateral, photographs and fingerprints. B. M. Spock v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1971, 283 A. 2d 14).

§ 23-1111. Penalties

Any person violating any provision of this chapter shall be fined not less than $50 nor more than $100, or imprisoned for not less than ten nor more than sixty days, or both, where no other penalty is provided by this chapter; and if the person so convicted is (1) a police officer or other public official, he shall upon recommendation of the trial judge also be forthwith dismissed from office, (2) a bondsman, he shall be disqualified from thereafter engaging in any manner in the bonding business for such a period of time as the trial judge shall order, or (3) an attorney at law, he shall be subject to suspension or disbarment as attorney at law. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 639.)

§ 23-1112. Enforcement

It shall be the duty of the Superior Court and of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia to see that this chapter is enforced, and upon the impaneling of each grand jury in the District of Columbia it shall be the duty of the judge impaneling such jury to charge it to investigate the manner in which this chapter is enforced and all violations thereof in connection with the matter under investigation by such jury. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 639.)

§ 23-1301. District of Columbia Bail Agency

The District of Columbia Bail Agency (hereafter in this subchapter referred to as the "agency") shall continue in the District of Columbia and shall secure pertinent data and provide for any judicial officer in the District of Columbia or any officer or member of the Metropolitan Police Department issuing citations, reports containing verified information concerning any individual with respect to whom a bail or citation determination is to be made. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 639.)

§ 23-1302. Definitions

As used in this chapter—

(1) the term “judicial officer” means, unless otherwise indicated, the Supreme Court of the United States, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, United States District Court for the District of Columbia, the Superior Court of the District of Columbia or any justice or judge of those courts or a United States commissioner or magistrate; and

(2) the term “bail determination” means any order by a judicial officer respecting the terms and conditions of detention or release (including any order setting the amount of bail bond or any other kind of security) made to assure the appearance in court of—

(A) any person arrested in the District of Columbia, or

(B) any material witness in any criminal proceeding in a court referred to in paragraph (1). (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 640.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 23-1303.

§ 23-1303. Interviews with detainees; investigations and reports; information as confidential; consideration and use of reports in making bail determinations

(a) The agency shall, except when impracticable, interview any person detained pursuant to law or charged with an offense in the District of Columbia who is to appear before a judicial officer or whose case arose in or is before any court named in section 23-1302(1). The interview, when requested by a judicial officer, shall also be undertaken with respect to any person charged with intoxication or a traffic violation. The agency shall seek independent verification of information obtained during the interview, shall secure any such person's prior criminal record which shall be made available by the Metropolitan Police Department, and shall prepare a written report of the information for submission to the appropriate judicial officer. The report to the judicial officer shall, where appropriate, include a recommendation as to whether such person should be released or detained under any of the conditions specified in subchapter II of this chapter. If the agency does not make a recommendation, it shall submit a report without recommendation. The agency shall provide copies of its report and recommendations (if any) to the United States attorney for the District of Columbia or the Corporation Counsel of the District of Columbia, and to counsel for the person concerning whom the report is made. The report shall include but not be limited to information concerning the person accused, his family, his community ties, residence, employment, and prior criminal record, and may include such additional verified information as may become available to the agency.

(b) With respect to persons seeking review under subchapter II of this chapter of their detention or conditions of release, the agency shall review its report, seek and verify such new information as may be necessary, and modify or supplement its report to the extent appropriate.

(c) The agency, when requested by any appellate court or a judge or justice thereof, or by any other judicial officer, shall furnish a report as provided in subsection (a) of this section respecting any person whose case is pending before any such appellate court or judicial officer or in whose behalf an application for a bail determination shall have been submitted.

(d) Any information contained in the agency's files, presented in its report, or divulged during the course of any hearing shall not be admissible on the issue of guilt in any judicial proceeding, but such information may be used in proceedings under sections 23-1327, 23-1328, and 23-1329, in perjury proceedings, and for the purposes of impeachment in any subsequent proceeding.

(e) The agency, when requested by a member or officer of the Metropolitan Police Department acting pursuant to court rules governing the issuance of citations in the District of Columbia, shall furnish to such member or officer a report as provided in subsection (a).

(f) The preparation and the submission by the agency of its report as provided in this section shall be accomplished at the earliest practicable opportunity.

(g) A judicial officer in making a bail determination shall consider the agency's report and its accompanying recommendation, if any. The judicial officer may order such detention or may impose such terms and set such conditions upon release, including requiring the execution of a bail bond with sufficient solvent sureties as shall appear warranted by the facts, except that such judicial officer may not order any detention or establish any term or condition for release not otherwise authorized by law.

(h) The agency shall—

(1) supervise all persons released on nonsurety release, including release on personal recognizance, personal bond, nonfinancial conditions, or cash deposit or percentage deposit with the registry of the court;

(2) make reasonable effort to give notice of each required court appearance to each person released by the court;

(3) serve as coordinator for other agencies and organizations which serve or may be eligible to serve as custodians for persons released under supervision and advise the judicial officer as to the eligibility, availability, and capacity of such agencies and organizations;

(4) assist persons released pursuant to subchapter II of this chapter in securing employment or necessary medical or social services;

(5) inform the judicial officer and the United States attorney for the District of Columbia or the Corporation Counsel of the District of Columbia of any failure to comply with pretrial release conditions or the arrest of persons released under its supervision and recommend modifications of release conditions when appropriate;

(6) prepare, in cooperation with the United States marshal for the District of Columbia and the United States attorney for the District of Columbia, such pretrial detention reports as are required by Rule 46(h) of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure; and

(7) perform such other pretrial functions as the executive committee may, from time to time, assign.

Original jurisdiction

The Chief Judge of District Court in District of Columbia exercises an executive function by presiding at extradition hearings and General Sessions Court exercises a judicial function by issuing detention warrant and setting bail, thus there is no court having original jurisdiction over offense within appeal provisions of Bail Reform Act, an appeal from an order of detention is, therefore, properly directed to District of Columbia Court of Appeals. J. T. Hoffman v. United States (1968, 403 F. 2d 927, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 201).

§ 23-1304. Executive committee; composition; appointment and qualifications of Director

(a) The agency shall function under authority of and be responsible to an executive committee of five members of which three shall constitute a quorum. The executive committee shall be composed of the respective chief judges of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, the Superior Court, or if circumstances may require, the designee of any such chief judge, and a fifth member who shall be selected by the chief judges.

(b) The executive committee shall appoint a Director of the agency who shall be a member of the bar of the District of Columbia. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 641.)

§ 23-1305. Duties of Director; compensation; tenure

The Director of the agency shall be responsible for the supervision and execution of the duties of the agency. The Director shall receive such compensation as may be set by the executive committee but not in excess of the compensation authorized for GS-16 of the General Schedule contained in section 5332 of title 5, United States Code. The Director shall hold office at the pleasure of the executive committee. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 642.)

§ 23-1306. Chief assistant and other agency personnel; compensation

The Director, subject to the approval of the executive committee, shall employ a chief assistant and such assisting and clerical staff and may make assignments of such agency personnel as may be necessary properly to conduct the business of the agency. The staff of the agency, other than clerical, shall be drawn from law students, graduate students, or such other available sources as may be approved by the executive committee. The chief assistant to the Director shall receive compensation as may be set by the executive committee, but in an amount not in excess of the amount authorized for GS-14 of the General Schedule contained in section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, and shall hold office at the pleasure of the executive committee. All other employees of the agency shall receive compensation, as set by the executive committee, which shall be comparable to levels of compensation established in such chapter 53. From time to time, the Director, subject to the approval of the executive committee, may set merit and longevity salary increases. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 642.)

§ 23-1307. Annual reports to executive committee, Congress, and Commissioner

The Director shall on June 15 of each year submit to the executive committee a report as to the agency's administration of its responsibilities for the previous period of June 1 through May 31, a copy of which report will be transmitted by the executive committee to the Congress of the United States, and to the Commissioner of the District of Columbia. The Director shall include in his report, to be prepared as directed by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, a statement of financial condition, revenues, and expenses for the past June 1 through May 31 period. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 642.)

§ 23-1308. Budget estimates

Budget estimates for the agency shall be prepared by the Director and shall be subject to the approval of the executive committee. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 642.)

SUBCHAPTER II.—RELEASE AND PRETRIAL DETENTION

SUBCHAPTER REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This subchapter is referred to in section 23-1303.

§ 23-1321. Release in noncapital cases prior to trial

(a) Any person charged with an offense, other than an offense punishable by death, shall, at his appearance before a judicial officer, be ordered released pending trial on his personal recognizance or upon the execution of an unsecured appearance bond in an amount specified by the judicial officer, unless the officer determines, in the exercise of his discretion, that such a release will not reasonably assure the the<sup>1</sup> appearance of the person as required or the safety of any other person or the community. When such a determination is made, the judicial officer shall, either in lieu of or in addition to the above methods of release, impose the first of the following conditions of release which will reasonably assure the appearance of the person for trial or the safety of any other person or the community, or, if no single condition gives that assurance, any combination of the following conditions:

(1) Place the person in the custody of a designated person or organization agreeing to supervise him.

(2) Place restrictions on the travel, association, or place of abode of the person during the period of release.

(3) Require the execution of an appearance bond in a specified amount and the deposit in the registry of the court, in cash or other security as directed, of a sum not to exceed 10 per centum of the amount of the bond, such deposit to be returned upon the performance of the conditions of release.

(4) Require the execution of a bail bond with sufficient solvent sureties, or the deposit of cash in lieu thereof.

(5) Impose any other condition, including a condition requiring that the person return to custody after specified hours of release for employment or other limited purposes.

No financial condition may be imposed to assure the safety of any other person or the community.

(b) In determining which conditions of release, if any, will reasonably assure the appearance of a person as required or the safety of any other person or the community, the judicial officer shall, on the basis of available information, take into account such matters as the nature and circumstances of the offense charged, the weight of the evidence against such person, his family ties, employment, financial resources, character and mental conditions, past conduct, length of residence in the community, record of convictions, and any record of appearance at court proceedings, flight to avoid prosecution, or failure to appear at court proceedings.

(c) A judicial officer authorizing the release of a person under this section shall issue an appropriate order containing a statement of the conditions imposed, if any, shall inform such person of the penalties applicable to violations of the conditions of his release, shall advise him that a warrant for his arrest will be issued immediately upon any such violation, and shall warn such person of the penalties provided in section 23-1328.

(d) A person for whom conditions of release are imposed and who, after twenty-four hours from the time of the release hearing, continues to be detained as a result of his inability to meet the conditions of release, shall, upon application, be entitled to have the conditions reviewed by the judicial officer who imposed them. Unless the conditions of release are amended and the person is thereupon released, the judicial officer shall set forth in writing the reasons for requiring the conditions imposed. A person who is ordered released on a condition which requires that he return to custody after specified hours shall, upon application, be entitled to a review by the judicial officer who imposed the condition. Unless the requirement is removed and the person is thereupon released on another condition, the judicial officer shall set forth in writing the reasons for continuing the requirement. In the event that the judicial officer who imposed conditions of release is not available, any other judicial officer may review such conditions.

(e) A judicial officer ordering the release of a person on any condition specified in this section may at any time amend his order to impose additional or different conditions of release, except that if the imposition of such additional or different conditions results in the detention of the person as a result of his inability to meet such conditions or in the release of the person on a condition requiring him to return to custody after specified hours, the provisions of subsection (d) shall apply.

(f) Information stated in, or offered in connection with, any order entered pursuant to this section need not conform to the rules pertaining to the admissibility of evidence in a court of law.

(g) Nothing contained in this section shall be construed to prevent the disposition of any case or class of cases by forfeiture of collateral security where such disposition is authorized by the court.

(h) The following shall be applicable to any person detained pursuant to this subchapter:

(1) The person shall be confined, to the extent practicable, in facilities separate from convicted persons awaiting or serving sentences or being held in custody pending appeal.

(2) The person shall be afforded reasonable opportunity for private consultation with counsel and, for good cause shown, shall be released upon order of the judicial officer in the custody of the United States marshal or other appropriate person for limited periods of time to prepare defenses or for other proper reasons.

NOTES TO DECISIONS UNDER PRESENT LAW

Custodial release—Preparation of defense

Where limited custodial release offered only means by which defendant could present viable defense to second-degree murder charge, good faith representation by defendant that there were witnesses who could exculpate him but that, although defendant knew such witnesses by sight he did not know them by name was sufficient showing of "good cause" to warrant limited release of defendant in custody of United States marshal in order to obtain witnesses. United States v. B. Reese (1972, 463 F. 2d 830, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 427).

When denial of custodial release in order to obtain witnesses may deprive defendant of his only opportunity to establish his claim of defense, bona fide representation as to the character of the defense sought to be established should be accommodated unless outweighed by compelling reasons for denying release. Id.

It is for the district court, with the aid of the parties, to work out questions of judgment involved in balancing opportunity of an incarcerated defendant to be released in custody of United States marshal in order to search for witnesses against the need to take into account the safety of his custodians and to guard against the risk of flight. Id.

The degree of cooperation with respect to discovery between the government and a defendant who seeks custodial release in order to seek witnesses is to be taken into consideration as to the type and length of custodial release appropriate. Id.

Appeal from conviction for contempt

Pending an appeal from an order refusing to discharge defendant on habeas corpus from conviction for contempt, defendant is entitled to bail. In re Moss (1904, 23 App. D.C. 474).

Excessive bail

Requiring defendant, convicted of traffic violation for which $5 fine was imposed, to post $200 bail bond pending appeal, was improper. H. W. Starr v. District of Columbia (D.C. Man. App. 1962, 176 A. 2d 878).

Amount of bail must bear some reasonable relation to purpose for which it is given. Id.

§ 23-1322. Detention prior to trial

(a) Subject to the provisions of this section, a judicial officer may order pretrial detention of—

(1) a person charged with a dangerous crime, as defined in section 23-1331(3), if the Government certifies by motion that based on such person's pattern of behavior consisting of his past and present conduct, and on the other factors set out in section 23-1321(b), there is no condition or combination of conditions which will reasonably assure the safety of the community;

(2) a person charged with a crime of violence, as defined in section 23-1331(4), if (i) the person has been convicted of a crime of violence within the ten-year period immediately preceding the alleged crime of violence for which he is presently charged; or (ii) the crime of violence was allegedly committed while the person was, with respect to another crime of violence, on bail or other release or on probation, parole, or mandatory release pending completion of a sentence; or

(3) a person charged with any offense if such person, for the purpose of obstructing or attempting to obstruct justice, threatens, injures, intimidates, or attempts to threaten, injure, or intimidate any prospective witness or juror.

(b) No person described in subsection (a) of this section shall be ordered detained unless the judicial officer—

(1) holds a pretrial detention hearing in accordance with the provisions of subsection (c) of this section;

(2) finds—

(A) that there is clear and convincing evidence that the person is a person described in paragraph (1), (2), or (3) of subsection (a) of this section;

(B) that—

(i) in the case of a person described only in paragraph (1) of subsection (a), based on such person's pattern of behavior consisting of his past and present conduct, and on the other factors set out in section 23-1321(b), or

(ii) in the case of a person described in paragraph (2) or (3) of such subsection, based on the factors set out in section 23-1321(b), there is no condition or combination of conditions of release which will reasonably assure the safety of any other person or the community; and

(C) that, except with respect to a person described in paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of this section, on the basis of information presented by proffer or otherwise to the judicial officer there is a substantial probability that the person committed the offense for which he is present before the judicial officer; and

(3) issues an order of detention accompanied by written findings of fact and the reasons for its entry.

(c) The following procedures shall apply to pretrial detention hearings held pursuant to this section:

(1) Whenever the person is before a judicial officer, the hearing may be initiated on oral motion of the United States attorney.

(2) Whenever the person has been released pursuant to section 23-1321 and it subsequently appears that such person may be subject to pretrial detention, the United States attorney may initiate a pretrial detention hearing by ex parte written motion. Upon such motion the judicial officer may issue a warrant for the arrest of the person and if such person is outside the District of Columbia, he shall be brought before a judicial officer in the district where he is arrested and shall then be transferred to the District of Columbia for proceedings in accordance with the section.

(3) The pretrial detention hearing shall be held immediately upon the person being brought before the judicial officer for such hearing unless the person or the United States attorney moves for a continuance. A continuance granted on motion of the person shall not exceed five calendar days, unless there are extenuating circumstances. A continuance on motion of the United States attorney shall be granted upon good cause shown and shall not exceed three calendar days. The person may be detained pending the hearing.

(4) The person shall be entitled to representation by counsel and shall be entitled to present information by proffer or otherwise, to testify, and to present witnesses in his own behalf.

(5) Information stated in, or offered in connection with, any order entered pursuant to this section need not conform to the rules pertaining to the admissibility of evidence in a court of law.

(6) Testimony of the person given during the hearing shall not be admissible on the issue of guilt in any other judicial proceeding, but such testimony shall be admissible in proceedings under sections 23-1327, 23-1328, and 23-1329, in perjury proceedings, and for the purposes of impeachment in any subsequent proceedings.

(7) Appeals from orders of detention may be taken pursuant to section 23-1324.

(d) The following shall be applicable to persons detained pursuant to this section:

(1) The case of such person shall be placed on an expedited calendar and, consistent with the sound administration of justice, his trial shall be given priority.

(2) Such person shall be treated in accordance with section 23-1321—

(A) upon the expiration of sixty calendar days, unless the trial is in progress or the trial has been delayed at the request of the person other than by the filing of timely motions (excluding motions for continuances); or

(B) whenever a judicial officer finds that a subsequent event has eliminated the basis for such detention.

(3) The person shall be deemed detained pursuant to section 23-1325 if he is convicted.

(e) The judicial officer may detain for a period not to exceed five calendar days a person who comes before him for a bail determination charged with any offense, if it appears that such person is presently on probation, parole, or mandatory release pending completion of sentence for any offense under State or Federal law and that such person may flee or pose a danger to any other person or the community if released. During the five-day period, the United States attorney or the Corporation Counsel for the District of Columbia shall notify the appropriate State or Federal probation or parole officials. If such officials fail or decline to take the person into custody during such period, the person shall be treated in accordance with section 23-1321, unless he is subject to detention under this section. If the person is subsequently convicted of the offense charged, he shall receive credit toward service of sentence for the time he was detained pursuant to this subsection. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210 (a), title II, 84 Stat. 644.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 23-1323, 23-1324, 23-1329.

§ 23-1323. Detention of addict

(a) Whenever it appears that a person charged with a crime of violence, as defined in section 23-1331(4), may be an addict, as defined in section 23-1331(5), the judicial officer may, upon motion of the United States attorney, order such person detained in custody for a period not to exceed three calendar days, under medical supervision, to determine whether the person is an addict.

(b) Upon or before the expiration of three calendar days, the person shall be brought before a judicial officer and the results of the determination shall be presented to such judicial officer. The judicial officer thereupon (1) shall treat the person in accordance with section 23-1321, or (2) upon motion of the United States attorney, may (A) hold a hearing pursuant to section 23-1322, or (B) hold a hearing pursuant to subsection (c) of this section.

(c) A person who is an addict may be ordered detained in custody under medical supervision if the judicial officer—

(1) holds a pretrial detention hearing in accordance with subsection (c) of section 23-1322;

(2) finds that—

(A) there is clear and convincing evidence that the person is an addict;

(B) based on the factors set out in subsection (b) of section 23-1321, there is no condition or combination of conditions of release which will reasonably assure the safety of any other person or the community; and

(C) on the basis of information presented to the judicial officer by proffer or otherwise, there is a substantial probability that the person committed the offense for which he is present before the judicial officer; and

(3) issues an order of detention accompanied by written findings of fact and the reasons for its entry.

(d) The provisions of subsection (d) of section 23-1322 shall apply to this section. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 646.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 23-1324.

§ 23-1324. Appeal from conditions of release

(a) A person who is detained, or whose release on a condition requiring him to return to custody after specified hours is continued, after review of his application pursuant to section 23-1321(d) or section 23-1321(e) by a judicial officer, other than a judge of the court having original jurisdiction over the offense with which he is charged or a judge of a United States court of appeals or a Justice of the Supreme Court, may move the court having original jurisdiction over the offense with which he is charged to amend the order. Such motion shall be determined promptly.

(b) In any case in which a person is detained after (1) a court denies a motion under subsection (a) to amend an order imposing conditions of release, (2) conditions of release have been imposed or amended by a judge of the court having original jurisdiction over the offense charged, or (3) he is ordered detained or an order for his detention has been permitted to stand by a judge of the court having original jurisdiction over the offense charged, an appeal may be taken to the court having appellate jurisdiction over such court. Any order so appealed shall be affirmed if it is supported by the proceedings below. If the order is not so supported, the court may remand the case for a further hearing, or may, with or without additional evidence, order the person released pursuant to section 23-1321(a). The appeal shall be determined promptly.

(c) In any case in which a judicial officer other than a judge of the court having original jurisdiction over the offense with which a person is charged orders his release with or without setting terms or conditions of release, or denies a motion for the pretrial detention of a person, the United States attorney may move the court having original jurisdiction over the offense to amend or revoke the order. Such motion shall be considered promptly.

(d) In any case in which—

(1) a person is released, with or without the setting of terms or conditions of release, or a motion for the pretrial detention of a person is denied, by a judge of the court having original jurisdiction over the offense with which the person is charged, or

(2) a judge of a court having such original jurisdiction does not grant the motion of the United States attorney filed pursuant to subsection (c), the United States attorney may appeal to the court having appellate jurisdiction over such court. Any order so appealed shall be affirmed if it is supported by the proceedings below. If the order is not so supported, (A) the court may remand the case for a further hearing, (B) with or without additional evidence, change the terms or conditions of release, or (C) in cases in which the United States attorney requested pretrial detention pursuant to sections 23-1322 and 23-1323, order such detention. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 647.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 23-1322, 23-1325.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Review

Where, prior to accused's conviction of second-degree burglary, he had been convicted of taking property without right, housebreaking, disorderly conduct and drunkenness, had been twice convicted of unlawful entry and petit larceny and had been arrested four times on charges of housebreaking, trial court's inability to find that if released accused would not pose danger to community and its refusal to grant bail pending appeal from second degree burglary conviction were not improper. W. A. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 291 A. 2d 697).

§ 23-1325. Release in capital cases or after conviction

(a) A person who is charged with an offense punishable by death shall be treated in accordance with the provisions of section 23-1321 unless the judicial officer has reason to believe that no one or more conditions of release will reasonably assure that the person will not flee or pose a danger to any other person or to the community. If such a risk of flight or danger is believed to exist, the person may be ordered detained.

(b) A person who has been convicted of an offense and is awaiting sentence shall be detained unless the judicial officer finds by clear and convincing evidence that he is not likely to flee or pose a danger to any other person or to the property of others. Upon such finding, the judicial officer shall treat the person in accordance with the provisions of section 23-1321.

(c) A person who has been convicted of an offense and sentenced to a term of confinement or imprisonment and has filed an appeal or a petition for a writ of certiorari shall be detained unless the judicial officer finds by clear and convincing evidence that

- (1) the person is not likely to flee or pose a danger to any other person or to the property of others, and
- (2) the appeal or petition for a writ of certiorari raises a substantial question of law or fact likely to result in a reversal or an order for new trial. Upon such findings, the judicial officer shall treat the person in accordance with the provisions of section 23-1321.

(d) The provisions of section 23-1324 shall apply to persons detained in accordance with this section, except that the finding of the judicial officer that the appeal or petition for writ of certiorari does not raise by clear and convincing evidence a substantial question of law or fact likely to result in a reversal or order for new trial shall receive de novo consideration in the court in which review is sought. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 647.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 23-1322.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutional rights

There is no constitutional right to an appeal from a conviction or to bail on appeal. W. A. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 291 A. 2d 697).

It is within discretion of state to allow or not to allow appeal and right of appeal may be given upon such terms as legislature may deem proper; however, if right is given, there must be no invidious discrimination between persons and different groups of persons. Id.

Construction

Requirement that before granting bail pending appeal, trial court must find that release on bail will not pose danger to other persons or to property of others is not unreasonable. W. A. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 291 A. 2d 697).

Postconviction bail provisions of this section apply to persons convicted of purely "local" offenses and do not operate to deny bail to those convicted in District of Columbia under federal criminal statutes having nationwide application, when such bail would otherwise be available under Bail Reform Act. United States v. B. J. Thompson (1971, 452 F. 2d 1333, 147 U.S. App. D.C. 1; cert. denied 92 S.Ct. 1251, 405 U.S. 998).

If construed to deny bail to those convicted in District of Columbia under federal criminal statutes having nationwide application, when bail would otherwise be available under Bail Reform Act, this section would be violative of equal protection, absent a rational relationship between classification created by the section and any legitimate governmental policy. Id.

Remand

Notwithstanding whether this section or Bail Reform Act is applicable to criminal offenses committed in District of Columbia, since the district court's order denying bail pending appeal did no more than repeat statutory standards contained in this section and stated that defendant had failed to meet them, whereas federal rules of appellate procedure clearly stated that district court was to give reasons for action taken if it refused release pending appeal, remand for further findings is necessary. United States v. B. J. Thompson (1971, 452 F. 2d 1333, 147 U.S. App. D.C. 1; cert. denied 92 S.Ct. 1251, 405 U.S. 998).

Review

Where, prior to accused's conviction of second-degree burglary, he had been convicted of taking property without right, housebreaking, disorderly conduct and drunkenness, had been twice convicted of unlawful entry and petit larceny and had been arrested four times on charges of housebreaking, trial court's inability to find that if released accused would not pose danger to community and its refusal to grant bail pending appeal from second degree burglary conviction were not improper. W. A. Johnson v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 291 A. 2d 697).

§ 23-1326. Release of material witnesses

If it appears by affidavit that the testimony of a person is material in any criminal proceeding, and if it is shown that it may become impracticable to secure his presence by subpoena, a judicial officer shall impose conditions of release pursuant to section 23-1321. No material witness shall be detained because of inability to comply with any condition of release if the testimony of such witness can adequately be secured by deposition, and further detention is not necessary to prevent a failure of justice. Release may be delayed for a reasonable period of time until the deposition of the witness can be taken pursuant to the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 648.)

§ 23-1327. Penalties for failure to appear

(a) Whoever, having been released under this title prior to the commencement of his sentence, willfully fails to appear before any court or judicial officer as required, shall, subject to the provisions of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, incur a forfeiture of any security which was given or pledged for his release, and, in addition, shall, (1) if he was released in connection with a charge of felony, or while awaiting sentence or pending appeal or certiorari prior to commencement of his sentence after conviction of any offense, be fined not more than $5,000 and imprisoned not less than one year and not more than five years, (2) if he was released in connection with a charge of misdemeanor, be fined not more than the maximum provided for such misdemeanor and imprisoned for not less than ninety days and not more than one year, or (3) if he was released for appearance as a material witness, be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both.

(b) Any failure to appear after notice of the appearance date shall be prima facie evidence that such failure to appear is willful. Whether the person was warned when released of the penalties for failure to appear shall be a factor in determining whether such failure to appear was willful, but the giving of such warning shall not be a prerequisite to conviction under this section.

(c) The trier of facts may convict under this section even if the defendant has not received actual notice of the appearance date if (1) reasonable efforts to notify the defendant have been made, and (2) the defendant, by his own actions, has frustrated the receipt of actual notice.

(d) Any term of imprisonment imposed pursuant to this section shall be consecutive to any other sentence of imprisonment. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 648.)

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 23-1303, 23-1322.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Contempt

Although it is mandatory that accused be present at beginning stage of trial, this does not mean that the trial court is helpless when a defendant does not appear at beginning of trial as directed; proper exercise of court's contempt power, after appropriate factual inquiry, appears to be a prescribed method of punishing other defendant who fails to appear for trial and, in addition, one who willfully fails to appear as required is subject to prosecution. N. K. Campbell v. United States (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A.2d 498).

Effective assistance of counsel

Where the defendant was 40-year-old man who had prior experience with police and with criminal arrests and who knew that he had to be in courtroom on particular day and what the consequences of failure to appear would be, failure on part of defendant's court appointed attorney to advise the defendant to appear at the designated time is not ineffective representation of counsel. United States v. A. Moss (1970, 438 F.2d 147, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 306).

Court appointed attorney is under no duty to search for defendant in court building when defendant fails to appear in designated courtroom at appointed time. Id.

Court appointed attorney's lack of memory concerning events of day on which defendant allegedly failed to appear in court and inability of attorney, as witness, to clearly recall what had transpired does not constitute breach of any professional obligation nor amount to ineffective representation of counsel. Id.

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence in this case is sufficient to support conviction for willful failure to appear in court as required by defendant's release on his personal recognizance. United States v. A. Moss (1970, 438 F.2d 147, 141 U.S. App. D.C. 306).

§ 23-1328. Penalties for offenses committed during release

(a) Any person convicted of an offense committed while released pursuant to section 23-1321 shall be subject to the following penalties in addition to any other applicable penalties:

(1) A term of imprisonment of not less than one year and not more than five years if convicted of committing a felony while so released; and

(2) A term of imprisonment of not less than ninety days and not more than one year if convicted of committing a misdemeanor while so released.

(b) The giving of a warning to the person when released of the penalties imposed by this section shall not be a prerequisite to the application of this section.

(c) Any term of imprisonment imposed pursuant to this section shall be consecutive to any other sentence of imprisonment. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 649.)

§ 23-1329. Penalties for violation of conditions of release

(a) A person who has been conditionally released pursuant to section 23-1321 and who has violated a condition of release shall be subject to revocation of release, an order of detention, and prosecution for contempt of court.

(b) Proceedings for revocation of release may be initiated on motion of the United States attorney. A warrant for the arrest of a person charged with violating a condition of release may be issued by a judicial officer and if such person is outside the District of Columbia he shall be brought before a judicial officer in the district where he is arrested and shall then be transferred to the District of Columbia for proceedings in accordance with this section. No order of revocation and detention shall be entered unless, after a hearing, the judicial officer finds that—

(1) there is clear and convincing evidence that such person has violated a condition of his release; and

(2) based on the factors set out in subsection (b) of section 23-1321, there is no condition or combination of conditions of release which will reasonably assure that such person will not flee or pose a danger to any other person or the community.

The provisions of subsections (c) and (d) of section 23-1322 shall apply to this subsection.

(c) Contempt sanctions may be imposed if, upon a hearing and in accordance with principles applicable to proceedings for criminal contempt, it is established that such person has intentionally violated a condition of his release. Such contempt proceedings shall be expedited and heard by the court without a jury. Any person found guilty of criminal contempt for violation of a condition of release shall be imprisoned for not more than six months, or fined not more than $1,000, or both.

(d) Any warrant issued by a judge of the Superior Court for violation of release conditions or for contempt of court, for failure to appear as required, or pursuant to subsection (c) (2) of section 23-1322, may be executed at any place within the jurisdiction of the United States. Such warrants shall be executed by a United States marshal or by any other officer authorized by law. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 649.)

(5) The term "addict" means any individual who habitually uses any narcotic drug as defined by section 4731 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 so as to endanger the public morals, health, safety, or welfare.

§ 23-1501. Definitions

As used in this chapter—

(1) The term "witness" includes a person whose testimony is desired in any proceeding or investigation by a grand jury or in a criminal action, prosecution, or proceeding.

(2) The term "State" includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the District of Columbia, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and any other territory or possession of the United States.

EFFECTIVE DATE

See note preceding section 23-101.

§ 23-1502. Hearing on recall of out-of-State witnesses by State courts; determination; travel allowance; penalty

(a) If a judge of a court of record in any State which by its laws has made provision for commanding persons within that State to attend and testify in the District of Columbia certifies under the seal of the court (1) that there is a criminal prosecution pending in that court, or that a grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence, (2) that a person within the District of Columbia is a material witness in the prosecution or grand jury investigation, and (3) that his presence will be required for a specified number of days, upon presentation of that certificate to any judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, except as provided in subsection (c), such judge shall fix a time and place for a hearing, and shall make an order directing the witness to appear at a time and place certain for the hearing.

(b) If at the hearing the judge determines that the witness is material and necessary, that it will not cause undue hardship to the witness to attend and testify in the prosecution or grand jury investigation in the requesting State, and that the laws of such State and of any other State through which the witness may be required to pass by ordinary course of travel, will give to him protection from arrest and the service of civil and criminal process, he shall issue a summons, with a copy of the certificate attached, directing the witness to attend and testify in the prosecution or grand jury investigation, as the case may be, at a time and place specified in the summons. In any such hearing the certificate shall be prima facie evidence of all the facts stated therein.

(c) If the certificate presented under subsection (a) recommends that the witness be taken into immediate custody and delivered to an officer of the requesting State to assure his attendance, in the requesting State, the judge may in lieu of notification of hearing, direct that the witness be forthwith brought before him for a hearing. If the judge at the hearing is satisfied of the desirability of the custody and delivery of the witness, he may, in lieu of issuing subpoena or summons, order the witness to be forthwith taken into custody and delivered to an officer of the requesting State. The certificate shall be prima facie proof of the desirability of the custody and delivery of the witness.

(d) Any witness who is summoned as above provided and, after being paid or tendered by some properly authorized person the fees and allowances authorized for witnesses in criminal cases in United States district courts, fails without good cause to attend and testify as directed in the summons, shall be punished in the manner provided for the punishment of any witness who disobeys a summons issued from the Superior Court. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 651.)

Hearing mandatory

Under Uniform Act to Secure Attendance of Witnesses from Without a State in Criminal Proceedings, it is mandatory that a hearing be had and a determination made as to whether witness is material and necessary, and that it will not cause undue hardship to witness to be compelled to attend and testify, and the certificate is prima facie evidence of all facts stated therein. United States ex. rel. State of Pennsylvania v. J. M. McDevitt (D.C. App. 1963, 195 A. 2d 741).

In proceeding to issue process to require a person to return as a witness to testify before investigating grand jury in Pennsylvania, evidence supported findings that it was not established that person was material and necessary witness or that compelling his attendance would not cause him undue hardship, and hence denial of application was not an abuse of discretion. Id.

§ 23-1503. Certificate providing for attendance of witnesses at criminal prosecutions in the District of Columbia; travel allowance; penalty

(a) If a person in any State, which by its laws has made provision for commanding persons within its borders to attend and testify in criminal prosecutions or grand jury investigations in the District of Columbia, is a material witness in such a prosecution or a grand jury investigation in the District of Columbia which has commenced or is about to commence, a judge may issue a certificate under seal stating these facts and specifying the number of days the witness will be required. The certificate may include a recommendation that the witness be taken into immediate custody and delivered to an officer of the United States or the District of Columbia to assure his attendance in the District of Columbia. This certificate shall be presented to a judge of a court of record in the county in which the witness is found.

(b) If the witness is summoned to attend and testify in the District of Columbia he shall be tendered the fees and allowances authorized for witnesses in criminal cases in United States district courts. A witness who has appeared in accordance with the provisions of the summons shall not be required to remain within the District of Columbia for a period longer than that specified in the certificate, unless otherwise ordered by the court. If the witness, after coming into the District of Columbia, fails without good cause to attend and testify as directed in the summons, he may be punished in the manner provided for the punishment of any other witness who disobeys a summons issued from the court in the District of Columbia where the prosecution has been instituted or the grand jury investigation has commenced or is about to commence. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 651.)

§ 23-1504. Exemption from arrest

(a) Any person who comes into the District of Columbia in obedience to a summons directing him to attend and testify in the District of Columbia shall not, while in the District of Columbia, pursuant to the summons, be subject to arrest or the service of process, civil or criminal, in connection with any matter which arose before his entrance into the District of Columbia under the summons.

(b) Any person who is in the process of passing through the District of Columbia for the purpose of proceeding to or returning from a State which has summoned him to attend and testify shall not be subject to arrest or the service of process, civil or criminal, in connection with any matter which arose at some other time. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 652.)

Immunity from process

Letter directing defendant to appear at federal office, on account of criminal complaint, lest warrant be issued for arrest, was not a "summons within the meaning of the Uniform Act to Secure the Attendance of Witnesses from without a State in Criminal Proceedings," and defendant who appeared accordingly was not exempt from process under District of Columbia statute exempting persons appearing in obedience to summons. R. C. Buffkin v. Alum-Co. National, Inc., et al. (1963, 331 F. 2d 96, 118 U.S. App. D.C. 22).

Chapter 17.—DEATH PENALTY

Sec.

- 23-1701. Capital punishment.
- 23-1702. Provision for death chamber; appointment of executioner and assistants; fees.
- 23-1703. Sentences to be in writing and certified copy furnished.
- 23-1704. Who may be present at execution; fact of execution to be certified to clerk of court.
- 23-1705. Place of execution.

§ 23-1701. Capital punishment

The mode of capital punishment in the District of Columbia shall be by the process commonly known as electrocution. The punishment of death shall be inflicted by causing to pass through the body of the convict a current of electricity of sufficient intensity to cause death, and the application of the current shall be continued until the convict is dead. The time fixed for the execution of the sentence shall not be considered an essential part of the sentence, and if it be not executed at the time therein appointed, by reason of the pendency of an appeal or for other cause, the court may appoint another day for carrying the same into execution. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 652.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

See note preceding section 23-101.

Authority to execute capital punishment

Regardless of the legislation under which the appeal was brought, Congress had unmistakably invested the respondent, the superintendent of the jail, with authority within the District to carry into effect the death sentence in capital cases. Price v. Moyer (1923, 288 F. 269, 53 App. D.C. 63).

Construction

Section 23-703 must be read in connection with § 23-114 and with their legislative history. When this is done, it is clear that § 23-703 is intended not for the benefit of defendants upon whom death sentences are to be imposed but as an aid to the prison authorities charged with execution of such sentences. Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

§ 23-1702. Provision for death chamber; appointment of executioner and assistants; fees

The Commissioner of the District of Columbia shall provide a death chamber and necessary apparatus for inflicting the death penalty by electrocution and designate an executioner and necessary assistants, not exceeding three in number. The District of Columbia Council shall fix the fees for the executioner and his assistants. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 652.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Place of execution, see § 23-1705.

§ 23-1703. Sentences to be in writing and certified copy furnished

If a person is sentenced to death for a conviction in the District of Columbia the presiding judge shall sentence the convicted person to death according to the terms of this chapter, and make the sentence in writing, such sentence shall be filed with the papers in the case against the convicted person, and a certified copy thereof shall be transmitted, by the clerk of the court in which such sentence is pronounced, to the District of Columbia Department of Corrections not less than ten days prior to the time fixed in the sentence of the court for the execution. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 652.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Time of execution, see § 23-1701.

Construction

This section must be read in connection with § 23-114 and with their legislative history. When this is done, it is clear that this section is intended not for the benefit of defendants upon whom death sentences are to be imposed, but as an aid to the prison authorities charged with execution of such sentences. Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

§ 23-1704. Who may be present at execution; fact of execution to be certified to clerk of court

At the execution of the death penalty there shall be present only the following persons: The executioner and his assistant; the prison physician and one other physician if the condemned person so desires; the condemned person's counsel and relatives, not exceeding three, if they so desire; the prison chaplain and such other ministers of the Gospel, not exceeding two, as may attend by desire of the condemned; the superintendent of the prison, or, in the event of his disability, a deputy designated by him; and not fewer than three nor more than five respectable citizens whom the superintendent of the prison shall designate, and, if necessary to insure their attendance, shall subpoena to be present. The fact of execution shall be certified by the prison physician and the executioner to the clerk of the court in which sentence was pronounced, which certificate shall be filed by the clerk with the papers in the case. No person under the age of twenty-one years shall be allowed to witness any execution. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 653.)

§ 23-1705. Place of execution

Any person adjudged to suffer death shall be executed within the walls of the designated facility of the Department of Corrections, or within the yard or inclosure thereof, and not elsewhere. (July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, § 210(a), title II, 84 Stat. 653.)

CHAPTER REFERRED TO IN U.S. CODE

This chapter is referred to in section 5023 of title 18, U.S. Code.

§ 24-101. Omitted.

CODIFICATION

Section, acts June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 864, ch. 433, § 1; Mar. 4, 1919, 40 Stat. 1324, ch. 122, which related to appointment of probation officers, assistant probation officers and other probation personnel by the United States District Court for the District of Columbia and the District of Columbia Court of General Sessions, and their general powers and duties, has been omitted from this Code as superseded and now covered by §§ 11-1722 and 11-1725 of this Code, and by 18 U.S.C. §§ 3654-3656.

Act Mar. 4, 1923, 42 Stat. 1488, ch. 265 (Classification Act of 1923), which also had been cited as one of the sources of this section, and which was later superseded by the Classification Act of 1949 (Oct. 28, 1949, 63 Stat. 954, ch. 782, since repealed and superseded, in turn), was not a specific amendment of this section, but, in reclassifying government employees by salary grades, had affected the provisions of this section that had prescribed salaries for the specified positions. Present provisions relating to compensation of probation officers and other probation personnel are now covered by § 11-1726 of this Code; 5 U.S.C. §§ 5101 et seq., 5331 et seq., and 18 U.S.C. § 3656. See, also, the several acts set out as notes under § 603 of title 28, U.S.C.

Acts June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127; July 8, 1963, 77 Stat. 77, Pub. L. 88-60, § 1, which also had been cited as sources of this section, were not specific amendments of this section, having only affected the names of the courts mentioned.

§ 24-102. Repealed. Dec. 23, 1963, 77 Stat. 626, Pub. L. 88-241, § 21, effective Jan. 1, 1964.

Section of act June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 864, ch. 433, § 2, dealt with the authority of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia and the former Municipal Court to place certain convicted offenders on probation. The section insofar as it related to the United States District Court was repealed by act June 25, 1958, 72 Stat. 216, Pub. L. 85-463, § 2. The surviving provisions of the section are now reenacted as section 16-710.

§ 24-103. Investigations and reports by probation officers.

The probation officers shall carefully investigate all cases referred to them by the court, and make recommendations to the court to enable it to decide whether the defendant ought to be placed under probation, and shall report to the court, from time to time as may be required by it, touching all cases in their care, to the end that the court may be at all times fully informed of the circumstances and conduct of probationers. (June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 864, ch. 433, § 3.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Services of a psychiatrist and a psychologist available to probation officers, see § 24-106.

Abuse of discretion

Where probationer, against whom judgment of pater-nity had been entered, was committed once for being in arrears in weekly payments for support of child, but was released and was warned of action which the court would take for defaults in the future, and the court waited some 8 months, during which period probationer fell at least 12 payments in arrears, before acting on its warning and committing probationer for 30 days, there was no arbitrary, capricious, or wilful treatment of probationer at hands of court, and court did not abuse its discretion Stevens v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 127 A. 2d 147).

Recommending sentence

Where accused pleaded guilty to maintaining disorderly house and, on plea for probation, trial judge announced, that probation officer had recommended maximum sentence and, on objection to consideration of recommendation, trial judge, without express ruling thereon, sentenced defendant to the near maximum penalty, sentence was not set aside. Ishkanian v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1944, 35 A. 2d 176).

A recommendation by a probation officer to trial judge as to sentence to be imposed is not merely unauthorized by this chapter but is an infringement upon court's judicial function, which officer has no right to exercise and judge no right to permit. Id.

Sentencing procedure

In sentencing, the judge must consider a program of rehabilitation designed to preclude, so far as current learning can furnish a guide, a repetition of the crime, and to such end Congress has placed several aids at disposal of judge, including provisions for presentence investigation, for commitment prior to sentence to a hospital for examination to determine mental competence of the offender, and for appointment of psychiatrist and psychologist. Wm. H. Leach v. United States (1963, 320 F. 2d 670, 115 U.S. App. D.C. 351).

§ 24-104. Discharge from or continuance of probation—Modification or revocation of order.

Upon the expiration of the term fixed for such probation, the probation officer shall report that fact to the court, with a statement of the conduct of the probationer while on probation, and the court may thereupon discharge the probationer from further supervision, or may extend the probation, as shall seem advisable. At any time during the probationary term the court may modify the terms and conditions of the order of probation, or may terminate such probation, when in the opinion of the court the ends of justice shall require, and when the probation is so terminated the court shall enter an order discharging the probationer from serving the imposed penalty; or the court may revoke the order of probation and cause the rearrest of the probationer and impose a sentence and require him to serve the sentence or pay the fine originally imposed, or both, as the case may be, and the time of probation shall not be taken into account to diminish the time for which he was originally sentenced. (June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 865, ch. 433, § 4.)

Abuse of discretion

Where probationer, against whom judgment of paternity had been entered, was committed once for being in arrears in weekly payments for support of child, but was released and was warned of action which the court would take for defaults in the future, and the court waited some 8 months, during which period probationer fell at least 12 payments in arrears, before acting on its warning and committing probationer for 30 days, there was no arbitrary, capricious, or wilful treatment of probationer at hands of court, and court did not abuse its discretion. Stevens v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 127 A. 2d 147).

Extension of probation

Where this section under which probation was extended did not require a hearing either at the time of extension or of revocation of probation, and procedure in the statute was complied with, probationer was not entitled to order setting aside revocation of extended probation on ground that extension of probation was entered ex parte. United States v. Freeman (D.C.D.C. 1958, 160 F. Supp. 532, affirmed 254 F. 2d 352, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 15).

The extension of the probation every six months after the return unexecuted of an attachment for violation of terms of probation kept the probation alive and did not violate this section, which does not limit the number or length of extensions of probation. Cooper v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1946, 48 A. 2d 771).

Probable cause

A probationer who had been arrested on another charge was properly arrested by probation officer for violation of terms of probation when she appeared in another court to answer the new charge, since only the execution of the sentence had been suspended and the requirement as to probable cause for the commission of an offense did not apply to her. Cooper v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1946, 48 A. 2d 771).

Revocation

The court had jurisdiction to reconsider defendant's probation and revoke it if the public interest seemed to justify such action. Cooper v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1946, 48 A. 2d 771).

That the judge who had originally sentenced defendant was no longer in office did not prevent another judge of the same court from revoking the defendant's probation. Id.

Rights of probationer

Probationer, against whom judgment of paternity has been entered, does not stand on equal footing with other citizens, and privilege of probation could be revoked by court in any procedural fashion authorized by statute, and, apart from statute, probationer, committed summarily, has no recourse to the Constitution and may not insist on a trial in any strict or formal sense. Stevens v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1956, 127 A. 2d 147).

§ 24-105. Quarters for probation officers—Payment of expenses.

The chief probation officer of each court shall be entitled, for himself and his assistants, to a room in the building occupied by that court, and all necessary stationery and supplies for the transaction of the business of his office, and all the probation officers except volunteer officers shall be entitled to their necessary expenses in performing the duties of their office, under the direction of the court, the amount of the expense for such stationery, supplies, and expenses to be fixed and allowed by the court upon proper vouchers submitted to it by the probation officers, and accounts duly verified by their oath. (June 25, 1910, 36 Stat. 865, ch. 433, § 5; Mar. 4, 1919, 40 Stat. 1325, ch. 122.)

CODIFICATION

Provisions of section 5 of act June 25, 1910, as amended by act Mar. 4, 1919, which authorized an appropriation of $8,000 for the payment of expenses, are omitted as obsolete.

§ 24-106. Services of a psychiatrist and a psychologist available to probation officers, the Board of Parole and other designated officers.

The Commissioner shall appoint a qualified psychiatrist and a qualified psychologist whose services shall be available to the following officers to assist them in carrying out their duties:

(1) In criminal cases, the judges and probation officers of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia and the judges and Director of Social Services of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia.

(2) The judges and such personnel assigned to the Family Division of the Superior Court as the Chief Judge may designate.

(3) Such officers of the Department of Corrections as the Director thereof shall designate.

(4) The Board of Parole of the District.

Presentence examination

A prisoner who requested a mental examination before sentence could have been examined under statute providing a qualified psychiatrist and a qualified psychologist for district judges to assist them in carrying out their duties. W. R. Leach v. United States (1964, 334 F. 2d 945, 118 U.S. App. D.C. 197).

Procedural safeguards

Transfer of prisoners to mental hospital requires protective procedures at least similar to those provided in 1964 Civil Commitment Act (now title 21, section 501, et seq., D.C. Code) providing full system of procedural safeguards before finding of mental illness can be made. R. E. Mathews, Jr. v. K. L. Hardy et al. (1969, 420 F. 2d 607, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 39).

Under section 24-302 providing that if director of department of corrections believes prisoner is mentally ill, he can refer prisoner to psychiatrist and, if psychiatrist concurs in that belief, director can then transfer prisoner to mental hospital, before prisoner may be involuntarily transferred he is entitled to judicial hearing, jury trial, and same rights of notice, counsel and cross-examination as are provided for in title 21, section 501 et seq., and same procedures for release from hospital as are embodied in those sections. Id.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 24-201b, 24-203, 24-207.

§ 24-201a. Board of Parole—Rules and regulations.

A Board of Parole for the penal and correctional institutions of the District of Columbia is hereby created to consist of three members appointed by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, one of whom shall serve on a full-time basis and be designated by the Commissioner as Parole Executive. The other two members shall serve without compensation, one of whom shall be elected Chairman of the said Board. The Board of Parole shall select its own Chairman and shall have power to establish rules and regulations for its procedure. (July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 378, ch. 263, § 1.)

ABOLITION OF BOARD AND TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

The Board of Parole was abolished and the functions thereof transferred to the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia by Reorg. Plan No. 5 of 1952. The executive functions of the Board of Commissioners were transferred to the Commissioner of the District of Columbia by § 401 of Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967.

Reorganization Order No. 33 dated May 28, 1953, and effective June 21, 1953, established a Board of Parole under the direction and control of a Commissioner and consisting of three members for the purpose of developing and administering an effective parole system. The new Board was authorized to exercise all powers of the previously existing Board of Parole which the order abolished. All positions under the previously existing Board of Parole were transferred to the new Board including the duties, powers, and authorities of all officers and employees. Reorganization Order No. 33 was amended and redesignated as Org. Ord. No. 6, dated Dec. 26, 1967. The latter order continued the Board of Parole and prescribed its purpose, composition, and functions. The Plans and Orders are set out in the appendix to title 1, Administration.

§ 24-201b. Transfer of powers of Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole—Duties of parole executive—Cooperation with Board.

Upon appointment of the members of the Board of Parole, the powers of the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole created by section 24-201, not specifically repealed, shall be transferred to and vested in the Board of Parole. The officers and employees of the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole, except the members thereof, together with all official records, furniture and supplies, and all unexpended balances of any appropriations, shall be transferred to the Board of Parole. It shall be the duty of the parole executive to prepare for the consideration of the Board of Parole all applications of prisoners for parole in such form and at such times and together with such information and records as the Board of Parole may require, to perform such administrative duties as the Board may prescribe, and to supervise prisoners on parole in accordance with the terms and conditions prescribed by the Board. The Department of Corrections, and all other agencies and officials of the District shall cooperate with the Board and shall furnish the Board with such information, files, and records as it may deem necessary in the performance of its duties: Provided, That confidential information and records shall not be required to be produced. (July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 378, ch. 263, § 2.)

§ 24-201c. Applications for reduction of minimum sentence—Jurisdiction of court—Limits on reduction for certain crimes.

When by reason of his training and response to the rehabilitation program of the Department of Corrections it appears to the Board that there is a reasonable probability that a prisoner will live and remain at liberty without violating the law, and that his immediate release is not incompatible with the welfare of society, but he has not served his minimum sentence, the Board in its discretion may apply to the court imposing sentence for a reduction of his minimum sentence. The court shall have jurisdiction to act upon the application at any time prior to the expiration of the minimum sentence and no hearing shall be required. If a prisoner is serving a sentence for a crime for which a minimum sentence is prescribed by section 24-203(b) his minimum sentence shall not be reduced under this section below the minimum sentence so prescribed. (July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 379, ch. 263, § 4; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 92, ch. 159, § 201 (b).)

AMENDMENT

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1953 AMENDMENT

§ 24-202. Repealed. July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 379, ch. 263, § 7.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 24-203, 24-207.

§ 24-203. Imposition of indeterminate sentences authorized—Life and death sentences.

(a) Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c), in imposing sentence on a person convicted in the District of Columbia of a felony, the justice or judge of the court imposing such sentence shall sentence the person for a maximum period not exceeding the maximum fixed by law, and for a minimum period not exceeding one-third of the maximum sentence imposed, and any person so convicted and sentenced may be released on parole as herein provided at any time after having served the minimum sentence. Where the maximum sentence imposed is life imprisonment, a minimum sentence shall be imposed which shall not exceed fifteen years' imprisonment. Nothing in sections 22-2601, 24-201, 24-202 to 24-209 and 24-425 shall abrogate the power of the justice or judge to sentence the convicted prisoner to the death penalty as on June 6, 1940 or thereafter may be provided by law.

(b) The minimum sentence imposed under this section on a person convicted of an assault with intent to commit rape in violation of section 22-501, or of armed robbery in violation of section 22-3202 shall be not less than two years if the violation occurs after the person has been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of a crime of violence as defined in section 22-3201, providing for the control of dangerous weapons in the District of Columbia. The minimum sentence imposed under this section on a person convicted of rape in violation of section 22-2801, shall not be less than seven years if the violation occurs after the person has been convicted in the District of Columbia or elsewhere of a crime of violence, as so defined. The maximum sentence in each case to which this subsection applies shall not be less than three times the minimum sentence imposed, and shall not be more than the maximum fixed by law.

(c) For a person convicted of—

(1) a violation of section 22-505 (relating to assault with a dangerous weapon on a police officer) occurring after the person has been convicted of a violation of that section or of a felony, either in the District of Columbia or in another jurisdiction;

SECTION REFERRED TO IN U.S. CODE

This section is referred to in title 21, section 848, U.S. Code.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Application of statute

This act is applicable to persons convicted in the District of Columbia of offenses defined in the general laws of the United States. Sims v. Rives (1936, 84 F. 2d 871, 66 App. D.C. 24, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 960, 298 U.S. 682, 80 L. Ed. 1402).

Bail in felony-murder case

In view of the outstanding detention record of defendant, who had been convicted four times in an eight-year period for felony-murder in connection with an attempted robbery and whose first three convictions had been reversed, coupled with defendant's strong area ties, his family's help, assured employment, his apparent determination to live a useful and productive life, would be admitted to bail pending appeal from fourth conviction. United States v. E. M. Harrison (1968, 405 F. 2d 355, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 390).

Constitutionality

The Indeterminate Sentence Act applies to convictions in the District for offenses defined in the general laws of the United States, and thus applied is constitutionally valid. Farnsworth v. Zerst (C.C.A. Ga., 1938, 98 F. 2d 541).

Contempt

This section is inapplicable to a criminal contempt conviction not only because it ought not and is not intended to apply, but also because it cannot be made applicable in view of fact that trial judge has nonarbitrary discretion in matter of sentence. Warring v. Huff (1941, 122 F. 2d 641, 74 App. D.C. 302, certiorari denied 62 S. Ct. 183, 314 U. S. 678, 86 L. Ed. 543).

Crime committed before passage of act

Indeterminate Sentence Act was not applicable where crime of grand larceny was committed before passage of that act. De Benque v. United States (1936, 85 F. 2d 202, 66 App. D.C. 36, 106 A.L.R. 839, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 960, 298 U.S. 681, 80 L. Ed. 1402, rehearing denied 57 S. Ct. 6, 299 U.S. 620, 81 L. Ed. 457).

Where defendants were found guilty in 1939 of having committed robbery in District of Columbia on June 10, 1932, sentence to prison of 3 to 15 years was not void on theory that it should be for not less than 6 months nor more than 15 years. United States v. Neufeld (D.C.D.C. 1945, 62 F. Supp. 600).

Claim of defendants that much had come to light after their conviction which would show that defendants were innocent could not be considered in passing on motion to set aside sentences as void because sentences allegedly did not comply with law in effect when offenses were committed. Id.

Jurisdiction upon conditional release

Where defendant was sentenced in 1936 to 30-year term for second-degree murder and was given conditional release when his accumulated good time and industrial good time allowances and his time already served totaled 30 years, defendant was thereafter under the supervision of the United States Board of Parole until his maximum sentence expired, not counting his good time and industrial time allowances. Johnson v. Ward, U.S. Marshal, etc. (D.C.D.C. 1959, 171 F. Supp. 26).

Meaning of indeterminate sentence

An indeterminate sentence is one for the maximum period imposed by the court, subject to termination by the Parole Board at any time after service of the minimum period. Story v. Rives (1938, 97 F. 2d 182, 68 App. D.C. 325, certiorari denied 59 S. Ct. 71, 305 U.S. 595, 83 L. Ed. 377). See, also, United States v. Neufeld (D.C.D.C. 1945, 62 F. Supp. 600).

An “indeterminate sentence” differs from a “determinate sentence” only in that the former imposes a minimum term; the good time and industrial time off provisions, however, are geared to the maximum term and the minimum term does not affect the computation. Johnson v. Ward, U.S. Marshal etc. (D.C.D.C. 1959, 171 F. Supp. 26).

Second-degree murder

Indeterminate Sentence Act is inapplicable to second-degree murder and the existing statute providing a penalty of imprisonment for life or for not less than 20 years remains in effect. Anderson v. Rives (1936, 85 F. 2d 673, 66 App. D.C. 174).

Sentences

Prospect of having conviction “automatically” set aside under Youth Corrections Act was a difference so important as to outweigh possibility of longer confinement and to warrant conclusion that second sentence, of thirty-four months to one hundred and two months, under Indeterminate Sentence Law, was more severe than first sentence, of three to nine years, under Youth Corrections Act, for robbery; and, accordingly, second sentence, entered on motion to correct, was invalid where offender had already begun to serve first sentence. E. J. Tutum v. United States (1962, 310 F. 2d 854, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 49).

Where the first sentences imposed under Indeterminate Sentence law were void, since the said statute was by its own terms inapplicable, the passing of the term did not deprive the court of power to resentence. De Benque v. United States (1936, 85 F. 2d 202, 66 App. D.C. 36, 106 A.L.R. 839, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 960, 298 U.S. 681, 80 L. Ed. 1402, rehearing denied 57 S. Ct. 6, 299 U.S. 620, 81 L. Ed. 457).

This provision brings the described sentences, although not indeterminate ones, within the new scheme by treating one-fifth thereof as the equivalent of the minimum in an indeterminate sentence and may include prisoners sentenced before the date of the act if imprisoned in the institutions under the jurisdiction of the board, but it does not extend the board's jurisdiction to prisoners in other institutions nor require their return to the District although convicted there before the act was passed. Aderhold v. Lee (C.C.A. 5, 1934, 68 F. 2d 824).

As maximum sentence on each count was 3 years, and as it did not exceed the maximum of 10 years fixed by law, and when minimum sentence on each of four counts was 2 years, the sentence therefore did not exceed one-fifth of the maximum period fixed by law of 10 years and was not in violation of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole law. United States ex rel. Bracey v. Hill (C.C.A. 3, 1935, 77 F. 2d 970). See, also, Bracey v. Zerbst (C.C.A. 10, 1938, 93 F. 2d 8).

Sentence fixing a maximum of 12 years conformed with the act, as did the minimum period of 3 years, being for a minimum period not exceeding one-fifth of the maximum period fixed by law. McDonald v. Johnston (C.C.A. 9, 1937, 86 F. 2d 329).

A sentence is legal so far as it is within provisions of law and jurisdiction of court, and is void only as to excess when such excess is separable and may be dealt with without disturbing valid portion of sentence. United States v. Newfield (D.C.D.C. 1945, 62 F. Supp. 600).

§ 24-204. Parole authorized—Conditions—Custody.

(a) Whenever it shall appear to the Board of Parole that there is a reasonable probability that a prisoner will live and remain at liberty without violating the law, that his release is not incompatible with the welfare of society, and that he has served the minimum sentence imposed or the prescribed portion of his sentence, as the case may be, the Board may authorize his release on parole upon such terms and conditions as the Board shall from time to time prescribe. While on parole, a prisoner shall remain in the legal custody and under the control of the Attorney General of the United States or his authorized representative until the expiration of the maximum of the term or terms specified in his sentence without regard to good time allowance.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (a) of this section, the District of Columbia Council promulgate rules and regulations under which the Board of Parole, in its discretion, may discharge a parolee from supervision prior to the expiration of the maximum term or terms for which he was sentenced. (July 15, 1932, 47 Stat. 697, ch. 492, § 4; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 242, ch. 254, § 3; July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 378, ch. 263, § 3; May 22, 1965, 79 Stat. 113, Pub. L. 89-24, § 1.)

AMENDMENTS

1965—Act May 22, 1965, amended section by adding (a) at the beginning and by adding subsection (b) thereto.

1947—Act July 17, 1947, amended section generally.

1940—Act June 6, 1940, inserted "or to such other place as the board may indicate," after "return to his home;" substituted the Attorney General or his representative in place of superintendent of the institution as the party to have control of the paroled prisoner; "without regard to the good-time allowance" for "less such good-time allowance as is, or may hereafter be, provided by law," and "paroled: Provided, however, That the conditions prescribed and the residential limits may be thereafter changed or modified as the Board in its judgment may determine" for "paroled, which limits, however, may be thereafter changed in the discretion of the board."

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS TO DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA COUNCIL

Section 402(210) of Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, effective November 3, 1967, transferred the regulatory and other functions of the Board of Commissioners, under subsection (b) relating to rules and regulations permitting the discharge of parolees, to the District of Columbia Council, subject to the right of the Commissioner as provided by section 406 of the Plan. For provisions establishing the District of Columbia Council, see section 201 of the Plan, set out in the appendix to title 1.

COMMISSIONERS AUTHORITY NOT AFFECTED

Sec. 2 Act May 22, 1965, provided: Nothing in this Act shall be construed so as to affect the authority vested in the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia by Reorganization Plan Numbered 5 of 1952 (66 Stat. 824). The performance of any function vested by this Act in the Board of Commissioners or in any office or agency under the jurisdiction and control of said Board of Commissioners may be delegated by said Board of Commissioners in accordance with section 3 of such plan.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN U.S. CODE

This section is referred to in title 21, section 848, U.S. Code.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Applicability of statute

This section concerning paroles is not applicable to prisoner who is given a conditional release. Johnson v. Ward, U.S. Marshal, etc. (D.C.D.C. 1959, 171 F. Supp. 26).

Discretion of board

Material facts in prisoner's suit against parole board claiming that racial discrimination was basis of denial of parole must be such as would legitimately tend to show that parole board acted under color of law, and thereby subjected prisoner to deprivation of his federal rights. R. Richardson, Jr. v. H. F. Rivers, D.C. Board of Parole et al. (1964, 335 F. 2d 996, 118 U.S. App. D.C. 333).

Prisoner's conclusory assertions that racial discrimination was basis of parole board's denial of parole as against board's affidavits in denying discrimination did not create a genuine issue as to a material fact when viewed in light of board's broad discretionary power. Id.

A prisoner may be released from imprisonment before he has served the maximum period of his sentence, less lawful good-time allowance, only in the discretion of the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole. De Benque v. United States (1936, 85 F. 2d 202, 66 App. D.C. 36, 106 A.L.R. 839).

The District of Columbia Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole has authority to impose conditions or to exercise supervision over prisoners convicted in the District of Columbia and thereafter released because of good conduct allowance. In re Reed (1947, 158 F. 2d 323, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 310).

Dispositional alternatives

The parole board has a wide choice of dispositional alternatives: (1) it may excuse the violation altogether and withdraw its warrant; (2) it may immediately revoke parole; and (3) it may withhold revocation until parolee has completed service of his intervening sentence and then revoke parole. A. Shelton et al. v. United States Board of Parole et al. (1967, 388 F. 2d 567, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 311).

The parole board is vested with broad discretion in the dispositional process. Id.

Intent of Congress

Congress intended to provide uniform administration of Federal and District of Columbia law with respect to control of released prisoners. Johnson v. Ward, U.S. Marshal (1960, 278 F. 2d 245, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

Jurisdiction upon conditional release

Where defendant was sentenced in 1936 to 30-year term for second-degree murder and was given conditional release when his accumulated good time and industrial good time allowances and his time already served totaled 30 years, defendant was thereafter under the supervision of the United States Board of Parole until his maximum sentence expired, not counting his good time and industrial time allowances. Johnson v. Ward, U.S. Marshal etc. (D.C.D.C. 1959, 171 F. Supp. 26).

Parties interested

Where federal prisoner was released pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 4164, a prisoner who has served term for which he was sentenced, less deductions allowed for good conduct, shall upon release be treated as if released on parole and be subject to laws relating to parole of federal prisoners until expiration of maximum term specified in sentence, released prisoner was under supervision of parole board until maximum sentence, not counting time off for good behavior, expired, as against contention that because parole law in effect when original criminal acts were committed provided for measurement of parole period by maximum sentence less good time allowance, prisoner could not be subject to conditions of parole law after his release because he had served maximum sentence less good-time allowance. Hicks v. Reid (1952, 194 F. 2d 327, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 109, certiorari denied 73 S. Ct. 51, 344 U.S. 840, 97 L. Ed. 653).

Prisoners confined outside district

Same privileges of parole are accorded to prisoners sentenced in the District of Columbia and committed to penal institutions outside of the District as to those sentenced and confined within the District. Bracey v. Hill. (D.C. Pa., 1935, 11 F. Supp. 148).

Prompt disposition of consequences of parole violation

Where fact of parole violation has been conclusively established by an adjudication, either state or federal, that a criminal offense was committed during release period, parole violator may apply to parole board for immediate determination of disposition to be made concerning consequences of his parole violation and to seek what is in effect concurrent service on all, or a part of, the unexpired portion of his original sentence with the sentence imposed for criminal offense which constituted the parole violation. A. Shelton et al. v. United States Board of Parole et al. (1967, 388 F. 2d 567, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 311).

Review

The parole board's selection of a particular disposition, after full and fair consideration of available facts, may be regarded as almost unreviewable, but failure to afford a procedure whereby violator may seek a favorable disposition, or an outright refusal to consider proffered evidence in mitigation, is not immune from judicial review. A. Shelton et al. v. United States Board of Parole et al. (1967, 388 F. 2d 567, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 311).

Where parole boards recently issued new regulations, in lieu of informal procedures, concerning the processing and disposition of applications for withdrawal or execution of parole violator warrants prior to expiration of the intervening sentence, appeals not otherwise disposed of would be remanded so that petitioners might pursue the administrative remedies provided in those regulations. Id.

Judicial reviews of dispositional phase of parole revocation proceedings is available, if at all, only after the violator has pursued his administrative remedies. Id.

§ 24-205. Violation of parole—Warrant—Arrest—Return to confinement.

If said Board of Parole, or any member thereof, shall have reliable information that a prisoner has violated his parole, said board, or any member thereof, at any time within the term or terms of the prisoner's sentence, may issue a warrant to any officer hereinafter authorized to execute the same for the retaking of such prisoner. Any officer of the District of Columbia penal institutions, any officer of the Metropolitan Police Department of the District of Columbia, or any federal officer authorized to serve criminal process within the United States to whom such warrant shall be delivered is authorized and required to execute such warrant by taking such prisoner and returning or removing him to the penal institution of the District of Columbia from which he was paroled or to such penal or correctional institution as may be designated by the Attorney General of the United States. (July 15, 1932, 47

Stat. 698, ch. 492, § 5; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 242, ch. 254, § 4; July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 378, ch. 263, § 2.)

AMENDMENT

1940—Act June 6, 1940, substituted "him to said penal institution," for "or removing him to the penal institution of the District of Columbia from which he was paroled or to such penal or correctional institution as may be designated by the Attorney General of the United States."

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Board of Parole was substituted for Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole to conform to act July 17, 1947, which transferred the powers of the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole not specifically repealed, to the Board of Parole. See § 24-201b.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN U.S. CODE

This section is referred to in title 21, section 848, U.S. Code.

NOTES TO DECISIONS*Crime committed while on parole

Petition for writ of habeas corpus, on the ground that petitioner's confinement after expiration of his sentence was illegal, was denied where petitioner had committed a crime while on parole, and the judge imposing the second sentence had no power to make it and the unexpired portion of the first sentence run concurrently. Hammerer v. Huff (1940, 110 F. 2d 113, 71 App. D.C. 246).

Jail sentence while on probation

When probationer was actually serving a jail sentence while on probation with respect to another sentence, even in jail, he was subject to the conditions of the probation and by its terms he was to refrain from violation of law. Burns v. United States (1932, 53 S. Ct. 154, 287 U.S. 216, 77 L. Ed. 266).

Jurisdiction

One hundred-eighty days before expiration of maximum five-year term, mandatory releasee's release became unconditional, he was no longer deemed as if released on parole, board of parole no longer had jurisdiction over him, board had no authority to issue parole violation warrant on basis of prior parole violations and releasee could not be required to serve the full five-year term. Birch v. Anderson (1965, 358 F. 2d 520, 123 U.S. App. D.C. 153).

Defendant, a narcotics violator who had been imprisoned in a District of Columbia penal institution and then conditionally released, was subject to provisions of District of Columbia Code dealing with parole. T. Gaskins v. R. F. Kennedy, Attorney General, et ano. (1965, 350 F. 2d 311.)

Notwithstanding defendant was convicted of violating general federal statute, as distinguished from a criminal law of the District of Columbia, and was released under federal mandatory good time statute from District of Columbia penal institution, District parole board had authority to arrest him under District of Columbia code provision authorizing arrest of parole violators. C. Fuller v. K. A. Weakley, Supt. Lorton Reformatory etc., et al. (1965, 349 F. 2d 90, 4th Ct.).

The District of Columbia Parole Board did not err in acting pursuant to D.C. Parole Act with regard to prisoner who had been convicted of a federal crime rather than offense made criminal by D.C. Code, since the act establishing D.C. Parole Board transferred authority over prisoners held in District prisons to D.C. Board, and provisions of D.C. Parole Act, rather than federal parole law, were to be applied to such prisoners. R. A. Howerton v. Hugh F. Rivers et al. (1963, 326 F. 2d 653, 117 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Where petitioner was released from District of Columbia Reformatory on parole, but a warrant was subsequently issued against him for violation of that parole and petitioner was confined at a Federal Penitentiary in Kansas upon conviction of a new and separate offense in Missouri, District of Columbia Board of Parole did not lose its jurisdiction over petitioner to Federal Parole Board and had the right to file a detainer against petitioner. Noll v. Board of Parole for Government of District of Columbia (1951, 191 F. 2d 653, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

Parties interested

Defendant who had not been paroled or retaken on warrant was not in a position to challenge the validity of this section under the Fourth Amendment. Sims v. Rives (1936, 84 F. 2d 871, 66 App. D.C. 24, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 960, 298 U.S. 682, 80 L. Ed. 1402).

Return to confinement

Where petitioner who had been granted parole by Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole for District of Columbia was re-arrested on reliable information for parole violation, was taken to United States Penitentiary outside District, hearing was had before Board of Parole, and certificate of revocation was signed by assistant parole executive of United States Board of Parole and transmitted to warden, certificate of revocation was valid although not issued by Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole for District of Columbia. Stillwell v. Looney (D.C.D.C. 1953, 110 F. Supp. 1, affirmed 207 F. 2d 359).

Review

There is no right of judicial review of exercise by parole board of its discretionary powers. Boddie v. Weakley (1966, 456 F. 2d 242, Fourth Circuit).

Unreasonable delay

Parole board's seven-month delay in executing its parole violator's warrant was not unreasonable, especially since reason for delay was to allow accused to serve two intervening sentences. Ginyard v. Clemmer (1966, 357 F. 2d 291, 123 U.S. App. D.C. 100).

Unexpired sentence

The unexpired portion of a parole violator's original sentence begins to run not when he is in prison by arrest or conviction for a new and separate offense but only when his parole has been revoked and he has been returned to custody of revoking authority. Noll v. Board of Parole for Government of District of Columbia (1951, 191 F. 2d 653, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

Where petitioner was released from District of Columbia Reformatory on parole but a subsequent warrant was issued for violation of that parole, fact that petitioner served time in various places of detention other than in District of Columbia did not fulfill requirement of serving District of Columbia sentence. Id.

§ 24-206. Revocation of parole after retaking—Hearing—New parole.

When a prisoner has been retaken upon a warrant issued by the Board of Parole, he shall be given an opportunity to appear before the Board, a member thereof, or an examiner designated by the Board. At such hearing he may be represented by counsel. The Board may then, or at any time in its discretion, terminate the parole or modify the terms and conditions thereof. If the order of parole shall be revoked, the prisoner, unless subsequently reparaoled, shall serve the remainder of the sentence originally imposed less any commutation for good conduct which may be earned by him after his return to custody. For the purpose of computing commutation for good conduct, the remainder of the sentence originally imposed shall be considered as a new sentence. The time a prisoner was on parole shall not be taken into account to diminish the time for which he was sentenced.

In the event a prisoner is confined in, or as a parolee is returned to a penal or correctional institution other than a penal or correctional institution of the District of Columbia, the Board of Parole created by section 723a of title 18, U.S. Code, shall have and exercise the same power and authority as the Board of Parole of the District of Columbia had the prisoner been confined in or returned to a penal or correctional institution of the District of Columbia. (July 15, 1932, 47 Stat. 698, ch. 492, § 6; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 242, ch. 254, § 5; July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 379, ch. 263, § 5.)

REFERENCES IN TEXT

Title 18 U.S.C. § 723a, referred to in the text, was repealed by act June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 862, ch. 645, § 21, and is now covered by 18 U.S.C. § 4201.

AMENDMENTS

1947—Act July 17, 1947, amended section generally, and among other changes, permitted the parole violator, upon recommitment, to earn commutation for good conduct.

1940—Act June 6, 1940, added the provisions relating to the authority of the Board of Parole when a prisoner is removed to an institution designated by the Attorney General.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN U.S. CODE

This section is referred to in title 21, section 848, U.S. Code.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Appearance and hearing

Alleged parole violator was entitled to present testimony of witnesses appearing voluntarily. G. J. Reed, Chairman, U.S. Board of Parole et al. v. L. D. Butterworth (1961, 297 F. 2d 776, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

The provision of this section that a paroled prisoner arrested for violation of parole should be given an opportunity to appear before board meant an effective appearance, including presence of counsel, if desired by prisoner, and receipt of testimony if he has testimony to present. Fleming v. Tate (1946, 156 F. 2d 848, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 205).

Participation by counsel in proceedings against parole violator need be no greater than necessary to insure that board is accurately informed from parolee's standpoint before it acts, and permitted presentation of testimony by parolee is governed by same rule. Id.

Prisoner who had been retaken on warrant issued by Board of Parole was entitled to explain before Board his assertion that he had been leading a decent life and was entitled to more than a pro forma proceeding, and he would either be given an opportunity to explain such matters before Board or be discharged. United States ex rel. McCreary v. Kenton (D.C.D.C. 1960, 190 F. Supp. 689).

There is no denial of administrative due process to prisoner who is not entitled to have witnesses summoned and heard or who may not appear with counsel at hearing concerning revocation of parole. Id.

This section providing that a prisoner shall be given an opportunity to "appear" before the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole of District of Columbia contemplates an effective appearance and not the mere physical presence of prisoner, and implies that he must be given a "hearing" wherein he is entitled to be represented by retained counsel, present evidence, and adduce witnesses. In re Tate (D.C.D.C. 1946, 63 F. Supp. 961).

Under this section providing that a prisoner returned to an institution for alleged violation of his parole shall be given an opportunity to appear before the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole of District of Columbia, a summary and informal hearing is sufficient. Id.

Assignment of counsel

Where it was undisputed that revocation of prisoner's conditional release was due to his failure to make report to parole supervisor, it was not necessary that indigent prisoner be furnished counsel at routine revocation hearing. Gaskins v. Kennedy (1965, 350 F. 2d 311, Fourth Circuit).

Under this section providing that a prisoner returned to an institution for alleged violation of his parole shall be given an opportunity to appear before the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole of District of Columbia, right of counsel is statutory and not constitutional, and prisoner would not be entitled to have counsel assigned to represent him. In re Tate (D.C.D.C. 1946, 63 F. Supp. 961).

Certificate of revocation

Where petitioner who had been granted parole by Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole for District of Columbia was re-arrested on reliable information for parole violation, was taken to United States Penitentiary outside District, hearing was had before Board of Parole, and certificate of revocation was signed by assistant parole executive of United States Board of Parole and transmitted to warden, certificate of revocation was valid although not issued by Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole for District of Columbia. Stillwell v. Looney (D.C.D.C. 1953, 110 F. Supp. 1, affirmed 207 F. 2d 359).

Commutation of sentence

Any right to commutation which defendant may have earned for good conduct at any time prior to recommitment was conditional and was forfeited by violation of parole. Jones v. Clemmer (1947, 163 F. 2d 852, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 288).

The amendment of July 17, 1947, to this section permitting parole violator to earn commutation for good conduct applied to service of remainder of sentences after recommitment, although sentences were originally imposed prior to such amendment. Id.

Construction

The amendment of July 17, 1947, to this section so as to permit parole violator upon recommitment to earn commutation for good conduct was remedial and was to be construed liberally. Jones v. Clemmer (1947, 163 F. 2d 852, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 288).

Deprivation of rights

Colorable claim of deprivation of rights to assistance of retained counsel and to present testimony of voluntary witnesses in parole revocation hearing is justiciable. Boddie v. Weakley (1966, 356 F. 2d 242, Fourth Circuit).

Discretion of board

Under this section, parolee should be permitted to present any pertinent matter, and, although board's discretion in continuing or revoking parole is uncontrolled, it cannot act in disregard of facts or refuse to hear argument. Fleming v. Tate (1946, 156 F. 2d 848, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 205).

The granting or revocation of a parole is within discretion of Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole of the District of Columbia. In re Tate (D.C.D.C. 1946, 63 F. Supp. 961).

Dispositional alternatives

The parole board has a wide choice of dispositional alternatives: (1) it may excuse the violation altogether and withdraw its warrant; (2) it may immediately revoke parole; and (3) it may withhold revocation until parolee has completed service of his intervening sentence and then revoke parole. A. Shelton et al. v. United States Board of Parole et al. (1967, 388 F. 2d 567, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 311).

The parole board is vested with broad discretion in the dispositional process. Id.

Good time allowance

Where prisoner, who was sentenced for violation of District of Columbia Code and transferred to federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, was later conditionally released and placed under supervision of United States Board of Parole at Washington, D.C., but was later taken into custody on a warrant issued by United States Board of Parole for violation of conditions of his release and transferred to a penal institution operated by District of Columbia, prisoner after recommitment accumulated good time at rate of six days per month as fixed by District of Columbia Code and not at rate of eight days per month as was the case when he was confined in federal penitentiary. G. P. Clokey v. U.S. Parole Board et al. (1962, 310 F. 2d 86, U.S. App. 4th Ct.).

Habeas corpus

A parole violator, who was returned to prison without permitting counsel who had previously represented prisoner to appear in his behalf or permitting his employer to testify, was entitled to release in habeas corpus proceeding. Fleming v. Tate (1946, 156 F. 2d 848, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 205).

On writ of habeas corpus, District Court had no jurisdiction to review on merits a revocation of a parole by the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole of District of Columbia, and only issue was whether petitioner had been deprived of his legal rights by manner in which revocation hearing was conducted. In re Tate (D.C.D.C. 1946, 63 F. Supp. 961).

Where, at hearing before Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole of District of Columbia to revoke a parole, parolee's counsel was not permitted to appear, parolee's employer was not permitted to testify, and parole was revoked, parolee's right under this section to appear before the board was violated and parolee would be discharged on habeas corpus without prejudice to subsequent proceedings for revocation of his parole in conformity with this section. Id.

Jurisdiction

Defendant, a narcotics violator who had been imprisoned in a District of Columbia penal institution and then conditionally released, was subject to provisions of District of Columbia Code dealing with parole. Gaskins v. Kennedy (1965, 350 F. 2d 311, Fourth Circuit).

Although defendant had been convicted of violating a general federal law, as distinguished from a criminal statute of the District of Columbia, defendant who had been in prison in District of Columbia penal institution and conditionally released was subject to supervision of the District parole board and statute empowering board to revoke parole was applicable to him. Id.

Where petitioner was released from District of Columbia Reformatory on parole, but a warrant was subsequently issued against him for violation of that parole and petitioner was confined at a Federal Penitentiary in Kansas upon conviction of a new and separate offense in Missouri, District of Columbia Board of Parole did not lose its jurisdiction over petitioner to Federal Parole Board and had the right to file a detainer against petitioner. Noll v. Board of Parole for Government of District of Columbia (1951, 191 F. 2d 653, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

Prompt disposition of consequence of parole violation

Where fact of parole violation has been conclusively established by an adjudication, either state or federal, that a criminal offense was committed during release period, parole violator may apply to parole board for immediate determination of disposition to be made concerning consequences of his parole violation and to seek what is in effect concurrent service on all, or a part of, the unexpired portion of his original sentence with the sentence imposed for criminal offense which constituted the parole violation. A. Shelton et al. v. United States Board of Parole et al. (1967, 388 F. 2d 567, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 311).

Review

The parole board's selection of a particular disposition, after full and fair consideration of available facts, may be regarded as almost unreviewable, but failure to afford a procedure whereby violator may seek a favorable disposition, or an outright refusal to consider proffered evidence in mitigation, is not immune from judicial overview. A. Shelton et al., v. United States Board of Parole et al. (1967, 388 F. 2d 567, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 311).

Where parole boards recently issued new regulations, in lieu of informal procedures, concerning the processing and disposition of applications for withdrawal or execution of parole violator warrants prior to expiration of the intervening sentence, appeals not otherwise disposed of would be remanded so that petitioners might pursue the administrative remedies provided in those regulations. Id.

Judicial review of dispositional phase of parole revocation proceedings is available, if at all, only after the violator has pursued his administrative remedies. Id.

Revocation of parole

Failure of Board of Parole to give immediate hearing and revoke parole when paroled prisoner was returned to reformatory pursuant to sentences for crimes committed while on parole did not permit parole to continue running in satisfaction of original sentences after prisoner's re-entry of reformatory. Washington v. Clemmer (1948, 169 F. 2d 300, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

Right to counsel

Prisoner is not entitled to services of appointed counsel in routine parole revocation hearing, but he has statutory right to assistance of retained counsel, and there is a judicially enforceable right to fundamental fairness, and right to fairness includes right to present testimony of voluntary witnesses. Boddie v. Weakley (1966, 356 F. 2d 242, Fourth Circuit).

That indigent parolee was not furnished counsel at hearing pursuant to which his parole was revoked did not render his subsequent confinement unlawful. R. E. Jones v. H. F. Rivers, et al., D. Clemmer et al. (C.A. 4th, 1964, 338 F. 2d 862).

Alleged parole violator was entitled to counsel at hearing. G. J. Reed, Chairman, U.S. Board of Parole et al. v. L. D. Butterworth (1961, 297 F. 2d 776, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

In proceeding for writ of habeas corpus by petitioner who had been arrested for violation of conditional release and imprisoned, where there was no showing that petitioner was advised of his right to have his counsel present at hearing before parole board respecting revocation of conditional release, record failed to disclose that petitioner had made an election not to have his counsel present at hearing. Moore v. Reid et al. (1957, 246 F. 2d 654, 100 U.S. App. D.C. 373).

Where person was arrested and imprisoned for violation of conditional release and brought before the District of Columbia Parole Board for hearing on revocation of conditional release, under circumstances, his failure to have counsel present at hearing was critical and effectively denied him of his statutory right to appear before board. Id.

Under this section giving a paroled prisoner an opportunity to appear before Parole Board at hearing on revocation of his parole, appearance includes right to counsel if the prisoner so elects. Id.

Rules of evidence

Although parole violator is entitled to present testimony at hearing before board, it is not required that receipt of testimony be governed by strict rules of evidence. Fleming v. Tate (1946, 156 F. 2d 848, 81 U.S. App. D.C. 205).

Sentence upon reimprisonment

Prisoner was not entitled, on return to prison following revocation of parole, to credit against remaining sentence for time spent on parole. R. A. Howerton v. Hugh F. Rivers et al. (1963, 326 F. 2d 653, 117 U.S. App. D.C. 110).

Prisoner was not entitled, on return to prison following revocation of parole, to credit against remaining sentence for time spent on parole. E. Bates v. H. F. Rivers, Executive etc. (1963, 323 F. 2d 311, 116 U.S. App. D.C. 306).

Title 18 U.S.C. § 4164, providing that federal prisoners shall be subject to all provisions of law relating to the parole of United States prisoners, did not require that a District of Columbia prisoner who had his conditional release revoked be recommitted under good conduct deduction provisions of the general federal statutes without regard to this section providing for computation of good conduct deductions for recommitted parolees, and fact that prisoner, as a result of application of this section was required to serve more time than a prisoner convicted under general federal law did not deny prisoner the equal protection or due process of law as guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment. Gilstrap v. Clemmer et al. (C.A. Va. 1960, 284 F. 2d 804).

The provision of this former section that unexpired term of imprisonment of any paroled prisoner shall begin to run from date he is returned to institution does not require that original sentence shall run from date of his imprisonment for new and separate offense, but refers only to reimprisonment on original sentence under order of parole board. Washington v. Clemmer (1948, 169 F. 2d 300, 83 U.S. App. D.C. 268).

Service of sentence

The unexpired portion of a parole violator's original sentence begins to run not when he is in prison by arrest or conviction for a new and separate offense but only when his parole has been revoked and he has been returned to custody of revoking authority. Noll v. Board of Parole for Government of District of Columbia (1951, 191 F. 2d 653, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

Where petitioner was released from District of Columbia Reformatory on parole but a subsequent warrant was issued for violation of that parole, fact that petitioner served time in various places of detention other than in District of Columbia did not fulfill requirement of serving District of Columbia sentence. Id.

Time limitation on issuance of violator warrant

The parole board's jurisdiction to issue a violator warrant with respect to a mandatory release terminates 180 days before expiration of the maximum sentence. A. Shelton et al. v. United States Board of Parole et al. (1967, 388 F. 2d 567, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 311).

Violation of conditions

District of Columbia Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole had power to impose conditions upon release of prisoner who had served full time of sentence with deductions for good conduct and in event of violation of conditions to recommit him to serve out balance of his term. Gould v. Green (1944, 141 F. 2d 533, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 363).

§ 24-207. Repeal of inconsistent laws—Savings provision.

All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of sections 22-2601, 24-201, 24-202 to 24-209 and 24-425 are hereby repealed: Provided, however, That for any felony committed before July 15, 1932, the penalty, sentence, or forfeiture provided by law for such felony at the time such felony was committed shall remain in full force and effect and shall be imposed, notwithstanding said sections. (July 15, 1932, 47 Stat. 698, ch. 492, § 7.)

REFERENCES IN TEXT

Sections 24-201 and 24-202, referred to in the text, were repealed by act July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 379, ch. 263, § 7.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 24-203.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN U.S. CODE

This section is referred to in title 21, section 848, U.S. Code.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Prisoners confined outside District

Parole board under Indeterminate Sentence Act had no jurisdiction over prisoners convicted of murder in the District of Columbia, but confined in the United States penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga. Aderhold v. Lee (C.C.A. 5, 1934, 68 F. 2d 824, certiorari denied 54 S. Ct. 718, 292 U.S. 633, 78 L. Ed. 1486).

Purpose

This section was intended to repeal those provisions of existing acts requiring the imposition of a definite, as distinguished from an indeterminate, sentence. Anderson v. Rives (1936, 85 F. 2d 673, 66 App. D.C. 174).

§ 24-208. Power of Board—Prisoners sentenced to more than 180 days—Minimum sentence required to be served.

The power of the Board of Parole shall extend to all prisoners whose sentences exceed one hundred and eighty days regardless of the nature of the offense: Provided, That in the case of a prisoner convicted of an offense other than a felony, including violations of municipal regulations and ordinances and Acts of Congress in the nature of municipal regulations and ordinances, the prisoner may not be paroled until he has served one-third of the sentence imposed, and in the case of two or more sentences for other than a felony, no parole may be granted until after the prisoner has served one-third of the aggregate sentences imposed. (July 15, 1932, 47 Stat. 698, ch. 492, § 9; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 242, ch. 254, § 7 (a); July 17, 1947, 61 Stat. 379, ch. 263, § 6.)

AMENDMENTS

1947—Act July 17, 1947, amended section generally.

1940—Act June 6, 1940, substituted "any prisoner convicted of two or more crimes other than a felony, including violations of municipal regulations and ordinances and Acts of Congress in the nature of municipal regulations and ordinances, when the aggregate of the sentences imposed is in excess of one year, said Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole may parole said prisoner, under the provisions of this Act, after said prisoner has served one-third of the aggregate sentence imposed", for "a prisoner convicted of felony committed prior to the effective date of this Act [July 15, 1932] and in the case of any prisoner convicted of misdemeanor when the aggregate sentence imposed is in excess of one year, said Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole may parole said prisoner, under the provisions of this Act, after said prisoner has served one-fifth of the sentence imposed."

CONVICTION OF PRIOR MISDEMEANORS OR FELONIES

Subsection (b) of section 7 of act June 6, 1940, provided: "In the case of a prisoner convicted of misdemeanors committed prior to the effective date of this amendatory act [June 6, 1940], when the aggregate sentence imposed is in excess of one year, and in the case of a prisoner convicted of felony committed prior to the effective date of said act approved July 15, 1932, said Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole may parole said prisoner under the provisions of said act approved July 15, 1932, as amended, after said prisoner has served one-fifth of the sentence imposed."

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 24-203, 24-207.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Powers of board

Under this section creating District of Columbia Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole and providing for transfer of powers from federal board of parole to district board upon appointment of members of district board, the district board receives such powers over prisoners confined in penal institutions of district as existed in federal board of parole on date of appointment of members of district board, and not merely powers which existed in federal board of parole at time this chapter became effective. Gould v. Green (1944, 141 F. 2d 533, 78 U.S. App. D.C. 363).

Under this section creating District of Columbia Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole and providing for transfer of powers from federal board of parole over prisoners confined in penal institutions in District of Columbia to district board upon appointment of members of district board, authority of district board was not limited to prisoners thereafter convicted. Id.

§ 24-209. Federal Parole Board—Authority over United States prisoners convicted in the District of Columbia.

The Board of Parole created by section 723a of title 18, U.S. Code, shall have and exercise the same power and authority over prisoners convicted in the District of Columbia of crimes against the United States and now or hereafter confined in any United States penitentiary or prison (other than the penal institutions of the District of Columbia) as is vested in the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole over prisoners confined in the penal institutions of the District of Columbia. (July 15, 1932, ch. 492, § 10, as added June 5, 1934, 48 Stat. 880, ch. 391.)

REFERENCES IN TEXT

Title 18 U.S.C. § 723a, referred to in the text, was repealed by act June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 862, ch. 645, § 21, and is now covered by 18 U.S.C. § 4201.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 24-203, 24-207.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general

There is no doubt that Congress intended this section to be applicable to persons convicted in the District of Columbia of crimes against the general laws of the United States. Sims v. Rives (1936, 84 F. 2d 871, 66 App. D. C. 24).

This section gives to the United States Board of Parole the same power and authority over prisoners convicted in the District of Columbia of crimes against the United States as is vested in the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole. Story v. Rives (1938, 97 F. 2d 182, 68 App. D.C. 325).

The term "prisoners confined in", as used in this section transferring power over prisoners confined in penal institutions of District of Columbia from United States Board of Parole to the District Board of Penal Institutions, is used to designate group of persons by institutions rather than to delimit powers of District board to such persons only while they are in confinement. Ex parte Gould (D.C.D.C. 1943, 51 F. Supp. 354).

The power of United States Board of Parole to impose conditions on release on account of deductions for good conduct of United States prisoners passed from United States Board of Parole to District Board of Penal Institutions with respect to United States prisoners in penal institutions of the District of Columbia. Id.

Jurisdiction

Where petitioner was released from District of Columbia Reformatory on parole, but a warrant was subsequently issued against him for violation of that parole and petitioner was confined at a Federal Penitentiary in Kansas upon conviction of a new and separate offense in Missouri, District of Columbia Board of Parole did not lose its jurisdiction over petitioner to Federal Parole Board and had the right to file a detainer against petitioner. Noll v. Board of Parole for Government of District of Columbia (1951, 191 F. 2d 653, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

Prisoners confined outside District

This section is not inconsistent with the authority of the Attorney General to transfer prisoners from the District of Columbia. Bracey v. Hill (D.C. Pa. 1935, 11 F. Supp. 148).

The same privileges of parole are accorded prisoners sentenced in the District of Columbia and committed to penal institutions outside of the District as to those sentenced and confined within the District. Id.

This section removes the question whether a defendant, who was sentenced in the District of Columbia, could be committed to a penal institution outside of the District because of the deprivation of parole. Id.

One sentenced for violation of the laws of the District of Columbia, convicted and confined in District, could be confined outside the District, and such confinement does not violate any constitutional rights. MacAboy v. Klecka (D.C. Md. 1938, 22 F. Supp. 960).

The United States Board of Parole and not the District Board of Penal Institutions, has jurisdiction over prisoners convicted in District of Columbia and transferred to some Federal institution other than penal institutions of the District. Ex parte Gould (D.C.D.C. 1943, 51 F. Supp. 354).

Release of prisoners not on parole

Neither this section nor §§ 24-201 to 24-208 have any bearing upon the release of prisoners other than on parole, and neither restricts in any way the power of the United States Board to supervise prisoners so released from institutions other than in the District under the provisions of section 4 of the act of June 29, 1932 (18 U.S.C. former § 716b [now 18 U.S.C. § 4164]). Story v. Rives (1938, 97 F. 2d 182, 69 App. D.C. 325).

Release of prisoners on parole

This act constituted an extension of power in the United States Board over District of Columbia prisoners in that it permitted the board to release such prisoners on parole from non-District institutions after serving only one-fifth of their maximum terms. Story v. Rives (1938, 97 F. 2d 182, 68 App. D.C. 325).

Service of sentence

The unexpired portion of a parole violator's original sentence begins to run not when he is in prison by arrest or conviction for a new and separate offense but only when his parole has been revoked and he has been returned to custody of revoking authority. Noll v. Board of Parole for Government of District of Columbia (1951, 191 F. 2d 653, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

Where petitioner was released from District of Columbia Reformatory on parole but a subsequent warrant was issued for violation of that parole, fact that petitioner served time in various places of detention other than in District of Columbia did not fulfill requirement of serving District of Columbia sentence. Id.

United States prisoner

Prisoner sentenced for violation of the laws of the District of Columbia is a "United States prisoner" within the meaning of 18 U.S.C. § 716b [now 18 U.S.C. § 4164]. MacAboy v. Klecka (D.C. Md. 1938, 22 F. Supp. 960).

Chapter 3.—INSANE CRIMINALS

Sec.

24-301. Commitment of persons of unsound mind to the District of Columbia General Hospital—Certification to the court—Acquittal by jury on grounds of insanity—Confinement in a mental institution—Conditions for release after confinement—Conditional release—Expenses—Writ of habeas corpus—Inconsistent provisions of Federal Statutes superseded—Return order for apprehension of escaped inmates—Procedure and time limitation for pleading insanity as a defense.

24-302. Commitment of mentally ill person while serving sentence.

24-303. Restoration to sanity—Delivery of person to court—Delivery of person to Director of Department of Corrections.

§ 24-301. Commitment of persons of unsound mind to the District of Columbia General Hospital—Certification to the court—Acquittal by jury on grounds of insanity—Confinement in a mental institution—Conditions for release after confinement—Conditional release—Expenses—Writ of habeas corpus—Inconsistent provisions of Federal Statutes superseded—Return order for apprehension of escaped inmates—Procedure and time limitation for pleading insanity as a defense.

(a) If it appears to a court having jurisdiction of—

(1) a person arrested or indicted for, or charged by information with, an offense, or

(2) a child subject to a transfer motion in the Family Division of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia pursuant to section 16-2307, that, from the court's own observations or from prima facie evidence submitted to it and prior to the imposition of sentence, the expiration of any period of probation, or the hearing on the transfer motion, as the case may be, such person or child (hereafter in this subsection and subsection (b) referred to as the "accused") is of unsound mind or is mentally incompetent so as to be unable to understand the proceedings against him or properly to assist in his own defense, the court may order the accused committed to the District of Columbia General Hospital or other mental hospital designated by the court, for such reasonable period as the court may determine for examination and observation and for care and treatment if such is necessary by the psychiatric staff of said hospital. If, after such examination and observation, the superintendent of the hospital, in the case of a mental hospital, or the chief psychiatrist of the District of Columbia General Hospital, in the case of District of Columbia General Hospital, shall report that in his opinion the accused is of unsound mind or mentally incompetent, such report shall be sufficient to authorize the court to commit by order the accused to a hospital for the mentally ill unless the accused or the Government objects, in which event, the court, after hearing without a jury, shall make a judicial determination of the competency of the accused to stand trial or to participate in transfer proceedings. If the court shall find the accused to be then of unsound mind or mentally incompetent to stand trial or to participate in transfer proceedings, the court shall order the accused confined to a hospital for the mentally ill.

(b) Whenever an accused person confined to a hospital for the mentally ill is restored to mental competency in the opinion of the superintendent of said hospital, the superintendent shall certify such fact to the clerk of the court in which the indictment, information, or charge against the accused is pending and such certification shall be sufficient to authorize the court to enter an order thereon adjudicating him to be competent to stand trial or to participate in transfer proceedings, unless the accused or the Government objects, in which event, the court, after hearing without a jury, shall make a judicial determination of the competency of the accused to stand trial or to participate in transfer proceedings.

(c) When any person tried upon an indictment or information for an offense, or tried in the juvenile court of the District of Columbia for an offense, is acquitted solely on the ground that he was insane at the time of its commission, that fact shall be set forth by the jury in their verdict.

(d) (1) If any person tried upon an indictment or information for an offense raises the defense of insanity and is acquitted solely on the ground that he was insane at the time of its commission, he shall be committed to a hospital for the mentally ill until such time as he is eligible for release pursuant to this subsection or subsection (e).

(2) A person confined pursuant to paragraph (1) shall have a hearing, unless waived, within 50 days of his confinement to determine whether he is entitled to release from custody. At the conclusion of the criminal action referred to in paragraph (1) of this subsection, the court shall provide such person with representation by counsel—

(A) in the case of a person who is eligible to have counsel appointed by the court, by continuing any appointment of counsel made to represent such person in the prior criminal action or by appointing new counsel; or

(B) in the case of a person who is not eligible to have counsel appointed by the court, by assuring representation by retained counsel.

If the hearing is not waived, the court shall cause notice of the hearing to be served upon the person, his counsel, and the prosecuting attorney and hold the hearing. Within ten days from the date the hearing was begun, the court shall determine the issues and make findings of fact and conclusions of law with respect thereto. The person confined shall have the burden of proof. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the person confined is entitled to his release from custody, either conditional or unconditional, the court shall enter such order as may appear appropriate.

(3) An appeal may be taken from an order entered under paragraph (2) to the court having jurisdiction to review final judgments of the court entering the order.

(e) Where any person has been confined in a hospital for the mentally ill pursuant to subsection (d) of this section, and the superintendent of such hospital certifies (1) that such person has recovered his sanity, (2) that, in the opinion of the superintendent, such person will not in the reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others, and (3) in the opinion of the superintendent, the person is entitled to his unconditional release from the hospital, and such certificate is filed with the clerk of the court in which the person was tried, and a copy thereof served on the United States Attorney or the Corporation Counsel of the District of Columbia, whichever office prosecuted the accused, such certificate shall be sufficient to authorize the court to order the unconditional release of the person so confined from further hospitalization at the expiration of fifteen days from the time said certificate was filed and served as above; but the court in its discretion may, or upon objection of the United States or the District of Columbia shall, after due notice, hold a hearing at which evidence as to the mental condition of the person so confined may be submitted, including the testimony of one or more psychiatrists from said hospital. The court shall weigh the evidence and, if the court finds that such person has recovered his sanity and will not in the reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others, the court shall order such person unconditionally released from further confinement in said hospital. If the court does not so find, the court shall order such person returned to said hospital. Where, in the judgment of the superintendent of such hospital, a person confined under subsection (d) above is not in such condition as to warrant his unconditional release, but is in a condition to be conditionally released under supervision, and such certificate is filed and served as above provided, such certificate shall be sufficient to authorize the court to order the release of such person under such conditions as the court shall see fit at the expiration of fifteen days from the time such certificate is filed and served pursuant to this section: Provided, That the provisions as to hearing prior to unconditional release shall also apply to conditional releases, and, if, after a hearing and weighing the evidence, the court shall find that the condition of such person warrants his conditional release, the court shall order his release under such conditions as the court shall see fit, or, if the court does not so find, the court shall order such person returned to such hospital.

(f) When an accused person shall be acquitted solely on the ground of insanity and ordered confined in a hospital for the mentally ill, such person and his estate shall be charged with the expense of his support in such hospital.

(g) Nothing herein contained shall preclude a person confined under the authority of this section from establishing his eligibility for release under the provisions of this section by a writ of habeas corpus.

(h) The provisions of this section shall supersede in the District of Columbia the provisions of any Federal statutes or parts thereof inconsistent with this section.

(i) When a person has been ordered confined in a hospital for the mentally ill pursuant to this section and has escaped from such hospital, the court which ordered confinement shall, upon request of the Government, order the return of the escaped person to such hospital. The return order shall be effective throughout the United States. Any Federal judicial officer within whose jurisdiction the escaped person shall be found shall, upon receipt of the return order issued by the committing court, cause such person to be apprehended and delivered up for return to such hospital.

(j) Insanity shall not be a defense in any criminal proceeding in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia or in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, unless the accused or his attorney in such proceeding, at the time the accused enters his plea of not guilty or within fifteen days thereafter or at such later time as the court may for good cause permit, files with the court and serves upon the prosecuting attorney written notice of his intention to rely on such defense. No person accused of an offense shall be acquitted on the ground that he was insane at the time of its commission unless his insanity, regardless of who raises the issue, is affirmatively established by a preponderance of the evidence.

(k) (1) A person in custody or conditionally released from custody, pursuant to the provisions of this section, claiming the right to be released from custody, the right to any change in the conditions of his release, or other relief concerning his custody, may move the court having jurisdiction to order his release, to release him from custody, to change the conditions of his release, or to grant other relief.

(2) A motion for relief may be made at any time after a hearing has been held or waived pursuant to subsection (d) (2) of this section.

(3) Unless the motion and the files and records of the case conclusively show that the person is entitled to no relief, the court shall cause notice thereof to be served upon the prosecuting authority, grant a prompt hearing thereon, determine the issues, and make findings of fact and conclusions of law with respect thereto. On all issues raised by his motion, the person shall have the burden of proof. If the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the person is entitled to his release from custody, either conditional or unconditional, a change in the conditions of his release, or other relief, the court shall enter such order as may appear appropriate.

(4) A court may entertain and determine the motion without requiring the production of the persons at the hearing.

(5) A court shall not be required to entertain a second or successive motion for relief under this section more often than once every six months. A court for good cause shown may in its discretion entertain such a motion more often than once every six months.

(6) An appeal may be taken from an order entered under this section to the court having jurisdiction to review final judgments of the court entering the order.

(7) An application for habeas corpus on behalf of a person who is authorized to apply for relief by motion pursuant to this section shall not be entertained if it appears that the applicant has failed to apply for relief, by motion, to the court having jurisdiction to entertain a motion pursuant to this section, unless it also appears that the remedy by motion is inadequate or ineffective to test the validity of his detention. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1340, ch. 854, 927; Apr. 14, 1906, 34 Stat. 113, ch. 1624; July 2, 1945, 59 Stat. 311, ch. 217; Aug. 9, 1955, 69 Stat. 609, ch. 673, § 1; Dec. 27, 1967, Pub. #### REFERENCE IN TEXT

The words "or tried in the juvenile court of the District of Columbia for an offense" in subsection (c) appear to be obsolete in view of the amendments made by Public Law 91-358, and more specifically the amendments made by section 111 (revision of title 11) and section 121 (revision of chapter 23 of title 16) which, in part, consolidated the juvenile court into the Superior Court of the District of Columbia (see § 11-901) and eliminated jury trials in juvenile cases (see § 16-2316).

AMENDMENTS

1970—Section 155(a) of Act July 29, 1970, Public Law 91-358, amended subsection (j) by striking out "District of Columbia court of general sessions" and inserting in lieu thereof "Superior Court of the District of Columbia".

"(2) a child subject to a transfer motion in the Family Division of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia pursuant to section 16-2307 of the District of Columbia Code.

that, from the court's own observations or from prima facie evidence submitted to it and prior to the imposition of sentence, the expiration of any period of probation, or the hearing on the transfer motion, as the case may be, such person or child (hereafter in this subsection and subsection (b) referred to as the 'accused') is of unsound mind or is mentally incompetent";

1906—Act Apr. 14, 1906, inserted "or is charged by an information" following "whenever a person is indicted."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1970 AMENDMENTS

See note preceding section 11-101.

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Gallinger Municipal Hospital (predecessor to District of Columbia General Hospital) was abolished and the functions thereof transferred to the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia by Reorg. Plan No. 5 of 1952. The executive functions of the Board of Commissioners were transferred to the Commissioner of the District of Columbia by § 401 of Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967.

Reorganization Order No. 57 of the Board of Commissioners dated June 30, 1953, and effective Aug. 15, 1953, established under the direction and control of a Commissioner, a Department of Public Health headed by a Director, for the purpose of planning, implementing, and directing public health and hospital care programs, and for performing certain other allied medical functions. The order abolished the previously existing Gallinger Municipal Hospital and transferred all of its positions and functions to the new department. It further provided that within the department the District of Columbia General Hospital is to perform all functions previously performed by Gallinger Municipal Hospital. Reorganization Order No. 57 was amended and redesignated as Org. Ord. No. 141, dated Feb. 11, 1964, Part IV, paragraph D, 1, set forth the functions of D.C. General Hospital. Functions set forth in Org. Ord. No. 141 were transferred to the Director of the Department of Human Resources by Commissioner's Order [Organization Action] No. 69-96, dated Mar. 7, 1969, as amended by Commissioner's Order No. 70-83, dated Mar. 6, 1970. The Orders are set out in the Appendix to title 1, Administration.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 2-2222, 16-2307, 24-303.

Acceptance of guilty plea

Where psychiatrist's report on defendant's competency to stand trial on bad check charge had included statement that defendant's crimes were product of specified mental disease particularly affecting financial judgment and that defendant required further treatment to insure against repetition of the offenses, court properly refused to accept plea of guilty and proceeded to trial to determine that defendant was not guilty by reason of insanity, though defendant had been judicially declared competent to stand trial and to assist in his own defense. W. Overholser, Sup't etc. v. F. C. Lynch (1961, 288 F. 2d 388, 109 U.S. App. D.C. 404; reversed on other grounds 1962, 82 S. Ct. 1063).

Acquiescence in plea of insanity

Where petitioner had not himself sought introduction of insanity defense at his trial and had not acquiesced in assertion of that defense, his commitment to hospital for the mentally ill following his acquittal by reason of insanity was not authorized and he was entitled to habeas corpus. C. C. Rouse v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 387 F. 2d 241, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 283).

Administrative credit against sentence

Defendant, who pleaded guilty in 1964 to narcotics offense carrying mandatory minimum sentence, who, after arrest, was unable to make bail and was thus in jail when he moved for mental examination, and who was given administrative credit for time spent in jail prior to trial before and after commitment for examination, was also entitled to credit against sentence for time spent in hospital pursuant to order for examination, and credit was to be given administratively by Attorney General and not as exercise of sentencing court's discretion. P. R. Sawyer v. R. Clark, Attorney General etc., et al. (1967, 386 F. 2d 633, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 206).

Admissibility of statements made by accused

Purpose of statute providing that no statement made by accused in course of any examination into his sanity may be admitted in evidence against the accused on issue of guilt in any criminal proceeding is to permit statement of the accused to be admitted into evidence only on issue of sanity, and not on the issue of whether or not the defendant committed the acts charged. United States v. W. Bennett (1972, 460 F. 2d 872, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 364).

Testimony of government psychiatrist, in prosecution for sexual assault on 13-year-old boy, that defendant's sanity was evidenced by his very good recollection of the events was prejudicial to defendant's defense on the merits and entitled defendant, upon remand, to a bifurcated trial on the merits and his insanity defense, even though the defense on the merits was a bare denial, where a limiting instruction would not have effectively dispelled the prejudice, and a mistrial would have been an unattractive result. Id.

Statute to effect that no statement made by accused in course of examination into his sanity or mental competency shall be admitted in evidence against accused on issue of guilt in criminal proceeding is applicable to mental examinations ordered by District of Columbia courts when it appears that accused is of unsound mind or mentally incompetent to understand proceedings against him. P. A. Battle v. D. C. Cameron, Superintendent etc. (1966, 260 F. Supp. 804).

Adequate assistance of counsel

Failure of petitioner's counsel to object to certificate of competency was not shown to have constituted inadequate assistance of counsel. Mordecai v. United States (D.C.D.C. 1966, 252 F. Supp. 694).

Adjudication of insanity

Commitment to mental hospital pursuant to code after verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity is not adjudication of insanity or incompetency. W. Green v. United States (1965, 351 F. 2d 198, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 33).

Amnesia

Amnesia per se in case where recollection was present during time of alleged offenses and where defendant has ability to construct a knowledge of what happened from other sources, and where he has present ability to follow course of proceedings against him and discuss them rationally with his attorney does not constitute incompetency per se, and loss of memory should bar prosecution only when its presence would in fact be crucial to construction and presentation of defense and hence essential to fairness and accuracy of the proceedings. United States v. R. Wilson (1966, 263 F. Supp. 528).

Where defendant after crimes were committed was involved in automobile accident and suffered cerebral contusions and concussion which resulted in amnesia which prevented him from recollecting any events that took place on afternoon when crimes were committed, but who could construct a knowledge of what transpired from information given to him from other sources, and, except for such vacuity of memory, was perfectly able to follow course of proceedings against him and to discuss them with his attorney, was legally competent to stand trial. Id.

Appeal

Mental patient had standing to appeal District Court's order releasing him to prison from institution to which he had been committed after being found not guilty of robbery by reason of insanity. L. W. Green v. United States (1965, 349 F. 2d 203, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 226).

Where accused was found not guilty by reason of insanity and was committed to hospital and some two months thereafter accused petitioned for writ of habeas corpus without prepayment of costs and District Court denied such petition without a hearing and without stating reasons for denial, case would be remanded and District Court, if it rejected allegation of poverty, would be required to state basis for such rejection, and if leave to file without costs was permitted or if accused should pay necessary filing fees, hospital superintendent would be directed to report as to accused's condition, and upon the return the District Court should conduct hearing to determine whether accused had recovered sanity and would not be dangerous to himself or others in reasonable future. Tatem, Sr. v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 894, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 230).

Where it appeared to Court of Appeals reviewing conviction of an attempted abortion resulting in death that evidence did not permit trier of fact to conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant had no mental disease or defect, case would be remanded with instructions that unless Government advised trial court without unreasonable delay that it can meet its burden of proof at a new trial, defendant is to be acquitted on ground of insanity and committed to a mental hospital and dealt with in accordance with statute, that is, hospitalized until she is free from such abnormal condition as would render her dangerous to herself or community in the reasonably foreseeable future. Hopkins v. United States (1960, 275 F. 2d 155, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 126).

Where trial court did not have benefit of construction of Court of Appeals respecting this section providing for the conditional release of patients who have been committed to mental hospital after acquittal of crime by reason of insanity, Court of Appeals would refrain from review of evidence and allow trial court to evaluate it in the first instance in light of principles held applicable. Hough v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 458, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 192).

Though jury was not warranted on evidence in failing to entertain reasonable doubt that except for diseased mental condition defendant would have committed robberies, Court of Appeals would not direct that defendant be acquitted by reason of insanity, but would remand for a new trial, where testimony of expert who had not testified at second trial would be available at retrial, resolvable ambiguities existed in testimony, and dearth of prosecution's nonmedical testimony, might be overcome. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 232).

Appeal from commitment to St. Elizabeths Hospital under this section was moot in view of the fact that petitioner had been determined by a jury to be of sound mind and had been released from the hospital. Savage v. White (1926, 14 F. 2d 352, 56 App. D.C. 365).

Bases of confinement

Confinement of the mentally ill rests upon basis substantially different from that which supports confinement of those convicted of crime since confinement of mentally ill depends not only upon validity of initial commitment but also upon continuing status of the patient. D. A. Dixon v. L. Jacobs, Sup't etc. (1970, 427 F. 2d 589, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 319).

Burden of proof

Mental patient who seeks complete release from confinement by writ of habeas corpus need only establish, by the preponderance of the evidence, that he is no longer likely to injure himself or other persons because of mental illness. D. A. Dixon v. L. Jacobs, Sup't etc. (1970, 427 F. 2d 589, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 319).

Since habeas corpus proceeding on petition of mental patient for complete release from confinement is not strictly adversary in nature, conventional rules regarding the burden of coming forward with evidence do not apply, and the hearing court and the parties bear equal responsibility to see that decision is had upon all the relevant evidence. Id.

Burden of proof, in habeas corpus proceeding by one committed to mental hospital after being found not guilty by reason of insanity, is the same as that for civilly committed patients. G. C. Bolton v. D. W. Harris, Acting Superintendent etc. (1968, 395 F. 2d 642, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Rule that habeas corpus petitioner must prove that his detention is illegal by preponderance of evidence applies in habeas corpus proceeding by one committed to mental hospital after being found not guilty of offense by reason of insanity, and thus court must find, by preponderance of evidence, that patient's commitment is no longer valid, that is, that he is no longer likely to injure himself or other persons due to illness. Id.

Burden rests with party seeking commitment of accused to mental institution to prove that accused is then of unsound mind. F. C. Lynch v. W. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1962, 307 U.S. 618, 82 S. Ct. 1063, rev'g 288 F. 2d 388).

Where there is evidence that accused was of unsound mind when offenses occurred, prosecution is under necessity of establishing to satisfaction of jury beyond reasonable doubt that offenses were not result of accused's insanity. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 232).

In order to justify conviction, where there is evidence that accused was of unsound mind when offenses occurred, proof, considered with presumption of sanity, must exclude beyond reasonable doubt the hypothesis that conduct indicted was product of a diseased mind or mental defect. Id.

When lack of mental capacity is raised as a defense to a charge of crime, the law presumes that the defendant is sane, but as soon as some evidence of mental disorder is introduced, sanity must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt as part of prosecution's case. Durham v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 862, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 228, 45 A.L.R. 2d 1430).

In forgery prosecution, testimony of two psychiatrists and a lay witness to effect that defendant was, in their opinion, suffering from mental illness when he committed the crimes charged satisfied requirement that defendant produce some evidence, and shifted burden of proving sanity to government. United States v. Amburgey (D.C.D.C. 1960, 189 F. Supp. 687).

— After commitment

One who seeks release, without statutory certification by superintendent of hospital, from commitment to hospital after being found not guilty of crime by reason of insanity must show that he has recovered his sanity and that such recovery has reached point where he has no abnormal mental condition which in reasonably foreseeable future would give rise to danger to patient or to public in event of his release. United States v. M. Charnizon (D.C. App. 1967, 232 A. 2d 586).

Where, at hearing to revoke patient's conditional release from state hospital following commitment after having been found not guilty of crime by reason of insanity, positive expert medical opinion was presented that patient had not recovered and would be danger to himself and others if released, order directing unconditional release of patient did not meet standards set forth by statute and thus, without certificate recommending either conditional or unconditional release and in absence of evidence on his behalf, patient was not entitled to be released. Id.

Person who sought release from hospital to which he had been committed after having been found not guilty of housebreaking and larceny on ground of insanity had burden of proving by a preponderance of evidence that he had recovered his sanity, and would not in reasonably foreseeable future be dangerous to himself or others by reason of mental disease or defect, and that failure of superintendent of hospital to certify him for release was arbitrary or capricious. S. V. Robertson v. D. C. Cameron (D.C.D.C. 1963, 224 F. Supp. 60).

Once a man has been committed to a hospital after verdict of not guilty by reason in insanity, government need not thereafter be forced to prove his insanity as price of continuing treatment. W. Overholser, Sup't etc. v. F. C. Lynch (1961, 288 F. 2d 388, 109 U.S. App. D.C. 404; reversed on other grounds 1962, 82 S. Ct. 1063).

Petitioner maintaining proceeding for writ of habeas corpus to secure release from mental institution in which he has been confined upon his acquittal of criminal charge by reason of insanity has heavy burden of proof that he is not dangerous or potentially dangerous to himself or others, exceeding a standard of proof by a preponderance of evidence, and in a close case, even where preponderance of evidence favors the petitioner, the doubt, if reasonable doubt exists about danger to public or patient, cannot be resolved so as to risk danger to public or individual. Ragsdale v. Overholser, Supt. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 943).

In habeas corpus proceeding brought by petitioner claiming right to be released from hospital for the mentally ill, it was necessary for petitioner to show not only that he had recovered his sanity but also that superintendent of hospital was arbitrarily and capriciously withholding certificate of recovered sanity; and, on record presented, such burden was not sustained. O'Beirne v. Overholser, Superintendent etc. (D.C.D.C. 1960, 180 F. Supp. 572).

— On petition for release

Petitioner seeking release from hospital by writ of habeas corpus after commitment pursuant to statute after being found not guilty of crime by reason of insanity has burden of showing his eligibility for relief and must establish freedom from such abnormal mental condition as would make individual dangerous to himself or community in reasonably foreseeable future. L. W. Collins v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 377 F. 2d 945, 126 U.S. App. D.C. 306).

Evidence that petitioner was suffering from mental illness of psychotic proportions and that petitioner was daily administered tranquilizing drug and that if medicine were discontinued petitioner would resort to alcohol supported finding that petitioner would be dangerous to himself or others if released. Id.

Certification of sanity

The letter from hospital superintendent stating conclusion that accused was considered competent to stand trial, without supporting information and reasons, would not come within meaning of terms "report" or "certificate" as used in District of Columbia statute authorizing admission of hospital reports or certificates on mental competency. P. Holloway v. United States (1964, 343 F. 2d 265, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 396).

On remand for new hearing on defendant's competency to stand trial after erroneous denial of pre-trial motion for mental examination, the judicial determination of defendant's present competency must be an informed one and could not likely be made from superintendent's letter stating, without supporting information and reasons, that accused was considered competent to stand trial. Id.

To be "arbitrary" or "capricious", refusal of superintendent of hospital to certify that person committed to hospital after being found not guilty of criminal charge on ground of insanity has recovered his sanity and is entitled to unconditional release must be without a reasonable or rational basis, but it need not be made in bad faith. S. V. Robertson v. D. C. Cameron (D.C.D.C. 1963, 224 F. Supp. 60).

Superintendent of hospital to which person is committed after having been found not guilty of a crime on ground of insanity may not act according to his personal notion or whim, no matter how well intentioned or bona fide his action may be, in determining whether person committed has recovered his sanity and is entitled to an unconditional release. Id.

Refusal of superintendent of hospital to which person had been committed after being found not guilty of crime on ground of insanity to make certificate as basis for committed person's release was arbitrary and capricious, in view of showing of grounds for release. Id.

Mental hospital superintendent's return in habeas corpus proceeding by inmate, asserting generally that inmate had not recovered from "abnormal mental condition" and required further treatment, without explaining quoted phrase or describing past or future treatment, was insufficient on its face. H. T. O'Beirne v. W. Overholser (D.C.D.C. 1961, 193 F. Supp. 652; reversed on other grounds 302 F. 2d 852).

One who had been found not guilty by reason of insanity and committed to mental hospital could not be detained in hospital beyond period of maximum sentence possible for the offense charged, because of "sociopathic personality" which was not sufficient basis for a civil adjudication of mental incompetency, even if such condition tended to make him an habitual petty criminal. Id.

Fact that a person is an habitual petty criminal could not subject him to permanent incarceration in criminal ward of mental institution, and such disposition may not be used as a substitute for laws dealing expressly with habitual criminals. Id.

Court may not authorize release of person confined in hospital for mentally ill unless hospital superintendent certifies that he has recovered his sanity. O'Beirne v.

Overholser, Superintendent etc. (D.C.D.C. 1960, 180 F. Supp. 572).

Purpose of requirement of this section that superintendent of hospital certify that person seeking release has recovered his sanity is to safeguard public against release of insane criminals who might possibly repeat their depredations. Id.

Commitment after acquittal

The moment that defendant in criminal case is found not guilty, whether on the ground of insanity or any other ground, criminal court ceases to have any control over him and presiding judge no longer has authority to hold a hearing under statute dealing with commitment of defendants in criminal cases for mental examination or treatment and cannot commit defendant to a mental institution thereunder. C. Mullen v. D. C. Cameron (D.C.D.C. 1966, 255 F. Supp. 326).

Under District of Columbia statute relating to commitment for mental examination or treatment of defendants in criminal cases who may appear to be incompetent to stand trial, commitment may be made at any time prior to imposition of sentence or prior to expiration of any period of probation, since during those periods the criminal court still has control over defendant. Id.

Commitment of habeas corpus petitioner to mental institution under statute dealing with commitment of defendant in criminal case for mental examination or treatment after petitioner had been found not guilty of charge of assault on ground of insanity, a defense which she had not interposed, was invalid but court would stay its order sustaining writ of habeas corpus for 30 days to enable government to institute civil commitment proceedings if it was deemed advisable. Id.

Commitment after acquittal by reason of insanity

One who is committed to a mental hospital upon hearing following acquittal by reason of insanity is entitled not only to treatment but to treatment in least restrictive alternative consistent with legitimate purposes of commitment. W. Ashe v. L. D. Robinson (1971, 450 F. 2d 681, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 220).

Statute to effect that when, prior to imposition of sentence or prior to expiration of any period of probation, it shall appear to court that accused is of unsound mind or mentally incompetent so as to be unable to understand proceedings against him or to properly assist in his own defense, court may order accused committed for observation and treatment, if necessary, does not authorize commitment after verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity. D. C. Cameron Sup't etc. v. C. Mullen etc. (1967, 387 F. 2d 193, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 235).

Under statute to effect that when it appears to court that accused is of unsound mind or mentally incompetent so as to be unable to stand trial, court may confine him for observation and treatment, if necessary, and that, if hospital reports that person is of unsound mind or mentally incompetent, court may commit him to mental hospital unless he or government objects in which event court must hold hearing to determine competency of accused to stand trial, court is empowered to hold a hearing only to determine competency. Id.

Commitment procedure

Commission of criminal acts does not give rise to a presumption of dangerousness which, standing alone, justifies substantial difference in commitment procedures and confinement conditions for mentally ill, and that, while prior criminal conduct is relevant to the determination whether person is mentally ill or dangerous, it cannot justify denial of procedural safeguards for such determination, and that while prior criminal conduct is a relevant consideration, it does not provide automatic basis for allowing significant and arbitrary differences in such conditions where defendant is acquitted on his own plea of insanity. G. C. Bolton v. D. W. Harris, Acting Superintendent etc. (1968, 395 F. 2d 642, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

There is no reasonable basis for distinction for commitment purposes between those who plead insanity and those who have defense thrust upon them, and neither may be automatically deprived of type of protection afforded by 1964 Hospitalization of Mentally Ill Act. Id.

Fact that persons acquitted by reason of insanity have committed criminal acts and that such fact may tend to show they meet requirements for commitment does not remove such requirements nor justify total abandonment of procedures used in civil commitment proceedings to determine whether such requirements have been satisfied. Id.

Persons found not guilty by reason of insanity must be given judicial hearing with procedures substantially similar to those in civil commitment proceedings. Id.

Where feasible, requirements of Hospitalization of Mentally Ill Act as to notice, counsel, and jury trial should be followed in connection with judicial hearing afforded persons found not guilty by reason of insanity. Id.

Rule that persons found not guilty by reason of insanity must be given judicial hearing with procedures substantially similar to those in civil commitment proceedings is applicable prospectively only. Id.

In event of an acquittal of accused by reason of insanity following his affirmative refusal to rely on such ground as a defense the automatic commitment procedures of District of Columbia statute would not apply. T. W. Whalem v. United States (1965, 346 F. 2d 812, 120 U.S. App. D.C. 331).

Supreme Court granted certiorari, where important questions were raised as to procedure for confining criminally insane in District of Columbia and as to possible constitutional infirmities in statute under which commitment was made as applied to circumstances in case. F. C. Lynch v. W. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1962, 369 U.S. 705, 82 S. Ct. 1063, rev'g 288 F. 2d 388).

Although inmate of mental hospital had not been informed that possible alternative to commitment, pursuant to this section requiring confinement in mental hospital of those acquitted solely on ground of insanity, was to ask for new trial, inmate whose only possible defense was insanity and whose chances for acquittal on a second trial were minuscule was properly committed to hospital after being acquitted. Curry v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 287 F. 2d 137).

When person suspected of insanity is also accused of crime, trial court is not to be permitted to commit such person to a mental hospital without benefit of a jury or of the Mental Health Commission, even though the person is competent to stand trial, but there must be a report and recommendation by the commission, a jury's verdict if demanded, and a district court order. Williams v. Overholser, Sup't, etc. (1958, 259 F. 2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

Commitment without hearing

Objective of prehearing commitment following acquittal on the ground of insanity is observation and examination to ascertain current mental condition, and the commitment is temporary and of limited duration; procedure contemplates judicial hearing and determination on present mental condition promptly after completion of examination, and, if need be, another commitment with view to course of treatment that might lead to patient's eventual recovery and release. W. Ashe v. L. D. Robinson (1971, 450 F. 2d 681, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 220).

Commitment, without hearing, of one found not guilty by reason of insanity is permissible for period required to determine present mental condition. G. C. Bolton v. D. W. Harris, Acting Superintendent etc. (1968, 395 F. 2d 642, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Committing magistrates' authority

Committing magistrate, including judge of District of Columbia Court of General Sessions when sitting as committing magistrate, does not have power to make finding that person charged with felony is mentally incompetent to stand trial and thereby preclude action on that important question by district court for the District of Columbia. J. C. Mauce v. D. C. Cameron (1966, 260 F. Supp. 851).

Where petitioner was arrested on felony charge, he was found by judge of District of Columbia Court of General Sessions, sitting as committing magistrate, to be incompetent to stand trial and he was committed to mental institution, he was entitled to habeas corpus relief but only relief that could be granted was that report of District of Columbia General Hospital to effect that petitioner was not competent to stand trial be referred to District Court for District of Columbia and that hearing be set in that court on basis of the report on question of mental competency. Id.

Competency examination

When a trial court has reasonable grounds to suspect a criminal defendant of being an addict, trial court should exercise his discretion and order competency examination of defendant. T. Grennett v. United States (1968, 403 F. 2d 928, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 203).

Competency hearing

Competency hearing must be of record and both parties must be given opportunity to examine all witnesses who testify or report on accused's competence. T. E. Blunt v. United States (1967, 389 F. 2d 545, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 375).

Judicial determination of competency must be an informed one. Id.

Careful evaluation of accused's condition is required of court during competency hearing. Id.

Where, in competency hearing, court blocked attempts to ask hospital's staff psychiatrist about basis for hospital superintendent's conclusion that accused was competent and foreclosed meaningful inquiry when counsel sought to identify area of differences between that conclusion and contrary conclusion of hospital's clinical psychologist, there was no possibility of full and scrupulous evaluation of defendant's competency, precluding informed judicial determination of competency. Id.

Where finding as to competency was based on hearing held almost 30 months before it was determined that there had not been a properly informed judicial determination, a new trial rather than remand for nunc pro tunc proceedings was required. Id.

Competency to stand trial

For purposes of determining one's competence to stand trial, that is, whether he is able to understand proceedings against him or properly assist in his defense, inquiry is focused on present mental condition, namely, at time of trial. G. C. Bolton v. D. W. Harris, Acting Superintendent etc. (1968, 395 F. 2d 642, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

For purposes of determining criminal responsibility, that is, whether act charged, if committed, was product of mental disease or defect, inquiry is focused on past mental condition, namely at time of offense. Id.

If accused is not presently insane or potentially dangerous to himself or others, it is illegal to commit him under statute providing that if court, after competency hearing, shall find accused to be then of unsound mind or mentally incompetent to stand trial, court shall order accused confined to hospital for mentally ill. United States v. R. Wilson (1966, 263 F. Supp. 528).

Defendant's testimony wherein he admitted that he had been using narcotics throughout the trial and even during lunch recess that very day and testimony of court-appointed psychiatrist that defendant's use of narcotics had previously produced "acute brain syndrome", a mental disorder, raised substantial doubt as to his competency, and therefore imposed on trial court, which had initially found defendant competent to stand trial, a duty to inquire anew into competency. D. L. Hansford v. United States (1966, 365 F. 2d 920, 124 U.S. App. D.C. 387).

To be competent to stand trial, defendant's memory and intellectual abilities must not be substantially impaired by mental disorder. Id.

Competency to stand trial depends on whether defendant understands nature of proceedings against him and is properly able to assist in his own defense. United States v. H. L. Womack (D.C.D.C. 1962, 211 F. Supp. 578).

Under District of Columbia law pertaining to insane criminals, any hearing must be on issue of defendant's competency to stand trial, and nothing more. Williams v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 147 A. 2d 773).

Conditional release

Under this section governing conditional release of persons who have been committed to mental hospital after acquittal of crime by reason of insanity, to order conditional release upon a challenged certification court must conclude individual has recovered sufficiently so that under proposed conditions, or under conditions which this section empowers court to impose, such person will not in the reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others. Hough v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 458, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 192).

Consent of defense of insanity

Finding that petitioner himself sought introduction of insanity defense at his trial was clearly erroneous in view of evidence, including evidence, that new counsel retained by petitioner's mother did not confer with petitioner prior to filing motion for pretrial mental examination and that petitioner did not even know new counsel's identity when he saw him at hearing on the motion and thought that he was still being represented by assigned counsel. C. C. Rouse v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 387 F. 2d 241, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 283).

Finding that petitioner evidenced his acquiescence in insanity defense by waiting almost four years to attack validity of his mandatory commitment to hospital for the mentally ill was not warranted in light of petitioner's apparent disabilities, including his lack of financial means and learning in the law and the likelihood that he had been suffering from some mental illness. Id.

Constitutionality

Mental hospital inmate who had been committed, under statute, on acquittal of charge of indecent exposure was entitled, in habeas corpus proceeding, to question constitutionality of mandatory commitment statute, as applied to inmate, on ground that he was not receiving treatments. B. Darnell v. D. C. Cameron, Supt. etc. (1965, 348 F. 2d 64, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 58).

District of Columbia statute requiring mandatory confinement of persons found not guilty by reason of insanity is constitutional. J. L. Foller v. W. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1961, 292 F. 2d 732, 110 U.S. App. D.C. 239).

Provision requiring commitment to mental institution of persons acquitted of crimes by reason of insanity did not deprive one committed pursuant thereto of liberty without due process of law, as there was rational connection between known evidence of the person's mental disease and mandatory commitment provision, and as statute authorizes one so confined to test legality of confinement by habeas corpus proceeding which provides de novo hearing to examine into mental condition. Ragsdale v. Overholser, Supt. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 943).

"There can be no reasonable objection to the validity of the provision of this section. It makes ample provision for the inquiry which is conducted with due regard to the protection of the defendant." Wagner v. White (1912, 38 App. D.C. 554.)

This section is constitutional and valid. Ormsby v. United States (C.C.A. 6, 1921, 273 F. 977).

Construction

Mental hospital's examination of defendant properly extended to issues of mental responsibility even though, in terms, this section and order referred only to competency to stand trial. United States v. W. E. Ashe (1970, 427 F. 2d 626, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 356).

Where an offense was committed less than one year before hearing on the government's motion for a mental examination and defendant had requested bifurcated trial and had filed notice of insanity defense, the court was justified in invoking provisions relating to mental examination of accused. P. W. Marcey v. D. W. Harris (1968, 400 F. 2d 772, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 301; remanding 287 F. Supp. 73).

Pretrial commitment pursuant to provisions relating to mental examination of accused is for purposes of pretrial mental examination and is not ground for denial of bail otherwise contemplated by Bail Reform Act. Id.

Purpose of statute providing for mandatory commitment of person acquitted on ground that he was insane at time of commission of offense and prescribing release standards was to achieve balance of interest between public and person charged with crime by insuring that in every case where person committed crime as result of mental disease or defect, such person should be given period of hospitalization to guard against imminent recurrence of some criminal act. G. C. Bolton v. D. W. Harris, Acting Superintendent etc. (1968, 395 F. 2d 642, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Purpose of subsection of District of Columbia Code prohibiting defense of insanity unless accused or his attorney files notice of intention to rely on such defense was to prevent defense being interposed unexpectedly at trial when government was not prepared with evidence to meet it. P. W. Marcey v. D. W. Harris, Acting Superintendent, etc. (1968, 287 F. Supp. 73; remanded 400 F. 2d 772).

District of Columbia Code section authorizing commitment to mental institution for mental examination as to defendants charged with criminal offenses should be broadly construed and it authorizes commitment for examination as to mental capacity to commit crime at time offense was committed. Id.

Only those hospitalized pursuant to Hospitalization of Mentally Ill Act are guaranteed by the act civil rights to dispose of property, execute instruments, make purchases, enter into contractual relationships, vote, or hold driver's license. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. v. C. Mullen etc. (1967, 387 F. 2d 193, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 235).

Statute to effect that when it appears to court that accused is of unsound mind or is mentally incompetent so as to be unable to understand proceedings against him court may order accused committed for observation and treatment if necessary did not authorize trial judge's affording hearing to determine for commitment purposes mental condition of accused found not guilty by reason of insanity, applying release standards of 1964 Hospitalization of the Mentally Ill Act or extending to accused rights which the 1964 Act guaranteed only to those civilly committed. Id.

Amendments of statute relating to judicial determination of competency or incompetency were enacted to overrule that much of prior opinion holding that accused could not be ordered to trial on basis of certification of accused's competency to stand trial by superintendent of mental institution wherein accused had been examined. T. W. Whalem v. United States (1965, 346 F. 2d 812, 120 U.S. App. D.C. 331).

Statute to effect that person acquitted solely on ground that he was insane at time of commission of offense shall be ordered by court to be confined in hospital for mentally ill forecloses trial judge from exercising any discretion and does not require finding by trial judge, jury, or medical board as to accused's mental health on date of judgment of acquittal. F. C. Lynch v. W. Overholser, Sup't, etc. (1962, 369 U.S. 705, 82 S. Ct. 1063, rev'g 288 F. 2d 388).

Statute to effect that person acquitted solely on ground that he was insane at time of commission of offense shall be confined in hospital for mentally ill is applicable only to defendant who affirmatively relies upon defense of insanity in any way and such defense need not be asserted by formal plea, but statute does not apply to one who has maintained that he was mentally responsible when alleged offense was committed. Id.

Accused, who did not claim that he had been insane when offenses were committed and who presented no evidence to support an acquittal by reason of insanity, was not properly confined in hospital for mentally ill upon finding of trial judge that he was not guilty on ground that he was insane at time of commission of offenses. Id.

Statutory construction confining itself to bare words of statute is dangerous in that literalness may strangle meaning. Id.

Statute should be interpreted, if fairly possible, in such way as to free it from not insubstantial constitutional doubts. Id.

Continuance for mental examination

Continuance should be allowed on clear showing of need for mental examination or for appointment of independent psychiatrist. R. T. Brown v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 244 A. 2d 487).

Where defense counsel failed or refused to present to court factual basis for his conclusion that defendant possibly suffered from mental disease or defect at time of alleged crime, trial court's denial of request for continuance was not an abuse of discretion even if such request should have been treated as motion for mental examination and for appointment of independent expert. Id.

Court's findings

Court's findings concerning mental illness and dangerous propensities are not to be disturbed unless they lack support in record or rest on an erroneous legal principle. C. C. Rouse v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 373 F. 2d 451, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 366).

Criminal responsibility

In determining issue whether or not indicted conduct was product of mental disease or mental defect, or whether accused acted because of mental disorder, there need be only reasonable doubt about it to entitle accused to an acquittal. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 232).

While issue of criminal responsibility of defendant suffering from mental disease is not an issue of fact in same sense as the commission of the offense, it still is an issue of fact. Id.

The court-formulated test of insanity that accused is not criminally responsible if his unlawful act was product of mental disease or mental defect could not be applied retrospectively but only prospectively. Watson, Jr. v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 42, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 221).

Term "disease", as used in rule that an accused is not criminally responsible if his unlawful act was product of mental disease or mental defect, means condition which is considered capable of either improving or deteriorating, and term "defect" as so used means condition which is not considered capable of improving or deteriorating and which may be either congenital, or traumatic, or the residual effect of physical or mental disease. Durham v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 862, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 228, 45 A.L.R. 2d 1430).

In District of Columbia, formulation of tests of criminal responsibility is entrusted to the courts, and they may adopt changes in such tests retroactively. Id.

Whenever there is some evidence that the accused suffered from a diseased or defective mental condition at the time the unlawful act was committed, trial court must provide jury with guides for determining whether accused can be held criminally responsible. Id.

An accused is not criminally responsible if his unlawful act was product of mental disease or mental defect. Id.

A defendant is entitled to verdict of not guilty on ground of insanity, if jury finds that offense charged was insane act by application of any one of three tests as to whether defendant was able to distinguish between right and wrong, able to adhere to right and refrain from doing wrong, or suffered from mental disease or defect which caused criminal act. United States v. Fielding (1956, 148 F. Supp. 46, reversed on other grounds 251 F. 2d 878, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 167).

Defense of insanity

Defendant who was denied pretrial mental examination and thus lacked opportunity to establish basis of insanity defense could not be charged with acquiescing in subsequently appointed counsel's failure to assert defense. Cannady v. United States (1965, 351 F. 2d 817, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 120).

On adequate averment, defendant has right to assistance of court in developing basis for his insanity defense, and such assistance may take form of commitment for mental examination, examination through Mental Health Commission or Legal Psychiatric Service, or appointment of private experts. A. J. Brown v. United States (1964, 331 F. 2d 822, 118 U.S. App. D.C. 76).

Where indigent defendant in attempting to utilize defense of insanity based on drug addiction was denied even minimal assistance of free subpoena through averments in his motions were not inherently incredible on their face and there was no evidence that averments were untrue or that request was otherwise frivolous, defendant was entitled to new trial after fair opportunity to prepare defense of insanity. Id.

Directed verdict

Where a trial court, in a criminal prosecution, should have directed a judgment of acquittal by reason of insanity, notwithstanding the verdict, judgment of conviction would be vacated on appeal and case remanded with directions. Isaac v. United States (C.A.D.C. 1960, 284 F. 2d 168).

On record presented, in robbery prosecution, it was error to deny defendant's motion for directed verdict on ground of insanity. Satterwhite v. United States (1959, 267 F. 2d 675, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 398).

Discretion of court

Decision to proceed to trial in absence of objection to hospital report that defendant was competent to stand trial was decision calling for exercise of discretion by court. B. T. Wider v. United States (1965, 348 F. 2d 358, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 129).

Hospital report that defendant was mentally competent to stand trial was not binding on court. Id.

Though hospital report stated that defendant was mentally competent to stand trial, facts of case required exercise of discretion by court by way of further investigation into competency of defendant to stand trial. Id.

Record failed to establish that district court abused its discretion in denying application for conditional release, under statute governing release of one committed to mental institution after being found not guilty of crime by reason of insanity, based on certificate of superintendent of hospital in which applicant was confined. M. W. Durnham v. United States (1962, 308 F. 2d 332, 113 U.S. App. D.C. 377).

Under statute requiring appropriate certificate of superintendent of mental hospital as a condition precedent to release of person committed, court may not substitute its own judgment for that of superintendent and may not try the matter de novo in habeas corpus proceeding, but superintendent's action or failure to act may not be deemed final or conclusive for all purposes. H. T. O'Bierne v. W. Overholser (D.C.D.C. 1961, 193 F. Supp. 652, reversed on other grounds 302 F. 2d 852).

Court may step in to determine whether action or failure to act on part of superintendent of mental hospital is arbitrary and capricious. Id.

In proceeding brought by one who was confined to mental institution following his acquittal of criminal charge by reason of insanity, to secure his release from institution, District Court, in denying writ, made permissible choice between expert evidence that he was dangerous and other evidence, including testimony of laymen, tending to suggest that he was not. Ragsdale v. Overholser, Supt. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 943).

Under this section authorizing persons confined to mental institution by reason of having been acquitted of crime on ground of insanity to test legality of their commitments by habeas corpus, certificate of superintendent of mental institution, in form of conclusion, may be disregarded by the district judge if it is not supported by medical recitals which satisfy or persuade him that the conclusion is correct. Id.

"Whether a prima facie case has been made by the petitioner requiring submission of the issue (of insanity) to a jury is a question submitted to the sound discretion of the trial judge." Gonzales v. United States (1913, 40 App. D.C. 450). See, also, Neely v. United States (1945, 150 F. 2d 977, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 187, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 166, 326 U.S. 768, 90 L. Ed. 463).

Refusal of trial court to submit to a jury the question of defendant's mental responsibility was not an abuse of its discretion, where there had never been any suggestion that he should be restrained of his liberty because of insanity, and where at his trial it did not appear and was not suggested that he was not fully and entirely responsible from a mental standpoint. Jackson v. United States (1928, 25 F. 2d 549, 58 App. D.C. 125).

Due process

To require defendant to assume burden of proof on issue of insanity does not violate due process. United States v. J. A. Naples (D.C.D.C. 1961, 192 F. Supp. 23, reversed on other grounds 307 F. 2d 618).

Hospital procedures

The court in this case specified the minimal protective procedures required by due process before St. Elizabeths Hospital can determine that a patient had committed a crime that would require his transfer to maximum security facilities. A. A. Jones, Jr. v. L. D. Robinson, M.D. (1971, 440 F. 2d 249, 142 U.S. App. D.C. 221).

Effect of commitment

Commitment to St. Elizabeth's hospital does not automatically render person incompetent for most purposes.

D. C. Cameron, Supt. etc. v. C. Mullen etc. (1967, 387 F. 2d 193, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 235).

Eligibility for release

To establish eligibility for release on habeas corpus, patient committed to mental hospital after being found not guilty of offense by reason of insanity must prove freedom from such abnormal mental condition as would make individual dangerous to himself or community in reasonably foreseeable future. G. C. Bolton v. D. W. Harris, Acting Superintendent etc. (1968, 395 F. 2d 642, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Patients committed to mental hospital after being found not guilty by reason of insanity may establish their eligibility for release by writ of habeas corpus. Id.

Estoppel

Inmate who had elected to seek verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity could not be heard to complain of commitment to mental hospital pursuant to this section requiring confinement in mental hospital of those acquitted solely on ground of insanity. Curry v. Overholser, Supt. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 287 F. 2d 137).

Evidence

Evidence in habeas corpus proceeding by person committed to hospital for mentally ill after being found not guilty of crime on ground of insanity established that person committed had recovered his sanity and was not likely in reasonably foreseeable future to be dangerous to himself or others by reason of any mental disease or defect. S. V. Robertson v. D. C. Cameron (D.C.D.C. 1963, 224 F. Supp. 60).

Evidence supported finding that inmate, who was seeking release from confinement in mental hospital as insane criminal, was at time of the habeas corpus proceeding suffering from abnormal mental condition and would be dangerous to himself and others if released. Curry v. Overholser, Supt. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 287 F. 2d 137).

In habeas corpus proceeding by one who had been committed to mental hospital after being found not guilty of robbery by reason of insanity, where superintendent of hospital had refused to certify that petitioner had recovered sanity and would not in reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others, evidence did not warrant release of petitioner despite opinion of two psychiatrists denying present mental disease, where seven psychiatrists agreed that petitioner was a sociopathic personality with dyssocial outlook and would be dangerous to community if released. Overholser etc. v. Leach (1958, 257 F. 2d 667, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 289, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1152, 359 U.S. 1013, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1038).

When issue of insanity is raised by introduction of "some evidence" so that presumption of sanity is no longer absolute, trier of fact must weigh the whole evidence, including that supplied by the presumption of sanity, on the issue of capacity in law of accused to commit the crime, and failure so to weigh the whole evidence on such issue is reversible error. Durham v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 862, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 228, 45 A.L.R. 2d 1430).

Evidence concerning events of defendant's youth, none of them more recent than 15 years prior to time of hearing on petition for sanity inquisition after conviction of murder, and indicating that defendant as a youth had been reckless, imprudent, and brutal, was of no value to establish insanity. Neely v. United States (1945, 150 F. 2d 977, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 187, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 166, 326 U.S. 768, 90 L. Ed. 463).

Opinion evidence by lay witness that a defendant convicted of murder was insane, was valueless to establish prima facie that defendant was insane so as to authorize granting of a petition for sanity inquisition. Id.

Denial of motion of one of the two defendants jointly indicted on charge of killing another in perpetrating robbery for a mental examination was not error, where moving defendant did not make prima facie showing of mental incapacity. Wheeler v. United States (1948, 165 F. 2d 225, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 363, certiorari denied 68 S. Ct. 448, 830 U.S. 333, 92 L. Ed. 1115.) See, also, Wheeler v. Reid (1949, 175 F. 2d 829, 84 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

In prosecution for drunkenness, evidence which was taken in prior proceeding to determine competency of defendant to stand trial could not be used to sustain a finding of not guilty by reason of insanity. In re Williams (D.C.D.C. 1958, 165 F. Supp. 879).

In prosecution for intoxication, evidence was insufficient to support trial judge's finding that defendant was not guilty because of insanity. Williams v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 147 A. 2d 773).

In prosecution for intoxication, trial judge, in determining issue of defendant's competency under District of Columbia law to stand trial, could not use evidence introduced in previous hearing as to defendant's sanity where hearing was held after defendant entered plea of guilty on same charge. Id.

—Competence at trial

Full and scrupulous attention must be given to any evidence concerning competency at trial, whether or not there has been a competency hearing. T. E. Blunt v. United States (1967, 389 F. 2d 545, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 375).

—Sufficiency

In this case in light of the evidence on issue of whether offense was product of mental illness, conviction for robbery of property belonging to United States, assault with a dangerous weapon and carrying dangerous weapon would be affirmed. T. H. Adams v. United States (1969, 413 F. 2d 411, 134 U.S. App. D.C. 137).

Exhaustion of administrative remedy

The administrative remedy for mental patient that must be exhausted prior to petition for habeas corpus is the medical examination, rather than request for examination, and if the examination has been conducted within six months prior to habeas corpus petition, the administrative remedy is exhausted. D. A. Dixon v. L. Jacobs, Sup't etc. (1970, 427 F. 2d 589, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 319).

Only if the required medical examination is in progress when the mental patient's habeas corpus petition is filed has the patient failed to exhaust his administrative remedy to complete medical examination. Id.

If the mental hospital has ignored its duty to the patient in its care, its misconduct may not be imputed to the patient and thereby prejudice patient's right to judicial review of his custody. Id.

If a mental patient is undergoing medical examination at the time his petition for habeas corpus is filed, the district court should defer action on the petition pending mental hospital's completion of the examination and if, after completion, the patient desires to continue with his petition, the district court should proceed to determination of the issues. Id.

Expense of support

Where disability compensation due incompetent veteran was discontinued by Veterans' Administration because veteran was being cared for by government, government retained money for care of veteran, and veteran was not liable for board and maintenance at government hospital. Silverstein v. United States (1954, 210 F. 2d 19, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 174).

Findings

Absence of findings relating reason for denial of habeas corpus petitioned for by one committed to mental hospital to mental hospital following acquittal by reason of insanity required reviewing court to retain jurisdiction and remand to give District Court opportunity to amplify record to set forth such reasons. J. A. Whittaker v. W. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1962, 299 F. 2d 447, 112 U.S. App. D.C. 66).

Grounds for commitment

Commitment to Saint Elizabeth's Hospital for observation may be ordered for determination of questions other than the competency to understand the proceedings. Leach v. United States (1965, 353 F. 2d 451, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 280).

Only those who need treatment and may be dangerous may be confined to hospital for mentally ill. F. C. Lynch v. W. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1962, 369 U.S. 705, 82 S. Ct. 1063, rev'g 288 F. 2d 388).

Habeas corpus

Where, because the district court held no hearing on habeas corpus petition, reviewing court had no facts before it on which to determine whether the petitioner, who had been committed to mental hospital following acquittal on ground of insanity and recommitted following Bolton-type hearing, was receiving treatment in least restrictive alternative consistent with legitimate purposes of commitment, order denying habeas corpus relief will be vacated and case remanded. W. Ashe v. L. D. Robinson (1971, 450 F. 2d 681, 146 U.S. App. D.C. 220).

Where the petitioner was in custody in hospital pursuant to commitment as sexual psychopath when he filed his habeas corpus petition, federal habeas corpus court did not lose jurisdiction to decide legality of commitments when the hospital thereafter unconditionally released petitioner. R. Justin v. L. Jacobs (1971, 449 F. 2d 1017, 145 U.S. App. D.C. 355).

Inasmuch as habeas corpus petitioner would continue to suffer adverse consequences as result of commitment under the Sexual Psychopath Act § 22-3503 et seq., issue of validity of the commitment was not moot even though petitioner had been released. Id.

Petitioner involuntarily committed to mental hospital on being acquitted of an offense by reason of insanity had right to treatment that was cognizable in habeas corpus, and law and justice required remand for hearing and findings on whether petitioner had received adequate treatment and, if not, the details and circumstances underlying the reason why he had not. C. C. Rouse v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 373 F. 2d 451, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 366).

Conclusion that petitioner who had been committed to hospital under statute following directed verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity failed to sustain burden of showing entitlement to unconditional release from hospital the superintendent of which had stated both at time of trial and on habeas corpus that he was without mental disorder was not without evidentiary support, in view of conflicting psychiatric testimony. F. A. Miller v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1964, 335 F. 2d 986, 118 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Affirmance of judgment denying writ of habeas corpus to one who had been committed to hospital pursuant to statute following verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity was without prejudice to filing of new petition for writ. Id.

Evidence disclosed that petitioner seeking habeas corpus was receiving psychiatric treatment during his confinement in hospital following acquittal by reason of insanity. J. L. Foller v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1961, 292 F. 2d 732, 110 U.S. App. D.C. 239).

Evidence disclosed that director of hospital, to which petitioner had been committed following his acquittal by reason of insanity, was not arbitrary in refusing discharge. Id.

All indigent inmates who petition for habeas corpus for release from confinement in a hospital, including those committed as insane prisoners, may demand expert testimony of members of Commission on Mental Health, or court on its own motion may require it. Curry v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 287 F. 2d 137).

Habeas corpus jurisdiction of District Court was properly invoked for release from hospital to which petitioner was committed by Municipal Court on being found not guilty of crime by reason of insanity. O'Beirne v. Overholser (C.A.D.C. 1960, 287 F. 2d 133).

In habeas corpus proceeding brought by one who had been committed to mental institution upon acquittal of criminal charges on ground of insanity, brought to secure release from institution, finding that petitioner was no longer mentally ill was clearly erroneous. Overholser, Sup't etc. v. Russell (1960, 283 F. 2d 195, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 400).

Under statutory provisions authorizing one confined to mental institution because of his acquittal of crime by reason of insanity to maintain habeas corpus proceeding to test legality of his confinement, habeas corpus hearing is de novo proceeding to examine into petitioner's existing mental condition, and at such hearing he is free to put in evidence, both lay and expert, to demonstrate that he has recovered to the point where he will not be dangerous to himself or others. Ragsdale v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 943).

Where accused who had been adjudged insane pursuant to verdict of jury appointed to inquire into his sanity and who had been ordered confined to hospital subsequently filed petition for writ of habeas corpus which contained crucial statement that he was of sound mind and acting superintendent of hospital in response to rule to show cause why writ should not issue alleged that accused was of unsound mind, giving details of asserted malady and opinion that accused was not mentally competent to stand trial, an issue of fact as to whether accused had regained his sanity was presented, he was entitled to hearing thereon and court erred in dismissing petition without hearing. Lewis v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1960, 274 F. 2d 592, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 83).

Where petitioner was committed to hospital after acquittal by reason of insanity and his petition for habeas corpus failed to allege that he would not in the reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others and the hospital superintendent stated that he could not certify that the petitioner had recovered and petitioner failed to put in issue the superintendent's conclusion, district judge properly concluded that a hearing was not necessary. Fielding v. Overholser, Superintendent, etc. (1959, 268 F. 2d 898, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 23).

Where, after setting aside accused's plea of guilty to charge of public drunkenness, and committing accused to hospital for examination and observation, the municipal court found accused of unsound mind and ordered him confined to another hospital but did not determine whether accused was competent to stand trial, accused would be entitled to release on writ of habeas corpus unless the municipal court determined that he was mentally incompetent to stand trial and ordered him confined on that ground or unless proper lunacy proceedings were instituted. Williams v. Overholser, Sup't, etc. (1958, 259 F. 2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

In habeas corpus proceeding brought by petitioner who had been committed to St. Elizabeths Hospital after being found not guilty of criminal charge by reason of insanity and who alleged that he was receiving no individual psychotherapy at hospital and that no further institutional care was necessary, petitioner was not, on facts disclosed, entitled to independent examination by member of mental health commission. Hayward v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (D.C.D.C. 1960, 191 F. Supp. 464).

Records of Municipal Court imported verity, and in habeas corpus proceeding brought by patient of hospital for the mentally ill, court would not go behind record to determine whether patient had had opportunity to present his defense in Municipal Court prosecution in which he had been found not guilty by reason of insanity at time offense was committed. O'Beirne v. Overholser, Superintendent, etc. (D.C.D.C. 1960, 180 F. Supp. 572).

Use of writ of habeas corpus may not be limited by statute, and person who claims to be deprived of his liberty illegally may always resort to writ. Id.

In habeas corpus proceeding brought by petitioner claiming right to be released from hospital for the mentally ill, court could not try de novo issue as to whether petitioner had ever been insane, or whether he had recovered his sanity. Id.

Where municipal court found accused charged with being drunk or intoxicated on a public street to be of unsound mind and committed him to mental hospital, but made no judicial determination on competency to stand trial, such failure constituted an illegal detention cognizable under writ of habeas corpus since such failure resulted in denial of a right given him by statute as well as his right, if competent, to speedy trial under the constitution. Williams v. Overholser (D.C.D.C. 1958, 162 F. Supp. 514, modified on other grounds 259 F. 2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

It is not the function of the district court to determine in habeas corpus proceeding, the mental competency of an accused to stand trial on a charge pending against him in the municipal court, but the only court that may determine that fact is the court having jurisdiction of such charge. Id.

Hearing

If District Court were to find that habeas corpus petition filed by one committed to mental hospital following acquittal by reason of insanity, which, together with return, presented factual issue, was not procedurally premature, court was to grant hearing on question of eligibility for release under statute. J. A. Whittaker v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1962, 299 F. 2d 447, 112 U.S. App. D.C. 66).

Habeas corpus petition filed by one who was confined to hospital following acquittal by reason of insanity, alleging that he was free from named mental conditions, of sound mind and not dangerous to himself or society, together with return, presented question of fact requiring resolution, assuming it was not raised in untimely fashion. Id.

Hearing and findings

Since the court decision denying hospital's application to grant a conditional release to patient, committed after acquittal by reason of insanity, was not accompanied by findings of facts and conclusions of law, and lower court did not have before it all of the evidence which the parties considered relevant to its decision, case was not an apt one for summary reversal, but neither was state of record adequate to permit appellate review under proper standards, and case would be remanded for taking of such additional evidence as the parties might see fit to introduce, and such further proceedings as might be appropriate. United States v. C. McNeil (1970, 434 F. 2d 502, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 228).

Patient, who had been committed to hospital under statute after having been acquitted on criminal charge solely on ground that he was insane, who had received little or no treatment at hospital, and who brought habeas corpus proceeding in federal District Court, was entitled to hearing and findings as to whether he was receiving adequate treatment, and, if he was not, District Court could allow hospital reasonable opportunity to initiate treatment, and unconditional or conditional release might be in order if it should appear that opportunity for treatment had been exhausted or treatment was otherwise inappropriate. W. G. Tribby v. D. Cameron, Superintendent etc. (1967, 379 F. 2d 104, 126 U.S. App. D.C. 327).

Independent examination

Denial of independent medical examination by patient who opposed his requested release from mental hospital to prison was error, where there had been no psychiatric inquiry as to his fitness for release, but inasmuch as it appeared that later he had been sent to hospital for psychiatric treatment, case would be remanded for further proceedings to clarify situation and to enable patient to make representations or file pleadings as would express his interest. L. W. Green v. United States (1965, 349 F. 2d 203, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 226).

Patient in mental hospital has right to independent psychiatric assistance where psychiatric inquiry undertaken by state may be slanted to state's interest and patient should be afforded such assistance in suitable cases even though no such risk appears. Id.

Inmate who had been confined for more than one year without an independent examination as to his mental health by an expert appointed by the district court was entitled, in connection with his petition for release, as a matter of right, to such independent examination to test findings and conclusions of the hospital staff where he was confined. J. Watson v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't, etc. (1962, 312 F. 2d 878, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 151).

Indeterminate commitment

That accused has pleaded guilty or that government has established that he committed criminal act constitutes only strong evidence that his continued liberty would imperil preservation of public peace and does not justify indeterminate commitment to mental institution on bare reasonable doubt as to past sanity. F. C. Lynch v. W. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1962, 369 U.S. 705, 82 S. Ct. 1063, rev'g 288 F. 2d 388).

Inquiry after acquittal

Under statute giving court authority to conduct hearing whenever a person is arrested, indicted, or charged by information and to commit person to mental hospital, trial court had jurisdiction to conduct hearing to determine competency of defendant after his acquittal on grounds of insanity, despite his refusal to raise issue in criminal trial. United States v. C. L. Limber (D.C. App. 1963, 192 A. 2d 530).

After jury returns verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity, inquiry as to whether accused is presently committable as person of unsound mind may be undertaken. F. C. Lynch v. W. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1962, 369 U.S. 705, 82 S. Ct. 1063, rev'g 288 F. 2d 388).

Defendant does not have absolute right to have his guilty plea accepted and trial judge may enter plea of not guilty in behalf of accused, but, if that is done, and defendant, despite his own assertions of sanity, is found not guilty by reason of insanity, commitment to hospital for mentally ill must be either under statute providing procedure for confining accused who, though found competent to stand trial, is nevertheless committable as person of unsound mind, or civil commitment provisions. Id.

Insanity defense

Where record unequivocally established that, after three years of representing defendant, defense counsel concurred with conclusions reached by psychiatrist and judge that defendant was a malingerer and expressed opinion that it was tactically unwise to raise an insanity defense unless he felt he had a chance, defendant was not entitled to reversal of conviction of armed robbery assault with a deadly weapon and carrying a pistol without a license on ground of judicial interference with his defense counsel's attempt to pursue insanity issue. United States v. F. L. Simms (1972, 463 F. 2d 1273, 150 U.S. App. D.C. 182).

Trial judge's decision not to interpose an insanity defense sua sponte was not an abuse of discretion constituting reversible error, especially in view of finding that defendant was malingering. Id.

A decision of the trial court to sua sponte interpose an insanity defense, especially when taken against the wishes of the accused, necessitates the utmost care in judgment and requires consideration of many factors. United States v. P. Bradley (1972, 463 F. 2d 808, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 505).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in failing to further pursue insanity issue, allegedly with a view to raising insanity defense, sua sponte, where defendant indicated that he did not want to raise such defense, defense counsel expressed their views that defendant was competent to stand trial and trial judge received commitment report disclaiming any opinion on productivity and diagnosing defendant's illness as "Nonpsychotic Organic Brain Syndrome With Epilepsy (Alcoholic Factors)" and trial judge had a lengthy opportunity to observe defendant in court. Id.

Instructions

In prosecution for murder, instruction that if verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity was returned defendant would be committed to mental hospital until such time as it was established that he was no longer insane, was not objectionable for failure to add that he would be kept in hospital until he would not in reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others. Starr, Jr. v. United States (1959, 264 F. 2d 377, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 91, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 652, 359 U.S. 936, 3 L. Ed. 2d 639).

If it affirmatively appears on record that defendant, who pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity, did not want instruction as to effect of verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity, Court of Appeals will not regard failure of trial court to give such instruction as grounds for reversal. Lyles v. United States (1958, 254 F. 2d 725, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 22, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 997, 356 U.S. 961, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1067).

When instruction is given jury as to effect of verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity, jury should simply be informed that such verdict means that accused will be confined in hospital for mentally ill until superintendent has certified, and court is satisfied, that accused has recovered his sanity and will not in reasonable future be dangerous to himself or to others, in which event and at which time court shall order his release either unconditionally or under such conditions as court may see fit. Id.

Where defendant pleads not guilty by reason of insanity, jury has right to know meaning of verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity as accurately as it knows by common knowledge the meaning of verdict of guilty and verdict of not guilty. Id.

Evidence of mental condition at a given time is relevant to determination of mental condition at another time not unreasonably far removed, and it might be proper to inquire as to probability that as of time of act charged, an accused's mental condition was the same as it was found to be somewhat earlier, or somewhat later, but such rule does not justify judge in warning jury that if they acquit accused who has pleaded insanity they will be releasing a dangerous man to prey upon society. Blunt v. United States (1957, 244 F. 2d 355, 100 U.S. App. D.C. 266).

In prosecution for housebreaking, wherein judge told jury that hospital Acting Superintendent had advised court that accused was found competent to stand trial and assist in his own defense, and after stating that court would commit accused to hospital if he were found not guilty by reason of insanity, judge added that accused would remain there until determined to be "of sound mind" by hospital authorities and that "if the authorities adhered to their last opinion on this point, he will be released very shortly", latter statement was highly prejudicial since it implied a warning that dire consequences might result from finding that accused was not guilty by reason of insanity. Durham v. United States (1956, 237 F. 2d 760, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 132).

When accused person has pleaded insanity, counsel may and judge should inform jury that if he is acquitted by reason of insanity he will be presumed to be insane and may be confined in hospital for insane as long as public safety and welfare require. Taylor v. United States (1955, 222 F. 2d 398, 95 U.S. App. D.C. 373).

Instructions to jury relative to criminal responsibility must in substance advise jury that they may find defendant guilty only if they find, beyond reasonable doubt, from evidence and from facts fairly deducible, (1) that defendant was not suffering from diseased or defective mental condition at time of the act, or (2) that the act was not the result of such condition. Durham v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 862, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 228, 45 A.L.R. 2d 1430).

Judge's comments on evidence

If trial judge submits to jury question of probable release of defendant at some future date from mental hospital, submits evidence to jury on that point, or comments to jury respecting speculative possibilities in that regard, trial judge commits error. A. Lyles v. United States (1958, 254 F. 2d 725, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 22, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 997, 356 U.S. 961, 2 L. Ed. 1067).

Statement by trial judge that doctor testified that on prior occasion he found no mental disorder whatever in defendant, and that defendant was a man of average intelligence, was not reversible error, though made in connection with statement to jury that if defendant should be acquitted by reason of insanity, he would be committed to a mental institution, where statement as to testimony of doctor was a remark in single sentence in middle of long charge, and trial judge did not relate testimony of doctor to time of trial or to any possible future time. Id.

Judicial determination

Federal district court which had been asked to reimpose complete restriction on patient who had been conditionally released from hospital to which he had been committed after being found not guilty of robbery by reason of insanity was required to make independent judicial determination. F. W. Friend v. United States (1967, 388 F. 2d 579, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Manslaughter sentences were not void because of absence of judicial adjudication that defendant was competent to stand trial, though he had previously been found to be insane, where certificate of superintendent of hospital stating that defendant had recovered his reason and was then of sound mind was filed in court before defendant pleaded guilty, and court ordered examination by two independent psychiatrists who reported that defendant was of sound mind at the time. J. W. Hunter v. United States (1963, 323 F. 2d 625, 116 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

If accused denies that he is mentally ill, he is entitled to judicial determination of his mental state despite hospital board's certification that he is of unsound mind.

F. C. Lynch v. W. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1962, 369 U.S. 705, 82 S. Ct. 1063, rev'g 288 F.2d 388).

Under this section trial court may or may not make a finding on whether accused is of unsound mind, but must determine whether he is mentally competent to stand trial, when objection is made to the report from hospital and a hearing is held, and if accused is found to be of unsound mind this section requires court to commit defendant to a mental hospital, and if court also determines him to be incompetent to stand trial statute requires the same commitment, but section requires a judicial determination in the latter type of mental condition, but does not require a determination in the former. Williams v. Overholser (D.C.D.C. 1958, 162 F. Supp. 514, modified on other grounds 259 F.2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

Jurisdiction of court

1963 robbery conviction was not invalid on ground that, since defendant had been committed to hospital following his 1961 acquittal by reason of insanity, district court was without jurisdiction to try him, in absence of hearing to determine his competency to stand trial in 1963, where prior to both 1961 and 1963 trials defendant was referred to hospital for mental examination resulting, in both instances, in certification by hospital that he was competent to stand trial, and 1963 certification was not objected to by either defendant or government. Green v. United States (1965, 351 F.2d 198, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 33).

Jurisdiction to commit

Municipal court did not have jurisdiction under D.C. Code 1961 § 24-301(a) to commit person to mental hospital where court had found accused not guilty by reason of insanity but had finally disposed of the criminal charges against accused more than a year before such commitment and had erroneously committed accused under D.C. Code 1961 § 24-301(d). Dr. D. C. Cameron v. W. V. Fisher (1963, 320 F.2d 731, 116 U.S. App. D.C. 9).

Jury trial

This section providing for commitment of accused found incompetent to stand trial to a mental hospital is not unconstitutional for absence of provision for jury trial since all that is required is due process which is satisfied by judicial hearing which is provided for. Williams v. Overholser (D.C.D.C. 1958, 162 F. Supp. 514, modified on other grounds 259 F.2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

Law governing

Where doctor, who had examined defendant for purpose of determining his mental competency to stand trial, did not testify to any statement made by defendant on issue of guilt and judge's finding of mental competency to stand trial was not brought to notice of jury, it was immaterial whether commitment to mental institution for determination of mental competency to stand trial was made under federal statute or under District of Columbia statute; and neither statute barred doctor's testimony expressing his opinion that defendant was sane when he committed act. Edmonds v. United States (1959, 273 F.2d 108, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 373, certiorari denied 80 S. Ct. 1062, 362 U.S. 977, 4 L. Ed. 2d 1012).

If this section stating procedure to be followed by federal District Court for District of Columbia in determining an accused person's mental competence to stand trial requires a jury, it has been superseded in that respect by 18 U.S.C. § 4244 which does not require a jury and which has general application in Federal Court throughout nation, and federal District Court for District of Columbia did not err in proceeding under later statute without intervention of jury in determining mental competency of an accused to stand trial on murder charge. Jordan v. United States (1953, 207 F.2d 28, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 65).

Legally competent

Conceptual range of expression "legally incompetent" only embraces deficiencies in accused which actually prevents his fair trial, and mere deficiency, standing alone, is outside limits of the concept. United States v. R. Wilson (1966, 263 F. Supp. 528).

Mandamus

Without a full record of the trial even if petitioner was constitutionally entitled to further protection of his rights during hospital staff conference held in connection with a pre-indictment mental examination requested by petitioner, it could not be said that presence of petitioner's counsel, as opposed to some alternative device such as recording some or all parts of conference, was an appropriate remedy, so that mandamus to compel an order against hospital to permit presence of petitioner's counsel was not available. R. N. Thornton v. Hon. H. F. Corcoran (1969, 407 F.2d 695, 132 U.S. App. D.C. 232).

Mandatory commitment

Mandatory commitment under statute providing that any person acquitted solely on ground that he was insane at time of commission of crime shall be confined in a hospital for the mentally ill is permissible only if defendant affirmatively relied on defense of insanity. C. C. Rouse v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 387 F.2d 241, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 283).

Under statute providing that any person acquitted solely on ground that he was insane at time of commission of crime shall be confined in hospital for mentally ill, Congress did not intend to allow automatic commitment when the defense of insanity was thrust upon a defendant who objected to it. Id.

Mental examination before verdict

The decision to commit is a matter of discretion with the court and the exercise of that discretion will not lightly be disturbed.

The evidence did not show a need for a mental examination. F. E. Wesley v. United States (D.C. App. 1967, 233 A.2d 514).

Mentally ill person

A person is "mentally ill" if he suffers from an abnormal condition of mind that substantially affects mental or emotional processes, and substantially impairs behavioral control. D. A. Dixon v. L. Jacobs, Sup't etc. (1970, 427 F.2d 589, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 319).

Motion for leave to appeal

Where defendant's motion to vacate sentences was denied without hearing and district judge also denied defendant's application for leave to appeal in forma pauperis, defendant's motion in the Court of Appeals for leave to so appeal and for appointment of counsel would be granted in view of fact that trial judge denied such motion without hearing on erroneous grounds that competency to stand trial was not subject to collateral attack but was waived if not advanced at trial, and that defendant did not allege he was in fact mentally incompetent when tried, and that an amendment to this section abrogated requirement for a judicial determination of restored competency before trial. Blunt v. United States (1957, 244 F.2d 355, 100 U.S. App. D.C. 266).

New trial

An inadequate determination by court of question whether defendant is mentally competent to stand trial is not curable by nunc pro tunc hearing, and defendant is entitled to new trial. B. T. Wider v. United States (1965, 348 F.2d 358, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 129).

Nunc pro tunc hearing

Even if district court erred in not conducting hearing on issue of competency at time of entry of plea of guilty, petitioner could thereafter demand no more than nunc pro tunc hearing. Mordecai v. United States (D.C.D.C. 1966, 252 F. Supp. 694).

Periodic examinations

Statute governing release of persons acquitted by reason of insanity entitles patient to periodic examinations by hospital staff and right to be examined by outside psychiatrist and, if one of examining physicians believes he should no longer be hospitalized, he is entitled to court hearing. G. C. Bolton v. D. W. Harris, Acting Superintendent etc. (1968, 395 F.2d 642, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Rule that patient committed to mental hospital after being found not guilty of offense by reason of insanity is entitled to periodic examinations by hospital staff and right to be examined by outside psychiatrist, and that if one of examining physicians believes he should no longer be hospitalized, he is entitled to court hearing applies to all cases including those previously committed under statute providing for mandatory commitment of persons acquitted by reason of insanity. Id.

Petition for release

When a mental hospital patient's habeas corpus petition for release from mental hospital is based on his mental health at time petition was filed, the petition is not subject to dismissal on grounds that the merits of his claim had been determined in prior proceedings or that failure to present the issues in prior proceedings amounted to inexcusable neglect. D. A. Dixon v. L. Jacobs, Sup't etc. (1970, 427 F. 2d 589, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 319).

Since ten months had elapsed between denial of previous petition for habeas corpus and mental patient's subsequent petition, sufficient time had passed for patient to raise issue that his condition at time of petition warranted his release from confinement in mental institution. Id.

Policy of statute

Underlying policy of statute government commitment and release of persons found not guilty of crime by reason of insanity is to provide treatment and cure for individual in manner which affords reasonable assurance of public safety. United States v. M. Charnizon (D.C. App. 1967, 232 A. 2d 586).

Potentially dangerous

Mere fact that person committed under statute to mental institution following acquittal of criminal charge by reason of insanity has some dangerous propensity does not, standing alone, warrant his continued confinement but dangerous propensities must be related to or arise out of abnormal mental condition, whether such condition was that which constituted basis for acquittal. W. Overholser v. H. T. O'Bierne (1962, 302 F. 2d 852, 112 U.S. App. D.C. 267).

That one confined to mental institution because of his acquittal of criminal charges for insanity would no longer be committable under civil procedure could constitute no ground for his release where there was no showing that he had recovered to point where he was free from abnormal mental condition or that his release would not expose himself or public to danger in reasonably foreseeable future. Id.

Under rule that to be eligible for release from mental hospital, inmate must be free from such "abnormal mental conditions" as would make him dangerous to himself or community in reasonably foreseeable future, quoted words refer to a mental disease or mental defect, and not just any condition that is outside of the ordinary norm. H. T. O'Bierne v. W. Overholser (D.C.D.C. 1961, 193 F. Supp. 652; reversed on other grounds 302 F. 2d 852).

Under this section concerning commitment of insane criminals to hospital, a sane person cannot be confined in a mental hospital simply because he is thought to be potentially dangerous if released and his dangerous tendencies must be attributable to an abnormal mental condition if he is to be retained in confinement. Starr, Jr. v. United States (1959, 264 F. 2d 377, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 91, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 652, 359 U.S. 936, 3 L. Ed. 2d 639).

Under this section relating to commitment of insane criminals to hospital, a defendant, acquitted because of insanity and committed to mental hospital because of the verdict, may not be released if, despite some recovery, doctors certify and in the exercise of its own function the court finds he is, and in the reasonably foreseeable future will be, dangerous because of mental disease or defect. Id.

Prejudicial cross-examination

In murder prosecution wherein sole defense was insanity, and defendant's gibberish testimony was such as to raise issues as to whether defendant feigned such testimony and whether at time of the third trial his mental condition represented his condition at time of act charged, cross-examination disclosing defendant's failure to take stand at two previous trials which resulted in convictions was erroneous and was not harmless but was sufficiently prejudicial to warrant the granting of a mistrial even though defense made no request for cautionary instructions. W. L. Stewart v. United States (1961, 366 U.S. 1, 81 S. Ct. 941; reversed on other grounds 275 F. 2d 617).

Presence of counsel at hospital staff conference

Defendant is not entitled to presence of counsel and psychiatrist at mental examination staff conference despite contention that their presence is required to protect defendant's constitutional rights against self-incrimination and to counsel. United States v. H. A. Fletcher (1971, 329 F. Supp. 160).

Presentence examination

A diagnosis of a state prison, as part of a pre-sentence report, that defendant was a psychopathic personality, unstable, recidivistic and antisocial might have been a sufficient prima facie case for ordering a mental examination of the defendant before sentence, but even if it was not, there was enough basis to make clear the usefulness of a psychological evaluation in determining sentence. W. R. Leach v. United States (1964, 334 F. 2d 945, 118 U.S. App. D.C. 197).

Psychiatric evaluation of a prisoner through the Legal Psychiatric Services or through the Prison Bureau program, like a pre-sentence report, is a useful tool for rehabilitative rather than retributive sentencing, and it has a crucial place in the sentencing process. Id.

Presumption of sanity

In prosecution for housebreaking, psychiatrist's opinion that defendant had been of unsound mind on date when crime was committed was sufficient to satisfy "some evidence" test and thereby to shift to prosecution the burden of proving defendant's sanity, though psychiatrist could not state categorically that defendant had not known right from wrong. Durham v. United States (1954, 214 F. 2d 862, 94 U.S. App. D.C. 228, 45 A.L.R. 2d 1430).

Trial court's erroneous holding that there was no evidence of alleged housebreaker's mental state as of date when crime was committed, and that presumption of sanity therefore prevailed, was prejudicial and required reversal. Id.

Pretrial mental examination

Decision of trial judge to proceed with trial on the merits without ordering a commitment of defendant for competency observation was not abuse of discretion in absence of any objection or motion from defense counsel and in view of simultaneous expression of willingness to try, through bifurcation, any insanity defense that might subsequently appear appropriate. United States v. P. Bradley (1972, 463 F. 2d 808, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 405).

Since the defendant who allegedly had history of drug addiction was opposed to pretrial motion for mental examination and, on interrogation by the court with questions designed to elicit degree of his understanding of his legal circumstances as well as his position on the motion, his responses to former were clear and his opposition to commitment was steadfast, the trial court did not err in denying motion. United States v. M. W. Collins (1970, 433 F. 2d 550, 139 U.S. App. D.C. 392).

Although five months before trial it had been determined that defendant was suffering from drug addiction which was in remission, where defendant did not testify, there was no expert testimony as to any abnormal mental condition, defendant did not seek hearing and there was no evidence of long record of disturbed behavior, failure of trial judge sua sponte to grant hearing on issue of mental competence to stand trial was not basis for reversal. R. R. Powell v. United States (1966, 373 F. 2d 225, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 364).

There must be facts which create a substantial doubt of defendant's mental competence before due process requires the trial judge to order hearing thereon sua sponte. Id.

Where accused raised defense of insanity so that it was necessary to conduct an examination of his person, there was nothing arbitrary or unconstitutional in committing him for reasonable length of time as provided by statute to mental hospital in order that examination might be conducted and accused was not thereby deprived of his right to bail. P. A. Battle v. D. C. Cameron, Superintendent etc. (1966, 260 F. Supp. 804).

Affidavit of defense counsel, in support of motion for pretrial mental examination, reciting that counsel had serious doubts as to defendant's mental capacity to assist him intelligently and as to his mental health, believing that crime may have resulted from distorted mind, based, inter alia, on unspecified personal observations, oddities in defendant's behavior and beliefs and fact that defendant had relatives who were afflicted with mental disorder, raised sufficient possibility that crimes were product of mental disease or defect to require granting of motion, and its denial was reversible error. Cannady v. United States (1965, 351 F. 2d 817, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 120).

Notwithstanding that about two weeks after trial and seven months after defendant's erroneously denied pretrial motion for mental examination psychiatrist examined defendant in cell block and reported that defendant was then competent and presumably had been at trial but that he was unable to reach conclusion as to dates of alleged offenses, at least time and facilities normally available for pretrial examinations were to be made available following reversal of conviction, and prospective hearing was required. Id.

The erroneous denial of defendant's pre-trial motion for a mental examination required the remanding of case for a new hearing to ascertain defendant's present competency to stand trial and for a new trial on forgery charge if defendant were found competent, rather than a nunc pro tunc hearing for judicial determination of defendant's competency at time of his original trial. P. Holloway v. United States (1964, 343 F. 2d 265, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 396).

Although a trial judge has some discretion in denying a motion for a mental examination as not timely, if counsel learns of defendant's alleged symptoms on day the trial is scheduled to begin, a motion submitted at that time cannot be denied as late. L. P. Mitchell v. United States (1963, 316 F. 2d 354, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 353).

A written motion on morning of trial for a mental examination of defendant based on allegations that defendant had displayed to counsel certain letters which raised inquiry with respect to his mental situation, and based on allegation that counsel had learned that defendant was an epileptic and exhibited unexplained and repeated criminal activities was, under the circumstances, adequate and timely, and denial thereof was prejudicial error. Id.

On a motion for an order directing a mental examination, defendant is not required to produce, in order to get the examination, enough evidence to prove that he is incompetent or irresponsible. Id.

Nature of crime of sodomy, with which accused was charged, was not sufficient alone, to require the District Court, before accepting guilty plea, to order a mental examination of accused, although court could properly consider nature of crime in that connection, and where there was no indication by prosecuting attorney, that accused might be a sexual psychopath, and no request for a mental examination was made by prosecution or accused, convictions could not be set aside in collateral proceeding, such as coram nobis, because of court's failure to order examination on its own motion. Carter v. United States (1960, 283 F. 2d 200, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 405).

A prosecutor who knows that the accused's mental state at the time of the crime will be the critical issue at trial has an obligation to see that any pretrial mental examination of the accused that may be ordered be broad enough to cast light on that issue, and such course is required not only to protect the rights of the accused, but also to protect society's interest in hospitalizing the accused, if his violent acts sprang from mental disorder, so that he will not be released, as he would be after completion of a prison sentence, without medical assurance that he is not likely to be dangerous to himself or others in the reasonably foreseeable future. Winn v. United States (1959, 270 F. 2d 326, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 133).

There is a vast difference between that mental state which permits an accused to be tried and that which permits him to be held responsible for a crime, and in view of fact that an examination made for the purpose of determining competency to stand trial requires less than an examination designed to determine sanity for the purpose of criminal responsibility, it is not to be assumed that a psychiatrist who has been ordered to prepare an opinion as to man's trial competency will conduct a type of examination which is necessary to provide the trier of facts with information essential for a proper determination of criminal responsibility. Id.

Where the prosecuting attorney moved for a complete and thorough mental examination of the accused, but district court's order upon the motion required only such examination as was necessary to permit formulation of an opinion as to whether defendant was presently of unsound mind or mentally incompetent so as to be unable to understand the proceeding against him or properly to assist in his own defense, the complete and thorough type of examination required for a proper determination of the issue of responsibility would be deemed never made because it was not ordered as requested in the prosecutor's pretrial motion, and therefore defendant's conviction would be reversed and he would be granted a new trial. Id.

Procedure

Where doctors who testified at habeas corpus proceeding for release of inmate who had been committed after acquittal by reason of insanity were among those whom he had called as witnesses in his own behalf at criminal trial and were thoroughly familiar with his history and behavior at hospital, and inmate did not request testimony of members of Commission on Mental Health, although private psychiatrists were not available to testify as to inmate's mental condition at time of proceeding, inmate received due process of law. Curry v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 287 F. 2d 137).

Under statutes relating to insane criminals, a reasonable doubt about insanity of accused required acquittal and authorized hospital confinement. Ragsdale v. Overholser, Sup't etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 943).

Procedure which governs lunacy inquisition in case of person charged with criminal offense is different from that governing ordinary lunacy inquisition. Evans v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 876).

Procedure after certification

Whenever court receives a certification of incompetency or a certification of restoration of competency and there is no objection by either the accused or the government, court may, in former case, forthwith commit the accused to a mental hospital and, in the latter case, immediately proceed with trial. T. W. Whalen v. United States (1965, 346 F. 2d 812, 120 U.S. App. D.C. 331).

Where the two hospitals to which accused was referred for mental examination certified him as competent to stand trial, in absence of objection either from the accused or the government court could, in its discretion, proceed with trial without holding a hearing to determine competence. Id.

Proof of need for mental examination

Motion for mental examination is made on adequate averment, not on counsel's belief, however sincere, that certain undisclosed facts lead him, or a psychiatrist, or a social psychologist, to suspect examination is required. R. T. Brown v. United States (D.C. App. 1968, 244 A. 2d 487).

Counsel may in his motion for continuance offer to make ex parte proffer of facts showing need for mental examination and for appointment of independent psychiatrist. Id.

Where motion for continuance was supported by counsel's statement that certain undisclosed facts lead him to believe that defendant suffered from mental disease at time of trial but did not state facts on which such belief was based, denial of continuance did not deprive defendant of substantial rights or fair trial. Id.

Psychiatric assistance

As to assertion of a claim, on appeal from denial of habeas corpus relief, that the petitioner had not had such court-appointed psychiatric assistance to which interests of justice entitled him for the preparation and presentation of his habeas corpus case, the court would take judicial notice that over a dozen years or more the medical views of government psychiatrists, as a whole, generally turned out to be more favorable to defendants than to the prosecutors in verdicts of not guilty by reason of insanity. A. Proctor v. D. W. Harris (1969, 413 F. 2d 383, 134 U.S. App. D.C. 109).

The petitioner, who sought release from a mental hospital to which he was confined pursuant to commitment following a verdict of not guilty of criminal charges by reason of insanity, and on whose application an independent psychiatric examination was ordered, was granted full and meaningful habeas corpus hearing without being denied any relevant or other legitimate assistance from government employed psychiatrist and was not entitled to relief on the theory that he had not had court-appointed psychiatric assistance to which interests of justice entitled him for preparation and presentation of his habeas corpus case. Id.

Psychiatrist's report

Psychiatrist's reports on whether defendant was mentally competent to stand trial properly included evaluation of defendant's mental condition at time crimes were committed. W. Overholser, Sup't, etc. v. F. C. Lynch (1961, 288 F. 2d 388, 109 U.S. App. D.C. 404; reversed on other grounds 1962, 82 S. Ct. 1063).

Psychologist's qualifications

Court which rather than evaluating psychologist's qualifications in competency hearing turned hearing into inquiry into any psychologist's competency, without medical training, to make informed observations about accused was erroneous. T. E. Blunt v. United States (1967, 389 F. 2d 545, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 375).

Lack of general medical background may affect weight given to psychologist's testimony in incompetency hearing. Id.

Public policy

However strong and pervasive public policy to bring the morally responsible to bar, it cannot subvert constitutional right to fair trial which is not afforded to accused who is prosecuted while legally incompetent. United States v. R. Wilson (1966, 263 F. Supp. 528).

That personal liberty should depend on such an arbitrary circumstance as mental hospital's change of "administrative policy" in determining whether sociopathic personality should be treated as a mental disease, as affecting release of committed person, would be contrary to basic principles of freedom. H. T. O'Bierne v. W. Overholser (D.C.D.C. 1961, 193 F. Supp. 652; reversed on other grounds 302 F. 2d 852).

The community is not without means of protecting itself if at time that a prisoner's sentence ends he is found to be a sexual psychopath, or to be insane or mentally incompetent. Carter v. United States (1960, 283 F. 2d 200, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 405).

The existence of possibilities to protect society from, and to treat, prisoner convicted of sodomy, or other sexual crimes, in the event he is found to be a sexual psychopath, or insane, of unsound mind or otherwise defective during imprisonment or at time his sentence ends, does not relieve bench and bar of responsibility of endeavoring to reach at the earliest possible stage, ideally prior to trial and sentence, the approach to a particular case which appears to be most just and appropriate, having regard to the individual's mental condition, his history, and the possibility of rehabilitating him and restoring him to usefulness in the community. Id.

Policies underlying distinction in treatment between mentally responsible law breakers, who are sent to prison, and mentally irresponsible law breakers, who are sent to hospitals, are (1) that it is both wrong and foolish to punish where there is no blame and where punishment cannot correct, and (2) that community's security may be better protected by hospitalization than by imprisonment. Williams v. United States (1958, 250 F. 2d 19, 102 U.S. App. D.C. 51).

Purpose

Purpose of detention under statute providing for commitment of person acquitted of crime by reason of insanity is not punitive but serves to protect the public and the subject and to afford place and procedure to treat and, if possible, to rehabilitate the subject. L. W. Collins v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 377 F. 2d 945, 126 U.S. App. D.C. 306).

Purpose of involuntary hospitalization is treatment, not punishment. C. C. Rouse v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 373 F. 2d 451, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 366).

Purpose of ordering a mental examination for a defendant is to get evidence on whether he is or is not competent to stand trial, and another purpose is to get evidence on whether, if there is a trial, the jury should be instructed on insanity and criminal responsibility. L. P. Mitchell v. United States (1963, 316 F. 2d 354, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 353).

Although this section respecting release of persons committed to mental hospitals after acquittal by reason of insanity does not speak of temporary release from hospital, its purpose is to assure that members of exceptional class be kept under hospital restraint until District Court, in exercise of a discretion reviewable by Court of Appeals, approves relaxation of that restraint. Hough v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 458, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 192).

Purpose of this section pertaining to commitment to hospital of an accused who is mentally incompetent to stand trial is to prescribe procedure for determining whether an accused can understand the proceedings against him and properly assist in his defense and, in event he cannot, to provide for his confinement in a hospital instead of a jail until he can. Williams v. Overholser, Sup't, etc. (1958, 259 F. 2d 175, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 18).

The purpose of this section providing that whenever prima facie evidence is submitted that accused is insane, the court may cause a jury to be impaneled to inquire into the sanity of accused, is to prevent the infliction of punishment upon a person so lacking in mental capacity as to be unable to understand the nature and purpose of the punishment. Neely v. United States (1945, 150 F. 2d 977, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 187, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 166, 326 U.S. 768, 90 L. Ed. 463).

Purpose of this section making it mandatory for court to commit to a mental hospital any defendant in a criminal case who is found not guilty on ground of insanity, and placing certain safeguards against release of such person from mental hospital after his commitment thereto, is to protect public and discourage unfounded pleas of insanity and statute must be construed in a manner to best effectuate those objectives. In re Milton T. Rosenfield (D.C.D.C. 1958, 157 F. Supp. 18, remanded on other grounds 262 F. 2d 34, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 322).

Purpose of this section providing for mental examination of person charged with crime before trial is to determine whether prisoner is then capable of understanding the nature and object of the proceedings so as to properly conduct his defense at a trial of the charge against him. Evans v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 876).

Questions of fact

The presence of an abnormal mental condition, and the extent to which it impairs mental or emotional processes and controls, are questions of fact; how substantial such an impairment must be to be considered a mental illness is a matter of law. D. A. Dixon v. L. Jacobs, Sup't etc. (1970, 427 F. 2d 589, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 319).

The likelihood of future misconduct of the mental patient who seeks release from confinement, the type of misconduct to be expected, and its probable frequency are questions of fact; whether the expected harm, and its apparent likelihood, are sufficiently great to warrant coercive intervention are questions of law. Id.

Reason for continued confinement

That person involuntarily committed and confined has some dangerous propensities does not, standing alone, warrant his continued confinement in a government mental institution; the dangerous propensities must be related to or arise out of an abnormal mental condition. C. C. Rouse v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 373 F. 2d 451, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 366).

Continued confinement of one involuntarily committed on being acquitted of an offense by reason of insanity depends not upon fact that he committed the acts, but upon his present mental condition. Id.

Reasonable opportunity to initiate treatment

If court finds that a mandatorily committed patient is in custody in violation of Constitution and laws, for failure to receive treatment, it may allow hospital a reasonable opportunity to initiate treatment, but if opportunity for treatment has been exhausted or is otherwise inappropriate, conditional or unconditional release may be in order. C. C. Rouse v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 373 F. 2d 451, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 366).

Record of determination of competency

Where defendant's motion for mental examination has been granted, determination of competency should be noted of record. Watson v. United States (1956, 234 F. 2d 42, 98 U.S. App. D.C. 221).

Release

Release provisions of statute governing commitment to mental hospital of one found not guilty by reason of insanity are valid even though they differ from civil commitment procedures by authorizing court review of hospital's decision to release patient. G. C. Bolton v. D. W. Harris, Acting Superintendent etc. (1968, 395 F. 2d 642, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Equal protection is not offended by allowing government or court opportunity to insure that standards for release of civilly committed patients are faithfully applied to patients committed after having been found not guilty by reason of insanity. Id.

Principal concern of statute governing release of persons committed after being found not guilty by reason of insanity is for procedures to protect public from premature release of dangerous persons. L. W. Green v. United States (1965, 349 F. 2d 203, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 226).

That patient has fears that his release from mental institution will endanger himself or community to which he is being released may be considered on issue of release and determination is reviewable on appeal. Id.

Person found not guilty of criminal offense on ground of insanity may not be released unless superintendent of hospital to which he has been committed certifies that person committed has recovered his sanity, and that, in superintendent's opinion, the person will not in reasonably foreseeable future be dangerous to himself or others and is entitled to an unconditional release. S. V. Robertson v. D. C. Cameron (D.C.D.C. 1963, 224 F. Supp. 60).

Under this section providing that a person committed to hospital for mentally ill because he was acquitted for criminal offense solely on ground that he was insane at time of commission may be unconditionally released by District Court if superintendent of hospital certifies, inter alia, that in his opinion such person will not in reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others, the danger to the public need not be possible physical violence or crime of violence but it is enough to preclude release if there is competent evidence that he may commit any criminal act. Overholser Sup't etc. v. Russell (1960, 283 F. 2d 195, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 400).

In view of this section providing that person who has been committed to hospital for mentally ill because he was acquitted of criminal offense solely on ground of insanity at time of commission may be released unconditionally by District Court if superintendent certifies that he has recovered, that he will not in reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others, and that, in opinion of superintendent, he is entitled to unconditional release, to demonstrate at habeas corpus hearing that he is entitled to unconditional release, the patient must show that he has recovered, that he will not in reasonable future be dangerous to others and that superintendent acted arbitrarily and capriciously in refusing to certify him and recommend him for unconditional release. Id.

This section governing release of one committed to mental institution after being found not guilty of crime by reason of insanity, based upon certificate that such person has recovered sanity and will not in a reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others, does not, by phrase "establishing his eligibility for release", establish the test of whether particular individual, engaged in ordinary pursuits of life, is committable to mental institution under the law governing civil commitments, but requires freedom from such abnormal mental condition as would make the individual dangerous to himself or the community in the reasonably foreseeable future. Overholser etc. v. Leach (1958, 257 F. 2d 667, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 289, certiorari denied 79 S. Ct. 1152, 359 U.S. 1013, 3 L. Ed. 2d 1038).

Insane person, found not guilty of homicide by reason of insanity, and committed to asylum, must prove sanity and that he is no longer a menace, to obtain release. Barry v. White (1933, 64 F. 2d 707, 62 App. D.C. 69).

In habeas corpus proceeding seeking unconditional release from mental institution to which petitioner had been committed after acquittal on ground of insanity, return to writ of habeas corpus filed on behalf of superintendent of mental hospital stating that psychosis from which petitioner was suffering was in remission since his readmission to hospital on a certain date did not warrant granting of petitioner's unconditional release from hospital. In re Milton T. Rosenfield (D.C.D.C. 1958, 157 F. Supp. 18, remanded on other grounds 262 F. 2d 34, 104 U.S. App. D.C. 322).

Report of commission

Where the examination of accused as to his insanity was made by the Commission of Health at accused's request, and in support of his attempt to make a prima facie showing so as to authorize granting of petition for sanity inquisition after conviction of murder, the court was not required to disregard the Commission's report on theory that to permit its consideration would have the effect of a waiver of privilege upon part of accused. Neely v. United States (1945, 150 F. 2d 977, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 187, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 166, 326 U.S. 768, 90 L. Ed. 463).

Resolution of reasonable doubt

Although patient committed to hospital after having been found not guilty of crime by reason of insanity may have improved materially and appears to be a good prospect for restoration as useful member of society, if abnormal mental condition renders him potentially dangerous, reasonable medical doubts or reasonable judicial doubts are to be resolved in favor of public and in favor of subject's safety. United States v. M. Charnizon (D.C. App. 1967, 232 A. 2d 586).

In ordering conditional release of patient committed to hospital after having been found not guilty of crime by reason of insanity, court must conclude that individual has recovered sufficiently so that under proposed conditions person will not in reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others. Id.

Restored competency

Determination of accused's eligibility to stand trial may be established by a finding of "restored competency" or a finding that he never was incompetent, and hence assuming that a proceeding to set aside original adjudication of incompetency is required, substance of such proceeding was provided by hearing in which hospital psychiatrist testified that accused was not a mental defective and that there was no indication of organic brain injury or mental illness. V. E. Jenkins v. United States (1962, 307 F. 2d 637, 113 U.S. App. D.C. 300).

Review

Review of order revoking conditional release from hospital to which patient had been committed after being found not guilty of robbery by reason of insanity was not precluded by mootness on ground that another conditional release order had been issued, in view of fact that his complete hospital detentions would usually be for relatively brief time, not likely long enough to finish appellate review. F. W. Friend v. United States (1967, 388 F. 2d 579, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Revocation of conditional release

Noncompliance with conditions of release from hospital by patient who had been committed there after having been found not guilty of robbery by reason of insanity was significant but was not the sole or ultimate consideration in determining whether to revoke conditional release; findings as to his mental condition and dangerousness were required. F. W. Friend v. United States (1967, 388 F. 2d 579, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 323).

Order for conditional release of defendant who had been committed to mental hospital on acquittal of offense by reason of insanity could be revoked only by court which granted conditional release and only after full hearing. B. Darnell v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1965, 348 F. 2d 64, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 58).

Right to counsel

Though due process does not absolutely require appointment of counsel in all cases where person is deprived of his liberty because of unsound mind, where person charged with criminal offense of assault was subjected to lunacy inquisition prior to trial, due process required that defendant be represented by counsel in spite of ostensible waiver of that right or privilege. Evans v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 876).

A lunacy inquisition, held before trial to determine if accused is capable of going to trial, is not a criminal proceeding and does not fall within ambit of the Sixth Amendment. Id.

Right to treatment

One involuntarily committed to mental hospital on being acquitted of an offense by reason of insanity has a right to treatment. C. C. Rouse v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 373 F. 2d 451, 125 U.S. App. D.C. 366).

On issue of right to treatment of one involuntarily committed on being acquitted of an offense by reason of insanity, hospital need not show that treatment will cure or improve him but only that there is bona fide effort to do so, and this requires hospital to show that initial and periodic inquiries are made into needs and conditions of patient with view to providing suitable treatment for him, and that the program provided is suited to his particular needs. Id.

On issue of right to treatment of one involuntarily committed to mental hospital on being acquitted of an offense by reason of insanity, effort should be to provide treatment which is adequate in light of present knowledge. Id.

Continuing failure to provide suitable and adequate treatment of one involuntarily committed to mental hospital on being acquitted of an offense by reason of insanity cannot be justified by lack of staff or facilities. Id.

Scope of mandatory commitment

Notwithstanding fact that appeal of denial of petition for writ of habeas corpus by person, who was acquitted by reason of insanity and summarily committed to mental hospital pursuant to mandatory provisions of District of Columbia statute raised substantial questions concerning scope of mandatory commitment and its relationship to the Hospitalization of the Mentally Ill Act, in view of petitioner's unconditional release from hospital while appeal was pending, appeal was dismissed as moot. S. I. Solomon v. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 377 F. 2d 170, 126 U.S. App. D.C. 285).

Scope of review

When the mental patient is seeking complete release from confinement, the scope of judicial review of hospital administrator's decision is broader and the function of the hearing court is not simply to review the hospital's decision for unreasonableness, but rather itself to decide ultimate the question of whether the present status of the patient is such that continued confinement is justifiable. D. A. Dixon v. L. Jacobs, Sup't etc. (1970, 427 F. 2d 589, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 319).

That petitioner eloped from hospital, to which she had been committed, after district court had stayed its order of release in habeas corpus proceeding did not render moot government's appeal, inasmuch as district court had jurisdiction over petitioner at time of its order. D. C. Cameron, Sup't etc. v. C. Mullen etc. (1967, 387 F. 2d 193, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 235).

Appellate function of Court of Appeals was to act upon propriety of decision of district court issuing writ of habeas corpus and ordering release of petitioner committed to hospital, even though petitioner had eloped from hospital after district court had stayed its order of release. Id.

As long as there was outstanding an order of restraint on liberty of petitioner and as long as her custodians were within jurisdiction of Court of Appeals, habeas corpus case involving propriety of committing petitioner to hospital was not moot, and could not be dismissed on ground that petitioner who had eloped from hospital was not in custody for habeas corpus purposes. Id.

The scope of Court of Appeals' review of process by which criminal sentence is determined is at least broad enough to insure the use of necessary sentencing aids to obtain relevant information. Leach v. United States (1965, 353 F. 2d 451, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 280).

Notwithstanding the plainly unsatisfactory nature of reports concerning mental condition of defendant, because of defendant's refusal to cooperate in any further psychiatric examinations it would be unfair to defendant and perhaps a futile exercise to remand case for a third time, and Court of Appeals affirmed the maximum sentence imposed by trial judge following robbery conviction. Id.

Sentencing procedure

In imposing a statutorily permissible sentence, a sentencing judge has wide discretion which will not ordinarily be disturbed on appeal. Leach v. United States (1965, 353 F. 2d 451, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 280).

Although generally an appellate court will not review sentences that are within the statutory maximum, a sentencing judge should use some of the resources which the Congress has provided in regard to psychiatric evaluation of a prisoner, and should not arbitrarily ignore the data properly obtained thereby in fixing a sentence. W. R. Leach v. United States (1964, 334 F. 2d 945, 118 U.S. App. D.C. 197).

Setting aside verdict

In appropriate case there is duty to set aside verdict of guilty and to direct verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity; though this duty is to be performed with caution because of deference due jury in resolving factual issues. Douglas v. United States (1956, 239 F. 2d 52, 99 U.S. App. D.C. 232).

Speedy trial

Under circumstances, defendant, whose first trial resulted in hung jury and whose judgment of conviction on second trial was vacated, was denied constitutional right to speedy trial where he was not finally tried until 43 months after indictment. C. C. Marshall v. United States (1964, 337 F. 2d 119, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 83).

Sufficiency of return to petition for release

In this case, the court held that the mental hospital's return to habeas corpus petition filed by mental hospital was not sufficient to warrant trial court in denying plenary hearing on patient's mental condition at time of filing of petition. D. A. Dixon v. L. Jacobs, Sup't etc. (1970, 427 F. 2d 589, 138 U.S. App. D.C. 319).

Suspension of proceedings

The sole effect of section 301 et seq. of this title governing procedure in case of insanity of person charged with crime is to suspend the criminal proceedings during the period of insanity but jurisdiction of court continues and when sanity is restored, the case may proceed as if the interregnum had not occurred. Haislip v. United States (1942, 129 F. 2d 53, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 91).

Sole effect of this section providing for mental examination of person charged with criminal offense before trial is, in proper case, to suspend criminal proceedings during period of insanity. Evans v. United States (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 876).

Temporary leave

Where hospital authorities have decided that a patient committed to the hospital after acquittal by reason of insanity has reached stage where temporary leave from hospital is necessary and proper, authorities should certify that fact to District Court and obtain an appropriate order. Hough v. United States (1959, 271 F. 2d 458, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 192).

Unconstitutional punishment

Defendant committed to hospital pursuant to statute after being found not guilty by reason of insanity on charge of second-degree murder who was not being detained solely for administration of tranquilizing drug which might have been administered outside hospital and who was receiving other forms of therapy was not being unconstitutionally punished. L. W. Collins v. D. C.

Cameron, Sup't etc. (1967, 377 F. 2d 945, 126 U.S. App. D.C. 306).

Verdict

Under this section providing for commitment to mental institution of persons acquitted of criminal charges by reason of insanity, it is contemplated that a person acquitted on a charge calling for a maximum sentence of 18 months may be confined to mental institution for two, five or ten years or beyond that, and nothing less will fulfill protective and rehabilitative purposes of this section. Ragsdale v. Overholser, Sup't. etc. (C.A.D.C. 1960, 281 F. 2d 943).

A general verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity carried with it a finding that, except for the question as to his sanity, defendant was guilty as charged. Rucker v. United States (1960, 280 F. 2d 623, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 75).

In prosecution for assault with intent to kill and possession of a rifle with intent to use it unlawfully against another, where the court found the defendant not guilty by reason of insanity and it did not appear that defendant actually understood and acquiesced that the question of his guilt was being tried in that it did not appear that he understood and acquiesced in what was being accomplished without witnesses or evidence and he protested promptly a few days after the verdict, the defendant was entitled to a new trial. Id.

It is common knowledge that verdict of not guilty means that prisoner goes free and that verdict of guilty means that he is subject to such punishment as court may impose, but it is not common knowledge that verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity means that he will be confined in hospital for mentally ill until superintendent of hospital certifies, and court is satisfied, that he has recovered his sanity. Lyles v. United States (1958, 254 F. 2d 725, 103 U.S. App. D.C. 22, certiorari denied 78 S. Ct. 997, 356 U.S. 961, 2 L. Ed. 2d 1067).

Verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity means that defendant will be confined in hospital for mentally ill until superintendent of hospital certifies, and court is satisfied, that defendant has recovered his sanity and will not in reasonable future be dangerous to himself or others. Id.

Instruction that if defendant is found not guilty on ground of insanity, it then becomes duty of court to commit him to hospital, where he will remain until he is cured, and it is deemed safe to release him, and that when such time arrives, he will be released and will suffer no further consequences from his offense, was not reversibly erroneous. Id.

Whenever defense of insanity is fairly raised, trial judge should instruct jury as to legal meaning of verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity. Id.

Where accused was found to be of unsound mind and was committed to hospital, the verdict of insanity spoke as of the date thereof and was a legal determination that accused was not then mentally qualified to stand trial but when he was restored to sanity, certificate of hospital superintendent to that effect removed the previous bar. Haislip v. United States (1942, 129 F. 2d 53, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 91).

Verdict of insanity of accused given as result of lunacy inquisition spoke as of that date and was legal determination that defendant was not then mentally qualified to stand trial. Evans v. United States (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 83 A. 2d 876).

Waiver of competency hearing

Where conviction was reversed because of error relating to issue of insanity, although newly appointed counsel at second competency hearing agreed to finding of defendant's competency, in view of nature of testimony adduced at prior hearing, defendant's previous history with respect to competency to stand trial and insanity and fact that his counsel apparently did not have benefit of transcript of first hearing, a full hearing was required. T. E. Blunt v. United States (1967, 389 F. 2d 545, 128 U.S. App. D.C. 375).

Fact that neither defendant nor government objected at trial to court's acceptance of hospital certification of competency without holding a hearing could not be viewed as waiver by defendant of his rights, but it did authorize trial court in its discretion to proceed with trial without a competency hearing. C. Heard, Jr. v. United States (1967, 263 F. Supp. 613).

§ 24-302. Commitment of mentally ill person while serving sentence.

Any person while serving sentence of any court of the District of Columbia for crime, in a District of Columbia penal institution, and who, in the opinion of the Director of the Department of Corrections of the District of Columbia, is mentally ill, shall be referred by such Director to the psychiatrist functioning under section 24-106, and if such psychiatrist certifies that the person is mentally ill, this shall be sufficient to authorize the Director to transfer such person to a hospital for the mentally ill to receive care and treatment during the continuance of his mental illness. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1340, ch. 854, § 928; Aug. 9, 1955, 69 Stat. 611, ch. 673, § 2.)

AMENDMENT

1955—Act Aug. 9, 1955, amended section generally. Prior to amendment, section read as follows: "Any person becoming insane while undergoing a sentence of any court of the District of Columbia for crime may, in like manner, be committed to said hospital for the insane, by order of the Secretary of the Interior, to receive the same treatment as other patients during the continuance of his disorder."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general

The fact that conviction is affirmed does not foreclose possibility of further inquiry whether sentence should be served in penitentiary or in mental hospital, since any prisoner found to be mentally ill may be transferred to such a hospital. D. O. Williams v. United States (1963, 312 F. 2d 862, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 135).

If accused who pleads guilty is found to be in need of psychiatric assistance, he may be transferred to hospital for mentally ill following sentence. F. C. Lynch v. W. Overholser, Sup't etc. (1962, 369 U.S. 705, 82 S. Ct. 1063, rev'g 288 F. 2d 388).

The community is not without means of protecting itself if at time that a prisoner's sentence ends he is found to be a sexual psychopath, or to be insane or mentally incompetent. Carter v. United States (1960, 283 F. 2d 200, 108 U.S. App. D.C. 405).

The existence of possibilities to protect society from, and to treat, prisoner convicted of sodomy, or other sexual crimes, in the event he is found to be a sexual psychopath, or insane, of unsound mind or otherwise defective during imprisonment or at time his sentence ends, does not relieve bench and bar of responsibility of endeavoring to reach at the earliest possible stage, ideally prior to trial and sentence, the approach to a particular case which appears to be most just and appropriate, having regard to the individual's mental condition, his history, and the possibility of rehabilitating him and restoring him to usefulness in the community. Id.

If prisoner serving sentence on conviction of crime is presently insane or of unsound mind or otherwise defective, prison authorities may and presumably should transfer him to an appropriate institution, so that he may be given treatment for his condition. Id.

Evidence

Where several psychiatrists testified that defendant was a psychopath or sociopath on day of killings and some thought condition a mental disease, evidence was sufficient to raise issue of insanity and require government to disprove beyond a reasonable doubt the claim that crimes were product of mental disease or defect. D. O. Williams v. United States (1963, 312 F. 2d 862, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 135).

Exclusion of conclusory portions of report by psychologist that tests indicated that defendant was suffering from effects of organic damage to central nervous system, even if error, was harmless where report was cumulative, psychologists had been permitted to testify to results of tests, and some of the psychiatrists who testified based their findings on report. Id.

In murder prosecution, where only three of eleven psychiatrists could say that killings in question were product of defendant's mental disease or defect, evidence was insufficient to raise, as a matter of law, reasonable doubt as to defendant's sanity and conflict in medical testimony became issue for jury. Id.

Motion after sentence

Motion of defendant, made after his entry of plea of guilty to narcotics charge in open court and his sentence therefor, to set aside plea of guilty and to have himself committed to mental hospital to determine his mental competence to understand proceedings against him or to properly assist in his own defense, and affidavit of defendant's wife were insufficient to require court to allow withdrawal of plea of guilty. D. Hopkins v. United States (1963, 318 F. 2d 186, 115 U.S. App. D.C. 215).

Procedural safeguards

Transfer of prisoners to mental hospital requires protective procedures at least similar to those provided in 1964 Civil Commitment Act (now title 21, section 501 et seq., D.C. Code) providing full system of procedural safeguards before finding of mental illness can be made. R. E. Mathews, Jr. v. K. L. Hardy et al. (1969, 420 F. 2d 607, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 39).

Under section 24-302 providing that if director of department of corrections believes prisoner is mentally ill, he can refer prisoner to psychiatrist and, if psychiatrist concurs in that belief, director can then transfer prisoner to mental hospital, before prisoner may be involuntarily transferred he is entitled to judicial hearing, jury trial, and same rights of notice, counsel and cross-examination as are provided for in title 21, section 501 et seq., and same procedures for release from hospital as are embodied in those sections. Id.

Validity of prison officials' policy

The simple fact that the prisoner was back in prison at time case was heard did not relieve court of obligation to appraise validity of prison officials' continuing policy of commitments without hearing to mental institutions, inasmuch as prisoner was still subject to that policy. R. E. Mathews, Jr. v. K. L. Hardy et al. (1969, 420 F. 2d 607, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 39).

§ 24-303. Restoration to sanity—Delivery of person to court—Delivery of person to Director of Department of Corrections.

(a) When any person confined in a hospital for the mentally ill, charged with crime and subject to be tried therefor, shall be found competent to stand trial in the opinion of the superintendent of such hospital, the superintendent shall certify such fact to the clerk of the court in which the indictment, information, or charge is pending, in accordance with the procedure specified in section 24-301, and deliver such person to the court according to its proper precept.

(b) When any person confined in a hospital for the mentally ill while serving sentence shall be restored to mental health within the opinion of the superintendent of the hospital, the superintendent shall certify such fact to the Director of the Department of Corrections of the District of Columbia and such certification shall be sufficient to deliver such person to such Director according to his request. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1340, ch. 854, § 929; Aug. 9, 1955, 69 Stat. 611, ch. 673, § 3.)

AMENDMENT

1955—Act Aug. 9, 1955, amended section generally. Prior to amendment, section read as follows: "When any person confined in the hospital for the insane, charged with crime and subject to be tried therefor or undergoing sentence therefor, shall be restored to sanity the superintendent of the hospital shall give notice thereof to the justice holding the criminal court and deliver him to the court according to its proper precept."

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Certification of sanity

Where accused charged with incest was found by jury to be of unsound mind and was committed to hospital, upon discharge of accused from hospital as cured and in absence of anything showing invalidity of certificate of hospital superintendent, court was required to proceed with trial on the suspended criminal indictment and no further proceedings on the question of sanity was necessary. Haislip v. United States (1942, 129 F. 2d 53, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 91).

Where accused was found to be of unsound mind and was committed to hospital, the verdict of insanity spoke as of the date thereof and was a legal determination that accused was not then mentally qualified to stand trial but when he was restored to sanity, certificate of hospital superintendent to that effect removed the previous bar. Id.

Construction with other laws

Where accused was charged with incest, found to be of unsound mind and committed to hospital and thereafter hospital superintendent certified that accused was not insane, in determining whether trial court had duty to ascertain judicially if superintendent's certificate correctly fixed accused's mental condition, § 21-320 [now repealed] relating to method of inquisition in case of persons believed to be of unsound mind was inapplicable. Haislip v. United States (1942, 129 F. 2d 53, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 91).

Habeas corpus

"But we find in this section nothing that precludes the right of the prisoner to have a judicial inquiry made into the fact of restoration to sanity," and he may apply for a habeas corpus in the event that the superintendent refuses to certify to his restoration to sanity. Wagner v. White (1912, 38 App. D.C. 554).

In habeas corpus proceeding by petitioner, who had been committed as an insane person pursuant to verdict, in murder prosecution, of not guilty by reason of insanity, evidence sustained determination that petitioner had not been restored to mental health and justified discharge of writ. Orencia v. Overholser (1947, 163 F. 2d 763, 82 U.S. App. D.C. 285).

Jurisdiction of court

1963 robbery conviction was not invalid on ground that, since defendant had been committed to hospital following his 1961 acquittal by reason of insanity, district court was without jurisdiction to try him, in absence of hearing to determine his competency to stand trial in 1963, where prior to both 1961 and 1963 trials defendant was referred to hospital for mental examination resulting, in both instances, in certification by hospital that he was competent to stand trial, and 1963 certification was not objected to by either defendant or government. L.W. Green v. United States (1965, 351 F. 2d 198, 122 U.S. App. D.C. 33).

The sole effect of § 24-301 et seq. is to suspend the criminal proceedings during the period of insanity but jurisdiction of court continues and when sanity is restored, the case may proceed as if the interregnum had not occurred. Haislip v. United States (1942, 129 F. 2d 53, 76 U.S. App. D.C. 91).

Prisoner convicted but not sentenced

This section includes one convicted of crime but not yet sentenced. Ormsby v. United States (C.C.A. 6, 1921, 273 F. 977).

Procedural safeguards

Transfer of prisoners to mental hospital requires protective procedures at least similar to those provided in 1964 Civil Commitment Act (now title 21, section 501 et seq., D.C. Code) providing full system of procedural safeguards before finding of mental illness can be made. R. E. Mathews, Jr. v. K. L. Hardy et al. (1969, 420 F. 2d 607, 137 U.S. App. D.C. 39).

Under section 24-302 providing that if director of department of corrections believes prisoner is mentally ill, he can refer prisoner to psychiatrist and, if psychiatrist concur in that belief, director can then transfer prisoner to mental hospital, before prisoner may be involuntarily transferred he is entitled to judicial hearing, jury trial, and same rights of notice, counsel and cross-examination as are provided for in title 21, section 501 et seq., and same procedures for release from hospital as are embodied in those sections. Id.

SUBCHAPTER I.—PRISONS

- § 24-401. Repealed. Dec. 23, 1963, 77 Stat. 623, Pub. L. 88-241, § 21, effective Jan. 1, 1964.

Section of act Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1341, ch. 854, § 934, designated places of imprisonment, according to length of maximum sentence imposed by the court, with special provisions for cumulative sentences, and designated in which court, as between the District Court and the Municipal Court (now the Superior Court), criminal prosecutions should or might be brought, according to the maximum punishment prescribed for the offense. The provisions are now covered by §§ 11-923 and 24-425. See, also, § 11-502 and 18 U.S.C. § 4082 et seq.

- § 24-402. Sentence of prisoners to jail, reformatory, or penitentiary for more than one year—Jurisdiction of Commissioner over prisoners in reformatory—Transfer of prisoners from penitentiary to reformatory.

Whenever any person has been convicted of crime in any court in the District of Columbia and sentenced to imprisonment for more than one year by the court, the imprisonment during the term for which he may have been sentenced or during the residue of said term may be in some suitable jail or penitentiary or in the reformatory of the District of Columbia; and it shall be sufficient for the court to sentence the defendant to imprisonment in the penitentiary without specifying the particular prison or the reformatory of the District of Columbia and the imprisonment shall be in such penitentiary, jail, or the reformatory of the District of Columbia as the Attorney-General shall from time to time designate: Provided, That the Commissioner of the District of Columbia is vested with jurisdiction over such male and female prisoners as may be designated by the Attorney-General for confinement in the reformatory of the District of Columbia from the time they are delivered into his custody or into the custody of his authorized superintendent, deputy, or deputies, and until such prisoners are released or discharged under due process of law: And provided further, That the residue of the term of imprisonment of any person who has prior to July 1, 1916, been convicted of crime in any court in the District of Columbia and sentenced to imprisonment for more than one year by the court may be in the reformatory of the District of Columbia instead of the penitentiary where such persons may be confined on July 1, 1916, and the Attorney-General, when so requested by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, is authorized to, and he shall, deliver into the custody of the superintendent of said reformatory or his deputy or deputies any such person confined in any penitentiary in pursuance of any judgment of conviction in and sentence by any court in the District of Columbia, and the Commissioner of the District of Columbia is vested with jurisdiction over such prisoners from the time they are delivered into the custody of said superintendent or his duly authorized deputy or deputies, including the time when they are in transit between such penitentiary and the reformatory of the District of Columbia, and during the period they are in such reformatory or until they are released or discharged under due process of law. The Attorney-General shall pay the cost of the maintenance of said prisoners so transferred, said payment to be from appropriations for support of convicts, District of Columbia, in like manner as payments are made for the support of District convicts in federal penitentiaries. Nothing herein contained shall be construed as applying to the National Training School for Boys or the National Training School for Girls. (Sept. 1, 1916, 39 Stat. 711, ch. 433.)

EFFECTIVE DATE

Act Sept. 1, 1916, provided in part that: "The provisions of this paragraph shall take effect on and after July first, nineteen hundred and sixteen."

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS TO COMMISSIONER

See § 401 of Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, eff. Nov. 3, 1967, set out in the appendix to title 1. See also §§ 301 and 503 of the Plan.

CROSS REFERENCE

Place of imprisonment to be designated by Attorney General, see § 24-425.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Constitutional law

Act giving Attorney General power to designate places of confinement for Federal prisoners does not violate Fifth Amendment. Stewart v. Johnston (C.C.A. 9, 1938, 97 F. 2d 548).

Federal institutions

This section impliedly recognizes the fact that District of Columbia prisoners may be incarcerated in Federal institutions. Story v. Rives (1938, 97 F. 2d 182, 68 App. D.C. 325).

Prisoner released on parole by Federal parole board as a matter of discretion but Congress adopted a new procedure of conditional release because it realized that society would be better served if prisoners were subjected to the same supervision as parolees. Id.

Penal or correctional institutions

A sentence to serve a term in a penal institution could not be served in a correctional institution, except under authority given to the Attorney General to transfer prisoners. Wilson v. Aderhold (C.C.A. 5, 1936, 84 F. 2d 806).

Place of confinement

The Attorney General of the United States had the authority to designate an institution located outside of the District of Columbia and beyond the control of local penal officials for service of sentence by one who was convicted in the District of Columbia of a violation of § 22-1504, since the offense punished thereby was an "offense against the United States" within meaning of this section. Beard v. Bennett (1940, 114 F. 2d 578, 72 App. D.C. 269).

Attorney General was duly authorized to designate the prison where a defendant was sentenced in the courts of the District of Columbia to imprisonment exceeding one year, and his designation was in proper form. (Decided under D.C. 1901, § 925). Myers v. Morgan (C.C.A. 8, 1915, 224 F. 413).

Attorney General, under the broad powers conferred upon him, had authority to cause appellee to be placed and held in the Atlanta penitentiary under any general sentence of imprisonment for more than a year, the court could have imposed. Aderhold v. Edwards (C.C.A. 5, 1934, 71 F. 2d 297).

Religious services

Allowing some religious groups to hold religious services at reformatory and jail at public expense while denying that right to another discriminated against prisoner of the other faith in violation of orders of Commissioners of District of Columbia requiring prison officials to make facilities available without regard to race or religion. Wm. T. X. Fulwood v. Clemmer, Director, etc. and Anderson, Acting Supt. etc. (D.C.D.C. 1962, 206 F. Supp. 370).

Regulation and discipline of prisoners convicted of offenses against United States has been committed to prison authorities. Id.

Transfer of prisoners

Transfer of inmates of Atlanta penitentiary who are eligible to parole, to an institution in District of Columbia, can not be required by the courts. Aderhold v. Lee (C.C.A. 5, 1934, 68 F. 2d 824, certiorari denied 54 S. Ct. 718, 292 U.S. 633, 78 L. Ed. 1486).

Attorney General has authority to change the place of confinement from a Federal penitentiary to a local jail, when it is proper to do so, in the exercise of his discretion, and it is not necessary that a prisoner be remanded to the trial court merely for the purpose of having the designation of the jail changed. Cox v. McConnell (C.C.A. 5, 1936, 80 F. 2d 258).

In imposing sentences, courts are restricted to specifying the type of institution in which the prisoner is to be confined and he is committed to the custody of the Attorney General, who designates the place of confinement. and the Attorney General may transfer any prisoner from one institution to another for any reason sufficient to himself. Zerbst v. Kidwell (C.C.A. 5, 1938, 92 F. 2d 756).

Title 18 U.S.C. § 753f (now §§ 4082, 4083) if in any respect inconsistent with this section, is so only to the extent that it broadens the Attorney General's authority so that he may designate a place of confinement other than one of the District of Columbia. Beard v. Bennett (1940, 114 F. 2d 578, 72 App. D.C. 269).

§ 24-403. Transfer of prisoners from jail to workhouse.

The United States District Court for the District of Columbia, Superior Court of the District of Columbia, the Attorney-General, and the superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail, when so requested by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, shall deliver into the custody of the superintendent or the authorized deputy or deputies of said superintendent of the workhouse, male and female prisoners sentenced to confinement in said jail for offenses against the common law or against statutes or ordinances relating to the District of Columbia, and, in the discretion of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, Superior Court of the District of Columbia, and the Attorney-General, male and female prisoners serving sentence in said jail for offenses against the United States, for such work or services as may be necessary, in the discretion of the Commissioner of said District, in connection with the construction, maintenance, and operation of said workhouse, or the prosecution of any other public work at said institution or in the District of Columbia: Provided, That, on the direction of said Commissioner, male and female prisoners confined in any existing workhouse existing on March 2, 1911, or in the Washington Asylum and Jail of the District of Columbia shall be delivered into the custody of said superintendent or the authorized deputy or deputies of said superintendent aforesaid, to perform similar work or services to those hereinbefore required of male and female prisoners serving sentences in the District of Columbia Jail: Provided further, That the Commissioner of the District of Columbia is hereby vested with jurisdiction over such male and female prisoners from the time they are so delivered into the custody of said superintendent or the duly authorized deputy or deputies of said superintendent, including the time when such prisoners are in transit between the District of Columbia and the site acquired for such workhouse, and during the period such prisoners are on such site or in the District of Columbia until they are released or discharged under due process of law. (Mar. 2, 1911, 36 Stat. 1002, ch. 192; June 25, 1936, 49 Stat. 1921, ch. 804; June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 991, ch. 646, § 32(b); May 24, 1949, 63 Stat. 107, ch. 139, § 127; July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, title I, § 171, 84 Stat. 590.)

AMENDMENT

1970—Section 171 of Act July 29, 1970, Public Law 91-358, amended section by inserting after "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" each time it appears ", Superior Court of the District of Columbia,".

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1970 AMENDMENT

See note preceding section 11-101.

CHANGE OF NAME

Act June 25, 1936, substituted "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia" for "Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

Act June 25, 1948, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, as amended by act May 24, 1949, substituted "United States District Court for the District of Columbia" for "District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia."

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS TO COMMISSIONER

See § 401 of Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, eff. Nov. 3, 1967, set out in the appendix to title 1. See also §§ 301 and 503 of the Plan.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Habeas corpus

District Court had jurisdiction to issue habeas corpus writ, for petitioner was committed by a court of the District to a jail of the District under the control of an official of the District who in turn was personally within the District and within the jurisdiction of the court Sanders v. Allen (1939, 100 F. 2d 717, 69 App. D.C. 307).

Transfer to workhouse

Provision of this section authorizing transfer to the workhouse by direction of the commissioners was attached by law to the sentence, and had the same effect as if the court, under statutory authority, had expressed in the sentence that the convict might be transferred to the workhouse under order of the commissioners. Whittaker v. Brannan (C.C.A. 4, 1918, 252 F. 556).

§ 24-404. Commutation of fine.

In all cases in the District of Columbia where a defendant is sent to jail or to the workhouse in default of the payment of a fine he shall be released upon the payment of the balance of the fine due by him after crediting thereon as paid an amount equal to the proportion the time thus served by him in the jail or workhouse bears to the whole time he was to serve under the sentence. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1341, ch. 854, § 936.)

§ 24-405. Deduction for good conduct—Discharge.

All persons sentenced to and imprisoned in the jail or in the workhouse of the District of Columbia, and confined there for a term of one month or longer who conduct themselves so that no charge of misconduct shall be sustained against them shall have a deduction upon a sentence of not more than one year of five days for each month; upon a sentence of more than one year and less than three years, six days for each month; upon a sentence of not less than three years and less than five years, seven days for each month; upon a sentence of not less than five years and less than ten years, eight days for each month; and upon a sentence of ten years or more, ten days for each month, and shall be entitled to their discharge so much the earlier upon the certificate of the superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail for those confined in the jail, and upon the certificate of the superintendent of the workhouse for those confined in the workhouse, of their good conduct during their imprisonment. When a prisoner has two or more sentences the aggregate of his several sentences shall be the basis upon which his deduction shall be estimated. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1341, ch. 854, § 937; Mar. 2, 1911, 36 Stat. 1003, ch. 192; June 6, 1940, 54 Stat. 245, ch. 254, § 10.)

CODIFICATION

Act Mar. 2, 1911, combined as one institution, known as the Washington Asylum and Jail, the jail of the District of Columbia and the Washington Asylum, and created the position of Superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail and vested in him the powers theretofore vested in and exercised by the warden of the former jail and the superintendent of the former Washington Asylum.

AMENDMENT

1940—Act June 6, 1940, among other changes, substituted provisions prescribing the maximum deduction for good behavior for persons confined under particular sentences for provisions which authorized a deduction of 5 days for each month, inserted provisions requiring the aggregate of several sentences to be the basis for deduction, and eliminated provisions which required the judge to make a docket entry of the discharge.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Good conduct allowance

The good conduct deduction under the District of Columbia Code does not apply to those sentenced to a penitentiary. Johnson v. Ward, U.S. Marshal (1960, 278 F. 2d 245, 107 U.S. App. D.C. 365).

An allowance on a sentence for good conduct is a privilege and not a vested right. It may be denied as to all cumulative sentences for an infraction of the rules occurring during the service of any of the sentences Aderhold v. Hudson (C.C.A. 5, 1939, 84 F. 2d 559).

§ 24-406. Prisoners in workhouse and reformatory to be returned to and released in District of Columbia.

All inmates of the workhouse and reformatory for the District of Columbia shall be returned to and released in said District on the day of the expiration of sentence. (June 10, 1910, 36 Stat. 464, ch. 282.)

§ 24-407. Jail and Washington Asylum combined.

The jail of the District of Columbia and the Washington Asylum of said District shall be combined as one institution, known as the Washington Asylum and Jail. (Mar. 2, 1911, 36 Stat. 1003, ch. 192.)

§ 24-408. Commitments to Washington Asylum and Jail.

Whenever and wherever authority of law exists to sentence, commit, order committed, or confine any person to or in the jail of the District of Columbia or the Washington Asylum of said District, said authority shall be exercised by sentence, commitment, order of commitment, or confinement to or in said Washington Asylum and Jail. (Mar. 2, 1911, 36 Stat. 1003, ch. 192.)

§ 24-409. Omitted.

CODIFICATION

Section, which consisted of that part of § 6 of act Mar. 16, 1926, 44 Stat. 209, ch. 58, which vested in the Board of Public Welfare (now Department of Human Resources) complete and exclusive management and control of the workhouse at Occoquan, Virginia, the reformatory at Lorton, Virginia, and the Washington Asylum and Jail, has been omitted from this Code as obsolete and superseded by § 24-441 et seq., and Reorganization Order No. 34 of the Board of Commissioners, dated May 28, 1953, as amended, set out in Appendix to title 1, which established a Department of Corrections and placed the administration and control of the above-mentioned institutions under the Department of Corrections. Reorganization Order No. 34 was replaced by Organization Order No. 154, dated Feb. 7, 1967, which was amended and redesignated as Organization Order No. 7, dated Dec. 26, 1967. Organization Orders Nos. 154 and 7 are set out in the Appendix to title 1. See, also, notes under §§ 3-106 and 24-441.

§ 24-410. Detention of United States prisoners in Washington Asylum and Jail.

The Board of Public Welfare is hereby authorized and directed to receive and keep in the Washington Asylum and Jail all prisoners committed thereto for offenses against the United States. (Mar. 2, 1911, 36 Stat. 1003, ch. 192.)

§ 24-411. Superintendent and all other employees—Appointment—Discharge—Supervision of Board of Public Welfare.

Each superintendent shall have the management and control of the institution to which he is appointed and shall be subordinate to the director of public welfare. The superintendent and all other employees of each of the institutions enumerated in this section shall be appointed by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia upon nomination by the Board and shall be subject to discharge by the Commissioner upon recommendation of the Board. (Mar. 16, 1926, 44 Stat. 209, ch. 58, § 7.)

CODIFICATION

The provisions of this section, § 7 of act Mar. 16, 1926, are also set out as § 3-107 of this Code. As set out here, the reference to the two penal institutions in Virginia and the Washington Asylum and Jail, and the reference to "this section", have been substituted for "the institutions enumerated in section 6" and "section 6", respectively. Section 6 of act Mar. 16, 1926, which is set out as § 3-106 of this Code, enumerates a number of nonpenal institutions in addition to the workhouse at Occoquan, Va., the reformatory at Lorton, Va., and the Washington Asylum and Jail. Formerly, § 6 was also set out in this chapter as § 24-409, but only in part, the enumeration being restricted to the three penal institutions mentioned, to conform with the subject matter of this chapter. Section 24-409 has been omitted from this Code as superseded by § 24-441 et seq. and Reorganization Order No. 34, dated May 28, 1953, as amended. Those sections and order also affected said § 3-106, insofar as the latter includes the said three penal institutions in its enumeration of institutions. See, also, notes under § 3-106, former § 24-409, and § 24-441.

Act. Mar. 2, 1911, 36 Stat. 1003, ch. 192, established the office of superintendent of the Washington Asylum and Jail, provided for the appointment of such superintendent by the Commissioners of the District, and provided further that the superintendent should give bond to the District of Columbia for the faithful performance of the duties of his office, "as are now or may hereafter be prescribed", in the penal sum of $5,000, with surety or sureties to be approved by the Commissioners (D.C. Code, 1929 ed., title 6, § 411). Such provisions have been omitted from this section and from this Code as apparently obsolete and superseded by later enactments, such as the provisions of the act of Mar. 16, 1926, set out as this section, of which § 15 repealed acts inconsistent therewith (see note below), and the provisions of act June 28, 1935, 69 Stat. 281, ch. 332, §§ 1-3, as amended (§§ 1-213 to 1-213b of this Code), relating to bonds of officers and employees of the District of Columbia.

Police custody

Where defendant had been duly committed to jail upon other charges and was being legally detained, and defendant was delivered to custody of policemen by jail officials for purpose of going to police headquarters to take a lie detector test, to which defendant had agreed to submit, though jailer exceeded his authority in surrendering defendant, fact that defendant was in temporary care of police at time of making written confession to murder charge did not render confession inadmissible at his trial. Tyler v. United States (1952, 193 F. 2d 24, 90 U.S. App. D.C. 2, certiorari denied 72 S. Ct. 639, 343 U.S. 908, 96 L. Ed. 1326).

The cost of the care and custody of District of Columbia convicts in any federal penitentiary shall be charged against the District of Columbia in quarterly accounts to be rendered by the disbursing officer of said penitentiary; and the amount to be charged against the District of Columbia shall be ascertained by multiplying the average daily number of District of Columbia convicts confined in the penitentiary during the quarter by the per capita cost for all prisoners in such penitentiary for the same quarter but excluding expenses of construction or extraordinary repair of buildings. NOTES TO DECISIONS

Escape from custody of Attorney General

Transfer of physical custody of defendant to a mental hospital from a District of Columbia jail pursuant to statute authorizing director of the Department of Corrections to make such a transfer was not inconsistent with nor exclusive of the legal custody of the Attorney General, and therefore defendant's escape from such hospital was an escape from the "custody of the Attorney General," within the Federal Escape Act. L. A. Frazier v. United States (1964, 339 F. 2d 745, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 246).

Transfer of prisoners

Habeas corpus proceeding by defendant, who alleged that he had been transferred from confinement in Virginia to jail in District of Columbia while petition for appeal in forma pauperis from denial of previous petition for habeas corpus was pending in Court of Appeals for Fourth Circuit in order to hamper such previous habeas corpus proceeding, did not present moot question, and defendant was entitled to hearing at least as to legality of his transfer in view of failure of District of Columbia to controvert defendant's allegations. J. A. Bolden, Jr. v. D. C. Clemmer et al. (1961, 298 F. 2d 306, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 392).

SUBCHAPTER II.—DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS

§ 24-441. Department of Corrections created—Director.

There is created in and for the District of Columbia a Department of Corrections to be in charge of a Director who shall be appointed by the Commissioner of the District of Columbia. (June 27, 1946, 60 Stat. 320, ch. 507, § 1.)

ABOLITION OF DEPARTMENT AND TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

The Department of Corrections was abolished and the functions thereof transferred to the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia by Reorg. Plan No. 5 of 1952. The executive functions of the Board of Commissioners were transferred to the Commissioner of the District of Columbia by § 401 of Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967.

Reorganization Order No. 34 of the Board of Commissioners dated May 28, 1953, and effective June 21, 1953, established under the direction and control of a Commissioner, a Department of Corrections headed by a director. The Department was established to provide for the custody, care, discipline, and instruction of all persons committed to the Workhouse, Lorton Reformatory, Women's Reformatory, and the D.C. Jail. All positions under the previously existing Department of Corrections including the duties, powers, and authorities of all officers and employees were assigned to the new Department of Corrections and the previously existing Department was abolished. Reorganization Order No. 34 was replaced by Organization Order No. 154, dated Feb. 7, 1967, which was amended and redesignated as Organization Order No. 7, dated Dec. 26, 1967.

The Plans and Orders are set out in the Appendix to title 1.

CROSS REFERENCE

Director of Department of Corrections to designate officers of the Department to whom services of a psychiatrist and a psychologist are available, see § 24-106.

§ 24-442. Powers of Department over institutions—Rules and regulations.

Said Department of Corrections under the general direction and supervision of the Commissioner of the District of Columbia shall have charge of the management and regulation of the Workhouse at Occoquan in the State of Virginia, the Reformatory at Lorton in the State of Virginia, and the Washington Asylum and Jail, and be responsible for the safekeeping, care, protection, instruction, and discipline of all persons committed to such institutions. The District of Columbia Council shall have power to promulgate rules and regulations for the government of such institutions and the Department of Corrections with the approval of the Commissioner shall have power to establish and conduct industries, farms, and other activities, to classify the inmates, and to provide for their proper treatment, care, rehabilitation, and reformation. (June 27, 1946, 60 Stat. 320, ch. 507, § 2.)

ABOLITION OF DEPARTMENT AND TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

The Department of Corrections was abolished and the functions thereof transferred to the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia by Reorg. Plan No. 5 of 1952. Section 402(213) of Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, effective November 3, 1967, transferred the regulatory and other functions of the Board of Commissioners, under this section relating to rules and regulations for the government of institutions, to the District of Columbia Council, subject to the right of the Commissioner as provided by section 406 of the Plan. For provisions establishing the District of Columbia Council, see section 201 of the Plan, set out in the appendix to title 1. Section 401 of the Plan transferred all other functions of the Board of Commissioners under this section to the Commissioner of the District of Columbia. See, also, note to § 24-441.

CROSS REFERENCE

Prior management and control, see § 3-106 and note under § 24-415.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Admissibility of statements made to jail employee

Statement defendant gave jail employee, who was questioning defendant for purpose relating to jail's classification and treatment of inmates, was inadmissible, although defendant signed it and had not been advised that it would not be used against him, where, had defendant made inquiry, he would have received promise that his answers would not be used against him. J. W. Killough v. United States (1964, 336 F. 2d 929, 119 U.S. App. D.C. 10).

Discipline of prisoners

Allowing some religious groups to hold religious services at reformatory and jail at public expense while denying that right to another discriminated against prisoner of the other faith in violation of orders of Commissioners of District of Columbia requiring prison officials to make facilities available without regard to race or religion. Wm. T. X. Fulwood v. Clemmer, Director etc. and Anderson, Acting Sup't. etc. (D.C.D.C. 1962, 206 F. Supp. 370).

Regulation and discipline of prisoners convicted of offenses against United States has been committed to prison authorities. Id.

Review of administrator's actions

Actions of prison authorities, including granting or withdrawal of claimed privileges of prisoners, are not reviewable by the court in "mandamus proceeding" in the absence of specific allegations particularly showing a clear breach of duty by prison administrators. White and Childs v. D. L. Clemmer, Director, District of Columbia Department of Corrections et al. (1961, 295 F. 2d 132, 111 U.S. App. D.C. 145).

Federal prisoners' pleadings seeking relief in nature of mandamus because of claimed deprivation of civil rights on account of their religion failed to allege with sufficient particularity a basis for redress by court where prison administration had been committed by statute to prison authorities and no breach of their statutory duty had been shown. Id.

§ 24-443. Board of Public Welfare powers transferred to Department—Officers and employees.

With respect to the said institutions, the Commissioner of the District of Columbia shall succeed to all the powers and authority, and to all the duties and obligations vested in or imposed by law upon the Board of Public Welfare of the District of Columbia. Where powers are vested in or duties are imposed by existing law upon the Director of Public Welfare of the District of Columbia with respect to said institutions, such powers and duties are transferred to and shall be exercised by the Director of the Department of Corrections. ## § 24-521. Purpose.

The purpose of this chapter is to establish a comprehensive program in the District of Columbia for the prevention of alcoholism and the rehabilitation of alcoholics, discourage abuse of alcoholic beverages, and provide for medical, psychiatric, and other scientific treatment of chronic alcoholics; to minimize the deleterious effects of excessive drinking; to reduce the financial burden imposed upon the people of the District of Columbia by the abusive use of alcoholic beverages, as is reflected in accidents, inefficiency of personnel, and absenteeism; and to establish methods of handling intoxication and alcoholism that will benefit the individual involved and more fully protect the public. In order to accomplish this purpose and alleviate intoxication and chronic alcoholism, all public officials in the District of Columbia shall take cognizance of the fact that public intoxication shall be handled as a public health problem rather than as a criminal offense, and that a chronic alcoholic is a sick person who needs, is entitled to, and shall be provided appropriate medical, psychiatric, institutional, advisory, and rehabilitative treatment services of the highest caliber for his illness. #### NOTES TO DECISIONS

Availability of facilities

That facilities contemplated by Act of Congress pertaining to rehabilitation of alcoholics had not been made available did not detract from legal effect of provisions of 1947 Act defining nature of sickness. DeW. Easter v. District of Columbia (1966, 361 F. 2d 50, 124 U.S. App. D.C. 33).

§ 24-524. Procedures for dealing with persons who are found intoxicated in public—Filing of criminal charges against chronic alcoholics—Dealing with intoxicated persons who violate certain laws—Records of detoxification center to be confidential.

(a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (b) of this section, any person who is intoxicated in public—

(1) may be taken or sent to his home or to a public or private health facility, or

(2) if not taken or sent to his home or such facility under paragraph (1), shall be taken to a detoxification center, by the Commissioner. Reasonable measures may be taken to ascertain that public transportation used for such purposes shall be paid for by such person in advance. Any intoxicated person may voluntarily come to a detoxification center for medical attention. The medical officer in charge of a detoxification center shall have the authority to determine whether a person shall be admitted to such center as a patient, or whether he should be referred to another health facility. The medical officer in charge of such center shall have the authority to require any person admitted as a patient under this subsection to remain at such center until he is sober and no longer incapacitated, but in any event no longer than 72 hours after his admission as a patient. If the medical officer concludes that such person should receive treatment at a different facility, he shall arrange for such treatment and for transportation to that facility. A detoxification center may provide medical services to a person who is not admitted as a patient. A patient in a detoxification center shall be encouraged to consent to an intensive diagnosis for alcoholism and to treatment at the inpatient and outpatient facilities authorized in section 24-523(a).

(b) (1) Any person who is taken into custody for violating section 25-128 shall be brought to a detoxification center where he shall either be admitted as a patient or transported by the Commissioner to another appropriate medical facility for treatment. The police officer who took such person into custody for violating such section shall leave a violation notice for such person with the medical officer in charge of the detoxification center. After such person is sober and no longer incapacitated, the medical officer in charge of the detoxification center shall detain him as long as is reasonably necessary to conduct a diagnosis for alcoholism. If such person is diagnosed as a chronic alcoholic the medical officer shall, after a review of such person's record, recommend to the Corporation Counsel whether a criminal charge should be filed against such person for violating such section in order to institute civil commitment proceedings under section 24-527. If such a criminal charge is not filed, no entry relating to such person's arrest for violating such section shall be made on any arrest or other criminal record. If the Corporation Counsel concludes that a criminal charge should be filed, the medical officer in charge of the detoxification center shall deliver to such person the violation notice that had been left with him. If such person is not diagnosed as a chronic alcoholic the medical officer in charge of the detoxification center shall deliver to him the violation notice that had been left with the medical officer and such person shall, after he is released by the center, be handled as in any other criminal case.

(2) Any person who is taken into custody in the District of Columbia for violating any criminal provision applicable in the District of Columbia (other than such section 25-128) and who appears to be intoxicated may be taken by the police to a detoxification center where he may be admitted as a patient for an immediate medical evaluation of his condition. As soon as it is determined that he is not in medical danger he shall be handled by the police as in any other criminal case. If his health is in danger, he may be detained either at the detoxification center or at some other appropriate medical facility until the danger has passed, and he shall then be handled as in any other criminal case. Such security conditions shall be maintained as are commensurate with the seriousness of the offense. In appropriate cases where there is no danger to the safety of any person, the police may leave with the medical officer in charge of the detoxification center a violation notice which shall be delivered to such person when he is released from the detoxification center.

(c) The registration and other records of a detoxification center shall remain confidential, and may be disclosed only to medical personnel for purposes of diagnosis, treatment, and court testimony, to police personnel for purposes of investigation of criminal offenses and complaints against police action, and to authorized personnel for purposes of presentence reports.

(d) The Commissioner shall promptly develop, in cooperation with the police, procedures for taking or sending an intoxicated person to a detoxification center, his residence, or a public or private health facility if no criminal charge is brought against such person. (Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 745, ch. 472, § 4; Aug. 3, 1968, Pub. L. 90-452, § 3(a), 82 Stat. 619.)

The period of such commitment, computed from the date of admission to a detoxification center, shall not exceed (1) 30 days in the case of the first or second such commitment within any 24-month period, or (2) 90 days in the case of the third or subsequent such commitment within any 24-month period.

(B) is charged with a violation of section 25-128 and is acquitted on the ground of chronic alcoholism; or

(C) is convicted of a violation of such section 25-128.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Congressional problem

Defendant's argument that district commissioners had not complied with statute by certifying to court that proper and adequate treatment facilities and personnel were available to carry out alcoholic rehabilitation program was improperly addressed to attention of court, which was wholly without means of solving problem, redress and correction, if need be, lying with Congress for enlargement and improvements of program for rehabilitation of alcoholics. D. Easter v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1965, 209 A. 2d 625; rev'd on other grounds 361 F. 2d 50, 124 U.S. App. D.C. 23).

Discretion of court

Defendant who is determined to be chronic alcoholic may in judge's discretion be committed for treatment or he may be released, but he may not be punished. DeW. Easter v. District of Columbia (1966, 361 F. 2d 50, 124 U.S. App. D.C. 33).

This section which provides that the court may order the defendant committed to a clinic clearly indicates that such commitment is generally a matter of discretion of the court. Peeples v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1950, 75 A. 2d 845).

§ 24-528. Applicability of chapter to chronic alcoholics who have not been determined to be mentally ill.

The provisions of this chapter shall apply to chronic alcoholics who have not been determined to be mentally ill. The handling of a chronic alcoholic who has been determined to be mentally ill shall be governed by the provisions of chapter 5 title 21. (Aug. 4, 1947, 61 Stat. 745, ch. 472, § 8; Aug. 3, 1968, Pub. § 24-534. Liability for cost of treatment—Procedures for determining liability and ability to pay—Waiver of liability, by Commissioner, in certain cases—Actions to recover cost of treatment—Deposit into United States Treasury of sums collected.

(a) (1) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (2), if a person receives care, treatment, or any other services under this chapter—

(A) such person (or his estate), and

(B) such person's father, mother, spouse, or adult children, shall be liable (each according to his ability, as determined by the Commissioner, and in the order listed above) to reimburse the District of Columbia, for all or such part of the actual cost of providing such services, as the Commissioner may require. The liability of any person described in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph shall be determined by the Commissioner after notice to such person that services have been or will be rendered under this chapter and the Commissioner has found that such person is able to reimburse the District of Columbia for all or a part of the cost of providing such services. Such person may not be held liable for the cost of any services rendered more than ninety days prior to the date of issue of such notice. The Commissioner shall determine the ability of the person who received services under this chapter (or his estate) or his father, mother, spouse, or adult children, as the case may be, to reimburse the District of Columbia, by an examination conducted under oath. In any one case the Commissioner may conduct as many examinations as he determines are necessary to ascertain the ability of such person (or his estate) or his relatives to so reimburse the District of Columbia. In the case of a person committed under section 24-527(a), the Commissioner may conduct such examination at any time after a petition for such person's commitment is filed under such section; and in the case of a person committed under section 24-527(b), such examination may be conducted by the Commissioner at any time after the court serves notice of the hearing to be conducted under paragraph (2) of such section. In all other cases the Commissioner may conduct an examination at any time.

(2) Any person described in subparagraph (B) of paragraph (1) who is liable to the District of Columbia under this section may apply to the Commissioner to have such liability waived. The Commissioner may waive such liability if he determines that it would be unreasonable to impose such liability because of the desertion or neglect of such person by the recipient of services under this chapter or because of other factors similarly affecting the relationship between such person and such recipient. The Commissioner shall prescribe procedures for the filing and hearing of such application under this paragraph.

(b) The Commissioner may bring an action against a person made liable under subsection (a) for all or any part of the cost of services provided under this chapter to require such person to satisfy such liability. In such an action the court may issue an order requiring any such person who is a party to such action to satisfy such liability in accordance with such terms as the court may prescribe. Such order may be enforced in the same manner as orders for alimony.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

This chapter is not a criminal statute and when it places a juvenile under jurisdiction of Juvenile Court in an institution for treatment, it does no more than change custody of juvenile under commitment and does not impair Juvenile Court jurisdiction. In re Whisaker (D.C. D.C. 1955, 134 F. Supp. 864).

This chapter providing for commitment of all narcotics addicts to institutions for treatment, except persons charged with a criminal offense, does not impliedly repeal Juvenile Court Act, § 11-901 et seq. [now §§ 11-1501 et seq., 16-2301 et seq.], insofar as jurisdiction over juveniles who are addicted to narcotics is concerned. Id

Juveniles

The intention of Congress was to include juveniles within the operation of this chapter. In re Whisaker (D.C.D.C. 1955, 134 F. Supp. 864).

Under this chapter, court had authority to examine juvenile for purpose of determining whether she should be committed for treatment as a narcotics user, even though juvenile had been previously committed to the Department of Public Welfare by the Juvenile Court. Id.

(b) The term "narcotic drugs" shall have the same meaning as that given to such term by section 4731 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

(c) The term "patient" means any person ordered to appear before the Commissioner, pursuant to the provisions of section 24-603.

(d) The term "Commissioner" means the Commissioner of the District of Columbia, sitting as a Board, or his designated agent or agents. (June 24, 1953, 67 Stat. 77, ch. 149, § 3; July 24, 1956, 70 Stat. 609, ch. 676, title I, § 101; July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, title I, § 170, 84 Stat. 590.)

Defendant, who had used heroin for about 15 years, who ordinarily took three or four shots a day, whose usual dose was three or four capsules, who did not steal to obtain money to buy narcotics, and who did not suffer any serious withdrawal symptoms when committed to hospital after his arrest, was an "addict" within meaning of both the Federal and the D.C. Narcotic Rehabilitation Acts even though he had not gone so far in his drug habits as to lack free will. A. L. Wheeler v. United States (D.C. App. 1971, 276 A. 2d 722).

Juveniles

The intention of Congress was to include juveniles within the operation of this chapter. In re Whisaker (D.C.D.C. 1955, 134 F. Supp. 864).

(b) The Commissioner shall not order any person brought before him if the said person is charged with a criminal offense, whether by indictment, information, or otherwise, or if the said person is under sentence for a criminal offense, whether he is serving the sentence, or is on probation or parole, or has been released on bond pending appeal. ## NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general

This chapter is not a criminal statute and when it places a juvenile under jurisdiction of Juvenile Court in an institution for treatment, it does no more than change custody of juvenile under commitment and does not impair Juvenile Court jurisdiction. In re Whisaker (D.C.D.C. 1955, 134 F. Supp. 864).

§ 24-613. Care and treatment of drug users—Authority of the Surgeon General.

(a) The Surgeon General is authorized to provide for the confinement, care, protection, treatment, and discipline of persons addicted to the use of habit-forming narcotic drugs who are civilly committed to treatment or convicted of offenses against the United States and sentenced to treatment under the Narcotic Addict Rehabilitation Act of 1966, addicts who are committed to the custody of the Attorney General pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Youth Corrections Act, addicts who voluntarily submit themselves for treatment, and addicts and other persons with drug abuse and drug dependence problems convicted of offenses against the United States and who are not sentenced to treatment under the Narcotic Addict Rehabilitation Act of 1966, including persons convicted by general courts-martial and consular courts. Such care and treatment shall be provided at hospitals of the Service especially equipped for the accommodation of such patients or elsewhere where authorized under other provisions of law, and shall be designed to rehabilitate such persons, to restore them to health, and, where necessary, to train them to be self-supporting and self-reliant; but nothing in this section or in sections 257—261a of title 42, United States Code, shall be construed to limit the authority of the Surgeon General under other provisions of law to provide for the conditional release of patients and for aftercare under supervision. In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary shall establish in each hospital and other appropriate medical facility of the Service a treatment and rehabilitation program for drug addicts and other persons with drug abuse and drug dependence problems who are in the area served by such hospital or other facility; except that the requirement of this sentence shall not apply in the case of any such hospital or other facility with respect to which the Secretary determines that there is not sufficient need for such a program in such hospital or other facility.

(b) Upon the admittance to, and departure from, a hospital of the Service of a person who voluntarily submitted himself for treatment pursuant to the provisions of this section, and who at the time of his admittance to such hospital was a resident of the District of Columbia, the Surgeon General shall furnish to the Commissioner of the District of Columbia or his designated agent, the name, address, and such other pertinent information as may be useful in the rehabilitation to society of such person.

(c) The Secretary may enter into agreements with the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, the Secretary of Defense, and the head of any other department or agency of the Government under which agreements hospitals and other appropriate medical facilities of the Service may be used in treatment and rehabilitation programs provided by such department or agency for drug addicts and other persons with drug abuse and other drug dependence problems who are in areas served by such hospitals or other facilities. ### Chapter 7.—INTERSTATE AGREEMENT ON DETAINERS

Sec.

- 24-701. Enactment of Interstate Agreement on Detainers on behalf of the United States and the District of Columbia.
- 24-702. Definitions.
- 24-703. Enforcement of Agreement—Cooperation with party States.
- 24-704. Regulations.
- 24-705. Congressional authority.

§ 24-701. Enactment of Interstate Agreement on Detainers on behalf of the United States and the District of Columbia.

The Interstate Agreement on Detainers is hereby enacted into law and entered into by the United States on its own behalf and on behalf of the District of Columbia with all jurisdictions legally joining in substantially the form set forth below. (Dec. 9, 1970, Pub. L. 91-538, § 2, 84 Stat. 1397.)

"The contracting States solemnly agree that:

"ARTICLE I

"The party States find that charges outstanding against a prisoner, detainers based on untried indictments, informations, or complaints and difficulties in securing speedy trial of persons already incarcerated in other jurisdictions, produce uncertainties which obstruct programs of prisoner treatment and rehabilitation. Accordingly, it is the policy of the party States and the purpose of this agreement to encourage the expeditious and orderly disposition of such charges and determination of the proper status of any and all detainers based on untried indictments, informations, or complaints. The party States also find that proceedings with reference to such charges and detainers, when emanating from another jurisdiction, cannot properly be had in the absence of cooperative procedures. It is the further purpose of this agreement to provide such cooperative procedures.

"ARTICLE II

"As used in this agreement:

"(a) 'State' shall mean a State of the United States; the United States of America; a territory or possession of the United States; the District of Columbia; the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

"(b) 'Sending State' shall mean a State in which a prisoner is incarcerated at the time that he initiates a request for final disposition pursuant to article III hereof or at the time that a request for custody or availability is initiated pursuant to article IV hereof.

"(c) 'Receiving State' shall mean the State in which trial is to be had on an indictment, information, or complaint pursuant to article III or article IV hereof.

"ARTICLE III

"(a) Whenever a person has entered upon a term of imprisonment in a penal or correctional institution of a party State, and whenever during the continuance of the term of imprisonment there is pending in any other party State any untried indictment, information, or complaint on the basis of which a detainer has been lodged against the prisoner, he shall be brought to trial within one hundred and eighty days after he shall have caused to be delivered to the prosecuting officer and the appropriate court of the prosecuting officer's jurisdiction written notice of the place of his imprisonment and his request for a final disposition to be made of the indictment, information, or complaint: Provided, That, for good cause shown in open court, the prisoner or his counsel being present, the court having jurisdiction of the matter may grant any necessary or reasonable continuance. The request of the prisoner shall be accompanied by a certificate of the appropriate official having custody of the prisoner, stating the term of commitment under which the prisoner is being held, the time already served, the time remaining to be served on the sentence, the amount of good time earned, the time of parole eligibility of the prisoner, and any decision of the State parole agency relating to the prisoner.

"(b) The written notice and request for final disposition referred to in paragraph (a) hereof shall be given or sent by the prisoner to the warden, commissioner of corrections, or other official having custody of him, who shall promptly forward it together with the certificate to the appropriate prosecuting official and court by registered or certified mail, return receipt requested.

"(c) The warden, commissioner of corrections, or other official having custody of the prisoner shall promptly inform him of the source and contents of any detainer lodged against him and shall also inform him of his right to make a request for final disposition of the indictment, information, or complaint on which the detainer is based.

"(d) Any request for final disposition made by a prisoner pursuant to paragraph (a) hereof shall operate as a request for final disposition of all untried indictments, informations, or complaints on the basis of which detainees have been lodged against the prisoner from the State to whose prosecuting official the request for final disposition is specifically directed. The warden, commissioner of corrections, or other official having custody of the prisoner shall forthwith notify all appropriate prosecuting officers and courts in the several jurisdictions within the State to which the prisoner's request for final disposition is being sent of the proceeding being initiated by the prisoner. Any notification sent pursuant to this paragraph shall be accompanied by copies of the prisoner's written notice, request, and the certificate. If trial is not had on any indictment, information, or complaint contemplated hereby prior to the return of the prisoner to the original place of imprisonment, such indictment, information, or complaint shall not be of any further force or effect, and the court shall enter an order dismissing the same with prejudice.

"(e) Any request for final disposition made by a prisoner pursuant to paragraph (a) hereof shall also be deemed to be a waiver of extradition with respect to any charge or proceeding contemplated thereby or included therein by reason of paragraph (d) hereof, and a waiver of extradition to the receiving State to serve any sentence there imposed upon him, after completion of his term of imprisonment in the sending State. The request for final disposition shall also constitute a consent by the prisoner to the production of his body in any court where his presence may be required in order to effectuate the purposes of this agreement and a further consent voluntarily to be returned to the original place of imprisonment in accordance with the provisions of this agreement. Nothing in this paragraph shall prevent the imposition of a concurrent sentence if otherwise permitted by law.

"(f) Escape from custody by the prisoner subsequent to his execution of the request for final disposition referred to in paragraph (a) hereof shall void the request.

"ARTICLE IV

"(a) The appropriate officer of the jurisdiction in which an untried indictment, information, or complaint is pending shall be entitled to have a prisoner against whom he has lodged a detainer and who is serving a term of imprisonment in any party State made available in accordance with article V(a) hereof upon presentation of a written request for temporary custody or availability to the appropriate authorities of the State in which the prisoner is incarcerated: Provided, That the court having jurisdiction of such indictment, information, or complaint shall have duly approved, recorded, and transmitted the request: And provided further, That there shall be a period of thirty days after receipt by the appropriate authorities before the request be honored, within which period the Governor of the sending

State may disapprove the request for temporary custody or availability, either upon his own motion or upon motion of the prisoner.

"(b) Upon request of the officer's written request as provided in paragraph (a) hereof, the appropriate authorities having the prisoner in custody shall furnish the officer with a certificate stating the term of commitment under which the prisoner is being held, the time already served, the time remaining to be served on the sentence, the amount of good time earned, the time of parole eligibility of the prisoner, and any decisions of the State parole agency relating to the prisoner. Said authorities simultaneously shall furnish all other officers and appropriate courts in the receiving State who has lodged detainees against the prisoner with similar certificates and with notices informing them of the request for custody or availability and of the reasons therefor.

"(c) In respect of any proceeding made possible by this article, trial shall be commenced within one hundred and twenty days of the arrival of the prisoner in the receiving State, but for good cause shown in open court, the prisoner or his counsel being present, the court having jurisdiction of the matter may grant any necessary or reasonable continuance.

"(d) Nothing contained in this article shall be construed to deprive any prisoner of any right which he may have to contest the legality of his delivery as provided in paragraph (a) hereof, but such delivery may not be opposed or denied on the ground that the executive authority of the sending State has not affirmatively consented to or ordered such delivery.

"(e) If trial is not had on any indictment, information, or complaint contemplated hereby prior to the prisoner's being returned to the original place of imprisonment pursuant to article V(e) hereof, such indictment, information, or complaint shall not be of any further force or effect, and the court shall enter an order dismissing the same with prejudice.

"ARTICLE V

"(a) In response to a request made under article III or article IV hereof, the appropriate authority in a sending State shall offer to deliver temporary custody of such prisoner to the appropriate authority in the State where such indictment, information, or complaint is pending against such person in order that speedy and efficient prosecution may be had. If the request for final disposition is made by the prisoner, the offer of temporary custody shall accompany the written notice provided for in article III of this agreement. In the case of a Federal prisoner, the appropriate authority in the receiving State shall be entitled to temporary custody as provided by this agreement or to the prisoner's presence in Federal custody at the place of trial, whichever custodial arrangement may be approved by the custodian.

"(b) The officer or other representative of a State accepting an offer of temporary custody shall present the following upon demand:

"(1) Proper identification and evidence of his authority to act for the State into whose temporary custody this prisoner is to be given.

"(2) A duly certified copy of the indictment, information, or complaint on the basis of which the detainer has been lodged and on the basis of which the request for temporary custody of the prisoner has been made.

"(c) If the appropriate authority shall refuse or fail to accept temporary custody of said person, or in the event that an action on the indictment, information, or complaint on the basis of which the detainer has been lodged is not brought to trial within the period provided in article III or article IV hereof, the appropriate court of the jurisdiction where the indictment, information, or complaint has been pending shall enter an order dismissing the same with prejudice, and any detainer based thereon shall cease to be of any force or effect.

"(d) The temporary custody referred to in this agreement shall be only for the purpose of permitting prosecution on the charge or charges contained in one or more untried indictments, informations, or complaints which form the basis of the detainer or detainees or for prosecution on any other charge or charges arising out of the same transaction. Except for his attendance at court and while being transported to or from any place at which his presence may be required, the prisoner shall be held in a suitable jail or other facility regularly used for persons awaiting prosecution.

"(e) At the earliest practicable time consonant with the purposes of this agreement, the prisoner shall be returned to the sending State.

"(f) During the continuance of temporary custody or while the prisoner is otherwise being made available for trial as required by this agreement, time being served on the sentence shall continue to run but good time shall be earned by the prisoner only if, and to the extent that, the law and practice of the jurisdiction which imposed the sentence may allow.

"(g) For all purposes other than that for which temporary custody as provided in this agreement is exercised, the prisoner shall be deemed to remain in the custody of and subject to the jurisdiction of the sending State and any escape from temporary custody may be dealt with in the same manner as an escape from the original place of imprisonment or in any other manner permitted by law.

"(h) From the time that a party State receives custody of a prisoner pursuant to this agreement until such prisoner is returned to the territory and custody of the sending State, the State in which the one or more untried indictments, informations, or complaints are pending or in which trial is being had shall be responsible for the prisoner and shall also pay all costs of transporting, caring for, keeping, and returning the prisoner. The provisions of this paragraph shall govern unless the States concerned shall have entered into a supplementary agreement providing for a different allocation of costs and responsibilities as between or among themselves. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to alter or affect any internal relationship among the departments, agencies, and officers of and in the government of a party State, or between a party State and its subdivisions, as to the payment of costs, or responsibilities therefor.

"ARTICLE VI

"(a) In determining the duration and expiration dates of the time periods provided in articles III and IV of this agreement, the running of said time periods shall be tolled whenever and for as long as the prisoner is unable to stand trial, as determined by the court having jurisdiction of the matter.

"(b) No provision of this agreement, and no remedy made available by this agreement shall apply to any person who is adjudged to be mentally ill.

"ARTICLE VII

"Each State party to this agreement shall designate an officer who, acting jointly with like officers of other party States, shall promulgate rules and regulations to carry out more effectively the terms and provisions of this agreement, and who shall provide, within and without the State, information necessary to the effective operation of this agreement.

"ARTICLE VIII

"This agreement shall enter into full force and effect as to a party State when such State has enacted the same into law. A State party to this agreement may withdraw herefrom by enacting a statute repealing the same. However, the withdrawal of any State shall not affect the status of any proceedings already initiated by inmates or by State officers at the time such withdrawal takes effect, nor shall it affect their rights in respect thereof.

"ARTICLE IX

"This agreement shall be liberally construed so as to effectuate its purposes. The provisions of this agreement shall be severable and if any phrase, clause, sentence, or provision of this agreement is declared to be contrary to the constitution of any party State or of the United States or the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstance is held invalid, the validity of the remainder of this agreement and the applicability thereof to any government, agency, person, or circumstance shall not be affected thereby. If this agreement shall be held contrary to the constitution of any State party hereto, the agreement shall remain in full force and effect as to the remaining States and in full force and effect as to the State affected as to all severable matters."

§ 25-103. Definitions.

In the interpretation of this chapter, unless the context indicates a different meaning:

(a) The word "alcohol" means ethyl alcohol, hydrated oxide of ethyl, or spirit of wine, from whatever source or by whatever processes produced.

(b) The word "spirits" means any beverage which contains alcohol obtained by distillation mixed with drinkable water and other substances in solution, including brandy, rum, whisky, cordials, and gin.

(c) The word "wine" means the product of the normal alcoholic fermentation of the juice of fresh, sound, ripe grapes, with the usual cellar treatment and necessary additions to correct defects due to climatic, saccharine and seasonal conditions, including champagne, sparkling, artificially carbonated and fortified wine. No other product obtained by the fermentation of the natural sugar contents of fruits or other agricultural products containing sugar shall be called "wine" unless designated by appropriate prefix descriptions of the fruit or other product from which the same was predominantly produced, or as artificial or imitation wine. Light wines shall mean wines containing 14 per centum or less of alcohol by volume.

(d) The word "beer" means any fermented beverages of any name or description manufactured from malt, wholly or in part, or from any substitute therefor.

(e) The words "alcoholic beverage" or "beverage" include the four varieties of liquor above defined (alcohol, spirits, wine, and beer) and every liquid or solid, patented or not, containing alcohol, spirits, wine, or beer and capable of being consumed by a human being. Any liquid or solid containing more than one of the four varieties above defined is considered as belonging to that variety which has the higher percentage of alcohol, according to the order in which they are above defined, except as provided in subsection (c) hereof. The provisions of this section and of this chapter shall not apply to any liquid or solid containing less than one half of 1 per centum of alcohol by volume, nor shall anything contained in this chapter be construed as affecting the manufacture of apple cider or the sale thereof.

the same building or in connecting buildings, and such building or buildings, structure or structures being provided with such adequate kitchen and dining-room equipment and capacity and having employed therein such number and kinds of employees for preparing, cooking, and serving meals for its guests as shall satisfy the Board that such dining room is intended for use primarily as a place for preparing, cooking, and serving meals and that the chief source of revenue to be derived from the operation of such dining room shall be from the preparation, cooking, and serving of meals and not from the sale of beverages. No such dining room shall be considered suitable if any business is conducted therein other than the preparation, cooking, and serving of meals, except such a business as is incidental to a bona fide dining room.

(Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat.

319, ch. 4, § 3; Aug. 27, 1935, 49 Stat. 897, ch. 756, § 1; Dec. 8, 1970, Pub. L. 91-535, § 1, 84 Stat. 1393.)

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Barroom

A barroom is a place in which intoxicating liquors are sold to be drunk on the premises. Army & Navy Club v. District of Columbia (1896, 8 App. D.C. 544).

Evidence

In prosecution for keeping for sale and selling alcoholic beverages without license, testimony of officers that from their experience in tasting and smelling liquor, it was their conclusion that liquid purchased at club was liquor, and that they tasted liquid and it contained whiskey, was sufficient proof of corpus delicti, notwithstanding failure to prove alcoholic content by chemical analysis. Stagecrafters Club v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 89 A. 2d 876).

Judicial notice

From testimony that officers, from their experience in tasting and smelling liquor, concluded that liquid purchased was liquor, and that they tasted liquid and that it contained whiskey, courts may take judicial notice of alcoholic content of whiskey. Stagecrafters Club v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 89 A. 2d 876).

Hotel

Requirement in District of Columbia licensing regulations that a building must have at least 30 bedrooms in order to be licensed as a hotel was within licensing authority of Commissioners of the District of Columbia. Courembis v. District of Columbia et al. (1951, 193 F. 2d 18, 89 U.S. App. D.C. 372).

Requirement of District of Columbia licensing regulations that a building must have at least 30 bedrooms in order to be licensed as a hotel was not arbitrary. Id.

Where plaintiff's application for building permit showed that he wished to operate a hotel but two weeks before plaintiff got his permit Commissioners of District of Columbia had given public notice of a hearing with regard to proposed new licensing regulations, and a month after he got permit and several months before he completed his alterations, new licensing regulations were adopted providing that a building must have at least 30 bedrooms to be licensed as a hotel, and it did not appear that plaintiff was prevented from continuing to use his 18 bedroom property as before, there was no basis for estoppel against refusal to grant license to operate a hotel. Id.

Regulations, validity of

Under District of Columbia statute imposing a tax on all beer sold and prescribing monthly reports of beer "sold by him during the preceding calendar month", regulations of the Commissioners taxing beer in warehouse and before it is sold were not authorized. American Sales Co. v. District of Columbia (1961, 292 F. 2d 751, 110 U.S. App. D.C. 258).

Review

The question of an association's standing to obtain judicial review of a claim that Alcoholic Beverage Control Board improperly reissued retail liquor license depended primarily upon existence of logical and adequately direct nexus between association's interest and adverse action of opposing party or parties. The Citizens Association of Georgetown v. J. E. Simonson et al. (1968, 403 F. 2d 175, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 152).

In directing Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to consider wishes of persons residing or owning property in neighborhood in issuing licenses, Congress recognized that operation of liquor establishment may trouble its neighbors. Id.

Residents and owners of property within neighborhood of licensed establishment have required nexus to seek judicial review of reissuance of license. Id.

An association which was the authorized spokesman organized to promote interest of its individual members, many of whom resided or owned property within neighborhood of licensed liquor establishment, had standing to seek judicial review of reissuance of license. Id.

§ 25-104. Alcoholic Beverage Control Board—Appointment—Term—Employees.

The Commissioner of the District of Columbia shall appoint a Board of three persons, subject to removal by the Commissioner, to be called the "Alcoholic Beverage Control Board," each of the members of which shall be a citizen of the United States and a resident of the District of Columbia for at least three years immediately preceding his appointment and have during that period claimed residence nowhere else. Of the three persons first appointed as members of said Board, one shall be appointed for two years, one for three years and one for four years, and thereafter all appointments shall be for the term of four years, except such appointments as may be made for the remainder of unexpired terms. Vacancies caused by death, resignation, or otherwise shall be filled by the Commissioner only for the unexpired terms. Members shall be eligible for reappointment. The Commissioner shall designate one of the members of the Board to be chairman thereof. The Commissioner is authorized to employ such other personal services, including three additional assistant corporation counsel, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this chapter, and to provide for the expenses of the Board. The salaries of employees, other than members of the Board, shall be fixed in accordance with the provisions of chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of title 5, U.S. Code [relating to the classification of government employees and related matters]. The Commissioner shall include in his annual estimates such amounts as may be required for the salaries and expenses herein authorized. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 321, ch. 4, § 4; Apr. 20, 1948, 62 Stat. 176, ch. 217, § 2; Oct. 28, 1949, 63 Stat. 972, ch. 782, title XI, § 1106(a).)

CODIFICATION

The reference in this section to "chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of title 5, U.S. Code [relating to the classification of government employees and related matters]" was substituted for "the Classification Act of 1949, as amended", on authority of § 7(b) of act Sept. 6, 1966, Pub. L. 89-554, set out in note under § 1-251. The Classification Act of 1949, as amended (Oct. 28, 1949, 63 Stat. 954, ch. 782, as amended), was repealed by act Sept. 6, 1966, 80 Stat. 632, Pub. L. 89-554, § 8(a) (of which § 1 revised and enacted title 5, U.S.C., into law), and is now covered by the provisions of title 5, U.S.C., cited.

AMENDMENTS

1949—Act Oct. 28, 1949, § 1106(a), which was a part of the Classification Act of 1949, and which has since been repealed, substituted "Classification Act of 1949" for "Classification Act of 1923". See codification note above.

1948—Act Apr. 20, 1948, eliminated sentence reading "The salary of each of the members of the Board shall be five thousand dollars per annum" following provision for designation of a chairman.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1948 AMENDMENT

Section 2 of act Apr. 20, 1948, provided in part that the amendment of this section shall be effective when the classifications provided for by section 25-104a shall have been effected.

Plan No. 5, eff. July 1, 1952, 66 Stat. 824.

All functions, duties, powers and authority vested in the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and the chairman thereof on July 1, 1952, the effective date of 1952 Reorg. Order No. 1 of the Board of Commissioners, dated July 1, 1952.

Reorg. Order No. 35 of the Board of Commissioners dated and effective June 16, 1953, established under the direction and control of a Commissioner, an Alcoholic Beverage Control Board consisting of three members appointed by the Board of Commissioners. The order provided that all powers and authorities authorized by statute or by the Board of Commissioners to be exercised by the previously existing Alcoholic Beverage Control Board would thereafter be vested in the new Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, and the members of the previous board were reappointed to the new board. The order abolished the previously existing Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. This order was issued pursuant to 1952 Reorg. Order No. 5.

The executive functions of the Board of Commissioners were transferred to the Commissioner of the District of Columbia by § 401 of Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967.

Commissioner's Order [Organization Action] No. 69-96, dated Mar. 7, 1969, provided in part that the Director of Economic Development is responsible for providing an immediate supervisory channel for the Alcohol Beverage Control Board.

Injunction

Where there was no genuine issue of material fact as to whether alcoholic beverage control board had discriminated against liquor licensee in deciding not to renew his license, suit to enjoin board from putting such decision into effect was properly resolved by summary judgment procedure. Minkoff v. Payne et al. (1954, 210 F. 2d 689, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 123).

§ 25-104a. Classification of positions of members of Board.

The positions of members of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board for the District of Columbia shall be classified in accordance with chapter 51 and subchapter III of chapter 53 of title 5, U.S. Code [relating to the classification of government employees and related matters]. (April 20, 1948, 62 Stat. 176, ch. 217, § 1; Oct. 28, 1949, 63 Stat. 972, ch. 782, title XI, § 1106(a).)

No provision of this section, however, shall prevent any such member or such employee from purchasing, transporting, and keeping in his possession any alcoholic beverage for the personal use of himself or members of his family or guests. The right, power, and jurisdiction to issue, transfer, revoke, and suspend all licenses under this chapter shall be vested solely in the Board, and the action of the Board on any question of fact shall be final and conclusive; except that, in case a license is revoked or is suspended for a period of more than thirty days by the Board, the licensee may, within ten days after the order of revocation, or the order of suspension for a period of more than thirty days is entered, appeal in writing to the Commissioner to review said action of the Board, the hearings on said appeal to be submitted either orally or in writing at the discretion of the Commissioner, and the Commissioner shall not be required to take evidence, either oral, written, or documentary. The decision of the Commissioner on any question of fact involved in such appeal shall be final and conclusive. Pending such appeal, the license shall stand suspended unless the Commissioner shall otherwise order.

Examination of witnesses

In hearing on application for renewal of liquor license, which alcoholic beverage control board refused to renew on ground that applicant was not generally fit and did not have necessary good moral character, which conclusion was based in part upon alleged conspiracy with bootleggers not to make bookkeeping entries required by Internal Revenue Code, applicant's cross-examination of one of the alleged bootleggers, on question of bias, was not so restricted as to constitute lack of procedural due process. Minkoff v. Payne et al. (1954, 210 F. 2d 689, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 123).

Findings of the Board

Evidence was sufficient to support findings of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, in revoking petitioner's class "C" retailer's license, that petitioner allowed licensed premises to be used for an unlawful purpose by permitting consumption of alcoholic beverages at a time when consumption was prohibited, failed to frame its license under glass and post same in a conspicuous place on premises, and failed to superintend in person, or through an approved manager, business for which license was issued. 2447 Good Hope Road, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 513).

Alcoholic Beverage Control Board is authorized to make finding that two liquor stores within 300 feet proximity are inappropriate for particular neighborhood, notwithstanding absence of any formal regulation promulgated by District Commissioners regarding necessary distances between liquor stores. Pollack v. Simonson (1965, 350 F. 2d 740, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 362).

Hearing

Alcoholic Beverage Control Act does not explicitly require hearing before denial of application for transfer of license. Pollack v. Simonson (1965, 350 F. 2d 740, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 362).

Injunction

Where this section provided that decision of Board of Commissioners of District of Columbia on questions of fact on appeal from Alcoholic Beverage Control Board should be final, but order revoking liquor license was upheld by a one to one vote, an injunction would be granted against enforcement of order which would terminate when appeal was reinstated, and after appeal was reinstated the license would stand suspended during time reasonably necessary for commissioners to reach a final decision. Lambros v. Young (1945, 145 F. 2d 341, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 247).

Under circumstances disclosed, including showing that net effect of board's failure to prescribe adequate rules and regulations had been to by-pass wishes of community, plaintiffs were entitled to preliminary injunction against operation of liquor store pending review of board's grant of application for transfer of liquor license. Palisades Citizens Association Inc., et al. v. Weakly et al. (1958, 166 F. Supp. 591, appeal dismissed in part, reversed in part on other grounds, 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Interim affirmance

The effect of a one to one vote of Board of Commissioners of District of Columbia upholding order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board revoking liquor license is an interim affirmance of the Board which suspends the license until final decision of the commissioners. Lambros v. Young (1945, 145 F. 2d 341, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 247).

Mandamus

In action in the nature of a petition for writ of mandamus to require Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to issue a retailers' Class "C" license to petitioning restaurant, question before the court was whether action of the Board was based upon substantial evidence, and if it was, mandamus would not lie, whereas if it was not, next question was whether action of Board was arbitrary or capricious. Clore Restaurant v. Payne (D.C.D.C. 1947, 72 F. Supp. 677).

Mutually exclusive applicants

Where it was not suggested at separate hearings on applications to transfer liquor licenses that the two applications were mutually exclusive and no formal regulation required that liquor stores be situated more than 300 feet apart, denial of plaintiffs' application on sole ground that license of other applicant had been issued for location less than 300 feet from plaintiffs' proposed location was improper for failure of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to give proper notice to plaintiffs that it considered applications mutually exclusive. Pollack v. Simonson (1965, 350 F. 2d 740, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 362).

Alcoholic Beverage Control Board may, in its discretion, hold formal comparative hearing, or follow some other procedure to inform itself in choosing between mutually exclusive applicants. Id.

Procedure for renewal of license

In application for renewal of liquor license, board properly followed procedure applicable to application for license in first instance, rather than that prescribed for revocation or suspension of license already issued. Minkoff v. Payne et al. (1954, 210 F. 2d 689, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 123).

Questions of fact

Under this section governing appeal to Board of Commissioners of District of Columbia from Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, provision that decision of commissioners on questions of fact should be final means that the Board of Commissioners must actually make a decision. Lambros v. Young (1945, 145 F. 2d 341, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 247).

A one to one vote of Board of Commissioners of District of Columbia upholding order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board revoking liquor license did not constitute a "decision of fact" within this section providing that decision of commissioners on question of fact should be final. Id.

Renewal

Under regulation of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board that no license shall be issued to any person unless he is holder of a certificate of occupancy issued under authority of Zoning Act, where a temporary certificate of occupancy had been issued to license applicant under equity powers of United States District Court, not under authority of Zoning Act, issuance of temporary certificate of occupancy did not allow reissuance of retailer's class "C" liquor license for a restaurant and lounge on the property. B. W. Boley v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 292 A. 2d 807).

Review—Administrative

Decision of alcoholic beverage control board rejecting application for renewal of liquor license was not reviewable by commissioners of the District of Columbia. Minkoff v. Payne et al. (1954, 210 F. 2d 689, 93 U.S. App. D.C. 123).

Judicial

Notwithstanding claim of citizens association that the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board erred in not conditioning reissuance of a Class "C" liquor license to restaurant on restoration of valet parking service, findings of the Board that there were 20 parking spaces behind building which could be used by customers, that no complaints had ever been received with respect to adequacy of such facilities, and that there was not enough business to justify keeping an employee for purpose of parking customers' vehicles were supported by substantial evidence, and the Board's ultimate decision to reissue license to restaurant is within the scope of its statutory discretion. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1971, 280 A. 2d 309).

Since separate suspensions of liquor license for 21 days in the first case and 17 days in the second case were not strictly for separate acts constituting violations on separate days but for a continuous course of conduct, and investigation in both cases was completed 30 days before hearing in first case, the two cases should have been treated as one case and the licensee was entitled to review of suspension by commissioners on theory that license was suspended for period of more than 30 days. James Bakalis & Nickie Bakalis, Inc. v. J. R. Simonson et al. (1970, 434 F. 2d 515, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 241).

Under this section and sec. 1-1510, the findings of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board of District of Columbia can be overturned by District of Columbia Court of Appeals upon review only if they are without substantial evidence to support them. Sophia's Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1970, 268 A. 2d 799).

Right of review in liquor license case was not restricted to owners of stores immediately adjacent to licensed premises nor to unsuccessful applicants, and property owners who had taken an active interest at hearing and had presented the "wishes of the neighborhood" were entitled to seek judicial review under District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act. Palisades Citizens Association Inc., et al. v. Weakly et al. (D.C.D.C. 1958, 166 F. Supp. 591, appeal dismissed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Where the ruling of the majority of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board denying application for a retailers' Class "C" license is based upon sound legal principles and upon substantial evidence, the federal court would not be justified in interfering, but if there is no substantial evidence upon which to predicate a rejection, the action of the Board is subject to judicial review. Glore Restaurant v. Payne (D.C.D.C. 1947, 72 F. Supp. 677).

Suspension

While license of any person appealing from order of Board revoking license is suspended until final decision of Board of Commissioners, the commissioners have no right to cause suspension of license to continue indefinitely by arbitrarily refusing to decide issue of fact. Lambros v. Young (1945, 145 F. 2d 341, 79 U.S. App. D.C. 247).

§ 25-107. Powers of Council—Rules and regulations—Licenses.

The District of Columbia Council is hereby authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations not inconsistent with this chapter as it may deem necessary to carry out the purposes thereof and to control and regulate the manufacture, sale, keeping for sale, offer for sale, solicitation of orders for sale, importation, exportation, and transportation of alcoholic beverages in the District of Columbia for the protection of the public health, comfort, safety, and morals, and the Council is further authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations not inconsistent with this chapter as it may deem necessary to properly and adequately control the consumption of alcoholic beverages on premises licensed under paragraph (1) of section 25-111, with specific authority to prescribe the hours during which alcoholic beverages may be consumed on such premises.

The District of Columbia Council shall have authority to make rules and regulations for the issuance, transfer, and revocation of licenses; to facilitate and insure the collection of taxes; to govern the operation of the business of licensees, with full power and authority to prescribe the terms and conditions under which alcoholic beverages may be sold by each class of licensees; to forbid the issuance of licenses for manufacture, sale, or storage of alcoholic beverages in such localities in, and such sections and portions of, the District of Columbia as the Council may deem proper in the public interest; to limit the number of licenses of each class to be issued in the District of Columbia and to limit the number of licenses of each class in any locality in, or sections or portions of, the District of Columbia as the Council may deem proper in the public interest; to forbid the issuance of licenses for businesses conducted on such premises as the Council, in the public interest, may deem inappropriate; to forbid the issuance of any class or classes of licenses for businesses established subsequent to January 24, 1934 near or around schools, colleges, universities, churches, or public institutions; to prescribe the hours during which alcoholic beverages may be sold; and to prohibit the sale of any or all alcoholic beverages on such days as the Council determines necessary in the public interest. Notwithstanding any other provisions of this chapter, the Commissioner shall not authorize the sale by any licensee, other than the holder of a retailer's license, class E, of any beverages on the day of the presidential election in the District of Columbia during the hours when the polls are open, and any such sales are hereby prohibited.

The powers and authorities expressly enumerated are to be construed as in addition to, and not by way of limitation of, the general powers herein granted. Different regulations may be prescribed for the different classes of licenses, for the different classes of beverages, and for different localities in or sections or portions of the District of Columbia.

Any regulations promulgated hereunder shall become effective five days after being published in any daily newspaper of general circulation in the District of Columbia. Such regulations may be altered or amended from time to time as the Council may deem desirable. The Commissioner shall also have authority in any time of public emergency, without previous notice of advertisement, to prohibit the sale of any or all beverages during the period of such emergency. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 322, ch. 4, § 7; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 102, ch. 159, § 404(a); Oct. 4, 1961, 75 Stat. 820, Pub. L. 87-389, § 3; Aug. 2, 1968, Pub. L. 90-450, title IV, § 403, 82 Stat. 616; Sept. 22, 1970, Pub. L. 91-405, title II, § 204(f), 84 Stat. 853; Jan. 5, 1971, Pub. L. 91-650, title VII, § 706, 84 Stat. 1940.)

AMENDMENTS

1971—Section 706 of Act Jan. 5, 1971, Pub. L. 91-650, amended the second sentence in the second paragraph by striking out "any election" and inserting in lieu thereof "the presidential election".

1970—Section 204(f) of Act Sept. 22, 1970, Pub. L. 91-405, amended the second sentence in the second paragraph by striking out "the presidential election" and inserting in lieu thereof "any election".

1968—Section 403, Pub. L. 90-450, amended the first sentence of the second paragraph generally. The amendment transferred the authority to make rules and regulations to the District Council, eliminated the provisions relating to the sale of beverages on Sundays, and gave the Council the authority "to prohibit the sale of any or all alcoholic beverages on such days as the Council determines necessary in the public interest."

1961—Section 3, act Oct. 4, 1961, amended the second paragraph by inserting at the end of the first sentence the following new sentence: "Notwithstanding any other provision of this chapter, the Commissioners shall not authorize the sale by any licensee, other than the holder of a retailer's license, class E, of any beverages on the day of the presidential election in the District of Columbia during the hours when the polls are open, and any such sales are hereby prohibited."

1953—Act June 29, 1953, amended section by adding after the word "morals" in the first paragraph the provision authorizing the Commissioners to prescribe rules and regulations necessary to control consumption of alcoholic beverages on licensed premises.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1970 AMENDMENT

Amendment of section by Pub. L. 91-405, effective Sept. 22, 1970, see section 206(b) of Pub. L. 91-405, set out as a note to sec. 1-1101.

SEPARABILITY, AUTHORITY OF COMMISSIONER AND COUNCIL, DELEGATION OF FUNCTIONS, AND SAVINGS PROVISIONS OF PUB. L. 91-650

See secs. 801-803 of act Jan. 5, 1971, Pub. L. 91-650, set out as a note under § 47-2501a.

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS TO COMMISSIONER AND COUNCIL

Section 402(215) of Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, effective November 3, 1967, transferred the function of the Board of Commissioners of prescribing, making, altering, and amending rules and regulations under this section, to the District of Columbia Council, subject to the right of the Commissioner as provided by section 406 of the Plan. For provisions establishing the District of Columbia Council, see section 201 of the Plan, set out in the appendix to title 1. Section 401 of the Plan transferred all other functions of the Board of Commissioners under this section to the Commissioner of the District of Columbia.

Authority of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board

Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has authority to limit number of Class "C" licenses notwithstanding that the action might unintentionally and incidentally limit given area to existing licenses so long as Board exercises bona fide judgment. Palace Restaurant, Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 561).

Construction of regulations

Literal application of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board regulation precluding relicensing of any given premises for one year whenever an earlier application as to such premises has been denied would not comport with due process as to subsequent unrelated applicant, and petitioning citizens association that sought to prevent issuance of any Class C license could not rely on regulation to prevent relicensing of subject premises for one year as to any other qualified applicant. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1971, 279 A. 2d 514).

Double jeopardy

Convictions for violations of this act and the Liquor Taxing Act of 1934, did not place defendant in double jeopardy, the evidence required in the two cases being different. Sims v. Rives (1936, 84 F. 2d 871, 66 App. D.C. 24, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 960, 298 U.S. 682, 80 L. Ed. 1402).

Regulations, validity of

Section of the District of Columbia Code giving Commissioners authority to make regulations for issuance of liquor licenses and to forbid issuance of liquor licenses for businesses established subsequent to January 24, 1934, near or around schools, precluded promulgation of regulations forbidding liquor licenses to businesses established prior to January 24, 1934, because they are near schools, and prohibitory regulation was inapplicable to a restaurant business established in 1928. H. S. Hensel et al. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Board et al. (1963, 321 F. 2d 754, 116 U.S. App. D.C. 141).

Regulation of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board prescribing the terms upon which credit may be extended to liquor retailer by wholesalers and manufacturers was valid. Press Liquors, Inc. v. F. E. Weakley, Chairman etc. (1963, 317 F. 2d 135, 115 U.S. App. D.C. 71).

Under District of Columbia statute imposing a tax on all beer sold and prescribing monthly reports of beer "sold by him during the preceding calendar month", regulation of the Commissioners taxing beer in warehouse and before it is sold were not authorized. American Sales Co. v. District of Columbia (1961, 292 F. 2d 751, 110 U.S. App. D.C. 258).

§ 25-108. Alcohol for nonbeverage purposes not affected—Penalty for unlawful sales.

No provision of this chapter shall apply to alcohol intended for use in the manufacture and sale of any of the following when they are unfit for beverage purposes, namely:

(a) Denatured alcohol produced and used pursuant to Acts of Congress and regulations promulgated thereunder;

(b) Patent, proprietary, medicinal, pharmaceutical, antiseptic, and toilet preparations;

(c) Flavoring extracts, syrups, and food products;

(d) Scientific, chemical, mechanical, and industrial products.

Any person who shall knowingly sell any of the products enumerated in paragraphs (a), (b), (c), or (d) for beverage purposes, or who shall sell any of the same under circumstances from which he might reasonably deduce the intention of the purchaser to use them for such purposes, shall be subject to the penalties provided for in section 25-132. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 323, ch. 4, § 8.)

§ 25-109. Sale without license prohibited—Exceptions.

(a) No individual, partnership, association, or corporation shall, within the District of Columbia, manufacture for sale, keep for sale, or sell any alcoholic beverage without having first obtained a license under this chapter for such manufacture or sale, except as provided in section 25-131.

It shall be unlawful for any person operating any premises where food, nonalcoholic beverages, or entertainment are sold or provided for compensation, and where facilities are especially provided and service is rendered for the consumption of alcoholic beverages, who does not possess a license under this chapter, to permit the consumption of such alcoholic beverages on such premises.

(b) No individual shall, within the District of Columbia, offer for sale or solicit any order for the sale of any alcoholic beverage, irrespective of whether such sale is to be made within or without the District of Columbia, unless such individual has first obtained a license of the character described in section 25-111 (k).

Nothing in this subsection shall apply to any offer for sale or solicitation made upon the premises designated in the license of the vendor.

No individual shall within the District of Columbia offer any beverage for sale to, or solicit orders for the sale of any beverage from, any person not a licensee under this chapter, irrespective of whether such sale is to be made within or without the District of Columbia.

(c) A physician may administer alcoholic beverages to a bona fide patient in cases of actual need when, in the judgment of the physician, the use of alcoholic beverages is necessary.

(d) A dentist who deems it necessary that a bona fide patient being then under treatment by him is in actual need of and should be supplied with alcoholic beverages as a stimulant or restorative, may administer to the patient alcoholic beverages.

(e) A veterinarian who deems it necessary may, in the course of his practice, administer or cause to be administered alcoholic beverages to a dumb animal.

(f) A person in charge of an institution regularly conducted as a hospital or sanatorium for the care of persons in ill health, or as a home devoted exclusively to the care of aged people, may administer or cause to be administered alcoholic beverages to any bona fide patient or inmate of the institution who is in need of the same, either by way of external application or otherwise for emergency medicinal purposes, and may charge for the alcoholic beverages so administered. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 323, ch. 4, § 9; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 102, ch. 159, § 404(b).)

CODIFICATION

As originally enacted, the exception set forth included section 32 of act Jan. 24, 1934, which dealt with manufacturer's permits under the National Prohibition Act, and has been omitted as obsolete.

AMENDMENT

1953—Subsection (a) amended by act June 29, 1953, which added paragraph making unlawful the consumption of alcoholic beverages on unlicensed premises as therein described.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1953 AMENDMENT

Section 404(k) of act of June 29, 1953, provided that "Subsections (b) and (h) of this section [amending this section and section 25-128] shall take effect sixty days after the enactment of the Act [June 29, 1953]."

CROSS REFERENCE

Affidavits of juror

Affidavit in present case does not present facts justifying an exception to the rule that jurors in the federal courts will not be heard for the purpose of impeaching the verdict returned where the facts sought to be shown are such that they essentially inhere in the verdict and only an extreme case will bring about an exception. Edwards v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 68 A. 2d 286).

Argument to jury

No prejudicial error was committed by the prosecuting attorney, who, in his argument to the jury, explained the failure to introduce the marked money by saying "it had not been introduced because it could not be determined which was used for the purchase of the whiskey and which was used for other purposes" and assuming that "other purposes" referred to the purchase of lottery tickets, there was no prejudicial error since there was no testimony in respect of claim that defendants were anywhere connected with the sale of lottery tickets. Edwards v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 68 A. 2d 286).

Arrest, search and seizure

Where police officer purchased whiskey from certain party with marked money in attempt to locate his source of supply, and as purchase was being completed, another officer appeared with warrant for party's arrest, arrested party stated he had purchased the whisky from defendant, and officers searched defendant, found part of the marked money on him, and arrested him, officers had no right to search defendant, and evidence found in such search should have been excluded in prosecution for keeping for sale and selling alcohol beverage without license to do so. Smallwood v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1955, 116 A. 2d 599).

Right to search person incident to lawful arrest is beyond question, but search of body is illegal when purpose of search is to discover grounds as yet unknown for arrest or accusation. Id.

Where defendants were charged with violating statute in the sale of alcoholic beverages, the intervention of Sunday did not prevent a valid execution of the search warrant but the relevancy of the validity of the search warrant was not apparent where under the ruling of the trial court, no evidence seized under the warrant was used in evidence against defendant. Edwards v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1949, 68 A. 2d 286).

Consecutive sentences

Imposition of consecutive 120-day sentences for the keeping of whiskey for sale and selling of whiskey without a license was improper as constituting double punishment for a single offense where defendant had only a single bottle of whiskey which he illegally sold at time of his arrest and there was no proof of a keeping of the whiskey for sale independent of the sale itself. W. Hicks v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1967, 234 A. 2d 801).

Cross-examination

In prosecution for keeping and selling alcoholic beverages without license, defendant, whose counsel elicited police detective's testimony that he did not ask defendant for written statement because he knew from defendant's record that she had been around and would not have given him such a statement in answer to question on cross-examination as to whether reason why witness did not ask for statement was because defendant denied her guilt at all times, was in no position to complain of such testimony as to defendant's record on appeal from judgment on verdict of conviction. Young v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 102 A. 2d 754).

Evidence—Admissibility

Where sole issue determined by convictions of corporate tenant and its officers was sale of liquor on leased premises in violation of statute, judgments of conviction were admissible as prima facie evidence of unlawful use of premises by tenant in subsequent civil suit by tenant. Stagecrafters' Club v. District of Columbia Division of American Legion (D.C.D.C. 1953, 111 F. Supp. 127).

In prosecution for keeping for sale and selling alcoholic beverages without a license, Municipal Court properly permitted police officer, who participated in arrest of defendant, to testify that, when defendant was arrested, defendant complained that the police had arrested him before for selling whiskey, since the statement by the defendant to the police officer was part of the res gestae and admissible though it tended to show the commission of an independent crime. Jackson v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1956, 125 A. 2d 50).

Where police officer under assumed name joined non-profit social club operating "after-hours bottle club" which would not have given him membership card had they known he was police officer and purpose of his mission, but membership was available to anyone who walked up to door and paid membership fee, and officer did not obtain membership card surreptitiously, there was no fraudulent entry or entry by false representation which would warrant suppression of evidence in prosecution for keeping for sale and selling alcoholic beverages without license. Stagecrafters' Club v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 89 A. 2d 876).

— Sufficiency

Evidence sustained conviction for unlicensed keeping for sale and selling of alcoholic beverages. R. L. Baer et al. v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 182 A. 2d 839).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain convictions of keeping for sale and selling alcoholic beverages without a license. G. Williams & S. Stokes v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 167 A. 2d 893).

— Suppression

Where counsel for defendant charged with keeping and selling alcoholic beverages without a license objected to admission of bottles of liquor and marked money on ground search warrant had not been produced in evidence, without moving to suppress during more than two weeks between arraignment and trial, admission of testimony that raiding officers who came upon premises after the first group of officers had made their purchases were there pursuant to a search warrant, was not error. Hoover v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 42 A. 2d 730).

Forfeiture of lease

Landlord's acceptance of rent after tenant's conviction for selling liquor on leased premises without license did not constitute waiver of landlord's right, under lease, to forfeit lease for breach of tenant's covenant that premises would not be used for any unlawful purpose in view of facts that landlord had specifically reserved its right to declare a forfeiture if conviction were affirmed on appeal and that no rent was accepted after affirmation of conviction. Stagecrafters' Club, Inc. v. District of Columbia Division of American Legion (D.C.D.C. 1953, 110 F. Supp. 481, supplemented 111 F. Supp. 127).

Evidence sustained conviction for selling and keeping for sale alcoholic beverages without a license. Turner v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1957, 132 A. 2d 149).

In prosecution for unlicensed sale of alcoholic beverages, evidence established sufficient proof of continuous possession by the Government of the bottled evidence by the Bureau of Internal Revenue so as to justify denial of directed verdict of acquittal though there was no testimony by receiving clerk as to his possession and disposition of the bottles. Kelly v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 102 A. 2d 308).

In prosecution for keeping for sale and selling alcoholic beverages without license, evidence was sufficient to submit case to jury. Stagecrafters' Club v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 89 A. 2d 876).

Instructions

In prosecution for keeping and selling alcoholic beverages without license, instructions to jury that seller's transfer of goods to buyer through means of another person in seller's presence is a sale, in answer to jury's inquiry as to whether accused must have physically delivered merchandise and physically received money therefor from consumer to be considered the seller, was not erroneous as peremptorily directing jury to find defendant guilty nor as misleading or inaccurate. Young v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 102 A. 2d 754).

Joint trial

In prosecution for violations of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Law, defendants were properly charged and tried together since it would be assumed that average jury would not be so bereft of intelligence and discrimination that it would be unable to properly decide if any of the defendants had violated law. Simato et al. v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1954, 108 A. 2d 376).

Motion to quash information

On hearing on motion to quash information charging keeping for sale and selling alcoholic beverages without license, testimony of officers that they bought drinks of whiskey at club was sufficient to warrant denial of motion, apart from allegedly improperly obtained evidence under warrant. Stagecrafters' Club v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 89 A. 2d 876).

Place of committing offense

Failure of government in prosecution for keeping and selling alcoholic beverages without a license, to offer specific proof offenses were committed in District of Columbia, but merely giving location of house by its street number, was not ground for reversal. Hoover v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 42 A. 2d 730).

Separate offenses

In prosecution for keeping and selling alcoholic beverages without a license, the admission of evidence that defendant, who had been identified as person who paid rent for house and one by whose bedside whiskey and marked money were found, had come from an adjoining bedroom into room where liquor was being sold and consumed, and joined in a crap game, was not erroneous as allowing proof of separate offense. Hoover v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1945, 42 A. 2d 730).

Several offenses committed by single act

Usual test to determine if one or two offenses have been committed by a single act is whether each offense requires proof of an additional fact which the other does not. W. Hicks v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1967, 234 A. 2d 801).

Witnesses, competency of

On hearing on motion to quash information charging keeping for sale and selling alcoholic beverages without license, fact that officers who testified that they bought drinks at club were unable to recall from unprompted memory, and that parts of testimony gave conclusions of law, would not justify calling officers legally incompetent. Stagecrafters' Club v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1952, 89 A. 2d 876).

§ 25-110. Licenses—Applications for—To whom granted—Records.

The Board is authorized to issue licenses to individuals, partnerships, or corporations, but not to unincorporated associations, on application duly made therefor, for the manufacture, sale, offer for sale, consumption on premises of clubs where food, nonalcoholic beverages, or entertainment are sold or provided for compensation, or solicitation of orders for sale of alcoholic beverages within the District of Columbia. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 324, ch. 4, § 10; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 103, ch. 159, § 404(c).)

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Mandamus

Rejection by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, of application for a retailers' Class "C" license on ground that area was adequately serviced, was arbitrary and capricious, in absence of any evidence on the point. Clore Restaurant v. Payne (D.C.D.C. 1947, 72 F. Supp. 677).

In action in the nature of a petition for writ of mandamus to require Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to issue a retailers' Class "C" license to petitioning restaurant, question before the court was whether action of the Board was based upon substantial evidence, and if it was, mandamus would not lie, whereas if it was not, next question was whether action of Board was arbitrary or capricious. Id.

Remand

Where statement of chairman of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board indicated that the Board, or some of its members, obtained and considered, and may have relied upon, information from staff investigative reports not made a matter of record in proceeding that culminated in granting of retail class C liquor license, case would be remanded to the Board for further proceedings in which it would be required to enter into the record all information in reports that was relevant and material to statutory criteria for issuance or denial of license and that would be relied upon in any degree by the Board. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 288 A. 2d 666).

Standing

Citizens organization has standing to contest issuance of liquor license and could properly contest Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's actions in matter of meeting its statutory obligations procedurally and substantively, notwithstanding that the association's opposition to license is based fundamentally on its position that area of city is already saturated with establishments having liquor licenses, with attendant problems flowing from that condition. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 288 A. 2d 666).

The question of an association's standing to obtain judicial review of a claim that Alcoholic Beverage Control Board improperly reissued retail liquor license depended primarily upon existence of logical and adequately direct nexus between association's interest and adverse action of opposing party or parties. The Citizens Association of Georgetown v. J. E. Simonson et al. (1968, 403 F. 2d 175, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 152).

In directing Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to consider wishes of persons residing or owning property in neighborhood in issuing licenses, Congress recognized that operation of liquor establishment may trouble its neighbors. Id.

Residents and owners of property within neighborhood of licensed establishment have required nexus to seek judicial review of reissuance of license. Id.

An association which was the authorized spokesman organized to promote interest of its individual members, many of whom resided or owned property within neighborhood of licensed liquor establishment, had standing to seek judicial review of reissuance of license. Id.

§ 25-111a. Appropriation of portion of license fees for rehabilitation of alcoholics.

Six per centum of the annual fees for licenses for the manufacture or sale of alcoholic beverages, except for retailer's license, class E, imposed by section 25-111, is hereby permanently appropriated to carry out the purposes of chapter 5 of Title 24. 1949, 63 Stat. 135, ch. 146, title V, § 504; Aug. 3, 1968, Pub. L. 90-452, § 3(b), 82 Stat. 624.)

AMENDMENTS

1968—Section 3(b), act Aug. 3, 1968, Pub. L. 90-452, amended the source statute, act Aug. 4, 1947, by striking "sec. 14" and inserting in lieu thereof "sec. 16".

1949—Act May 27, 1949, substituted the present language for the previous 10 per centum tax by which license fees, except retailer's license, class E, were increased to carry out the provisions of chapter 5 of title 24.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1968 AMENDMENT

Section 4 of the act of Aug. 3, 1968, Pub. L. 90-452, provided: "The amendments made by section 3 of this act [classified to sections 24-521 to 24-535, repealing section 24-514, and renumbering this section: from 14 to 16] shall take effect on the ninetieth day following the date of its enactment." [Aug. 3, 1968.]

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1949 AMENDMENT

See note under section 25-111.

§ 25-112. Authority of Council to forbid transportation of liquor into District—Permit may be granted.

The District of Columbia Council is hereby authorized in its discretion to require by regulation that no licensee holding a retailer's license, class A, B, C, D, or E, as provided in this chapter, shall transport, or cause to be transported, in any manner whatsoever into the District of Columbia any alcoholic beverage (except the regular stock on hand in a licensed railroad club or dining car or passenger-carrying marine vessel); and said Council is also authorized to permit such importation under a special permit or permits, to be issued by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, upon application by licensee and upon such terms and conditions and in such manner as may be prescribed by the said Council. Plan No. 3 of 1967, effective November 3, 1967, transferred the functions of the Board of Commissioners of requiring by regulation that no licensee holding a retailer's license, Class A, B, C, D, or E shall transport any alcoholic beverage into the District of Columbia, permitting such importation under a special permit or permits, prescribing the terms, conditions, and manner of issuance of such permit or permits, and suspending, amending, revoking, or abolishing any such regulations, permit, or system of permits under this section, to the District of Columbia Council, subject to the right of the Commissioner as provided by section 406 of the Plan. For provisions establishing the District of Columbia Council, see section 201 of Reorganization Plan No. 3 of 1967, set out in the appendix to title 1.

§ 25-113. Holding of license of more than one class forbidden—Definition of "licensee."

(a) The holder of a manufacturer's or wholesaler's license issued hereunder shall not be entitled to hold any other class of license. A person, not licensed hereunder, owning an establishment for the manufacture of beverages located outside the District of Columbia may hold one wholesale license, and shall not be entitled to hold any other license.

(b) No licensee holding a retailer's license, class C or class D, shall, by direct ownership, stock ownership, or interlocking directors, hold, directly or indirectly, any license other than retailer's licenses class C, class D, or class E. No licensee holding a retailer's license class A or class B shall, by direct ownership, stock ownership, or interlocking directors, hold, directly or indirectly, more than one license except retailer's licenses class E. When used in this subsection the word "licensee" shall include any stockholder holding directly or indirectly twenty-five per centum or more of the common stock or any officer of such licensee if such licensee is a corporation. § 25-114. Description in license of premises—Sale limited to premises—Storage not on premises—Expiration of licenses—Monthly licenses—Proportionate fees.

Every license shall particularly describe the place where the rights thereunder are to be exercised, and beverages shall not be manufactured or kept for sale or sold by any licensee except at the place so described in his license: Provided, however, That the holder of a manufacturer's or wholesaler's license, the holder of a retailer's license, class A, or the holder of a retailer's license, class C, and class D, issued for a passenger-carrying marine vessel or club car or a dining car on a railroad, may store beverages, with the consent of the Board, upon premises other than the premises designated in the license. Every annual license shall date from the 1st day of February in each year and expire on the 31st day of January next after its issuance, except as hereinafter provided. Licenses issued at any time after the beginning of the license year shall date from the first day of the month in which the license was issued and end on the last day of the license year above described, and payments shall be made of the proportionate amount of the annual license fee. Every monthly license shall date from the first day of the month in which it is issued and expire on the last day of the month named in the license. Monthly licenses shall not be issued for periods exceeding six months. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 327, ch. 4, § 13; Aug. 27, 1935, 49 Stat. 900, ch. 756, § 8; Dec. 8, 1970, Pub. AMENDMENTS

1970—Section 5 of act Dec. 8, 1970, Pub. L. 91-535, amended the proviso in the first sentence by inserting "the holder of a retailer's license, class A," immediately after "wholesaler's license", and by inserting a comma immediately before "may store beverages".

1935—Act Aug. 27, 1935, inserted "or the holder of a retailer's license, class C, and class D, issued for a passenger-carrying marine vessel or club car or a dining car on a railroad" in the proviso.

§ 25-115. Applications for licenses—Qualification of applicants—Moral character—Citizenship—Prior convictions—Ownership—Interest of manufacturer in retail business—Character of premises—Advertising application—Hearing of protests—Objection of property owners—Removal of bonded liquor from Government warehouses—Penalty.

(a) Any individual, partnership, or corporation desiring a license under this chapter shall file with the Board an application in such form as the Commissioner may prescribe, and such application shall contain such additional information as the Board may require, and (except in the case of an application for a manufacturer's license, retailers license, class E, or solicitor's license) shall contain a statement setting forth the name and address of the true and actual owner of the premises upon which the business to be licensed is to be conducted. Before a license is issued the Board shall satisfy itself:

1. That the applicant, if an individual, or, if a partnership, each of the members of the partnership, or, if a corporation, each of its principal officers and directors, is of good moral character and generally fit for the trust to be in him reposed.

2. That the applicant, if an individual, or, if a partnership, each of the members of the partnership, or, if a corporation, each of its principal officers, is not less than twenty-one years of age, and has not, within five years prior to the filing of such application, been convicted of a misdemeanor under the National Prohibition Act, as amended and supplemented, or, within ten years prior to such filing, been convicted of any felony.

3. That (A) each individual, each member of a partnership, and each principal officer of a corporation (other than a club) is a citizen of the United States, and (B) a majority of the principal officers of a club are citizens of the United States.

4. Except in the case of an application for a solicitor's license, that the applicant is the true and actual owner of the business for which the license is desired, and that he intends to carry on the business authorized by the license for himself and not as the agent of any individual, partnership, association, or corporation, and that he intends to superintend in person the management of the business licensed, or intends to have some other person, to be approved by the Board, manage the business for him, which said manager must possess all of the qualifications required of a licensee hereunder.

5. That in the case of an applicant for a wholesaler's license or a retailer's license (except a retailer's license class E), no manufacturer or wholesaler of beverages other than the applicant (including a stockholder holding 25 per centum or more of the common stock, or an officer of any manufacturer or wholesaler of beverages, if such manufacturer or wholesaler is a corporation), has such a substantial interest, direct or indirect, in the business for which the license is requested, or in the premises in respect of which such license is to be issued, as in the judgment of the Board may tend to influence such licensee to purchase beverages from such manufacturer or wholesaler, and that such business will not be conducted with any money, equipment, furniture, fixtures, or property rented from or loaned or given by any such manufacturer or wholesaler (including such stockholder or officer) or sold by such manufacturer or wholesaler (including such stockholder or officer) to any such licensee for less than the fair market value or upon a conditional sale agreement or chattel trust.

6. That the place for which the license is to be issued is an appropriate one considering the character of the premises, its surroundings, and the wishes of the persons residing or owning property in the neighborhood of the premises for which the license is desired.

(b) Before granting a license under section 25-111(l) or a retailer's license, except a retailer's license class E or class F, the Board shall give notice by advertisement published once a week and for at least two weeks in some newspaper of general circulation published in the District of Columbia. The advertisement so published shall contain the name of the applicant and a description by street and number, or other plain designation, of the particular location for which the license is requested and the class of license desired. Such notice shall state that remonstrants are entitled to be heard before the granting of such licenses and shall name the time and place of such hearing. There shall also be posted by the Board a notice, in a conspicuous place, on the outside of the premises. This notice shall state that remonstrants are entitled to be heard before the granting of such license and shall name the same time and place for such hearing as set out in the public advertisement; and, if remonstrance against the granting of such license is filed, no final action shall be taken by the Board until the remonstrant shall have had an opportunity to be heard, under rules and regulations prescribed by said Board. Any person wilfully removing, obliterating, marring, or defacing said notice shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this chapter. The provisions of this subsection relating to notice by advertisement in some newspaper of general circulation shall not apply to the issuance of a license to a retailer for any place of business if such retailer is the holder of a license of the same class for the same place and if said last-mentioned license is in effect on the date the application for the new license is filed.

(c) Except in the case of a retailer's license class C or class D or a license issued under section 25-111(l) to be issued for a hotel or club or a retailer's license class B or class E, no place for which a license under this chapter has not been issued and in effect on the date the written objections hereinafter provided for are filed, shall be deemed appropriate if the owners of a majority of the real property within a radius of six hundred feet of the boundary lines of the lot or parcel of ground upon which is situated the place for which the license is desired, shall, on a form to be prescribed by the Commissioner filed with the Board, object to the granting of such license. In determining the sufficiency of such objections the owners of all such property not lying within a residential use district as defined in the zoning regulations and shown in the official atlases of the Zoning Commission shall be taken as consenting to the granting of such license, except that the Commissioner shall have power to file objections on behalf of any property lying within such radius owned by the United States or the District of Columbia. This subsection shall be construed as a limitation upon the discretion of the Board in granting a license and not as a limitation upon the discretion of the Board in refusing a license: Provided, however, That none of the provisions of this chapter shall prevent the District of Columbia Council from promulgating regulations to permit the lawful bona fide owners of warehouse receipts for bonded liquors stored in Government warehouses either in the District of Columbia or elsewhere from withdrawing such bonded liquors for personal use on payment to the Collector of Taxes for the District of Columbia, taxes at such rates as provided in this chapter: Provided, That such bona fide holder of such warehouse receipts held legal title to such warehouse receipts prior to the passage of this chapter.

(d) A separate application shall be filed with respect to each place of business, except that a company engaged in interstate commerce may file one application for a license for the operation thereunder of all of its dining, club, and lounge cars operated on railroads within the District of Columbia. The required license fee shall be paid to the collector of taxes and his duplicate receipt shall accompany the application for license. In the event the license is denied the fee shall be returned. Every such application shall be verified by the affidavit of the applicant, if an individual, or by all of the members of a partnership, or by the president or vice president of a corporation. If any false statement is knowingly made in such application, or in any accompanying statement under oath which may be required by the Commissioner or the Board, the person making the same shall be deemed guilty of perjury. The making of a false statement in any such application, or in any such accompanying statement, whether made with or without the knowledge or consent of the applicant, shall, in the discretion of the Board, constitute sufficient cause for the revocation of the license. #### NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general

Rejection by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, of application for a retailers' Class "C" license on ground that area was adequately serviced, was arbitrary and capricious, in absence of any evidence on the point. Glore Restaurant v. Payne (D.C.D.C. 1947, 72 F. Supp. 677).

Administrative procedure

Procedure for entry into record by Alcoholic Beverage Control Board of information in investigative reports that is relevant and material to statutory criteria for issuance or denial of license and that will be relied upon in any degree by Board should be fashioned in recognition of requirement that participants must have an opportunity to rebut and of relative procedural informality of administrative proceeding as contrasted with technical rules of evidence in civil litigation. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 288 A. 2d 666).

It is permissible for the Board to conduct an inspection of area and premises involved in license application, but it should be done before a hearing terminates and counsel are entitled to be present at the viewing. Id.

Facts acquired by personal inspection by the Board should be revealed at hearing so that opportunity may be afforded to meet them by evidence or argument, and knowledge gained from an inspection cannot be made the basis, in whole or in part, for decision unless there appears in the record facts respecting the physical situation disclosed by the inspection. Id.

The Board's inspection of premises of license applicant after conclusion of hearing and in absence of counsel was improper; at reopened hearing upon remand, Board should set forth facts it considers to have been revealed as result of the inspection and should give applicant and citizens association challenging issuance of license the opportunity to address themselves to those facts by evidence or argument. Id.

Authority of Board

Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has authority to limit number of class "C" licenses notwithstanding that the action might unintentionally and incidentally limit given area to existing licenses so long as Board exercises bona fide judgment. Palace Restaurant, Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 561).

Competing applicants

Under statute providing that Alcoholic Beverage Control Board may consider character of premises, its surroundings and wishes of persons residing or owning property in neighborhood in reviewing application for transfer of license, Board, if it finds that two liquor stores within 300 feet proximity are inappropriate for particular neighborhood and must necessarily choose between competing applicants each applicant must be given opportunity to show that his application should be favored so that specific public standards, not unbridled discretion, will control Board's consideration of license application. Pollack v. Simonson (1965, 350 F. 2d 740, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 362).

Construction

Term "satisfy itself" in this section requiring Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to satisfy itself that applicant for license is of good moral character and generally fit, carries with it the requirement that such satisfaction result from substantial, probative evidence of record. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 288 A. 2d 666).

Due process

Fact that the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board based its decision to grant renewal licenses to corporations subject to suspension of the petitioner from any means of actively managing the corporations on a finding that petitioner was not generally fit for the trust in him reposed, rather than that he lacked good moral character as charged, did not deny petitioner due process since the record showed that petitioner contemplated and directed his defense in relation to the unfitness element as well as the moral character element. E. E. Byrd v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 289 A. 2d 877; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 677, 409 U.S. 1075).

Evidence—Substantial

Under statutory requirement that Alcoholic Beverage Control Board satisfy itself that applicant for license is of good moral character and generally fit, the application for license is not substantial evidence on that question. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 288 A. 2d 666).

— Sufficiency

In view of express wishes of neighborhood residents and property owners against granting of liquor license, the court held that the evidence supported the finding of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board that proposed restaurant which could accommodate up to 480 persons, which had indefinite arrangements for off-street parking and which would be located in area containing 6,000 existing liquor service seats was an inappropriate place for issuance of liquor license. Sophia's Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1970, 268 A. 2d 799).

In this case, the evidence supported finding of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board that granting of liquor license to sixty-one seat restaurant that was already in operation, that had lease not contingent upon granting of liquor license, that had provisions for parking and that was operated by owner of another successful restaurant was unlikely to contribute significantly to problems of area. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1970, 268 A. 2d 801).

Factors considered in grant of license

Granting application to transfer liquor license to new location almost immediately around corner from another licensee was not improper on the theory that Board's failure to make finding concerning adequacy of existing liquor retail services in the neighborhood violated Administrative Procedure Act [§ 1-1501 et seq.] or deprived other licensee of equal protection because in other cases the Board had made finding of "adequate service" ground for rejecting license applications, where notice of hearing invited all interested parties to present their views upon criteria enumerated in this section and the Board, under such criteria, found that premises in question qualified as "appropriate." Clark's Liquors, Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1971, 274 A. 2d 414).

Since no notice was given that uniqueness of premises would be an issue of fact at hearing for determination of application for retailer's class "C" license by Alcoholic Beverage Control Board or that such criterion was to be applied to the application, denial of application could not stand and matter required remand for further proceedings. Palace Restaurant, Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 561).

In license transfer case, question is whether wishes of neighborhood and character of premises warrant granting of liquor license for locality; and previous location and history of store are beside the point. Palisades Citizens Association Inc. et al. v. Weakly et al. (D.C.D.C. 1958, 166 F. Supp. 591, appeal dismissed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Findings of fact

Not only an Alcoholic Beverage Control Board finding of moral character and fitness, but any finding required by licensing statute, must be based only on evidence in the public record of the proceeding, and participants in the proceeding must have an opportunity to address themselves to that evidence, otherwise fundamentals of due process are denied. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 288 A. 2d 666).

Good moral character

Under statutory provision that liquor license may be granted only to persons of good moral character or good reputation, an applicant must satisfy the licensing authorities as to his fitness. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 288 A. 2d 666).

Injunction

Under circumstances disclosed, including showing that net effect of board's failure to prescribe adequate rules and regulations had been to by-pass wishes of community, plaintiffs were entitled to preliminary injunction against operation of liquor store pending review of board's grant of application for transfer of liquor license. Palisades Citizens Association Inc. et al. v. Weakly et al. (D.C.D.C. 1958, 166 F. Supp. 591, appeal dismissed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Mandamus

In action in the nature of a petition for writ of mandamus to require Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to issue a retailers' Class "C" license to petitioning restaurant, question before the court was whether action of the Board was based upon substantial evidence, and if it was, mandamus would not lie, whereas if it was not, next question was whether action of Board was arbitrary or capricious. Clore Restaurant v. Payne (D.C.D.C. 1947, 72 F. Supp. 677).

Order

Order of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board granting renewal licenses to five corporations subject to petitioner's suspension from any means of actively managing the corporations pending final disposition of criminal charges against petitioner is sufficiently definite to apprise him of the particular conduct proscribed and is not too vague to be enforceable. E. E. Byrd v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 289 A. 2d 877; cert. denied 93 S. Ct. 677, 409 U.S. 1075).

Parties

Under statute forbidding alcoholic beverage control board of District of Columbia to issue license for new location to operate liquor store if the owners of a majority of the real property within a radius of 600 feet of the place for which the license is desired object to the granting of such license, individuals who own property within 600-foot radius of new location and an association having members who own property within such 600-foot radius had standing to bring action against licensee and members of the board to set aside license for new location. MacArthur Liquors Inc. v. Palisades Citizens Ass'n Inc. et al. (1959, 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Procedural errors

Where owners within 600-foot radius of proposed new location of retail liquor store, objected to granting license for the new location on District of Columbia alcoholic beverage control board's form meant for use in connection with statute requiring board, before granting license, to consider wishes of persons residing or owning property in neighborhood of premises rather than on board's form meant for use in connection with statute forbidding board to issue license for new location if owners of majority of real property within 600-foot radius of new location object, the board should not have refused to correct the owners signing such form but should have either ignored the formal error or allowed it to be corrected. MacArthur Liquors, Inc. v. Palisades Citizens Ass'n Inc et al. (1959, 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Record

Where there was no indication of reliance by licensing authority on any investigative report, there was statement by one of the members of the authority that it would rely only on the public record, and in summary statement of facts accompanying decision to grant license, the authority made reference only to the evidence produced at the hearing, it could not be assumed that the authority improperly considered matters not of record. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 287 A. 2d 87).

If investigative reports are officially noticed by licensing authority or relied on in consideration of application, such reports should be placed in the record and made available to all parties. Id.

Review

The fact that Alcoholic Beverage Control Board granted a liquor license to a restaurant adjacent to location of much larger proposed restaurant did not render denial of a license to the latter arbitrary since qualifications of applicants and character of restaurants were different. Sophia's Inc. v. Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1970, 268 A. 2d 799).

The question of an association's standing to obtain judicial review of a claim that Alcoholic Beverage Control Board improperly reissued retail liquor license depended primarily upon existence of logical and adequately direct nexus between association's interest and adverse action of opposing party or parties. The Citizens Association of Georgetown v. J. E. Simonson et al. (1968, 403 F. 2d 175, 131 U.S. App. D.C. 152).

In directing Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to consider wishes of persons residing or owning property in neighborhood in issuing licenses, Congress recognized that operation of liquor establishment may trouble its neighbors. Id.

Residents and owners of property within neighborhood of licensed establishment have required nexus to seek judicial review of reissuance of license. Id.

An association which was the authorized spokesman organized to promote interest of its individual members, many of whom resided or owned property within neighborhood of licensed liquor establishment, had standing to seek judicial review of reissuance of license. Id.

Right of review in liquor license case was not restricted to owners of stores immediately adjacent to licensed premises nor to unsuccessful applicants, and property owners who had taken an active interest at hearing and had presented the "wishes of the neighborhood" were entitled to seek judicial review under District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act. Palisades Citizens Association Inc. et al. v. Weakly et al. (D.C.D.C. 1958, 166 F. Supp. 591, appeal dismissed in part, reversed in part on other grounds 265 F. 2d 372, 105 U.S. App. D.C. 180).

Standing

Citizens organization has standing to contest issuance of liquor license and could properly contest Alcoholic Beverage Control Board's actions in matter of meeting its statutory obligations procedurally and substantively, notwithstanding that the association's opposition to license is based fundamentally on its position that area of city is already saturated with establishments having liquor licenses, with attendant problems flowing from that condition. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 288 A. 2d 666).

Substantial error

Reference in licensing authority's findings to "token" opposition does not constitute substantial error where citizens association petitioning for review of grant of license offered no evidence and individual objectors did nothing more than note their objections. Citizens Association of Georgetown, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 287 A. 2d 87).

§ 25-116. Issuing licenses in certain districts restricted.

(b) No wholesaler's license shall be issued for any establishment conducted in such residential-use district and no manufacturer's license shall be issued for any establishment conducted in a residential or first commercial-use district as defined in the zoning regulations and shown in the official atlases of the Zoning Commission. Nothing herein contained shall be construed as permitting the establishment of a bottling works in violation of said zoning regulations.

(c) The provisions of subsection (a) of this section shall not apply in any case where an application is made for the issuance or transfer of a retailer's license for a place of business conducted in a residential-use district as defined in the zoning regulations and shown in the official atlases of the Zoning Commission if the zoning of such place of business was changed from a less restricted use to such residential use during a period when a license of the same class for which application is made was in effect at such place of business: Provided, That a license of the same class at such place of business is in effect on the date the application for the new license, or transfer, is filed.

(d) The provisions of subsection (b) of this section shall not apply in any case where an application is made for the issuance or transfer of a wholesaler's or manufacturer's license for a place of business conducted in a residential- or first commercial-use district as defined in the zoning regulations and shown in the official atlases of the Zoning Commission if the zoning of such place of business was changed from a less restricted use to such residential- or first commercial-use during a period when a license of the same class for which application is made was in effect at such place of business: Provided, That a license of the same class at such place of business is in effect on the date the application for the new license, or transfer, is filed.

(e) Nothing contained in this section shall be construed as entitling a licensee to any preferential treatment or be construed as making inapplicable any provision in any other section of this chapter, in any case where an application is made pursuant to this section for the issuance or transfer of a retailer's license for a place of business conducted in a residential-use district, or for the issuance or transfer of a wholesaler's or manufacturer's license for a place of business conducted in a residential- or first commercial-use district, as such districts are defined in the zoning regulations and shown in the official atlases of the Zoning Commission, and the applicant for the issuance or transfer of any of the said licenses is the holder of a similar license for any of the said places of business in effect on the date the application for the new license, or transfer, is filed. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 328, ch. 4, § 15; June 16, 1934, 48 Stat. 974, ch. 552; May 22, 1958, 72 Stat. 132, Pub. L. 85-423, § 1.)

(Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 330, ch. 4, § 16; May 27, 1949, 63 Stat. 135, ch. 146, title V, § 503.)

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Status of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, see notes under section 25-104.

The Office of the Collector of Taxes was abolished and the functions thereof transferred, see note under § 47-301.

§ 25-118. Revocation of license—Causes—Hearing—Discretionary closing for one year.

If during the period for which any license was issued the licensee shall be convicted of any felony, or if any licensee violates any of the provisions of this chapter or any of the rules or regulations promulgated pursuant thereto or fails to superintend in person, or through a manager approved by the Board, the business for which the license was issued, or allows the premises with respect to which the license of such licensee was issued, to be used for any unlawful, disorderly, or immoral purpose, or such licensee otherwise fails to carry out in good faith the provisions of this chapter, the license of said licensee may be revoked or suspended by the Board after the licensee has been given an opportunity to be heard in his defense, subject to review by the Commissioner in case of revocation or in case of suspension for a period of more than thirty days, as herein provided. In case a license issued hereunder shall be revoked or suspended, no part of the license fee shall be returned, and the Board may, in its discretion, subject to review by the Commissioner, as a part of the order of revocation provide that no license shall be granted for the same place for the period of one year next after such revocation, and in case such order shall be made no license shall, during said year, be issued for said place or to a person or persons whose license is so revoked for any other location.

In the event the Board at any time shall order the suspension of any license a notice may be posted by the Board, in a conspicuous place, on the outside of the licensed premises, at or near the main street entrance thereto; which notice shall state that the license theretofore issued to the licensee has been suspended and shall state the time for which said license is suspended, and state that the suspension is ordered because of a violation of this chapter, or of the District of Columbia Council's regulations adopted under authority of this chapter. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 330, ch. 4, § 17; Aug. 27, 1935, 49 Stat. 900, ch. 756, § 9; Aug. 25, 1937, 50 Stat. 803, ch. 766, § 3; Apr. 26, 1950, 64 Stat. 88, ch. 106; Dec. 8, 1970, Pub. L. 91-535, § 3(a), 84 Stat. 1393.)

CODIFICATION

In the last paragraph, reference to the District of Columbia Council was substituted for "Commissioners" on authority of section 25-107 and various other sections of this chapter and section 402(214)-(222) of Reorg. Plan No. 3 of 1967, under which the regulations are prescribed by the Council.

AMENDMENTS

1970—Section 3(a) of act Dec. 8, 1970, Pub. L. 91-535, amended the first sentence by striking out "or knowingly employs in the sale or distribution of beverages any person who has, within five years prior thereto, been convicted of a misdemeanor under the National Prohibition Act, as amended and supplemented, or, within ten years prior thereto, been convicted of any felony."

1950—Act Apr. 26, 1950, inserted the words "during the period for which any license was issued the licensee shall be convicted of any felony, or if" after the word "If" at the beginning of the first sentence of the first paragraph.

1937—Act Aug. 25, 1937, substituted "may" for "shall" in the second par.

1935—Act Aug. 27, 1935, added the words "or suspended" both times they appear and the words "in case of revocation or in case of suspension for a period of more than thirty days" in the first paragraph, and added the second paragraph.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

Word "period," within this section authorizing revocation or suspension of a liquor license if, during period for which license was issued, licensee fails to superintend in person, or through an approved manager, business for which license is issued, means duration of license and not lawful day-to-day business hours. 2447 Good Hope Road, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 513).

Defenses

Licensee could not plead a violation of regulation prohibiting sales after 2:00 A.M. as a defense to statutory violation of failure to superintend business, and since business was ongoing, albeit illegally after hours, without an approved manager in charge, statutory violation was established. 2447 Good Hope Road, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 513).

Delinquent retailer

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board does not have authority to prohibit further purchases by a liquor retailer who is delinquent in the payment of his account to wholesalers but can only revoke or suspend license of retailer for violating rules or regulations concerning credit. Press Liquors, Inc. v. F. E. Weakley, Chairman etc. (1963, 317 F. 2d 135, 115 U.S. App. D.C. 71).

Discretion of Board

Where evidence relied on by Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to find that licensee failed to superintend in person, or through an approved manager, business for which class "C" retailer's license was issued satisfied statutory test of substantial evidence, ultimate conclusion of Board, to revoke license was within scope of its statutory discretion, notwithstanding claim that outright revocation of license amounted to "economic execution" and was so harsh as to deny licensee due process of law. 2447 Good Hope Road, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 513).

Due process

Some mixing of prosecutorial and adjudicative functions by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board is a necessary part of the administrative scheme and does not per se violate due process. James Bakalis & Nickie Bakalis, Inc. v. J. R. Simonson et al. (1970, 434 F. 2d 515, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 241).

Evidence—Sufficiency

Evidence was sufficient to support findings of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, in revoking petitioner's class "C" retailer's license, that petitioner allowed licensed premises to be used for an unlawful purpose by permitting consumption of alcoholic beverages at a time when consumption was prohibited, failed to frame its license under glass and post same in a conspicuous place on premises, and failed to superintend in person, or through an approved manager, business for which license was issued. 2447 Good Hope Road, Inc. v. District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board (D.C. App. 1972, 295 A. 2d 513).

Testimony as to numerous and open violations by officers was sufficient to support charges of violation of Alcoholic Beverage Control Act and regulations by more than substantial evidence. James Bakalis & Nickie Bakalis, Inc. v. J. R. Simonson et al. (1970, 434 F. 2d 515, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 241).

Grounds for suspension

Fourteen-day suspension of liquor license was warranted where licensee permitted "B-girl" operation on its premises and female employee made solicitation for act of prostitution on premises. Am-Chi Restaurant, Inc. v. J. R. Simonson et al., etc. (1968, 396 F. 2d 686, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 37).

Mere fact that "B-girl" operation was not illegal per se on licensed premises was not defense by licensee in proceeding to suspend license on ground that female employee of licensee had made solicitation for prostitution on premises. Id.

Injunction

An injunction against enforcement of order of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board revoking liquor license should not issue for any period while failure of Board of Commissioners of District of Columbia to reach a decision on appeal is caused by unavoidable circumstances such as absence of a commissioner or necessary delay in considering and deciding the case. Lambros v. Young (1945, 145 F. 2d 341, 79 U. S. App. D. C. 247).

Review

Since separate suspensions of liquor license for 21 days in the first case and 17 days in the second case were not, strictly for separate acts constituting violations on separate days but for a continuous course of conduct, and investigation in both cases was completed 30 days before hearing in first case, the two cases should have been treated as one case and the licensee was entitled to review of suspension by commissioners on theory that license was suspended for period of more than 30 days. James Bakalis & Nickie Bakalis, Inc. v. J. R. Simonson et al. (1970, 434 F. 2d 515, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 241).

Standards for suspension

Alcoholic Beverage Control Board should articulate its standards for suspension of liquor licenses in its order of suspension. Am-Chi Restaurant Inc. v. J. R. Simonson et al. (1968, 396 F. 2d 686, 130 U.S. App. D.C. 37).

Validity of findings

Findings of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board are presumptively valid. James Bakalis & Nickie Bakalis, Inc. v. J. R. Simonson et al. (1970, 434 F. 2d 515, 140 U.S. App. D.C. 241).

§ 25-119. Revocation of license when manufacturer interested—Manufacturer forbidden to loan money or furnish equipment for wholesaler or retailer—Extending credit permitted—"Manufacturer" defined.

If any manufacturer of beverages, whether licensed hereunder or not, by direct ownership, stock ownership, interlocking directors, mortgage, or lien, or by any other means shall have such a substantial interest, whether direct or indirect, in the business of any wholesale or retail licensee or in the premises on which said business is conducted as in the judgment of the Board may tend to influence such licensee to purchase beverages from such manufacturer, the Board may, in its discretion, revoke the license issued in respect of the business in which such manufacturer is interested, subject to review by the Commissioner as herein provided. No such manufacturer of beverages shall loan or give any money to any wholesale or retail licensee, or sell, rent, loan, or give to such licensee any equipment, furniture, fixtures, or property, or give or sell any service to such licensee: Provided, however, That with the prior approval of the Board, a manufacturer may sell, give, rent, or loan to a wholesale or retail licensee any service or article of property costing such manufacturer not more than $10. No wholesale or retail licensee shall receive or accept any loan or gift of money from any such manufacturer or purchase from, rent from, borrow or receive by gift from such manufacturer any equipment, furniture, fixtures, or property, or accept or receive any service from such manufacturer: Provided, however, That, with the prior approval of the Board, a wholesale or retail licensee may purchase from, rent from, borrow, or receive by gift from such manufacturer any service or article of property costing such manufacturer not more than $10. Nothing herein contained, however, shall prohibit the sale of alcoholic and nonalcoholic beverages and the reasonable extension of credit therefor by a manufacturer to a wholesale or retail licensee. When used in this section the word "manufacturer" shall include any stockholder holding directly or indirectly 25 per centum or more of the common stock or any officer of a manufacturer of beverages, if a corporation, whether licensed hereunder or not. This section shall not apply to retail licenses, class E, or to the wholesale license held by a person not licensed as a manufacturer hereunder owning an establishment for the manufacture of beverages outside of the District of Columbia. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 330, ch. 4, § 18; Aug. 27, 1935, 49 Stat. 902, ch. 756, § 15.)

AMENDMENT

1935—Act Aug. 27, 1935, deleted the words "to such licensee for less than the fair market value or upon a conditional sale agreement or chattel trust, or rent, loan or give to such licensee any equipment, furniture, fixtures or property, or give or sell any service to such licensee for less than the fair market value thereof," and inserted in lieu thereof the remainder of the second sentence after the word "sell" the first time it is used; inserted the words "rent from, borrow, or receive by gift from" in the third sentence; deleted from the third sentence the words "for less than the fair market value or upon a conditional sale agreement or chattel trust, or rent from, borrow or receive by gift from such manufacturer" following the word "manufacturer" the second time it is used in said sentence; deleted in the third sentence the words "for less than the fair market value thereof" and inserted in lieu thereof the proviso in such sentence; deleted from the last sentence the words "hereunder owning an establishment for the manufacture of beverages" and inserted in lieu thereof the concluding words of the last sentence following the word "licensed."

No such wholesaler of beverages shall lend or give any money to any retail licensee or sell to such licensee, any equipment, furniture, fixtures, or property, except merchandise sold at the fair market value for resale by such licensee, or rent, loan, or give to such licensee any equipment, furniture, fixtures, or property, or

(a) There shall be levied, collected, and paid on all of the following-named beverages manufactured by a holder of a manufacturer's license and on all of the said beverages imported or brought into the District by a holder of a wholesaler's license, except beverages as may be sold to a dealer licensed under the laws of any State or Territory of the United States and not licensed under this chapter, and on all beverages imported or brought into the District by a holder of a retailer's license, a tax at the following rates to be paid by the licensee in the manner hereinafter provided: (1) a tax of 15 cents on every wine-gallon of wine containing 14 per centum or less of alcohol by volume, other than champagne, sparkling wine, and any wine artificially carbonated, and a proportionate tax at a like rate on all fractional parts of such gallon; (2) a tax of 33 cents on every wine-gallon of wine containing more than 14 per centum of alcohol by volume, other than champagne, sparkling wine, and any wine artificially carbonated, and a proportionate tax at a like rate on all fractional parts of such gallon; (3) a tax of 45 cents on every wine-gallon of champagne, sparkling wine, and any wine artificially carbonated, and a proportionate tax at a like rate on all fractional parts of such gallon; (4) a tax of $2.00 on every wine-gallon of spirits and a proportionate tax at a like rate on all fractional parts of such gallon; (5) and a tax of $2.00 on every wine-gallon of alcohol and a proportionate tax at a like rate on all fractional parts of such gallon.

(b) Said taxes shall be collected by and paid to the Collector of Taxes of the District of Columbia and shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the District of Columbia.

(c) Said taxes shall be collected and paid in the following manner:

(1) Each holder of a manufacturer's or wholesaler's license shall, on or before the fifteenth day of each month, furnish to the Commissioner or his designated agent on a form to be prescribed by the Commissioner, a statement under oath showing the quantity of beverage subject to taxation hereunder sold by him during the preceding calendar month and shall, on or before the fifteenth day of each month, pay to the Commissioner or his designated agent the tax hereby imposed upon the quantity of beverages subject to taxation hereunder sold by him during the preceding calendar month.

(2) No licensee holding a retailer's license shall transport or cause to be transported into the District of Columbia any beverages subject to taxation hereunder other than the regular stock on hand in a passenger carrying marine vessel operating in and beyond the District of Columbia, or a club car or a dining car on a railroad operating in and beyond the District of Columbia, for which a retailer's license, class C or D, has been issued under this chapter, unless such licensee has first obtained a permit so to do from the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. No such permit shall issue until the tax imposed by this section shall have been paid for the beverages for which the permit is requested. Such permit shall specifically set forth the quantity, character, and brand or trade name of the beverage to be transported and the names and addresses of the seller and of the purchaser. Such permit shall accompany such beverages during transportation in the District of Columbia to the licensed premises of such retail licensee and shall be exhibited upon the demand of any police officer or duly authorized inspector of the Board. Such permit shall, immediately upon receipt of the beverage by the retail licensee, be marked "canceled" and retained by him.

(3) The District of Columbia Council is authorized and empowered to prescribe by regulation such other methods or devices or both for the assessment, evidencing of payment, and collection of the taxes imposed by this section in addition to or in lieu of the method hereinbefore set forth whenever in its judgment such action is necessary to prevent frauds or evasions.

(d) No tax shall be levied and collected on any alcohol exempt from tax under the laws of the United States, or on any alcohol sold for nonbeverage purposes by the holder of a manufacturer's or wholesaler's license, in accordance with the regulations promulgated by the Commissioners.

(e) If any Act of Congress shall hereafter prescribe for a Federal volume tax on alcoholic beverages under which a portion of said tax shall be returned to the District of Columbia, the taxes levied under this section shall not be collected after the effective date, January 24, 1934.

(f) No taxing provision of this section shall apply in the case of a passenger-carrying marine vessel operating in and beyond the District of Columbia, or a club car or a dining car on a railroad operating in and beyond the District of Columbia, for which a retailer's license, class C or D, has been issued under this chapter, except as set forth in this subsection.

The tax as specified in subsection (a) of this section shall be paid on all such beverages as are sold and served by said licensee while passing through or when at rest in the District of Columbia, in the following manner: A record shall be made and kept by the licensee for each passenger-carrying marine vessel operating in and beyond the District of Columbia, and for each club car or dining car on a railroad operating in and beyond the District of Columbia, for which a retailer's license, class C or class D, has been issued under this chapter, of all alcoholic beverages sold and served in the District of Columbia, which record shall be subject to inspection by the board. Each holder of such a license shall, on or before the tenth day of each month, forward to the Board on a form to be prescribed by the Commissioner, a statement under oath, showing the quantity of each kind of beverage, except beer and wines, sold under such license in the District of Columbia during the preceding calendar month and such statement shall be accompanied by payment of any tax imposed under this chapter upon any such beverages set forth in said report.

(g) The Council is authorized to require that the immediate container of each beverage subject to tax under this chapter contain the license number of each licensee who sells or offers for sale such beverage. Such license number must be affixed at the time of display or sale of said spirits by the retailer. This subsection shall not apply to spirit containers of less than two ounces. Every such licensee, within ten days after the effective date of this title [May 19, 1954], shall also file with the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board a sworn statement on a form to be prescribed by the Commissioners showing the number of each kind and denomination of stamps denoting the payment of beverage taxes (other than stamps denoting the payment of beverage taxes on alcohol and other than stamps affixed to the containers of beverages manufactured in or imported into the District prior to the effective date of this title [May 19, 1954]) held or possessed by such licensee or anyone for him at the beginning of the day on which title becomes effective. Should the number of any kind or denomination of stamps so held by a licensee be less than the number necessary for the stamping of the beverages shown on said sworn statement, the Collector of Taxes is authorized and directed to sell to such licensee, at the rates prescribed for such stamps prior to the effective date of this title, [May 19, 1954] such stamps as may be necessary for the stamping of such beverages. In the event any of the beverages shown on said sworn statement are sold to a dealer licensed under the laws of any State or Territory of the United States and not licensed under the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act [this chapter], such sale shall, within ten days thereafter, be reported to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and within said ten days such licensee shall pay to the Collector of Taxes on all stamps held by him for the stamping of such beverages the difference between the amount of tax represented by such stamps at the time of purchase from the Collector of Taxes and the amount of tax imposed by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act, as amended by this title [this chapter], represented by such stamps.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 24-524, 24-527.

In general

Where defendant, convicted of being drunk in a public park and unable to pay fine, was imprisoned, his argument that general authority given by sections 11-606 and 11-616 was limited by this section, was without merit where the general statute existed before the special one Congress must have been aware of the older statutes, and had it intended later to modify the earlier, would have done so. Peeples v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1950, 75 A. 2d 845).

Arrest by narcotics officer

Local narcotics officer had authority extended by statute to police officers generally to make arrest without warrant of person committing offense in his presence of drinking alcoholic beverage in public place. L. R. Hutcherson v. United States (1965, 345 F. 2d 964, 120 U.S. App. D.C. 274).

Arrest without warrant

Officer who observed man in alley drinking from bottle labeled wine had probable cause for arrest without warrant for offense of drinking alcoholic beverage in alley. L. R. Hutcherson v. United States (1965, 345 F. 2d 964, 120 U.S. App. D.C. 274).

Chronic alcoholism as a crime

Chronic alcoholism is defense to charge of public intoxication and is not itself a crime. DeW. Easter v. District of Columbia (1966, 361 F. 2d 50, 124 U.S. App. D.C. 33).

Chronic alcoholism resulting in public intoxication cannot be held to be criminal on theory that before sickness became chronic there was in some earlier period a voluntary act or series of acts which led to chronic condition. Id.

Evidence

Evidence sustained convictions for disorderly conduct and drinking in public. J. M. Heard v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1962, 179 A. 2d 723).

In prosecution for intoxication, evidence was insufficient to support trial judge's finding that defendant was not guilty because of insanity. Williams v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1959, 147 A. 2d 773).

— Sufficiency

Evidence sustained conviction of assault, public intoxication and disorderly conduct in violation of District of Columbia Code. W. M. Dempsey v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1969, 251 A. 2d 650).

Fine

Defendant on charge of intoxication upon public street could constitutionally be subjected to fine greater than collateral he was required to post. H. E. Coleman v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1964, 203 A. 2d 918).

Imposition of fine of $100 (statutory maximum) for intoxication on public street was not cruel and inhuman punishment, although defendant had been required to post only $10 collateral as security for appearance for trial. Id.

Issue of fact

Whether a defendant, who was charged with assault, public intoxication and disorderly conduct in violation of District of Columbia Code, had mental disease which should have excused him from criminal responsibility was issue of ultimate fact for the trier thereof. W. M. Dempsey v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1969, 251 A. 2d 650).

Search without warrant

Police officer's search of person lawfully arrested for drinking alcoholic beverage in alley wherein heroin was discovered in belt under shirt was justified by lawful arrest and by admission of person arrested that he had weapon which he seemed to be about to reach for under his clothing. L. R. Hutcherson v. United States (1965, 345 F. 2d 964, 120 U.S. App. D.C. 274).

Weight of evidence

Weight to be given testimony of witnesses who related that the conduct of the defendant at time of alleged assault, public intoxication and disorderly conduct, in violation of District of Columbia Code, and shortly thereafter was bizarre and the weight to be given testimony of government witness who related that the defendant was intoxicated at the time of alleged offenses and that assault was triggered by refusal to serve him beer was for the trier of fact. W. M. Dempsey v. United States and District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1969, 251 A. 2d 650).

§ 25-129. Search warrants for illegal alcoholic beverages—Penalty for resisting officer—Disposition of illegal beverages—Payment of bona fide liens.

(a) A search warrant may be issued by any judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia or by a United States commissioner for the District of Columbia when any alcoholic beverages are manufactured for sale, kept for sale, sold, or consumed in violation of the provisions of this chapter, and any such alcoholic beverages and any other property designed for use in connection with such unlawful manufacture for sale, keeping for sale, selling, or consumption may be seized thereunder, and shall be subject to such disposition as the court may make thereof, and such alcoholic beverages may be taken on the warrant from any house or other place in which it is concealed.

(b) A search warrant can not be issued but upon probable cause supported by affidavit particularly describing the property and the place to be searched.

(c) The judge or commissioner must, before issuing the warrant, examine on oath the complainant and any witness he may produce, and require their affidavits or take their depositions in writing and cause them to be subscribed by the parties making them.

(d) The affidavits or depositions must set forth the facts tending to establish the grounds of the application or probable cause for believing that they exist.

(e) If the judge or commissioner is thereupon satisfied of the existence of the grounds of the application or that there is probable cause to believe their existence, he must issue a search warrant signed by him with his name of office to the major and superintendent of police of the District of Columbia or any member of the Metropolitan police department, stating the particular grounds or probable cause for its issue and the names of the persons whose affidavits have been taken in support thereof, and commanding him forthwith to search the place named for the property specified and to bring it before the judge or commissioner.

(f) A search warrant may in all cases be served by any of the officers mentioned in its direction, but by no other person, except in aid of the officer on his requiring it, he being present and acting in its execution.

(g) The officer may break open any outer or inner door or window of a house, or any part of a house, or anything therein, to execute the warrant, if, after notice of his authority and purpose, he is refused admittance.

(h) The judge or commissioner must insert a direction in the warrant that it be served in the daytime unless the affidavit is positive that the property is in the place to be searched in which case he must insert a direction that it be served at any time in the day or night.

(i) A search warrant must be executed and returned to the judge or commissioner who issued it within ten days after its date; after the expiration of this time the warrant, unless executed, is void.

(j) When the officer takes property under the warrant, he must give a copy of the warrant together with a receipt for the property taken (specifying it in detail) to the person from whom it was taken by him, or in whose possession it was found; or, in the absence of any person, he must leave it in the place where he found the property.

(k) The officer must forthwith return the warrant to the judge or commissioner and deliver to him a written inventory of the property taken, made publicly or in the presence of the person from whose possession it was taken, and of the applicant for the warrant, if they are present, verified by the affidavit of the officer at the foot of the inventory and taken before the judge or commissioner at the time, to the following effect: "I, R. S., the officer by whom this warrant was executed, do swear that the above inventory contains a true and detailed account of all the property taken by me on the warrant."

(l) The judge or commissioner must thereupon, if required, deliver a copy of the inventory to the person from whose possession the property was taken and to the applicant for the warrant.

(m) The judge or commissioner must annex the affidavits, search warrant, return, inventory, and evidence, and at once file the same, together with a copy of the record of his proceedings, with the clerk of the municipal court.

(n) Whoever shall knowingly and wilfully obstruct, resist, or oppose any such officer or person in serving or attempting to serve or execute any such search warrant, or shall assault, beat, or wound any such officer or person, knowing him to be an officer or person so authorized, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than two years.

(o) If the accused be discharged, the beverages and other property seized shall be returned to the person in whose possession they were found; if he be convicted, the said beverages and other property shall be forfeited, and may be destroyed by the police department or delivered for medicinal, mechanical, or scientific uses to any department or agency of the United States Government or the District of Columbia government or any hospital or other charitable institution in the District of Columbia, or sold at public auction, as the court may direct.

(p) If any of said property so seized, other than the said beverages and the containers thereof, shall be subject to a lien which is established by intervention or otherwise to the satisfaction of the court as being bona fide and as having been created without the lienor's having any notice that said property was to be used in connection with the illegal manufacture for sale, keeping for sale, or selling of alcoholic beverages, the court, upon the conviction of the accused, shall order a sale of said property at public auction and the officer making the sale, after deducting the expenses of keeping the property, the fee for the seizure and the cost of the sale, shall pay all such liens according to their priorities, and such lien or liens shall be transferred from the property to the proceeds of the sale thereof. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 334, ch. 4, § 29; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1; June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 104, ch. 159, § 404(i); July 8, 1963, 77 Stat. 77, Pub. L. 88-60, § 1; July 29, 1970, Pub. 1953—Subsection (a) amended by act June 29, 1953, which substituted "The Municipal Court for the District of Columbia" for "the police court of the District of Columbia" to conform to change in name effected by act Apr. 1, 1942, substituted "commissioner" for "Commissioner" and provided for the seizure of alcoholic beverages and other property designed for use in connection with unlawful consumption.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1970 AMENDMENT

See note preceding section 11-101.

CHANGE OF NAME

"Municipal Court for the District of Columbia" was substituted for "police court of the District of Columbia" in subsec. (a) and "Municipal Court" for "police court" in subsec. (m) to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the Police Court and the Municipal Court.

Act July 8, 1963, § 1, substituted "District of Columbia Court of General Sessions" for "Municipal Court for the District of Columbia". Said section 1 superseded act Oct. 23, 1962, 76 Stat. 1171, Pub. L. 87-873, § 1, which contained identical provisions.

TRANSFER OF FUNCTIONS

Chief of Police as successor to Major and Superintendent of Police, see note under section 4-103.

CROSS REFERENCES

Search warrants, generally, see § 23-521 et seq.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Applications for search warrant

A lapse of four days between time police officers observed illegal activities on premises and time police department made application for search warrant based on policeman's affidavit describing sale of alcoholic beverages on premises without a license was not, under the circumstances, unreasonable as a matter of law. G. Williams & S. Stokes v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1961, 167 A. 2d 893).

Search warrant—Application for

Elapse of nine days between time police officer purchased liquor on premises and time officer made application for night search warrant based on policeman's affidavit describing sale of alcoholic beverages on premises without a license was not unreasonable under circumstances including showing that officer described the premises as having a bar and a bartender, tables enough for at least 20 persons and food and beverage service. Underdown v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 217 A. 2d 659).

The test of whether too long a period of time had passed between commission of unlawful acts and issuance of a search warrant is one of reasonableness, although a less flexible standard is applied when the warrant is one that must be based on "positive" knowledge. Id.

Where alcoholic beverages are purchased in circumstances indicating a continuing business in sale of illicit liquor, there is a strong presumption that the liquor will be found on the premises for a reasonable time thereafter. Id.

— Execution of Five-day delay in execution of night warrant for search of premises where alcoholic beverages were being sold without a license was not unreasonable since an after-hours liquor establishment might operate only on weekend evenings so that it was reasonable to wait until following weekend to execute the warrant. Underdown v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1966, 217 A. 2d 659).

Since the statute and warrant for search of premises for alcoholic beverages provided that it must be executed within 10 days, execution before expiration of that time limit was reasonable. Id.

Subject of search

Where, in searching defendant's premises under a valid search warrant authorizing search for alcoholic beverages or any property designed for use in connection with violation of Alcoholic Beverage Control Act, police officer looked behind a movable partition closing off a fireplace and discovered two large clean paper bags in the midst of rubble, and, although the feel and weight of such bags indicated to him that they did not contain bottles, the officer looked into the bags and discovered therein a quantity of marihuana, the officer's action in looking into the bags did not constitute an unreasonable search, but was lawful. United States v. White (D.C.D.C. 1954, 122 F. Supp. 664).

§ 25-130. Minor misrepresenting age to procure beverage—Penalty.

Any minor who falsely represents his age for the purpose of procuring any beverage shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and be fined for each offense not more than $25 and, in default in the payment of such fine, shall be imprisoned not exceeding ten days. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 335, ch. 4, § 30.)

§ 25-131. Issuance of new permits under Beverage License Act of 1933 forbidden—Surrender of permit and refund of fees—Repeal.

After the date of the approval of this chapter no permit shall be issued under the Act of Congress entitled "An Act to provide revenue for the District of Columbia by the taxation of beverages and for other purposes," approved April 5, 1933, and no permits issued thereunder shall be renewed, but the Commissioners of the District of Columbia are hereby authorized to extend the expiration dates of permits issued under said act to a date designated by them not to exceed sixty days after the approval of this chapter, upon such terms and conditions, including the payment of such fees as the Commissioners may prescribe. Any permittee thereunder may make an application for a license under this chapter and, if said application is approved by the Board, such permittee shall surrender his permit and he shall be allowed a refund of the permit fee prorated as hereinafter provided. Any permittee under said Act of April 5, 1933, may surrender his permit and receive a refund of the permit fee prorated from the date of surrender of such permit to the date of expiration thereof. All such refunds shall be paid from the permanent indefinite appropriation for refunding erroneously paid taxes in the District of Columbia. All permits issued under said Act of April 5, 1933, shall remain in force and effect for the respective periods for which they were issued, unless sooner surrendered. After the approval of this chapter no taxes shall be collected under section 11 of the Act approved April 5, 1933. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 336, ch. 4, § 31.)

§ 25-132. Penalty for violation where no specific penalty provided—Prosecutions.

Whosoever violates any of the provisions of this chapter for which no specific penalty is provided, or any of the rules and regulations promulgated pursuant thereto, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not longer than one year or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

Prosecutions for violations of this chapter shall be on information filed in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia by the corporation counsel or any of his assistants, except for such violations as are felonies, and prosecutions for such violations as are felonies, shall be by the United States Attorney in and for the District of Columbia or any of his assistants. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 336, ch. 4, § 33; Apr. 1, 1942, 56 Stat. 190, ch. 207, § 1; July 8, 1963, 77 Stat. 77, Pub. L. 88-60, § 1; July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, title I, § 155(a), 84 Stat. 570.)

AMENDMENT

1970—Section 155(a) of Act July 29, 1970, Public Law 91-358 amended section by striking out "District of Columbia Court of General Sessions" and inserting in lieu thereof "Superior Court of the District of Columbia."

See note preceding section 11-101.

CHANGE OF NAME

"Municipal court" was substituted for "police court" to conform to act Apr. 1, 1942, which consolidated the Police Court and the Municipal Court.

Act July 8, 1963, § 1, substituted "District of Columbia Court of General Sessions" for municipal court for the District of Columbia". Said section 1 superseded act Oct. 23, 1962, 76 Stat. 1171, Pub. L. 87-873, § 1, which contained identical provisions.

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 25-108.

Consecutive sentences

Imposition of consecutive 120-day sentences for the keeping of whiskey for sale and selling of whiskey without a license was improper as constituting double punishment for a single offense where defendant had only a single bottle of whiskey which he illegally sold at time of his arrest and there was no proof of keeping of the whiskey for sale independent of the sale itself. W. Hicks v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1967, 234 A. 2d 801).

Consolidation

It was not error for trial court to refuse to consolidate the counts of keeping liquor for sale where motion was made at end of government's case on ground that appellant could have asked for a bill of particulars before trial and could have pleaded a defective information. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 67 A. 2d 522).

Examination of witnesses

A court may not limit cross-examination upon a pertinent subject at the outset, but after a substantial exploration of the subject, a judge is within his right in limiting examination which may become needlessly protracted and where the record discloses that during a trial for the illegal sale of alcoholic beverages, appellant's counsel was permitted freely and fully to cross-examine all government witnesses, there was no undue restriction or limitation upon the right of cross-examination. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 209, appeal denied 180 F. 2d 909, 85 U.S. App. D.C. 430).

Where government witness admitted that during a recess, he had talked with another government witness who had been excluded from the court room, trial court did not abuse its discretion in permitting him to testify. Id.

Failure to report violation

It is an offense for any officer to fail to report prohibition violations to the corporation counsel. Donnelley v. United States (1928, 48 S. Ct. 400, 276 U.S. 505, 72 L. Ed. 767).

Instructions

Where judge's charge stated "I charge you it is his constitutional right not to take the stand if he [the appellant] wishes not to do so," it was not prejudicial error not to have stated that the fact appellant had not taken the witness stand, should not be construed in any way to his prejudice. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 67 A. 2d 522).

Police officers who, though privately employed, are engaged in keeping law and order in a public place, are neither informers nor detectives engaged in the business of spying for hire and are not the type of witnesses whose testimony the court must instruct must be received with caution. Davenport v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1949, 65 A. 2d 209, appeal denied 180 F. 2d 909, 85 U.S. App. D.C. 430).

Officers of the United States

Prohibition agent appointed by the commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary of Treasury, is not an "officer of the United States"; however police captains are officers of the District but not of the United States. Keehn v. United States (C.C.A. 1, 1924, 300 F. 493).

Several offenses committed by single act

Usual test to determine if one or two offenses have been committed by a single act is whether each offense requires proof of an additional fact which the other does not. W. Hicks v. District of Columbia (D.C. App. 1967, 234 A. 2d 801).

§ 25-133. Sale by retailer of beverages on credit prohibited—Exceptions.

No holder of a retailer's license, except a retailer's license, class E, shall sell on credit any beverages except beer and light wines. For purposes of this section, the extension of credit by the holder of a class A retailer's license in connection with a sale by such license holder of any beverage through a credit card or other document or device intended or adapted for the purpose of establishing credit shall be considered a sale on credit of such beverage by such license holder. This section shall not prohibit a club from extending credit to its members or the guests of members or a hotel from extending credit to its registered guests. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 336, ch. 4, § 35; Dec. 8, 1970, Pub. L. 91-535, § 6, 84 Stat. 1394.)

§ 25-134. Containers to be labeled—Content.

No rectified or blended spirits shall be sold unless the container in which it is sold shall bear a legible label firmly affixed thereto stating the nature and percentage of each ingredient therein (except water), the age of each such ingredient, and the alcoholic content of such spirits by volume. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 336, ch. 4, § 36.)

§ 25-135. Offenses under National Prohibition Act to be prosecuted.

Any offense committed, or any right accrued, or any penalty or obligation incurred, or any seizure or forfeiture made, prior to the effective date of this chapter, under the provisions of the National Prohibition Act, as amended and supplemented, or under any permit or regulation issued thereunder, or under any other provision of law repealed by this chapter, may be prosecuted or enforced in the same manner and with the same effect as if this chapter had not been enacted. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 337, ch. 4, § 37.)

§ 25-136. Separability of provisions.

If any provision of this chapter, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of the chapter, and the application of such provisions to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby. (Jan. 24, 1934, 48 Stat. 337, ch. 4, § 38.)

§ 25-137. Unlawful transportation—Penalty.

(a) It shall be unlawful for anyone, except a public or common carrier or the holder of a manufacturer's, wholesaler's, or retailer's license issued under this chapter, to transport, import, bring, or ship or cause to be transported, imported, brought, or shipped into the District of Columbia from without the District of Columbia any wines, spirits, or beer in a quantity in excess of one gallon at any one time.

(b) No public or common carrier shall transport or bring into the District of Columbia wine, spirits, or beer in a quantity in excess of one quart in any one calendar month for delivery to any one person in the District of Columbia other than the holder of a manufacturer's, wholesaler's, or retailer's license issued under this chapter.

(c) The provisions of this section shall not apply to bona fide possessors of old stocks who are moving into the District of Columbia nor to embassies or diplomatic representatives of foreign countries, nor to wines imported for religious or sacramental purposes, nor to wine, spirits, and beer to be delivered to the holder of a manufacturer's, wholesaler's, or retailer's license issued under this chapter.

(d) The penalty for violation of this section shall consist of the forfeiture of the beverages transported, imported, or shipped or caused to be transported, imported, brought, or shipped in violation of this section, and a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment for not more than six months. (Jan. 24, 1934, ch. 4, § 39, as added Aug. 25, 1937, 50 Stat. 803, ch. 766, § 4; Dec. 26, 1967, Pub. L. 90-223, § 1, 81 Stat. 728.)

§ 25-138. Tax on beer.

(a) There shall be levied and collected by the District of Columbia on all beer sold by the holder of a manufacturer's or wholesaler's license, except such beer as may have been purchased from a licensee under this chapter, and except such beer as may be sold to a dealer licensed under the laws of any State or Territory of the United States and not licensed under this chapter, and on all beer purchased for resale by the holder of a retailer's license, except such beer as may have been purchased from a licensee under this chapter, a tax of $2.25 for every barrel containing not more than thirty-one gallons and at a like rate for any other quantity or for the fractional parts thereof. Unless the District of Columbia Council shall by regulation prescribe otherwise, the collection and payment of such tax shall be in the manner following:

(1) Each holder of a manufacturer's or wholesaler's license shall, on or before the 15th day of each month, furnish to the assessor of the District of Columbia, on a form to be prescribed by the Commissioner, a statement under oath showing the quantity of beer subject to taxation hereunder sold by him during the preceding calendar month.

No such permit shall issue until the tax imposed by this section shall have been paid for the beer for which the permit is requested. Such permit shall specifically set forth the quantity, character, and brand or trade name of the beer to be transported and the names and addresses of the seller and of the purchaser. Such permit shall accompany such beer during its transportation in the District of Columbia to the licensed premises of such retail licensee and shall be exhibited upon the demand of any police officer or duly authorized inspector of the Board. Such permit shall, immediately upon receipt of the beer by the retail licensee, be marked "canceled" and retained by him.

(b) The Council is authorized and empowered to prescribe by regulation such other methods or devices or both for the assessment, evidencing of payment, and collection of the taxes imposed by this section in addition to or in lieu of the method hereinbefore set forth whenever, in its judgment, such action is necessary to prevent frauds or evasions.

(c) The taxes imposed hereby, when collected, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the District of Columbia. (Jan. 24, 1934, ch. 4, § 40, as added May 16, 1938, 52 Stat. 376, ch. 223, § 8, and amended May 27, 1949, 63 Stat. 136, ch. 146, title V, § 508; May 18, 1954, 68 Stat. 115, ch. 218, title VIII, § 804; Mar. 31, 1956, 70 Stat. 83, ch. 154, § 305; Sept. 30, 1966, 80 Stat. 855, Pub. #### § 25-139. Building or place of violation declared a nuisance—Procedure to enjoin or abate.

(a) Any building, ground, premises, or place where any intoxicating beverage is manufactured, sold, kept for sale, or permitted to be consumed in violation of this chapter is hereby declared to be a nuisance, and may be enjoined and abated as hereinafter provided.

(b) An action to enjoin any nuisance defined in subsection (a) of this section may be brought in the name of the District of Columbia by the corporation counsel of the District of Columbia or any of his assistants, in the civil branch of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia against any person conducting or maintaining such nuisance or knowingly permitting such nuisance to be conducted or maintained. The rules of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia relating to the granting of an injunction or restraining order shall be applicable with respect to actions brought under this subsection, except that the District as complaining party shall not be required to furnish bond or security. It shall not be necessary for the court to find the building, ground, premises, or place was being unlawfully used as aforesaid at the time of the hearing, but on finding that the material allegations of the complaint are true, the court shall enter an order restraining the defendant from manufacturing, selling, keeping for sale, or permitting to be consumed any alcoholic beverage in violation of this chapter. When an injunction, either temporary or permanent, has been granted it shall be binding on the defendant throughout the District of Columbia. Upon final judgment of the court ordering such nuisance to be abated, the court may order that the defendant, or any one claiming under him, shall not occupy or use, for a period of one year thereafter, the building, ground, premises, or place upon which the nuisance existed, but the court may, in its discretion, permit the defendant to occupy or use the said building, ground, premises, or place, if the defendant shall give bond with sufficient security to be approved by the court, in the penal and liquidated sum of not less than $500 nor more than $1,000, payable to the District of Columbia, and conditioned that intoxicating beverages will not thereafter be manufactured, sold, kept for sale, or permitted to be consumed in or upon the building, grounds, premises, or place in violation of this chapter.

(c) In the case of the violation of any injunction, temporary or permanent, rendered pursuant to the provisions of this section, proceedings for punishment for contempt may be commenced by the corporation counsel or any of his assistants, by filing with the court in the same case in which the injunction was issued a petition under oath setting out the alleged offense constituting the violation and serving a copy of said petition upon the defendant requiring him to appear and answer the same within ten days from the service thereof. The trial shall be promptly held and may be upon affidavits or either party may demand the production and oral examination of the witnesses. Any person found guilty of contempt under the provisions of this section shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment for not more than twelve months, or by both such fine and imprisonment. (Jan. 24, 1934, ch. 4, § 41, as added June 29, 1953, 67 Stat. 104, ch. 159, § 404 (j); July 8, 1963, 77 Stat. 77, Pub. L. 88-60, § 1; July 29, 1970, Pub. L. 91-358, title I, § 155(a), 84 Stat. 570.)

§ 26-101. Banking institutions to be under supervision of Comptroller of Currency—Sections 161, 163, and 164 of title 12, U.S. Code, applicable.

All savings banks, or savings companies, or trust companies, or other banking institutions, organized under authority of any act of Congress to do business in the District of Columbia, or organized by virtue of the laws of any of the States of this Union, and having an office or banking house located within the District of Columbia where deposits or savings are received, shall be, and are hereby, required to make to the Comptroller of the Currency and to publish all the reports which national banking associations are required to make and publish under the provisions of sections 161, 163, and 164 of title 12, U.S. Code, and shall be subject to the same penalties for failure to make such reports as are therein provided, which penalties may be collected by suit before the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. And the Comptroller shall have power, when in his opinion it is necessary, to take possession of any such bank or company, for the reasons and in the manner and to the same extent as are provided in the laws of the United States with respect to national banks: Provided, however, That banking institutions having offices or banking houses in foreign countries as well as in the District of Columbia shall only be required to make and publish the reports provided for in this section semiannually: And provided further, That all publications authorized or required by section 161 of title 12, U.S. Code, and all other publications authorized or required by existing law to be made in the District of Columbia, shall be printed in one or more daily newspapers of general circulation, published in the city of Washington. #### AMENDMENTS

1933—Act March 4, 1933, changed the requirement as to publication from “two or more daily newspapers” to “one or more daily newspapers” and omitted the requirement that one of them should be a morning newspaper.

1906—Act June 25, 1906, inserted in the first sentence the words “or organized by virtue of the laws of any of the States of this Union, and having an office or banking house located within the District of Columbia where deposits or savings are received,” and added the second sentence.

1902—Act June 30, 1902, omitted a second paragraph of this which read as follows: “And all savings or other banks now organized, or which shall hereafter be organized, in the District of Columbia, under any act of Congress, which shall have capital stock paid up in whole or in part, shall be subject to all the provisions of the Revised Statutes and of all acts of Congress applicable to national banking associations, so far as the same may be applicable to such savings or other banks: Provided, That any savings banks established before 1874 shall not be required to have a paid-up capital exceeding one hundred thousand dollars.”

CHANGE OF NAME

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in sections 26-102, 26-104, 29-105.

Authority to take possession

Comptroller's authority and power to take possession was precisely the power given him by statute to take possession of a national bank; and, if we are correct in this position, then it follows equally that under the powers vested in him by law he was authorized to investigate the condition of the bank and declare it insolvent, and to appoint a receiver and make an assessment against the stockholders. Dunn v. O'Connor (1937, 89 F. 2d 820, 67 App. D. C. 76).

Constitutionality

This act is constitutional. Lyons v. Bank of Discount (C.C. N.Y. 1907, 154 F. 391).

Construction

This act incorporates all the United States Bank Acts which have to do with administration in the case of insolvent banks and gives to the Comptroller the same control and management as in the case of national banks. Hamilton v. Offutt (1935, 78 F. 2d 735, 64 App. D. C. 385).

Determination of Comptroller of Currency as to necessity for assessments is conclusive. Harper v. Moran (1935, 76 F. 2d 980, 64 App. D. C. 210, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 104, 296 U.S. 592, 80 L. Ed. 419).

Foreign bank

Where foreign bank establishes house in District of Columbia, it submitted itself to the provisions of this act. Washington Loan & Trust Co. v. Allman (1934, 70 F. 2d 282, 63 App. D. C. 116).

The liquidation of bank organized under West Virginia law and doing business solely in District of Columbia was governed by this chapter, and not by law of West Virginia. Parsons v. Barry (D.C.D.C. 1945, 59 F. Supp. 221, affirmed 148 F. 2d 21, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 409, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 32, 326 U.S. 726, 90 L. Ed. 431, rehearing denied 66 S. Ct. 136, 326 U.S. 808, 90 L. Ed. 492).

Insolvency

Where the Comptroller of the Currency has held a bank to be insolvent and has appointed a receiver for it, the court will not substitute its judgment for the judgment of the Comptroller, unless it appears by convincing proof that the Comptroller's action is plainly arbitrary, and made in bad faith. United States Sav. Bank v. Morgenthau (1936, 85 F. 2d 811, 66 App. D. C. 234).

Liability of stockholders

This section does not impose double liability on stockholders where State laws impose none. Hamilton v. Offutt (1935, 78 F. 2d 735, 64 App. D. C. 385, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 121, 296 U.S. 592, 80 L. Ed. 419). See, also, Hamilton v. Bergling (1936, 85 F. 2d 249, 66 App. D. C. 83).

Though bank stockholders' liability under state law may be enforced in the District of Columbia by a receiver appointed by the Comptroller of the Currency, both the existence and the duration of the liability must be determined by the law of the state of the bank's incorporation. Moran v. Cobb (1941, 120 F. 2d 16, 73 App. D. C. 200, certiorari dismissed 62 S. Ct. 134, 314 U. S. 703, 86 L. Ed. 562).

National Savings Bank

The National Savings Bank of the District of Columbia was organized by the act of May 24, 1870, to accept deposits from depositors, to invest such funds for their benefit, and disburse revenues to the depositors and the corporators have no shares and receive no profits, and have not such interest as will warrant an action for an account and distribution of the profits. Huntington v. National Sav. Bank (1877, 96 U. S. 388, 6 Otto 388, 24 L. Ed. 777).

Payment of interest in liquidation

When assets of insolvent bank being liquidated under Comptroller of the Currency are sufficient to pay more than 100 percent of principal amount of depositors' claims, depositors are entitled to interest on their claims from date of suspension until paid, computed at statutory or legal rate of jurisdiction in which the liquidation is had. Parsons v. Barry (D.C.D.C. 1945, 59 F. Supp. 221, affirmed 148 F. 2d 21, 80 U.S. App. D.C. 409, certiorari denied 66 S. Ct. 32, 326 U.S. 726, 90 L. Ed. 431, rehearing denied 66 S. Ct. 136, 326 U. S. 808, 90 L. Ed. 492).

Interest on time and savings deposits should be computed to date of bank's closing at contract rate, and after closing, deposits, whether savings or demand, should bear interest at local statutory rate on judgments. Id.

A judgment of United States Court of Appeals for District of Columbia that no part of assets of closed bank organized under state authority and doing business in District of Columbia could be turned over by receiver to stockholders until after principal and interest on debts were paid was res judicata of depositors' right to interest on their deposits. Id.

Personal liability of directors

Directors of bank not liable personally for deposits made after expiration of charter, where bank continued business. Thompson v. Park Sav. Bank (1935, 77 F. 2d 955, 64 App. D. C. 308, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 104, 296 U. S. 592, 80 L. Ed. 419).

Receiver

Receiver is the mere instrument of the Comptroller, and the declaration of the Comptroller, rather than the receiver, is the essential factor in determining the necessity for the assessment and where the Comptroller has made the decision, his conclusion is not subject to attack or open to review except for fraud. Harper v. Moran (1935, 76 F. 2d 980, 64 App. D. C. 210).

Plaintiff was appointed and qualified as receiver of the bank by the Comptroller of the Currency. Moran v. Schlossberg (1937, 90 F. 2d 408, 67 App. D. C. 163).

Reorganization plan

Comptroller of the Currency was acting within his statutory authority in holding that the plan of reorganization proposed by appellant was not fair and equitable as to the depositors and other creditors of the bank, and is not in the public interest, and that the Comptroller was right in refusing to adopt appellant's proposed plan, and consequently that his action in this behalf was not arbitrary or capricious. Cooper v. Woodin (1934, 72 F. 2d 179, 63 App. D. C. 311).

§ 26-102. Examination by Comptroller of the Currency—Section 84 of title 12, U.S. Code, extended to banks and trust companies—Reserves.

(a) The Comptroller of the Currency, in addition to the powers now conferred upon him by law for the examination of national banks, is hereby further authorized, whenever he may deem it advisable, to cause examination to be made into the condition of any bank mentioned in section 26-101. The expense of such examination shall be paid in the manner provided by section 482 of title 12, U. S. Code, relating to the examination of national banks.

(b) The provisions of section 84 of title 12, U.S. Code, are hereby extended to apply to all banks and trust companies doing business in the District of Columbia.

(c) Each bank and trust company doing business in the District of Columbia and not a member of the Federal Reserve System shall within six months from March 4, 1933, establish and maintain reserves on the same basis and subject to the same conditions as may by law on March 4, 1933, or thereafter be prescribed for national banks located in the District of Columbia, except that such reserves shall be established and maintained at such agency or agencies which shall have the approval of the Comptroller of the Currency: Provided, however, (1) That the required reserves carried by such bank or trust company with an agency or agencies may, under the regulations and subject to such penalties as may be prescribed by the Comptroller of the Currency, be checked against and withdrawn by such bank or trust company for the purpose of meeting existing liabilities, and (2) that no such bank or trust company shall at any time make new loans or shall pay any dividends unless and until the total reserves required by law shall be fully restored. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1303, ch. 854, § 714; June 25, 1906, ch. 3533, 34 Stat. 458; Mar. 4, 1933, 47 Stat. 1566, ch. 274, § 3.)

AMENDMENTS

1933—Act Mar. 4, 1933, substituted the word "advisable" for the word "useful" in the first sentence of subsec. (a) and added subssecs. (b) and (c).

1906—Act June 25, 1906, substituted the reference to § 26-101 for "in the District of Columbia organized under Act of Congress," deleted a former second sentence: "The Comptroller, at his discretion may report to Congress the results of such examination", and substituted the reference to § 482 of title 12, U.S. Code, for "out of any appropriation made by Congress for special bank examinations".

ALTERATION, AMENDMENT OR REPEAL

Section 9 of act Mar. 4, 1933, provided that: "The right to alter, amend, or repeal this Act is hereby expressly reserved. If any clause, sentence, paragraph, or part of this Act shall for any reason be adjudged by any court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, such judgment shall not affect, impair, or invalidate the remainder of this Act, but shall be confined in its operation to the clause, sentence, paragraph, or part thereof directly involved in the controversy in which such judgment shall have been rendered."

When Alabama bank established a banking house in Washington, D. C., and all its officers and directors and substantially all of its stockholders resided in the District; and when all meetings of its stockholders and directors and all assets and records were kept here, the bank was governed by this section. Thompson v. Park Sav. Bank (1935, 77 F. 2d 955, 64 App. D.C. 308, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 104, 296 U.S. 592, 80 L. Ed. 419).

Plan of reorganization

Comptroller of Currency was acting within his statutory authority in holding that the plan of reorganization proposed by appellant was not fair and equitable as to the depositors and other creditors of the bank, and is not in the public interest, and that the Comptroller was right in refusing to adopt appellant's proposed plan, and consequently that his action in this behalf was not arbitrary or capricious. Cooper v. Woodin (1934, 72 F. 2d 179, 63 App. D. C. 311).

§ 26-103. Banking—Foreign corporations not to engage in—Approval of Comptroller of the Currency—"Branches" defined—Building associations—Dissolution of solvent banking corporations—Penalties.

(a) No banking business shall be done in the District of Columbia except by corporations organized in accordance with the provisions of this Code, as amended, or by national banking associations organized in accordance with the laws of the United States, except that this paragraph shall not apply to (1) corporations engaged in and doing a banking business on March 4, 1933. (2) individuals, partnerships, associations, or corporations primarily engaged as brokers in buying, selling, exchanging, and/or otherwise dealing in stocks, bonds, and/or other securities, for the account of others, and incidentally thereto conducts banking transactions, (3) individuals, partnerships, associations, or corporations not doing a bank-of-deposit business.

(b) No corporation shall engage in or do the business of a bank of deposit or a fiduciary business in the District of Columbia nor shall any branch be established to carry on any phase of such banking or fiduciary business in the District of Columbia until the approval and consent of the Comptroller of the Currency is secured. the Currency, and publication thereof to be made for a period of two weeks in a newspaper published in the District of Columbia, that the institution has discontinued business and is winding up its affairs, and notifying its creditors to present claims against the institution for payment. The shareholders shall at the time of going into liquidation elect a committee or liquidating agent who shall liquidate the institution. No institution which has gone into voluntary liquidation shall be permitted to resume business but until its liquidation is complete shall remain a legal corporation or association for the purpose of suing or being sued. Any such institution in liquidation may be examined by the Comptroller of the Currency who, if he finds such institution insolvent, may appoint a receiver and wind up its affairs in the same manner as provided by law for national banking associations.

(e) If any financial institution under the supervision of the Comptroller of the Currency, which has not gone into liquidation and for which a receiver has not already been appointed for other lawful cause, shall discontinue its operations for a period of sixty days, the Comptroller of the Currency may, if he deems it advisable, appoint a receiver for such institution.

(f) Any financial institution over which the Comptroller of the Currency has or had supervision which prior to March 4, 1933, had in any manner ceased to do a banking business shall not resume such banking business and shall advise the Comptroller of the Currency when its business has been fully liquidated, whereupon by operation of this section its charter is terminated. Such financial institution may in the discretion of the Comptroller of the Currency be subject to all the provisions of paragraph (d) of this section.

(g) Each person, copartnership, each director, liquidating committee or liquidating agent, and each one of the officers and employees of an association or corporation violating any of the provisions of this section shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000, or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. #### NOTES TO DECISIONS

Banks operating prior to statute

Bank incorporated under a state law operating a bank in the District of Columbia prior to April 26, 1922, was entitled to continue (33 O. A. G. 395).

State law determining liability

In absence of words creating liability claimed, or finding by necessary implication that the section plainly and convincingly adopts the national banking law of double liability, the law of Virginia as the place where bank was created would govern in measuring liability of appellees as stockholders. Hamilton v. Offutt (1935, 78 F. 2d 735, 64 App. D. C. 385).

§ 26-104. Liability of stockholders of bank or savings company—"Entered into or incurred" defined—Certain provisions of U.S. Code extended to District of Columbia.

(a) Repealed. Feb. 16, 1934, 48 Stat. 352, ch. 14, § 1.

(b) The shareholders, on March 4, 1933, of every savings bank or savings company other than building associations organized under authority of any Act of Congress to do business in the District of Columbia, and of every banking institution organized by virtue of the laws of any of the states of this Union to do or doing a banking business in the District of Columbia, shall be held individually responsible, equally and ratably, and not one for another for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such savings bank, savings company, or banking institution, entered into or incurred subsequent to March 4, 1933, to the extent of the amount of their stock therein at the par value thereof, in addition to the amount invested in such shares. The words "entered into or incurred" as used in this section, shall be held to include any extension or renewal of any contracts, debt, and engagement renewed or extended after March 4, 1933.

(c) The provisions of sections 55, 62, 65, 67, 191-194, 197, and 198-200 of title 12, U.S. Code, are extended to apply to any bank, savings bank, or trust company organized, hereafter organized, or doing a banking business in the District of Columbia and to the shareholders of such institutions, except as limited by the provisions of paragraph (b) of this section: Provided, however, That the provisions of section 26-101 shall not be construed to be repealed by this section but shall have application to the banks, savings banks, savings companies, other than building associations, and trust companies embraced within this section.

(d) That portion of section 24 of the Judicial Code, as amended, applying to suits against national-banking associations shall be extended and shall apply to all actions arising under the provisions of this section. (Mar. 4, 1933, 47 Stat. 1566, ch. 274, § 4; Feb. 16, 1934, 48 Stat. 352, ch. 14, § 1.)

REFERENCES IN TEXT

Section 65 of title 12, U.S. Code, referred to in subsec. (c), which related to enforcement of shareholders' individual liability by creditors on liquidation, was repealed by act Sept. 8, 1959, 73 Stat. 457, Pub. L. 86-230, § 8. For limitation on liability of shareholders, see § 64a of title 12, U.S.C. See, also, § 26-105 of this Code.

Section 24 of the Judicial Code, as amended, applying to suits against national-banking associations, referred to in subsec. (d), was repealed by act June 25, 1948, 62 Stat. 992, ch. 646, § 39, eff. Sept. 1, 1948, and is now covered by 28 U.S.C. § 1348.

AMENDMENT

1934—Subsec. (a) repealed by act Feb. 16, 1934.

Prior to such amendment, section provided that: "The shareholders of every savings bank or savings company other than building associations now or hereafter organized under authority of any Act of Congress to do business in the District of Columbia and of every banking institution organized by virtue of the laws of any of the States of the Union to do or doing a banking business in the District of Columbia, who acquire in any manner the shares of any such savings bank or savings company or such banking institutions other than building associations after the enactment of this Act, shall be held individually responsible equally and ratably, and not one for another, for all contracts, debts, and engagements of such bank or company, to the extent of the amount of their stock so acquired therein, at the par value thereof in addition to the amount invested in such shares."

(b) of this section] upon the shareholders of the savings banks, savings companies, and banking institutions specified in such subsection (b) [subsec. (b) of this section], shall not apply with respect to shares in any such savings bank, savings company, or banking institution issued after the date of enactment of this Act [Feb. 16, 1934]".

Foreign bank doing business in District

When there was, at the time, no statute in the District creating double liability in the case of a stockholder of a foreign bank doing business exclusively in the District, the liability of the stockholder is determined by the charter of incorporation and laws of the State in which incorporation is had. Hamilton v. Bergling (1936, 85 F. 2d 249, 66 App. D.C. 83).

§ 26-105. Shareholders' liability terminated after July 1, 1937—Conditions.

The additional liability imposed by section 26-104 upon the shareholders of savings banks, savings companies, and banking institutions and the additional liability imposed by section 26-322 upon the shareholders of trust companies, shall cease to apply on July 1, 1937, with respect to such savings banks, savings companies, banking institutions, and trust companies which shall be transacting business on such date: Provided, That not less than six months prior to such date, the savings bank, savings company, banking institution or trust company, desiring to take advantage hereof, shall have caused notice of such prospective termination of liability to be published in a newspaper published in the District of Columbia and having general circulation therein. In the event of failure to give such notice as and when above provided, a termination of such additional liability may thereafter be accomplished as of the date six months subsequent to publication in the manner above provided. ### Chapter 2.—JOINT ACCOUNTS—ADVERSE CLAIMANTS—TRUST ACCOUNTS

Sec.

- 26-201. Deposits or shares of stock in names of two or more persons—Payments—Liability of bank.
- 26-202. Safe deposit boxes in names of two or more persons—Right of access—Liability of bank.
- 26-203. Notice of adverse claim to deposit.
- 26-204. Payment of trust accounts on death of trustee.

§ 26-201. Deposits or shares of stock in names of two or more persons—Payments—Liability of bank.

When a deposit shall have been made in, or shall after May 15, 1928, be made in, or any collection item shall have been placed or shall after May 15, 1928, be placed with, any bank, trust company, savings bank, building association, or other banking institution, including national banks, transacting business in the District of Columbia, or when any shares of stock shall have been issued or shall after May 15, 1928, be issued by any building association, transacting business in the District of Columbia, in the names of two or more persons, including husband and wife, payable to either, or payable to either or the survivor or survivors, such deposit, or in any part thereof, or any interest or dividend thereon, and such collection item or its proceeds, or any interest or dividend thereon, or such shares of stock issued by a building association or any interest or dividend thereon, may be paid or delivered to either of said persons whether the other or others be living or not; and the receipt or acquittance of the person to whom such payment or delivery is made shall be a valid, sufficient, and complete release and discharge of the bank, trust company, savings bank, building association, or other banking institution, including national banks, for any payment or delivery so made. (May 15, 1928, 45 Stat. 533, ch. 568, § 1.)

CROSS REFERENCE

Gift causa mortis

Where depositor, not in contemplation of impending death, had brother's name added to bank account, but did not pass a present interest therein to brother, and retained control of account, there was no "gift causa mortis". Gibson v. Industrial Bank of Washington (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 36 A. 2d 62).

Gift inter vivos

Where depositor had brother's name appended to bank account but passed no present interest thereto and retained control of account and passbook, there was no "gift inter vivos" to brother. Gibson v. Industrial Bank of Washington (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 36 A. 2d 62).

Joint account

Statute providing that no disposition of realty or personalty of married woman under 21 years of age or any portions thereof, by deed, mortgage, bill of sale, or other conveyance shall be valid if made by married woman under 21 years of age is modified by statute dealing with joint account of husband and wife in bank or other institutions such as building and loan association. C. M. Williams v. R. P. Williams, et al. (1965, 346 F. 2d 808, 120 U.S. App. D.C. 327).

Where substantial sums earned by minor wife were allegedly turned over by her to husband and were deposited with building and loan association in joint account in names of husband and wife, and on estrangement of husband and wife, husband withdrew balance in joint account and deposited it in new joint account in names of himself and his mother, association was not liable to wife on ground that association could not permit funds to be withdrawn by husband due to status of wife as minor. Id.

In action by husband's executors against widow to impress constructive trust on proceeds of bank account, for which printed bank cards which recited a right of survivorship had been signed by both husband and widow, and from which widow, after husband's death, withdrew all the funds for deposit elsewhere in her own name, evidence failed to rebut presumption, based on fact that funds for such account had been provided only by husband, that widow did not have a survivorship interest. Imirie v. Imirie and Bogley etc. (1957, 246 F. 2d 652, 100 U.S. App. D.C. 371).

A showing that name of depositor's brother was merely appended to bank account, without more, is insufficient to establish intention of depositor to establish a joint account with right of survivorship. Gibson v. Industrial Bank of Washington (D. C. Mun. App. 1944, 36 A. 2d 62).

§ 26-202. Safe deposit boxes in names of two or more persons—Right of access—Liability of bank.

When a safety deposit box or vault shall have been hired from any bank, trust company, savings bank, building association, or other banking institution, including national banks, or any other corporation, transacting business in the District of Columbia, in the names of two or more persons, including husband and wife, with the right of access being given to either, or with access to either or the survivor or survivors of said persons, or property is held for safe-keeping by any such bank, trust company, savings bank, building association, or other corporation or banking institution, including national banks, for two or more persons, including husband and wife, with the right of delivery being given to either, or with the right of delivery to either or the survivor or survivors of said persons, any one or more of such persons, whether the other or others be living or not, shall have the right of access to such safety deposit box or vault and to remove the contents thereof, or any part of such contents, or to have delivered to him or them, the property so held for safe-keeping, or any part thereof, and in case of such removal or delivery the said bank, trust company, savings bank, building association, or other corporation or banking institution, including national banks, shall be exempt from any liability for permitting such access or removal or for the delivery to such person or persons. (May 15, 1928, 45 Stat. 534, ch. 568, § 2.)

§ 26-203. Notice of adverse claim to deposit.

Notice to any bank or trust company doing business in the District of Columbia of an adverse claim to a deposit standing on its books to the credit of any person shall not be effectual to cause said bank or trust company to recognize said adverse claimant unless said adverse claimant shall also either (1) procure a restraining order, injunction, or other appropriate process against said bank or trust company from a court of competent jurisdiction in a cause therein instituted by him wherein the person to whose credit the deposit stands is made a party and served with summons; or (2) execute to such bank or trust company, in form and with sureties acceptable to it, a bond indemnifying said bank or trust company from any and all liability, loss, damage, costs, and expenses, for and on account of the payment of such adverse claim or the dishonor of the check or other order of the person to whose credit the deposit stands on the books of said bank or trust company: Provided, That this section shall not apply to any instance where the person to whose credit the deposit stands is a fiduciary for such adverse claimant, and the facts constituting such relationship, together with the facts showing reasonable cause of belief on the part of the said claimant that the said fiduciary is about to misappropriate said deposit, are made to appear by the affidavit of such claimant. (Apr. 5, 1939, 53 Stat. 566, ch. 37, § 2.)

Applicability

This section providing that bank shall recognize adverse claim to deposit "where the person to whose credit a deposit stands is a fiduciary for such adverse claimant" and where facts constituting such relation and showing reasonable cause for belief that fiduciary is about to misappropriate the deposit are made to appear by affidavit of the claimant is applicable regardless of whether account appears on its face as a fiduciary account. R. S. Goldstein v. The Riggs National Bank (1972, 459 F. 2d 1161, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 137).

Construction

This section, designed to protect banks where adverse claims are made to account, is to be broadly construed. R. S. Goldstein v. The Riggs National Bank (1972, 459 F. 2d 1161, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 137).

Liability—Dishonor of check

Where bank received notice from corporation that money in account belonged to the corporation, that individual in whose name account appeared was trustee of such funds, and that corporation believed the money would be misappropriated, and where bank took prompt action to secure adjudication of the conflicting claims by filing interpleader action, bank was not liable for refusing to honor checks drawn by the depositor on the account. R. S. Goldstein v. The Riggs National Bank (1972, 459 F. 2d 1161, 148 U.S. App. D.C. 137).

§ 26-204. Payment of trust accounts on death of trustee.

Whenever a deposit, savings account, or share account, which is in form in trust for another, shall be made or held by any person in any bank, trust company, savings and loan association, building association, building and loan association, or Federal savings and loan association, doing business in the District of Columbia, and no other or further notice of the existence and terms of a legal and valid trust shall have been given in writing to such bank, trust company, or other association, such deposit, savings account, or share account, or any part thereof, together with the dividends, or interest thereon, may, in the event of the death of the trustee, be paid to the person for whom such deposit, savings account, or share account was made or held, or to his legal representative. (Apr. 5, 1939, 53 Stat. 567, ch. 37, § 4; July 19, 1954, 68 Stat. 494, ch. 545, § 1.)

AMENDMENT

1954—Act July 19, 1954, made the section applicable to savings account and share account and savings and loan association, building association, building and loan association, and Federal savings and loan association.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

In general

Language of the act of incorporation "liable to the creditors" does not create an independent and direct property right of creditors enforceable only by them in an equity suit, but it is a right which, though created for their benefit, accrues to the Comptroller and through him to his receiver, by whom alone it is enforceable in the administration of the trust estate. Dunn v. O'Connor (1937, 89 F. 2d 820, 67 App. D.C. 76).

Determination of liability

Liability of a stockholder is determined by the charter of incorporation and the laws of the State in which incorporation is had, and no liability will be read into statute where none exists. Hamilton v. Offutt (1935, 78 F. 2d 735, 64 App. D. C. 385, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 121, 296 U. S. 592, 80 L. Ed. 419).

Double liability

Taking possession of District bank by Comptroller does not impose double liability on stockholders unless State does. Hamilton v. Offutt (1935, 78 F. 2d 735, 64 App. D.C. 385, certiorari denied 56 S. Ct. 121, 296 U.S. 592, 80 L. Ed. 419).

Double liability is no more the asset of the corporation than the double liability created by the District statute with relation to trust companies and in either case it is an asset of creditors and not of the corporation. Dunn v. O'Connor (1937, 89 F. 2d 820, 67 App. D. C. 76).

§ 26-323. Stock to be paid up in money only—Exception—Companies doing business prior to January 1, 1902.

ceived and considered as money at a value to be appraised and fixed by the Comptroller of the Currency: Provided, That all such assets and property are also transferred to and are thereafter owned by the company organized under this chapter. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1308, ch. 854, § 735.)

Subordinate officers may be appointed by the directors or trustees, and all such officers may be required to give such security for the faithful performance of the duties of their offices as the directors or trustees may require. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1308, ch. 854, § 738.)

If the directors or trustees of any company shall declare or pay any dividend the payment of which would render it insolvent, or which would create a

(Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1308, ch. 854, § 740.)

(a) Without regard to any provision of law other than this section, and without limitation on any other power or function now or hereafter vested in or exercisable by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board by or under this Act [Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933; 12 U.S.C. 1461 et seq.] or otherwise, the Board shall, with respect to all incorporated or unincorporated building, building or loan, building and loan, or homestead associations, and similar institutions, of or transacting or doing business in the District of Columbia, or maintaining any office in the District of Columbia (other than Federal savings and loan associations), have the same powers and functions as to examination, operation, and regulation as are now or hereafter vested in or exercisable by it with respect to Federal savings and loan associations by or under sec-

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Construction

District of Columbia statutes governing organization and powers of building and loan association, object of Home Loan Bank Board, objects of building and loan association and licensing of agents and brokers for hazard insurance do not preclude building and loan association from obtaining license for and conducting business of, insurance agent or broker with respect to insurance on property securing loans, as incident to its primary business. L. S. Goodman et al. v. Perpetual Building Association et al. (1970, 320 F. Supp. 20).

Directors fiduciary duty

Directors of building and loan association breached fiduciary duty owed to association through usurpation of corporate opportunity since under District of Columbia law, association could have acted as insurance agent or broker for hazard insurance on property securing loans and since they, and their predecessors, had organized and operated insurance agency through which they directed insurance business and diverted to themselves as partners insurance business generated by association. L. S. Goodman et al. v. Perpetual Building Association et al. (1970, 320 F. Supp. 20).

§ 26-402. Powers as to stock.

Such corporation shall have power, in its certificate of incorporation or in its by-laws, to provide that its shares of stock may be issued in series; to limit the number of shares which each stockholder may be allowed to hold; to prescribe the entrance fee to be paid by each stockholder at the time of subscribing, and to regulate the instalments to be paid on each share and the times at which they shall be payable. It shall also have power to enforce the payment of all instalments and other dues by such fines and forfeitures as its by-laws may from time to time provide. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1299, ch. 854, § 689.)

§ 26-403. Bonus to be paid by late subscribers.

Any person applying for membership or stock after a month from the time of the incorporation may be required to pay on subscribing such bonus or assessment as may be fixed by said by-laws in order to place said new members or stockholders on a footing with the original members and others holding stock at the time of such application. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1299, ch. 854, § 690.)

§ 26-404. Object—Powers of Federal Home Loan Bank Board — Examination — Reports — Liquidation—Strict compliance required—Associations in business before March 4, 1909—Penalties—Misappropriation of funds made larceny.

The object of such corporation shall be the accumulation of a capital in money to be derived from the savings and accumulations by the members thereof, to be paid into said corporation in such sums and at such times as may be designated by the by-laws of said corporation, from which the members thereof may obtain advances upon their shares of stock: Provided, That the Federal Home Loan Bank Board is authorized, whenever such Board may deem it useful; to cause examination to be made into the condition of any building association incorporated under the provisions of this chapter, as well as any other building or loan association located or doing business in the District of Columbia. The expenses necessarily incurred in making any such examination shall be paid by such association to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board at the time of the making of such examination: And provided further, That every building or loan association located and doing business in the District of Columbia shall make to the Federal Home Loan Bank Board at least one report during each year, according to the form which may be prescribed by such Board, verified by the oath or affirmation of the president or secretary of such association and attested by the signature of at least three of the directors. The Federal Home Loan Bank Board shall also have power to take possession of any company or association whenever in the Board's judgment any such company or association is insolvent or is knowingly violating the laws under which it is operated and to liquidate the same in the manner provided in rules and regulations which said Board is hereby authorized to adopt, and said Board may also provide in such rules and regulations a procedure for the voluntary liquidation of any such company or association; and if any such company or association which has not gone into liquidation and for which a receiver has not already been appointed for other lawful cause shall discontinue its operations for a period of sixty days, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board may, if such Board deems it advisable, appoint a receiver for such company or association:

Provided further, That from and after the first day of July, 1909, no person, company, association, copartnership, or corporation shall conduct or carry on in the District of Columbia the kind of business named in this section and section 26-405, without strict compliance in all particulars with the provisions of this section and section 26-405: Provided, That building associations organized and in actual operation before March 4, 1909, need not be incorporated. Any person, officer, or agent of any company, firm, or corporation who shall wilfully violate any of the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall on conviction thereof be punished by a fine of not more than one thousand dollars or by imprisonment not longer than two years, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court. That any wilful false swearing in regard to any certificate, or report, or public notice required by the provisions of this section and section 26-405 shall be perjury, and shall be punished as such according to the laws of the District of Columbia. And any misappropriation of any of the money of any corporation or company, formed under or availing itself of the privileges of this section and section 26-405, or of any building or loan association located or doing business in the District of Columbia, or any money, funds, or property intrusted to any such corporation, company, or association, shall be held to be larceny and shall be punished as such under the laws of said District. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1299, ch. 854, § 691; Mar. 4, 1909, 35 Stat. 1058, ch. 303, § 1; Sept. 15, 1951, 65 Stat. 323, ch. 404, § 1.)

CHANGE OF NAME

The name "Home Loan Bank Board" was changed to "Federal Home Loan Bank Board" by sec. 109(a)(3) of Act Aug. 11, 1955, 69 Stat. 640.

§ 26-405. Associations existing under laws of other States doing business in District of Columbia must comply—Provisions requisite—Penalty.

No foreign association shall make loans of any kind or transact any building and loan business within the District of Columbia or maintain an office in the District of Columbia for the purpose of transacting such business until it procures from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board a certificate of authority to do such business in said District, after complying with the following provisions:

(a) It shall deposit with the Treasurer of the United States $50,000 in cash or bonds of the United States or bonds which the United States guarantees the payment of both principal and interest. A foreign association may collect and use the interest on securities deposited with the Treasurer of the United States, as hereinabove provided, so long as it fulfills its obligations and complies with the laws of the District of Columbia. It may also exchange them for other securities of the United States or for cash. The deposit made by a foreign association with the Treasury of the United States shall be held as security for all claims of residents of the District of Columbia against such association, and be liable for all judgments or decrees thereon, and subjected to the payment thereof in the same manner as the property of other nonresidents. Should an association cease to do business in said District, the Treasurer of the United States, upon a certificate from the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, may release securities in his discretion, retaining sufficient to satisfy all outstanding liabilities;

(b) It shall file with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board a certified copy of its charter, constitution, and bylaws, and other rules and regulations showing its manner of conducting business, together with a statement such as is required semiannually from all associations;

(c) It shall file with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board a power of attorney appointing a citizen of the District of Columbia, resident within said District, the agent or attorney for such foreign association upon whom process of law can be served. There must also be filed a certified copy of the vote or resolution of the directors appointing such agent or attorney, which appointment shall continue until another agent or attorney is substituted, and said writing or power of attorney shall stipulate and agree on the part of such foreign association making the same that any lawful process against said association, which is served on such agent or attorney, shall be of the same legal force and validity as if served on such association within the District of Columbia; and, also, that in the case of the death or absence of the agent or attorney so appointed, service or process may be made upon the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and such power of attorney cannot be revoked or modified (except that a new one may be substituted) so long as any liability remains outstanding against such foreign association in the District of Columbia. The term "process," used above, shall be held and deemed to include any writ, summons, or order whereby any action, suit, or proceeding shall be commenced, or which shall be issued in or upon any action, suit, or proceeding by any court, officer, or magistrate.

(d) It shall pay to the collector of taxes the following fees:

For filing an application for admission to do business in the District of Columbia, $500;

For each certificate of authority and annual renewal thereof, $200.

(e) When a foreign association has complied with the provisions of paragraph (c) of this section, and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board is satisfied that it is doing or will do its building and loan business in the District of Columbia in accordance with the laws of the District of Columbia, such Board may issue its certificate of authority to such foreign association to do a building and loan business in the District of Columbia. Annually thereafter, if the Federal Home Loan Bank Board is satisfied as herein provided, it shall issue a renewal of such certificate.

(f) Should the Federal Home Loan Bank Board find that such foreign association does not conduct its building and loan business in accordance with law, or that the affairs of such association are in unsafe condition, or if such foreign association refuses to permit examination to be made, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board may revoke the certificate of authority granted, after ninety days' notice, to such foreign association to do a building and loan business in the District of Columbia; Provided, That upon revocation of such certificate of authority the Federal Home Loan Bank Board shall mail a notice thereof to the home office of such foreign association and cause a similar notice to be published in at least one daily newspaper of general circulation in the District of Columbia. After so notifying said home office and after the publication of said notice, it shall be unlawful for any agent of such foreign association to receive any further payments from shareholders residing in the District of Columbia.

(g) Every foreign association doing a building and loan business in the District of Columbia shall be subject to the same examination as are domestic associations and such examination may include examination of all subsidiaries of such foreign associations and all business operations wherever apparent: Provided, That the Federal Home Loan Bank Board may accept reports of examination by other supervisory agents in lieu of making such examinations and provided that all the actual and necessary expenses of such examinations of such foreign associations shall be paid by the association examined.

(h) Whenever any taxes, fines, penalties, fees, licenses, or conditions precedent are imposed by the laws of any State upon building and loan associations organized or incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia, and doing business in the said State, in excess of the taxes, fines, penalties, fees, licenses, or conditions precedent imposed by the laws of the District of Columbia upon foreign associations doing a building and loan business in the District of Columbia, the same taxes, fines, penalties, fees, licenses, or conditions precedent shall be imposed upon every association incorporated under the laws of such State doing, or applying to do, a building and loan business in the District of Columbia, so long as such excess taxes, fines, penalties, fees, licenses, or conditions precedent are imposed by such State; and upon the failure of any association incorporated under the laws of such State to comply therewith the Federal Home Loan Bank Board shall revoke the certificate of authority of such association to do a building and loan business in the District of Columbia or shall refuse to grant such certificate of authority in the first instance.

(i) A foreign association which does a building and loan business in the District of Columbia without first complying with the provisions of this chapter, or which willfully violates or fails to comply with the provisions of laws relating to foreign associations, shall forfeit and pay not less than $25 or more than $500, to be recovered by an action in the name of the United States and on collection paid into the Treasury of the United States. (Mar. 3, 1901, ch. 854, § 691a, as added Mar. 4, 1909, 35 Stat. 1059, ch. 303, § 2, and amended July 18, 1939, 53 Stat. 1060, ch. 322, § 1; Sept. 15, 1951, 65 Stat. 323, ch. 404, § 2.)

1951—Act Sept. 15, 1951, amended the section by changing references to the Comptroller of the Currency to the Home Loan Bank Board.

Subsec. (g) amended by act Sept. 15, 1951, which deleted the final provision which read: "if said examination is made beyond the limits of the District of Columbia, but if made within the limits of the District of Columbia, the cost of the examination to be at the same rate and upon the same terms as provided in § 26-404."

1939—Act July 8, 1939, amended section generally. Prior to such amendment, section read as follows: "That any building association incorporated or unincorporated, organized and existing under the laws of any State or Territory, except the District of Columbia, to do or now doing, in the District of Columbia, a building association business or otherwise operating as a building association, shall be subject to all the provisions of the foregoing section of this act in respect of the powers of the Comptroller of the Currency hereunder, and, any such association or corporation shall at all times keep on deposit with the Comptroller of the Currency in money or stocks, bonds or mortgages or other securities to be approved by said officer not less than ten per centum of its capital and surplus as security for its depositors and creditors, and as a guarantee for the faithful performance of its contracts, and may also make such further deposit of its assets as above described with the Comptroller for such purpose as it may from time to time desire so to do."

EFFECTIVE DATE OF 1939 AMENDMENT

Section 2 of act July 18, 1939, provided in part that "This Act [amending this section] shall take effect on the date of its enactment [July 18, 1939]."

SECTION REFERRED TO IN OTHER SECTIONS

This section is referred to in section 26-404.

NOTES TO DECISIONS

Compliance with statutory requirements

The "Union Home Builders" and similar organizations must comply with statutory provisions as to examination and control by Comptroller of the Currency. (33 O. A. G. 418).

§ 26-406. Advancements.

The moneys accumulated from time to time shall be offered to such shareholder or shareholders as shall bid the highest premium for preference or priority of right to an advancement of the ultimate value of one or more of his or their respective shares. The said premium shall consist of a percentage on the amount of the advance and shall be deemed to be a consideration or bonus paid by the shareholder for the present and immediate use and possession of the future or ultimate value of the share so advanced, and shall not be deemed usurious. The said premium may either be deducted in advance from the amount to be advanced to the shareholder or be made payable in monthly installments, in addition to legal interest on the sum advanced, as the by-laws may provide. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1299, ch. 854, § 692.)

Status of contract after insolvency

Where contract between borrowing member of a building association by the giving of a bond and a deed of trust to secure the bond, is that in consideration of sum advanced he will pay to the association monthly payments, the insolvency of the association and appointment of a receiver will not abrogate the contract between it and one of its members and the substitution for that contract of some other arrangement which a court may deem equitable. Armstrong v. United States Bldg. & Loan Assn. (1899, 15 App. D.C. 1).

Surrender of stock

Where building association advanced money to one of its members and received therefor an assignment of stock held by him, and a deed of trust upon his real estate to secure his notes, a suit by a person who purchased the property was entitled to a release of the deed of trust upon payment of remaining notes, and the association could not enforce payment of accruing dues after the payment of the last note. Eastern Bldg. & Loan Assn. v. Olmsted (1900, 16 App. D.C. 387).

When borrower from building association surrenders his stock to the association upon mortgage loan being made to him, he becomes a creditor of the association and when accounting is made he is to be charged with amount actually received by him on account of loan, with interest, whether by way of premium, dues or interest. Croissant v. Empire State Realty Co. (1907, 29 App. D.C. 538).

Usurious premiums

A provision of building association mortgage that the borrower instead of paying the usual premium is to pay monthly during continuance of the mortgage, a specified sum called premium, in addition to legal rate of interest, is void as usurious payment. Middle States Loan v. Baker (1901, 19 App. D.C. 1).

The provision that premiums to be charged by building associations shall not be deemed usurious, is not retroactive, and it does not affect borrower's right to redeem mortgaged property from building association, when such right existed before the Code went into effect. Washington Nat. Bldg. & Loan Assn. v. Fiske (1902, 20 App. D.C. 514, certiorari denied 23 S. Ct. 848, 188 U.S. 740, 47 L. Ed. 677).

Test to determine whether building association loan is usurious is usually whether the promise to pay the sum above legal interest depends upon a contingency, and not upon the happening of a certain event. The loan is not usurious if it depends upon a contingency. Whelpley v. Ross (1905, 25 App. D.C. 207).

§ 26-407. Security for advancement.

For every advance made as aforesaid a bond in a penalty equal to the ultimate value of the shares advanced may be required, secured by a first mortgage or deed of trust on real estate, and a pledge of the shares advanced upon, as additional or collateral security, which bond shall be conditioned for the payment at the stated meetings of the corporation of the monthly dues on the share so advanced upon and the interest on the sum advanced, and the instalments of premium, if made so payable, and all fines chargeable upon arrears of payments, until said shares shall reach their ultimate value aforesaid, or said advance be otherwise canceled or discharged. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1299, ch. 854, § 693.)

§ 26-408. Profits.

The shares advanced upon shall participate equally with the other shares in the profits and the amounts paid by the advanced shareholders, together with such proportion of the profits accrued or such rate of interest as said by-laws may determine, the same as allowed on shares withdrawn not advanced upon, less all fines and a proportionate part of losses and other charges incurred. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1299, ch. 854, § 694.)

§ 26-409. Redemption of shares.

Where advances from the funds on hand can not be made on satisfactory terms, the shareholders failing to bid therefor, the by-laws may provide for the redemption of shares of stock, with the consent of the shareholders, and in case that can not be done, for the involuntary withdrawal and cancelation of shares, the said shares to be selected by lot, always from the oldest series, until exhausted, or the funds to be applied ratably among the owners of shares of the same series. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1300, ch. 854, § 695.)

§ 26-410. Withdrawal by shareholder.

A shareholder shall be entitled to withdraw at any time, by giving such notice as the by-laws may require, where no advance has been made on his shares, in which case he shall be entitled to receive the amount of dues paid in by him on each of his shares, together with such proportion of the profits accrued or such rate of interest as said by-laws may determine, less all fines due and a proportionate part of all losses and other charges incurred: Provided, That not more than one-half of the funds in the treasury at any time shall be applicable to the demands of the withdrawing shareholders without the consent of the board of trustees. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1300, ch. 854, § 696.)

§ 26-411. Repayment of advances.

A shareholder who has been advanced may at any time repay his advance upon application to the corporation, whereupon, on settlement of his account, he shall be charged with the full amount of the advance and of the accrued instalments of the premium, if that has been added to the advancement and made payable in instalments, together with all monthly dues, interest, and fines accrued and charged, and shall receive credit for all monthly dues paid on his shares and the profits thereon the same as are allowed under the by-laws on shares withdrawn not advanced upon, and, if the premium has been deducted in advance, with such proportion of the premium as the by-laws may direct, and the balance remaining due, over and above such credits, shall be received by said corporation in satisfaction and discharge of said advance: Provided, That in case of the insolvency of the association, he shall not be entitled to credit for the full amount of dues paid by him, but shall only be entitled to a dividend upon said amount, in common with the nonadvanced shareholders. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1300, ch. 854, § 697.)

§ 26-412. Forfeiture.

Any nonadvanced shareholder failing to pay the instalments due on his share and the fines due from him for such time as the by-laws shall determine, shall forfeit his stock, but may, on application, receive a return of the amount paid in on account of his stock, less the accrued fines. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1300, ch. 854, § 698.)

§ 26-413. Foreclosure.

In case any advanced shareholder shall fail to pay all dues, interest, or premiums and shall be in arrears for any part of the same for the period of two months, the payment of the same and of the principal of the advance may be enforced by a foreclosure of the securities given for the same, and if upon a statement of account, as in case of a voluntary settlement of said advance, as hereinbefore authorized, there shall be any surplus of the proceeds of sale of the property given as security over the amount found due from such advanced shareholder, together with all costs incurred by the corporation, such surplus shall be paid to said defaulting shareholder, or his assigns, and his shares of stock so advanced upon shall be the property of the corporation. (Mar. 3, 1901, 31 Stat. 1300, ch. 854, § 699.)

§ 26-414. Investment of funds in real estate.

Such corporation shall not invest its fund in any real estate except what is necessary for the conduct of its business, but may purchase such property at sales made upon foreclosure of mortgages or in satisfaction of judgments or other liens held by it: Provided, That such property so purchased be sold within a reasonable time thereafter. And in the case of death, removal from the District, or any legal disability or disqualification of any such agent, service of such process or notice may be made upon the Superintendent of Licenses of the District of Columbia. #### NOTES TO DECISIONS

Amount as determining applicability

Though Loan Shark Act of 1913 was primarily intended to regulate and limit business of making small loans for security, such Act does have application to loans in excess of $200. In re Parkwood, Inc. (1972, 461 F. 2d 158, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 67).

This section making it unlawful to engage in business of loaning money upon which a rate of interest greater than six percent per annum is charged on any security of any kind without procuring a license has application to a loan larger than $200. Hartman v. Lubar (1943, 133 F. 2d 44, 77 U. S. App. D. C. 95, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 1329, 319 U. S. 767, 87 L. Ed. 1716, rehearing denied 64 S. Ct. 30, 320 U. S. 808, 88 L. Ed. 488).

Appeal and error

Where, at hearing on petition to expunge forged deed of release of prior deed of trust from land records, no issue was made by subsequent lender relative to failure of prior lender to produce some 99 notes, as required by subpoena duces tecum, subsequent lender, loan of which was found to be subordinate to that of prior lender, had no basis for complaint to reviewing court even if 99 notes were relevant to the issue whether prior lender could not enforce loan because of failure to comply with District of Columbia loan shark act. General Investment Funds Real Estate Holding Company et al. v. W. Gildenhorn et al. (Md. Ct. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 650).

Where there was no allegation in pleadings before court that prior lender has been involved in transactions in violation of the District of Columbia loan shark act and only allegation of subsequent lender, seeking to have its subsequent deed of trust accorded priority over prior deed of trust, was inadequate consideration for note, the chancellor properly refused to permit inquiry at hearing into loan transactions prior lender might have had with others in violation of loan shark act. Id.

Burden of proof

Burden was on corporate lender, seeking to quiet title to property under deed of trust given in connection with loan, to show that prior lender, who allegedly had engaged in business of lending in the District of Columbia and was not licensed under District loan shark act, was in the business of lending money in the District and that he was lending funds at an annual interest rate of more than 6%. General Investment Funds Real Estate Holding Company, et al. v. W. Gildenhorn et al. (Md. Ct. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 650).

It is well established that one who alleges usury or any contractual illegality has the burden of proving it and it was incumbent on the District to adduce evidence establishing an excessive finance payment and the fact that the plaintiff bank did not prove the amount of insurance premium did not relieve the District of its burden of proof. District of Columbia v. Hamilton National Bank (D. C. Mun. App. 1950, 76 A. 2d 60).

Choice of laws

Where all documents involved in transaction wherein loan was obtained from lender, which maintained office in District of Columbia for selling insurance, in exchange for promissory note carrying 6¼% interest and deed of trust on real estate were executed in Maryland, deed of trust was recorded in Maryland, and funds were received by borrower of Maryland corporation in Maryland, Maryland law was applicable to transaction, and thus District of Columbia Loan Shark Act was not applicable, though it was asserted that, subsequent to making of such loans, certain entity, which serviced such loans in District, was held out to represent lender in making of loans in District. In re Parkwood, Inc. (1972, 461 F. 2d 158, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 67).

Commission as constituting usury

Commission paid by a borrower to a loan broker for obtaining a loan from a third person does not constitute usury. J. Oliver v. United Mortgage Company, Inc., et al. (D.C. App. 1967, 230 A. 2d 722).

Borrower was not entitled to recover portion of commission retained by loan broker for arranging loan on ground that transaction was usurious in absence of showing that broker was acting solely as agent of lender. Id.

Even if loan broker had advanced his own funds to borrower, but had done so for convenience only and with expectation of reimbursing himself promptly from funds supplied by lender, broker who had retained commission for that service was not liable to borrower for allegedly usurious interest on ground that broker was principal on loan. Id.

Construction

District of Columbia Loan Shark Act is applicable to loans made by life insurance companies in regular course of their business and thus such companies, until 1963, were not exempt from requirement of obtaining license in order to make loans at rate of interest in excess of 6%, notwithstanding contentions that Act does not apply to insurance companies which "invest" their funds by making loans secured by real estate, that, in view of comprehensive regulation of insurance companies under certain titles of District of Columbia Code, they cannot be subject to licensing regulation of lending activities under Act, and that Act is not intended to apply to large loans made by "institutional lenders" and secured by real estate. In re Parkwood, Inc. (1972, 461 F. 2d 158, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 67).

Where loans were negotiated in District of Columbia, made with District of Columbia money by business firms headquartered and regularly doing loan business both in and out of District and such loans were specifically repayable in District, District of Columbia law, and, in particular, District's Loan Shark Act, was applicable to transactions. Id.

"Loan shark law" making it illegal to engage in business of loaning money without procuring a license is a licensing statute, unrelated to and unaffected by usury statutes. Indian Lake Estates, Inc. v. Ten Individual Defendants, Net Limited, Inc., et al. (1965, 350 F. 2d 435, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 305).

This chapter, the usury law, section 28-3303, and section 47-1701 et seq., regarding financial institutions are to be read together and when so read constitute a comprehensive code for business of lending money in the District of Columbia. Hartman v. Lubar (1943, 133 F. 2d 44, 77 U. S. App. D. C. 95, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 1329, 319 U. S. 767, 87 L. Ed. 1716, rehearing denied 64 S. Ct. 30, 320 U. S. 808, 88 L. Ed. 488).

Defenses

Defense of violation of Loan Shark Act can be used only against those unlicensed, nonexempt lenders who actually contract for or receive interest in excess of 6%. In re Parkwood, Inc. (1972, 461 F. 2d 158, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 67).

Defense that contract violates this chapter is available, not only against the nominal maker of the loan, but against the principal for whom he acts and against the holder of an instrument given to secure payment of loan, if the holder knew of its illegality. Hartman v. Lubar (1943, 133 F. 2d 44, 77 U. S. App. D. C. 95, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 1329, 319 U. S. 767, 87 L. Ed. 1716, rehearing denied 64 S. Ct. 30, 320 U. S. 808, 88 L. Ed. 488).

Discovery

Refusal to permit corporate lender to take deposition of bank for the purpose of showing that individual lender, who was not licensed under District of Columbia loan shark act, had engaged in sufficient number of loans in District to require licensing under act was correct since no notice had been given in Maryland action involving priority of loans made by corporate and individual borrowers of intent to rely on foreign law. General Investment Funds Real Estate Holding Company et al. v. W. Gildenhorn et al. (Md. Ct. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 650).

Evidence—Admissibility

Since there was no properly admissible evidence before chancellor to identify some 99 notes allegedly made by individual lender in District of Columbia or to connect notes with lender, who allegedly engaged in lending business in the District and was not licensed under the District of Columbia loan shark act, chancellor correctly refused to admit notes into evidence in proceedings involving, inter alia, whether deed of trust was void under District of Columbia loan shark act. General Investment Funds Real Estate Holding Company et al. v. W. Gildenhorn et al. (Md. Ct. App. 1970, 271 A. 2d 650).

In action to recover for wrongful foreclosure of deed of trust, evidence was admissible to show that lender was doing business in violation of Loan Shark Law making it unlawful for person to engage in business of loaning money at interest rate greater than 6% per annum without procuring license. Royall v. L. Yudelevit and W. H. Simons (1959, 268 F. 2d 577, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Where lender of approximately $900 took from borrower note for $1,000 payable in $20 weekly installments and secured by chattel trust deed, in replevin suit by trustee of endorsee finance company to recover the chattel, evidence that lender was principal stockholder and president of endorsee company, that trustee was officer of and counsel for the company, that loan was actually made by the company and that the company was engaged in business of lending money in District of Columbia at an interest rate greater than six percent without having procured a license was admissible to show illegality of the transaction and the resulting absence of title in trustee. Hartman v. Lubar (1943, 133 F. 2d 44, 77 U. S. App. D. C. 95, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 1329, 319 U. S. 767, 87 L. Ed. 1716, rehearing denied 64 S. Ct. 30, 320 U. S. 808, 88 L. Ed. 488).

Where borrowers contended that lender was engaged in business of loaning money within this chapter and that payee of note was but a straw party for the lender, trial court properly refused to admit in evidence against lender other notes payable to same payee, where witness testified that the payee lent money herself. Knott v. Jackson (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 31 A. 2d 662).

Where there was evidence that indorsee finance company for which trustee brought replevin suit to recover chattels named in chattel trust deed securing a note was in the business of lending money rather than solely that of discounting notes in the sense of buying from a creditor an existing obligation at less than face value, proffered evidence consisting of court trials of five municipal court cases in which finance company sued to recover on notes assigned to it was material to defendant's defense that finance company was in business of lending money at rate of interest greater than 6 percent without required license and should have been admitted. Hartman v. Lubar (D. C. Mun. App. 1946, 49 A. 2d 553).

— Sufficiency

Where it was established that lending agency in two instances violated statutes making it unlawful to "engage in business" of loaning money at rate greater than 6 percent per annum on any security without procuring a license, there was sufficient showing that agency did "engage in business" within meaning of statute. Columbia Auto Loan Inc. v. District of Columbia (D.C. Mun. App. 1951, 78 A. 2d 857).

Evidence that lender had made five loans was not sufficient to warrant finding that lender was engaged in the "business of loaning money" within this chapter. Knott v. Jackson (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 31 A. 2d 662).

Illegal contracts

Every consideration of "public policy" suggests that a contract made in violation of this chapter should be unenforceable. Hartman v. Lubar (1943, 133 F. 2d 44, 77 U. S. App. D. C. 95, certiorari denied 63 S. Ct. 1329, 319 U. S. 767, 87 L. Ed. 1716, rehearing denied 64 S. Ct. 30, 320 U. S. 808, 88 L. Ed. 488).

Where no legal insurance was obtained on automobile by lending agency when contract was executed under which charge was exacted which made the total more than 6 percent annually on amount loaned, even though part of the charge was called an "insurance premium", the charge was for "interest", and lending agency violated this section making it unlawful to engage in business of loaning money at rate greater than 6 percent per annum on any security without procuring a license. Columbia Auto Loan Inc. v. District of Columbia (D. C. Mun. App. 1951, 78 A. 2d 857).

— Rights under illegal contracts

Borrowing corporation which entered into allegedly usurious loan contract, illegal in that lender failed to comply with licensing requirement could recover damages sustained because of illegal contract unless lender could establish an adequate affirmative defense. Indian Lake Estates v. Ten Individual Defendants, Net Limited, Inc., et ano. (1965, 350 F. 2d 435, 121 U.S. App. D.C. 305).

A borrower who enters into a usurious contract, void because lender violated Loan Shark Law for not having license, may recover from lender any damages sustained by reason of such void contract. Royall v. L. Yudelevit and W. H. Simons (1959, 268 F. 2d 577, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Holder in due course

Where it appeared on face of note and deed of trust that loan was made at over 6% rate of interest, loan was shown on the face to be payable in Washington, D.C., it was stated on note that lender was certain corporation "of Washington, D.C." and purchaser of note and deed of trust knew that such corporation was engaged in making such loans in District of Columbia, even if security instrument given in violation of Loan Shark Act is merely voidable rather than void, purchaser was not a holder in due course. In re Parkwood, Inc. (1972, 461 F. 2d 158, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 67).

Inferences

Where defendant had subpoenas duces tecum served upon officers of indorsee finance company for which trustee was maintaining replevin suit to compel them to produce at trial all records regarding the company for purpose of showing that company was in business of lending money at rate of interest greater than 6 percent without required license, and officers failed to produce the records, jury could infer from failure to produce subpoenaed records that contents thereof would have been unfavorable to trustee's case. Hartman v. Lubar (D. C. Mun. App. 1946, 49 A. 2d 553).

Lenders act may be illegal

Only the act of the lender and not the borrower may be illegal under this section. I. Shulman v. M. Ritzenberg and L. N. Tauber (1969, 47 F.R.D. 202).

Liability—Lender

Where lender, not licensed as required by Loan Shark Law, grants usurious loan, and makes foreclosure possible by transfer of void note and deed of trust, lender is liable in damages resulting from foreclosure by his transferee, even if transferee was innocent throughout. Royall v. L. Yudelevit and W. H. Simons (1959, 268 F. 2d 577, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

— Transferee

Where one takes note and deed of trust with notice or knowledge that transferor had obtained them through usurious loan contract made in violation of Loan Shark Law requiring license of lender, a foreclosure thereunder by such person is unlawful and he is liable for damages caused thereby. Royall v. L. Yudelevit and W. H. Simons (1959, 268 F. 2d 577, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Mortgage bankers

Loan which was made by real estate broker-mortgage banker in exchange for note of 6½% interest and deed of trust on real estate did not fall within real estate broker exemption of Loan Shark Act, notwithstanding contention that integral part of real estate brokerage includes not only negotiations of loans on behalf of other investors, but also placing of loans on behalf of brokers themselves. In re Parkwood, Inc. (1972, 461 F. 2d 158, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 67).

Decision that Loan Shark Act applied to loans originated by mortgage bankers would not be limited to prospective application. Id.

Occasional loans

A nonresident who makes occasional loans on real estate in the District, is not engaged "in the business" of loaning money within the meaning of the Loan Shark Law. Zirkle v. Daly (1932, 54 F. 2d 455, 60 App. D. C. 344).

Office outside the District

A pawnbroker violates this law if he stores pledged goods in the city of Washington, and uses it as a collecting center, but applications for loans are made just over the line in Virginia, to which place free automobile service is maintained, and loans are there made at an excessive rate. Horning v. District of Columbia (1920, 41 S. Ct. 53, 254 U. S. 135, 65 L. Ed. 185).

Pari delicto

Under Loan Shark Law requiring license of persons engaged in business of loaning money at interest rate greater than 6% per annum, borrower is not in pari delicto with lender and his participation with him in making loan does not bar borrower from asserting illegality of loan. Royall v. L. Yudelevit and W. H. Simons (1959, 268 F. 2d 577, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Persons protected by enactment

A borrower is member of class for whose protection statute, requiring license of persons engaged in business of loaning money at interest rate greater than 6% per annum, was enacted. Royall v. L. Yudelevit and W. H. Simons (1959, 268 F. 2d 577, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

Remand

Remand would be required, in proceeding on appeal from denial of objections by trustee in reorganization of corporation under Chapter X of Bankruptcy Act to allowance of certain secured claims, for purpose of determining whether effect of claim to prior agreement between borrower, which sold property to corporation subject to deed of trust securing note, and claimant, which had purchased note from lender, to reform note to provide for interest at rate of 6% was to render note, which had originally been in violation of Loan Shark Act, valid and enforceable, though interest had assertedly been paid on note at rate of 6¼% prior to claimant's purchase of note. In re Parkwood, Inc. (1972, 461 F. 2d 158, 149 U.S. App. D.C. 67).

Remedies

Borrower under usurious loan contract made in violation of statute requiring license of lender had right to elect whether to go into equity and ask that foreclosure sale, caused by transferee of void note and deed of trust, be set aside, or to let sale stand and ask for damages. Royall v. L. Yudelevit and W. H. Simons (1959, 268 F. 2d 577, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 1).

An action at law for damages for wrongful foreclosure is an especially appropriate remedy where an innocent purchaser buys at foreclosure, because it gives relief against guilty rather than innocent party. Id.

Sales

In suit by conditional buyer of automobile against seller and finance company, to which conditional sale agreement and note covering deferred purchase price were negotiated, to have agreement and note declared void and to recover money paid under agreement, evidence sustained finding that the transaction was a sale and not a loan of money, and that therefore the sanctions of the Loan Shark Law did not apply. Brooks v. Auto Wholesalers (D. C. Mun. App. 1953, 101 A. 2d 255).

Small loans

Loan Shark Law was intended to apply only to persons making small loans upon personal security and not to a case in which a debt of $177,500 was secured by a first trust upon real estate. Von Rosen v. Dean (1920, 41 F. 2d 982, 59 App. D. C. 359).

This chapter is not a usury statute, but an act licensing, under limitations and restrictions, the lending of money in small sums on personal security, and was intended to apply only to persons making small loans on personal security. Knott v. Jackson (D.C. Mun. App. 1943, 31 A. 2d 662).

Loan of nearly $700 was not a "small loan" within this chapter, which provides, under § 26-605, that person violating the provisions of this chapter shall forfeit all interest, and in addition a sum equal to one-fourth of the principal sum. Id.

Summary judgment

Assuming original contracts and engagements were illegal and void because of violation of usury statutes and "loan shark law," claims of complaint that parties entered into agreements purporting to settle and compromise original contracts and engagements and that settlement agreements did not eliminate illegality presented complex issues of fact and law and mixed questions of law and fact not susceptible of disposition by summary judgment. Indian Lake Estates, Inc. v. Lichtman (1962, 311 F. 2d 776, 114 U.S. App. D.C. 90).

Unlicensed lender

A lender in a loan contract which is merely usurious may not be liable in damages, but if there is added the fact that the lender was not licensed as required by law, loan contract is unlawful and void, and a foreclosure thereunder is wrongful and gives rise to action for damages suffered therefrom. Royall v. L. Yudelevit and W. H. Simons (1959, 268 F. 2d 577, 106 U.S. App. D.C. 1).
